In fact, they will be better off without us; and they themselves are waiting for the day; only they are not expressly saying. So therefore unnecessary anxiety and worry I do not have; I will do whatever I have to do; and afterwards, the same Lord who brought them, the same Lord, take care of. Only then I can gracefully grow old; otherwise I will poke my nose into the lives of others and cross the LOC. OK. Line of control; and get nose, bloody nose; so therefore I get into problems. All these things are not there; there is a great relief and relaxation. And that is what is called mukthiḥ. So freedom is not some kind of a mysterious thing to be acquired in a mysterious world; freedom means freedom from anxiety; freedom from tension; freedom from worry; freedom from insecurity; that is called freedom. Therefore, मुक्तस्य muktasya; and how did he get it; because of detachment; and how did he get detachment; because of this knowledge; and therefore Krishna says, jñāna जानावस्थितचेतसः jñānāvasthitacetasaḥ. This detachment is because he is established in this knowledge; his mind never loses sight of this teaching; because he knows that I am the ātma; and the whole world is anātma; the matter principle; and this physical body as well as other physical bodies are nothing but crystallied matter; and they have come from the world; they are going to move about in the world; and they are going to resolve back into the world. For when this body has come from the world; and when it has to go back to the world, how can I claim this body as I or mine; this is available for my use; temporarily. And that is the only method of getting detachment.

Therefore jñānavastita cetasaḥ; therefore he never forgets vedāntic teaching. and such a person, यज्ञाय कर्म आचरतह् yajñāya karma ācaratah; he performs all the actions; as the worship of the lord; yajñāh means īśvara pooja; that is the motive behind the action, that is the purpose behind the action. But in the case of an ajñāni, what is the purpose behind the action; it is not yajñāh; I hope the action will produce an expected result and after getting the expected result, my life would become pūrṇaḥ; therefore apūrṇatvam is the cause of ajñāni's action; whereas jñāni's action is not triggered by apūrṇatvam; ajñāni acts for happiness; jñāni acts out of happiness; that is the small big difference. Ajñāni acts for happiness; jñāni acts out of happiness; only a small change; for or out of; that is all the difference. Therefore, yajñāh ācaratah karma; and what will happen to his action; समग्रं प्रविलीयते samagraṁ praviliyatē; all his actions dissolves without producing either puṇya or pāpa; praviliyatē, they get dissolved; they do not add to āgami karma; you have to remember the example I gave you the other day; like a roasted seed; roasted seed looks the same; but what is difference; in all respects it is the same, but it cannot do one job, what is that, it cannot germinate. Similarly, jñāni's karma will be like an ajñāni's karma in all respects, except in one case, what is that; ajñāni's karma produces puṇyam or pāpa, but jñāni's karma does not produce either. And therefore, samagraṁ karma pravilīyatē.

अर्पणम् ब्रह्म arpaṇam brahma The ladle is Brahman, हविः ब्रह्म haviḥ brahma the offering is Brahman, हुतम् hutam it is offered, ब्रह्माग्नौ brahmāgnau into the fire of Brahman, ब्रह्मणा brahmaṇā by Brahmana, ब्रह्म एव गन्तव्यम् brahma eva gantavyam Brahman alone is to be reached, तेन tena by him ब्रह्मकर्मसमाधिना brahmakarmasamādhinā who sees Brahman in every action.

24. The ladle is Brahman. The offering is Brahman. It is offered into the fire of Brahman by Brahman. Brahman alone is to be reached by him who sees Brahman in every action.

By this verse, Krishna concludes the jñānam topic and this is a very important verse; significant verse; a deep philosophical verse; important not because that you will get food only if you chant that; in some houses, brahmārpaṇam you have to say before food.

Therefore do not think that it is important because of the food; it is incidentally used before food in some places; but it has got a deep philosophical sense. In this verse, Krishna makes a big leap in vedāntic teaching; therefore first I will have to first explain the significance, then we will go for the word-for-word meaning.

Until now, Krishna had talked about jñānam as differentiating ātma and anātmā; Ātma anātmā vivekaḥ; dehi-deha vivekaḥ; and there we saw that every individual is a mixture of two principles, one is the consciousness principle and the other is the body principle. And we clearly differentiated the body and conscious, through those five points; do you remember.

1. consciousness is not part, product or property of the body.
2. consciousness is an independent entity which pervades and enlivens the body;
3. consciousness is not limited by the boundaries of the body.
4. Consciousness survives even after the fall of the body; and
5. that surviving consciousness cannot interact with the world because the body medium is not available.

Thus we have differentiated consciousness and body. This we did in the 2nd chapter, from verse 12 to 25. And in this chapter also, we did in verses beginning from 18th onwards. Therefore one of the first steps of vedāntic knowledge is differentiating ātma and anātmā; consciousness and body; or spirit and matter; cētana-acētana vibhāgaḥ.

And after differentiating what am I supposed to; instead of claiming the material body as myself; I have to practice claiming the consciousness as myself; Instead of saying I have consciousness, I should start claiming I am. Have verb should be changed to Am. And after claiming that I am consciousness, you have to use all these five points; replacing the word 'consciousness' by the word I.

How will you use. Just as saying Consciousness is not a part product, I am not a part product or property of the body; I am the consciousness, distinctive from the body, energising the body; I-the-consciousness, am not limited by the boundaries of the body; and I will survive even after the body is gone; acchēdyō'yam; adāhyō'yam; aklēdyō'yam; a'sōṣya ēva ca; na hanyatē hanyamānē śarīrē; I will survive as consciousness, even if the body is gone; and finally this surviving-I cannot transact with the world, not because I am not there; but because the medium of transaction is not there. As in sleep, I do not transact in sleep not because I am non-existent but because the body-medium is not functioning. So thus the first stage of vedānta is seeing I-as-Consciousness, and body-mind-and-the-world as matter. I-am-consciousness-body, mind-and-world-are-matter. So this is the first stage; you can call it graduation; but graduation is not sufficient.

Nowadays, post-graduation we have to go; what is that; vedānta says this knowledge is incomplete; because in this knowledge, I say I-am-consciousness, everything else is matter; I am ātma; everything else is anātma; and why do we say this knowledge is incomplete; you must be knowing the answer, the answer is still we are in द्वैतम् dvaitam only.

We have progressed a lot. I am able to claim that I-am-consciousness; which itself is a big leap, because so far I have been saying that I-am-the-body; therefore to say that I-am-consciousness is a big progress; but still there is a duality in the form of spirit and matter; cētana-acētanam; and therefore the next stage of vedānta is, knowing that there is no-matter-other-than-consciousness; matter-is-a-myth; matter is non-substantial; even though it appears as tangible solid substance; matter does not have a substantiality of its own; the substance is what; consciousness, ātma alone is the substance; matter does not exist separate from consciousness and what is that consciousness; I-am-that-consciousness; and therefore what should be conclusion; there is no material world separate from me, the observer.

Very big jump; it is an Upaniṣadic jump, which is rarely done in the Gītā ; in fact, only in one of two places in the Gītā this topic comes; one place is this. Very rarely Krishna discusses that; the knowledge that there is no world different from me, the observer.

And if you ask, Swamiji, how can I swallow that; it is too much; vēdānta only gives an example, and what is that example. When you are in dream; you experience an external world in dream; which is so different from you; which is so tangible; and it is so real; and that is why, nightmares are possible; you are not going to say that the tiger is a dream tiger; No. In dream, the dream-tiger you never look upon as dream at all; tiger is solidly real; tangibly real; capable of chasing you, and you run also.

And if there is a dream-guru; coming and saying that there is no tiger at all; it is all non-separate from you; the entire dream has come out of you; the entire dream is resting on you; the entire dream will resolve into you, if the dream-guru says; will the dream-śiṣyā easily accept? He will never accept the fact; he has to wake up. On waking up, it is the easiest fact to assimilate.

In the same way, Vedānta says his world is also dream of another level. We have got two levels of dreams; one is called प्रतिभासिक prātibhāsika dream; another is called व्यावहारिक vyāvahārika dream; and when we look at this from the body stand point, it has got a reality.

Therefore, उत्तिष्ठतः जाग्रतः प्राप्यवरान् निबोधतः uttiṣṭataḥ jāgrataḥ prāpyavarān nibodhataḥ; Wake up, arise and awake. The Upaniṣads tells. If the Upaniṣads now addresses us and says: Wake Up, what does it mean; if the Upaniṣad addresses us and says you please wake up, what does it mean; you think you are awake; but you are a somnambulist. You know what is somnambulism; walking in dream or walking in sleep; according to Upaniṣad, we are all somnambulist walking in dream only. Therefore Krishna wants to say that everything is nothing but ātma; there is no anātma separate from ātma. This is the essence of this verse, which we will see in the next class.

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

अस्मद् आचार्य पर्यन्ताम् वन्दे गुरु परम्पराम्

sadāśiva samārambhāṁ śaṅkarācāryamadhyamām

Om

Lord Krishna dealt with the essence of jñāna yōg a in these important verses beginning from the 18th verse up to 24th verse. And in the 24th verse, the Lord is concluding the jñāna yōg a topic and he talks about the highest level of the Upaniṣadic teaching, which I was discussing in the last class.

I said the first level of Upaniṣadic teaching is recognising the fact the consciousness-principle is separate from the body-mind-complex. Just as electricity is a principle, which is separate from the bulb, it is a principle, which pervades and blesses the bulb; in the same way, consciousness is a separate entity, which blesses the perishable body-mind- complex. And that consciousness principle, and I am not the body-mind-complex, the body-mind-complex is only a medium through which I transact and in the absence of the body-mind-complex, I will stop my transactions but I will not stop to be existing. Thus existence does not require body-mind-complex; but transactions require this body-mind-complex. Thus I am the consciousness-principle; this is the first level of learning.

The next level of learning; this I-the-consciousness-principle is the same behind the body-mind-complex, just as there is one thread behind all the beads of a mala; just as there is one space alone contained in different containers; similarly there is only one consciousness enclosed in any number of bodies. The enclosures are many; the containers are many; but the content is one. Thus, I-the-consciousness am the same behind everyone. In short, from the stand point of consciousness, we are all one; ātma ēkatvam. This is the second lesson of vēdānta.

And the third and final lesson and the most important teaching is that this I, which is the consciousness behind all the body and minds, is alone the ultimate truth and essence of this creation; the body-mind-complex and the external world, do not exist independent of consciousness. Thus consciousness is satyam and the body-mind-complex along with the body-mind-complex is mithya; and to understand this particular idea, the Upaniśad uses a particular methodology of teaching, which Krishna does not elaborately deal with here; but in the Upaniśads, it is presented and that method is consciousness alone is the cause, and everything else is a product of this consciousness-principle alone.

Thus ātma is the kāranam, anātma is the kāryam; anātma meaning the mind, the body, as well as as the world, and once I learn to see this fact that consciousness is the cause and matter is the effect, then my attitude towards the matter will change.

And what is that attitudinal change? That there is no matter separate from consciousness. Just as there is no ornament separate from gold. And once I have understood gold as the essence, I will continue to see the variety of ornaments, but I know that ornaments are many, but the gold which is inherent in all of them is one. Even in science they say that all the different types of elements that you see are superficially different; but ultimately they are all energy in motion. Therefore different substances you see, are superficially different; but the essence is one energy; but v̄edānta goes one more step further; even energies are superficially different; but behind all of them; there is one essence; that is consciousness. How can the invisible consciousness become the visible creation, if you ask, the science itself answers, the intangible, invisible energy can manifest as tangible matter. If that is possible for energy, v̄edānta says that intangible formless consciousness alone is appearing as the tangible formful matter. And the one who has this vision, sees one truth behind all the superficial plurality; this is called sarvatra svarṇa darśanam. In the case of ornaments, bangles, chain, ring, etc. there is sarvatra eka svarṇa darśanam; behind rivers and oceans and lakes, there is sarvatra ēka jala darśanam; behind all furniture, there is sarvatra eka wood darśanam; similarly, behind the pluralistic universe jñāni has got ēkathra ātma darśanam. This is called ātma ēkatva darśanam.

sampaśyan brahma paramaṁ yāti nānyēna hētunā || Kaivalya. I. 20 ||

And that idea is conveyed here; the man of this vision, the one who sees the non-duality in and through the duality, that person is called ब्रह्मकर्मसमाधि Brahma karma samādhi. It is the title given to a jñāni. Brahma karma samādhi; so samādhi means absorption; the one whose mind is absorbed; that absorption is called samādhi. In fact, when we are seeing different ornaments, the superficial mind sees the differences, but the inner mind is aware of the fact all these ornaments are gold; this darśanam we can call gold samādhi. Gold samādhi means what; not losing sight of the fact that gold is the essence, even though we call it by different names as bangles, etc. and here the samādhi is not gold samādhi or water samādhi, here we are talking about Brahma samādhi, not losing sight of Brahman in and through all the transactions. And karma means transactions. Therefore Brahma karma samādhi means a wise person who does not lose sight of essential consciousness in and through all the transactions; the transactions are very deliberately done, like a person who is travelling by train to Delhi. In between he may get down at different stations; he may buy newspapers, water, eatables, etc. and while transacting he handles money also; he knows how much money he has given, how much he has to receive back; but in and through all the transactions, but one corner of his mind tells; I am in a intermediary station; that the train will leave after 10 minutes or 15 minutes and I am travelling to Delhi; this awareness is never lost. So thus in the background, the Delhi samādhi is there; but in transaction he never commits any mistake. He does not forget and come back after giving Rs.100 without buying anything. He will not take less. He is very alert; that means the conscious mind does all the transactions but the subconscious mind is aware of this truth; this is called jñāna niṣṭā; this is called ātma nishta; this is called Brahma nishta; Brahman is another name of ātma; and such a person is called Brahma samādhi.

And here in this verse, Krishna is talking about which jñāni; sanyāsi or grihasthā; Krishna is talking about grihasthā jñāni. And therefore he continues all his religious duties also; and one of the religious duties which they were daily doing was the agnihōtram karma. Agnihōtra is one of the daily fire rituals which they used to do; and as a grihasthā, even though one is a jñāni, as long as one is within the family; those nithya naimithika karmas cannot be given up and therefore Krishna visualises a jñāni, who continues to perform his daily rituals.

And Krishna says even though as a Grihasthā he performs, in the back of his mind, he knows that Sarvam Brahma mayam jagat. So in and through all the transactions, there is the absorption; and what is the absorption; that it described here; ब्रह्मार्पणं.

Brahmārpaṇam; arpaṇam means the instrument with which the oblations are offered; a wooden spoon is used in rituals is called in this context arpaṇam; the arpaṇam has several meanings; but in this context arpaṇam, the wooden spoon with which the offering is done; and how does jñāni look upon that; arpaṇam Brahma.

Just as a scientists knows that this is also energy in motion; or proton, neutrons and electrons in motion; the clock is also energy is in motion; diamond is also carbon; coal is also carbon; slight configuration difference only; but if you ask that person to exchange his diamond ring for a piece of coal, will he do that? so transactional differences he will maintain.

क्रियात् द्वैतम् नहि कर्हिचित् ॥

kriyāt dvaitam nahi karhicit ||

At transactional level, I know the difference between bangle and chain; I put the bangle only in the hand and the chain only in the neck, ring only in the finger. So transactionally I handle appropriately; but in the vision I know sarvam svarna mayam. Similarly, jñāni handles things properly. But he has this vision; this ladle is also Brahman. Then ब्रह्म हविः Brahma haviḥ. In that wooden spoon, whatever is there, may be ghee, may be milk; whatever is there; the oblation is also Brahman. Then what about the fire in which it is offered; ब्रह्माग्नौ Brahmāgnau; the fire is also Brahman. And what about the one who is offering the oblation; the priest who is doing that, that offerer is also Brahman. So ब्रह्मणा हुतम् Brahmaṇā hutam. And a result of this religious ritual, the upaniṣad or Vēdā promises the svarga lokam as the phalam, the heaven as the karma phalam; jñāni says I am not interested in heaven because, the heaven is also what? Brahman. Akade unde Pandurangadu, Ikkada unnadu. That Brahman is here; so ब्रह्मैव तेन गन्तव्यं Brahmaiva tēna gantavyam; by whom ब्रह्मकर्मसमाधिना Brahma karma samādhinā; so that jñāni who is absorbed in this Brahma niṣṭā. So this is called sarvatra Brahma darśanam. So those who had done the Mundakōpaniṣad mantra.

ब्रह्मैवेदममृतं पुरस्ताद् ब्रह्म पश्चाद् ब्रह्म दक्षिणतश्चोत्तरेण ।

There is only one substance called Brahman; all others are different names and forms only.

Continuing.

25. Some Yōg is offer the very self by the self into the fire of Brahman. Others perform Devayajñā alone.

In the previous slōkā, jñānam topic is over. Now from the 25th verse onwards, Krishna is going to talk about the glory of this knowledge. Jñāna stutihi or jñāna mahimā; Up to verse No.34. 25 to 34. Jñāna stutihi. And He is going to glorify that knowledge in a particular manner; and the method used, Krishna enumerates several disciplines, spiritual disciplines, various spiritual sādhanās, because in the scriptures, we find endless sādhanās are prescribed. In fact in Hinduism, if you read the last page of the Hindu paper regularly, you will find each day, one one sādhanā will be talked about; sometime they say Nama japa is the greatest sādhanā; someday they say that dhyānam is the greatest sādhanā; someday they say yōg a as the greatest sādhanā; pilgrimmage as the greatest sādhanā; dānam as the greatest sādhanā, in fact, countless sādhanās are mentioned;

And Krishna wants to enumerate a few sādhanās; around 12 or 13 Krishna enumerates. And He calls all those sādhanā, by the name yajñāḥ; Every sadana is called a yajñāḥ; japa yajñāḥ; dhyana yajñāḥ; upavasa yajñāḥ; yatra yajñāḥ; prāṇāyāma yajñāḥ; all these are called yajñāḥ. Why are they called yajñāḥ; because in all these different sādhanās, one uniform factor or common factor is the Lord is involved in all of them. All these yajñāḥs are dedicated to the Lord, for superior growth. Because in all of them I say: ममोपात्त समस्त दुरितक्षयद्वारा श्री परमेश्वर प्रीत्यर्थम् mamopāṭta samasta duritakṣayadvārā Sri Parameśvara prītyartham, all my impurities must go away; and I must become spiritually pure. That inner purity is sought from the Lord. So since the Lord is involved; prayer is involved; spiritual purity is involved; all of them are called yajñāḥ, yajñā does not mean and fire and oblation should be there. Even sweeping temple; why sweeping the temple, sweeping your own home, is also yajñāḥ, if you are going to look upon the house as a temple. Because we have a pooja room, garba griham, at least under the staircase; so at least under the staircase, there is a pūja room; if no place is available; that means the whole house is a temple, therefore when you are cleaning the house, it becomes cleaning the temple. Therefore what we require is only an attitudinal change, it makes the pooja, it purifies the person spiritually; therefore all of them are called yajñāḥ.

Even eating, Krishna is going to call yajñāḥ, if you invoke the Lord within your stomach. And we have got enough space. We have got a big stomach!; enough garba griha is there to happily accommodate, Lord Brihadesvara! Therefore invoke the Lord, Krishna tells in the 15th chapter, I am in the stomach of everyone. So if you invoke the Lord within the stomach and consider whatever you eat as an offering to the Lord, your regular eating becomes a yajñāḥ called prāṇāgni hotra yajñāḥ; In Chandōgya Upaniśad, its name is prāṇāgnihotram. In fact you can tell everyone that daily you are doing prāṇāgnihotram. They will not know what it is; but you know that it is eating. because hotr meaning offering, prāṇa agni means the digestive prāṇā is the fire, unto which I offer the food.

Thus from the most grossest eating onwards, the greatest yāga Krishna is going to term yajñāḥ and along with those yajñāḥ, Krishna is going to add self-knowledge as a yajñāḥ. So even the study of scriptures come under a type of yajñāḥ only.

That is why the Gītā talk series they have is coined jñāna yajñā. It is a name coined by Swami Chinmayananda, initially, as jñāna yajñā. Many people started looking for fire in the lecture hall; yajñam; yajñā they said but no fire they saw. Yajñāḥ does not require the fire; and Krishna is going to take this jñānam also as a yajñāh and having enumerated all these yajñās, Krishna points out that Brahma jñāna yajñā is the greatest spiritual sādhanā; and all other yajñās are subservient to, only subsidiary to the Brahma jñāna yajñāh.

And how do we say so? Krishna himself will clarify later; but you should know the reason; It is not that other yajñās are useless; very careful; Krishna does not say that the other yajñās are useless; all the yajñās are useful; but none of them will directly lead to the Lord or Brahman. All are useful, but none of them will directly lead to the Lord; they all can lead maximum to the jñāna yajñā alone. Any pooja you do, ultimately can lead you up to what: attending the class. Not necessarily my classes. Any vēdānta vicāra class. And jñānam alone can directly lead to the Lord, therefore yajñās are parampara sādhanam, or indirect means, jñāna yajñāh alone is sākṣāt sādhanam.

It is like, if you want to remove darkness from a rope, you can bring a lamp, you can pour the oil, and you have the wick, and you have the matchstick; they are all useful and important also. But ultimately, what removes the darkness is not the lamp, I mean the holder of the oil, not the oil, not the wick; what removes darkness is that flame alone. Therefore flame alone is the sākṣāt sādhanām; everything else is only paramapara sādhanām and therefore all other sādhanās are incomplete, without jñāna yōg aha; all other sādhanās are incomplete without coming to jñāna yōg a; jñāna yōg a alone makes all the other sādhanās meaningful; jñāna yōga alone validates your bhakthi; jñāna yōg a alone validates your shradha, sandhyavandanādi karma; jñāna yōg a alone validates all your pilgrimages; whatever religious sādhanās you have been doing, not only in this janma, even in the past janmas; they all become meaningful, only when they lead to jñāna yajñāh. So thus Krishna wants to say that all the sādhanās you do, but one day or the other, you have to come to jñānam. And suppose you say Swamijis, I do not like jñānam, then we say, continue other sādhanās. As you even practice the other sādhanās, sooner or later, you will begin to like jñānam. And if you do not like now, you will like after 10 years; if not after 10 years, after 15 years; if not after 50 years, next janma; if not next janma, after 50 janmas; or five billion janmas; one day or the other, you have to come to jñānam; and attain liberation.

This is going to be teaching; which starts from the 25th. Various yajñās are going to be enumerated. First we will take up jñāna yajñāh; Brahma jñānam itself as a yajñāh, which is given in the 2nd line. Something is offered and unto something. There is a fire; there is an oblation. If jñāna yajñā is compared to a yajñā, what is offered and unto what is the offering done? Krishna says, Paramātmā is the fire; the higher self is the fire and the lower-self, the ego is the oblation. The higher-self is the fire, ब्रह्म अग्नि Brahma agni; and the ego the lower-I, is the oblation. and whatever we are supposed to do through Gītā study, the lower-I should be resolved into higher-I; the limited-I should be resolved into the limitless-I. Just as the wave, until it got the knowledge, it was mistaking itself as a finite wave; and therefore this finite wave was worried also, I have a date of birth, and I am going to die, I am going towards the shore, and sooner or later, I am going to perish; and I want to give parting advice to my son-waves, which are there; and the son and daughter waves are crying; and the mother and father waves are also crying; without us, how they are going to live. So this wave is worried about birth, death, separation, limitation, etc. and the Guru comes and tells, "I am a wave" is the smaller-I. You have to shift your vision from your smaller-I nature; and shift your-I (Eye also!) to what; not to the perishable wave name and form, but identify with what: the water-I. So the wave-I is the ego-I, the smaller-I; water-I is the bigger-I. And the moment the waves say I-am-water, then attitudinal change takes place; it no more says that I-am-perishable-wave; it says;

na hanyate hanyamāne śarīre ॥2- 20॥

This particular name and form may go, but I-the-water, never dies; and even if I am evaporated, I may not be in liquid form, I continue to exist in a gaseous form and in cloud form; I continue to exist, in rain water form I continue, in the form of rivers I continue, I am immortal water; this is called offering of the wave-I, into the water-I.

In the same way, what are we supposed to do; yajñām juhvati; here yajñā means jīvātmā; here the word yajñāh in the second line means the jīvātmā; the lower-I, this smaller-I, the finite-I, the ego. And this yajñām is offered into what; Brahmāgnau; into the Paramātmā-I, Paramātmā means what; the higher-I, the consciousness.

And this offering is only figurative. When I say the wave is offered unto water, there is no physical action involved, it is only a change in my understanding; until now I said, this is wave, now I say this is water. Similarly I can offer this desk into the wood; how do I offer; no action is involved; until now I said this is a desk and what do I do; I shift my vision and say; this is wood; when I say this is desk; it is perishable; when I say this is wood, it continues to exist; even after you break it up.

Therefore, here the oblation is purely a intellectual job; It is a cognitive change. It is a change in understanding; That is called jñāna yajñāḥ; And who does this job. yajne naiva, this job is done by the jīvātmā himself. So thus the sentence should be read as jīvātmā offers the jīvātmā itself unto the fire of Paramātmā. This is called jñāna yajñāḥ.

And that is why, in the नव विध भक्ति nava vidha bhakthi, 9 types of devotion, which you might have heard; श्रवणम्, कीर्तनम्, विष्णो पादसेवनम्, अर्चनम्, वन्दनम् दास्यम्, सक्यम् आत्म निवेदनम्; śravaṇam, kīrtanam, viṣṇo pādasevanam, arcanam, vandanam dāsyam, sakyam ātm nivedanam. These are the 9 levels of bhakthi they say; and in the 9 level of bhakthi, you know what is the highest level of bhakthi, ātma-nivedhanam. Because in all the previous levels, I offer everything; I am going this, pazham, milk, sugar candy, I offer everything; but I retain myself as a separate entity and not only that in this pūja, I do not offer myself, this pūja often leads to more ego, instead of reducing it. Because I have offered 10 acre to Venkitachalapathy. Now that I has become what: so that land has been offered but there is no reduction because I have become, my ego has become bloated. Every dānam he does, he makes sure that it is properly photographed, Therefore all the other pūja I offer everything, but the offerer ego is retained. The ultimate offer is that in which the very offerer is offered.

उभे सच्यानृते त्यक्त्वा ।
येन त्यजति तत् त्यज ॥
tyaja dharma-adharmamca |

ubhe satyānrte tyajā ||
ubhe sacyānrte tyaktvā |
yena tyajati tat tyaja ||

Offer everything to the Lord and ultimately offer that I, by which you say I have offered, I have offered, I have offered (fifty thousand times you say that) that I itself you have to offer. That is called ātma-nivedana bhakthi. So if you ask that bhaktha what you have offered, he will say when I myself am not there, where is the question of I to offer something; When I am not there, where is the question of 'my offering'. This 9th bhakthi called ātma nivedhanam, can happen only through jñānam.

And this ātma nivedhana bhakthi, that is talked about here, and that is significance of even sarva dharman parityajya mam ekam sharana vraja, ātma nivedana ropa jñāna yōga bhakthi alone. Therefore Krishna says yajnena yajñām, upajivhati. Jīvātmā offers, the jīvātmā and paramātmā; First yajñā he has talked about.

Then go to the first line; he is introducing another yajñā, which is called the yōginaha aparē daivam yajñām paryupasate. Everybody cannot practice this jñāna yajñāḥ; because it requires lot of qualification; it requires tremendous maturity called sādhanā catuṣṭya sampathi; only rare people practice this jñāna yōga yajñāḥ; but many other people practice daivam yajñām. Daivam yajñām is the vēdic ritual; like agnihotra; etc. in which various dēvathās are invoked; agnaye svāha; prajāpathaye svāha; brihaspathaye svāha, the ritualistic yajñā is the second sādhanā; OK. More sādhanās Krishna is going to enumerate.

शब्दादीन्विषयानन्य इन्द्रियाग्निषु जुहवति ॥ ४.२६ ॥ śrōtrādīnīndriyāṅyanye saṃyamāgniṣu juhvati |
śabdādīn viṣayānanya indriyāgniṣu juhvati || 4.26 ||

अन्ये anyē some जुहवति juhvati offer इन्द्रियाणि श्रोत्रादीनि indriyāṅni śrotrādīni the sense organs like the ears संयमाग्निषु saṃyamāgniṣu into the fire of sense-control, अन्ये anyē others जुहवति juhvati offer विषयान् viṣayān sense objects, शब्दादीन् śabdādīn like sound इन्द्रियाग्निषु indriyāgniṣu into the fire of sense organs

26. Some offer the sense organs like the ears into the fire of sense control. Others offer the sense objects like sound into the fire of sense organs.

In this two more yajñāḥs are enumerated. In the first line, the yajñā talked about is sensory discipline. Sensory discipline called indriya samyamaḥ; otherwise called damaḥ. So here there is no physical fire and physical oblations involved; but mere sense control. Sense control does not suppression, remember, we never recommend suppression at any time. Because according to us, suppression is as dangerous as indulgence is. So then what we talk about is the mastery over the sense organs because of my understanding.

In suppression, the action is done because of somebody else's forcing, whereas in Indriya nigrahaḥ, somebody else does not force me but I myself decide sensory discipline for my own benefit. Suppose you decide to sit within this enclosure for one hour, it is not confinement. Because you have chosen to sit. But when somebody does this, it becomes a forced thing. And here indriya samyama is not a forced thing but I myself choose to forgo certain things, for sense control, which is called damaḥ; will-based discipline. Discrimination and will-based discipline; not enforced discipline. And this called a yajñāḥ. So if this is a yajñāḥ, what is offered. By this yajñāḥ what is offered?

To understand this, you should have a figurative perception; to look at figuratively. When a person practices sense control, what he destroys or offers is: undisciplined sense organs are offered into sensory discipline. Undisciplined sense organs are as though offered; because when you offer the oblation, it disappears. when you offer ghee into fire; after the oblation, ghee is no more there. Similarly in this oblation, what disappears is wild sense organs, untamed sense organs disappear, and in that place what comes, disciplined, mastered sense organs are there; And therefore, this is considered to be another yajñāḥ; indiscipline offered unto discipline. So this is called damaḥ yajñāḥ.

Then the fourth yajñāḥ given in the second line is viṣaya bhōga yajñāḥ; viṣaya bhōga yajñāḥ; because in the previous yajñāḥ, I do not allow the sense organs to be indulgent. When the sense organs begin to become my master, and I become a slave; I say no to that; if I am developing any sensory weakness; as a sādaka, I say no to that. If I am taking coffee, as a master allowed; that is I choose whether I should take coffee or not; but the moment it becomes not my choice, but coffee's choice, that means I have become a slave of my tongue, then I say No. One week coffee No from tomorrow. Then take. But you should be able to say No whenever you want. When you say No, the tongue should not nag you. You should not have sarvatra coffee darśanam. Then it is a problem.

Therefore I say No and within my control I enjoy the sense pleasures legitimately morally keeping them under my control and when I enjoy those sense pleasures, from strength, from mastery, I can consider that enjoyment itself has a type of yajñāḥ. Previously when I say No that became a type of yajñāḥ; here, when I am enjoying those sense pleasures, that itself becomes another type of yajñāḥ. and in this yajñāḥ what is the oblation and what is the hōmah kundaḥ; we can say all the sense organs are the hōma kundas; the turf in which the fire is there; and there are five hōma kundas; not even five; the Upaniṣads itself says seven hōmakundas are there; two eyes, two ears; two nostrils, and thank god, one mouth.

सप्त प्राणाः प्रभवन्ति तास्मात् सप्तार्चिषः समिधः सप्त होमाः ।

सप्त इमे लोका येषु चतन्ति प्राणा गुहाशया निहिताः सप्त सप्त ॥ Two. I. 8 ॥

sapta prāṇāḥ prabhavanti tāsmāt saptārciṣaḥ samidhaḥ sapta homāḥ |
sapta ime lokā yeṣu catanti prāṇā guhāśayā nihitāḥ sapta sapta ॥ Two. I. 8 ॥

So this hōma, we saw in the Mundakōpaniṣad, sapta hōma kunda; and what are we are offering, into the eyes, we are offering varieties of forms; and colours; into the ear hōma kunda we are offering varieties of sound, constantly the yaga is going on. and what is this yaga called; vishya bhoga yajñāḥ and in this yaga, even eating is included, because I am offering varieties of tastes to the tongue.

And therefore, Bhagavān Krishna says; अन्ये anye; some other people शब्दादीन्विषयान जुह्वति śabdādīnviṣayāna juhvati; they offer varieties of sensory stimuli like śabdaḥ sparśaḥ etc. means śabdaḥ sparśaḥ, rupa:, rasa:, gandhaḥ; and this is there in the form of a beautiful prayer; daily prayer; we are supposed to chant that by which we convert our regular experiences into yaga. You know what is that prayer; Many of you may know.

yadayata karma karōmi tatada akhilaṁ, śambhō tavārādhanama

Oh. Lord Śambo, you are very much inside me as ātma; and my mind is Parvathi dēvi and all the praṇās are Śiva gaṇās; praṇās are constantly running, they are Śivabhutagaṇās; and then all my experiences are what, offering unto you. and what is pradakṣiṇa; daily we are walking here and there; wherever I go, that is all pradakṣiṇam to you. Oh Lord and whatever word I utter is your sthuthi. Yad yad karma karoti tat tat akilam, Śambō tavaradhanā; and this aradhanā is purely by a change in the attitude and what is the attitude; Lord is inside me.

And it is a mere attitude, it is a fact also, because Lord is consciousness; and consciousness is in Me; and whatever I offer, it is received by what; consciousness alone; sabda when it is offered into consciousness, it becomes śabda jñānam. Sparśa, offered into consciousness becomes sparsa jñānam. It is a beautiful approach. śabdiviṣyan anye, indriyagniṣu juhvati. they offer into the sense organs.

27. Others offer all the functions of the sense organs and all the functions of Prana into the fire of self-control, kindled by discrimination.

Four yajñās have been talked about. Brahma jñāna yajñā; daiva yajñā, indriya samyama yajñā, viṣaya nigraḥ yajñāḥ.

Now Krishna is introducing the fifth yajñāḥ; viz., ātma samyama yajñāḥ; ātma samyamaḥ; means mental discipline; which is tougher yajñāḥ; previously we talked about sensory discipline; it is relatively easier; if you can't see the gory sight, you can close your eyes; and if you can't listen to the noise, you can close your ears; at least you can get away from that place even; but mental discipline is more difficult, even if you get out of place, that thought can continue. Some people this mental discipline; and ātma here means mind; samyama means discipline.

And through this mental discipline, what do they accomplish? Krishna says all the ten organs, viz., five organs of knowledge and five organs of action; jñānēndriyaṇi; karmēndriyaṇi; five sense organs of knowledge, giving the knowledge, śabdaḥ sparśaḥ, rupa:, rasa:, gandhaḥ; and five organs of action, I hope you remember, vāk, pāni, pāda, pāyu, upastha; the organs of speech, the hand, the leg, the organ of excretion and the organ of reproduction. These are called daśa indriyaṇi; the 10 sense organs.

Now these ten sense organs are unruly sense organs; unrefined; uncultured; untamed; in Kathōpaniṣad, they are compared to wild horses; duṣṭa aśva; wild horses; they are not tamed, if you try to ride it; in village you can see, driving the horse forward, it will go backward; it will go to the left and right or it will lie down; now all our sense organs are unruly sense organs and how do you discipline them; only by disciplining the mind, which is the headquarters; because the mind is the one which has to be and which is behind all the ten sense organs; therefore by disciplining the mind, all the sense organs are mastered.

And therefore, unruly sense organs are then offered into mental discipline; offered means they are destroyed; they are eliminated; and they are eliminated means what, they are converted into disciplined sense organs. So therefore he says, sarvani indriya karmāṇi, indriya karma means jñānēndriya karmāṇi, and praṇa karmāṇi means karmēndriya karmāṇi, the functions of all the ten sense organs, आत्मसंयमयोगाग्नौ ātmasamyamayōgāgnau; they are all destroyed in the fire of mental discipline. That is why mind discipline becomes more important. Without mind discipline, if you try to do that, that is the sensory discipline, it can only work temporarily, like the parents controlling the children; can control them how long; as long as they are with you. Ultimately, they should be cultured; mind should be evolved; then wherever they go, you have got the confidence that they will not go astray. So sheer force controlling will not work; and therefore mind has to be educated. Details in the next class.

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

अस्मद् आचार्य पर्यन्ताम् वन्दे गुरु परम्पराम्

Om

With the 24th verse of the 4th chapter, Lord Krishna concludes the topic of jñāna yōga and now from the 25th verse onwards up to the 34th verse, Lord Krishna wants to talk about the glory of self-knowledge. And for this purpose, Krishna introduces different spiritual sādhanās; 12 spiritual sādhanās are mentioned in these verses. Of these spiritual sādhanās, jñāna yōga is also one of the sādhanās. And all these twelve sādhanās are called yajñāḥ, because in all of them, worship of the Lord is involved at least mentally. And Krishna wants to conclude that all the spiritual sādhanās are great, but jñāna yōga alone is the greatest sādhanā. And the reason that he wants to give is that all sādhanās are required; there is no choice, but except jñānam; all other sādhanās can only prepare the mind; they can never give liberation directly. After preparing the mind through the eleven sādhanās, the jñāna yajñā, the 12th and final sādhanā, one has to go through to attain liberation; and therefore all the eleven sādhanās are validated or made fruitful only when all of them culminate in jñānam. And thus jñānam is called sākṣāt mōkṣakāranam and all other sādhanās are called parampara mōkṣakāranam. They can only indirectly help; jñānam alone can directly help. Therefore Krishna will say at the end

सर्व कर्माखिलं पार्थ ज्ञाने परिसमाप्यते ॥४.३३॥

śrēyān dravyamayādyajñājjñānayaajñāḥ parantapa |
sarvaṃ karmākhilaṃ pārtha jñānē parisamāpyatē | | 4.33 | |

Arjuna, compared to all the sādhanās, jñāna yajñā is the greatest; because all the other sādhanās can bring a person only to the jñāna yajñā. And for preparation you may take one sādhanā or more sādhanās. Thus we have got a choice with regard to preparing the mind; but we have no choice with regard to mōkṣa. Thus among the 11 sādhanās, a person can use any one or a combination of the eleven different routes up to purification of the mind, so many paths are there; for cittaḥ suddhi, but after cittaḥ śuddhiḥ, for mokṣa, there is only one path and that is called jñāna. And since everybody has to come to jñānam, one time or the other, jñāna yajñā is the greatest yajñā, this is the essence of this portion, from 25th to 34.

And Krishna has been enumerating various yajñās, and we have seen five yajñās in verse No.25, 26 and 27. These five yajñās, if you remember, is jñāna yajñā itself. No.1 Self-knowledge itself is a form of yajñā.

No.2 dēva yajñā; which is in the form of ritualistic worship of various dēvathās; called dēva yajñāḥ;

No.3 viṣaya bhōga yajñāḥ; considering every experience as a worship. So thus the entire world consisting of śabdaḥ sparśaḥ, rupa:, rasa:, gandhaḥ; these five are taken as flowers; So music is a flower. A beautiful picture is a flower; A tasty object is a flower. These flowers in the form of śabdaḥ sparśaḥ, rupa:, rasa:, gandhaḥ, are offered to the Lord, who is inside us in the form of atma chaitanyam. So this is called viṣaya bhōga yajñāḥ;

And the fourth yajñāḥ that Krishna presented was indriya samyama yajñāḥ; wherein the very sense control is taken as a yajñāḥ; like observing mounam on a particular day. Gandhiji practiced mounam on a particular day; even now there are many people, they just practice mounam and this mounam is considered a spiritual sādhanā. Not only reduce the noise pollution; but spiritually also it is considered a very big sādhanā. Sankaracharya says: योगस्य प्रदमम् द्वारम् वाङ् निरोधः yōgasya pradamaṁ dvāraṁ vāṅ nirodhaḥ; நாவடங்கினால் நாலும் அடங்க்கும். nāvaṭaṅkiṅāḷ nālum aṭaṅkkum (in Tamil).

So once you master your tongue, both the eating and speaking tongue, you get a tremendous mastery over other organs also; this is called indriya samyama; indriya nigrahaḥ; or damaha; so this dama yajñāḥ is the fourth one;

And fifth one that we saw in the last class, is samah yajñāḥ; disciplining the mind; mental discipline. Thought discipline; by controlling the quantity and quality. First we have to master the quantity; then alone quality control is possible; anything big number, quality control is impossible; and therefore thought discipline, both in terms of quality and quantity and also in terms of direction, in which direction my thoughts go generally. It is a tough discipline, because it requires monitoring the mind throughout the day. And this is called sama yajñāḥ.

These are the five types of yajñās Krishna has enumerated till now; another seven more yajñās Krishna will introduce. And remember the word yajñāḥ means a spiritual disciple, in a broad sense, Krishna uses. Now we will go to verse No.28.

द्रव्ययज्ञास्तपोयज्ञ योगयज्ञास्तथापरे ।

स्वाध्यायज्ञानयज्ञाश्च यतयः संशितव्रताः ॥ ४.२८ ॥

dravyayajñāstapōyajñā yōgayajñāstathā'parē |

apare yatayaḥ अपरे यतयः Others of right effort saṁśitavratāḥ संशितव्रताः (and) of firm resolve dravyayajñāḥ द्रव्ययज्ञाः are practitioners of charity as a Yajñā, तपोयज्ञाः austerities as a Yajñā tapoyajñāḥ, yōgayajñāḥ योगयज्ञः Yōga as a Yajñā, and tathā svādhyāyajñānayajñāḥ ca तथा स्वाध्यायज्ञानयज्ञाः च the repetition and study of scriptures as a Yajñā.

28. Others of right effort (and) of firm resolve are practitioners of charity as a Yajñā, austerities as a Yajñā, Yōga as a Yajñā, and the repetition and study of scriptures as a Yajñā.

So in this one verse, Krishna gives five spiritual disciplines.

The first one is called dravya yajñāḥ; dravya yajñāḥ means dāna yajñāḥ; varieties of charity; either in terms of money; or in terms of material; or in the form of knowledge; sharing my knowledge with other people; without charging; then only it will become dānam; sharing my time; all the time, dānam need not be money; sharing my time; sharing my good will; saying some kind words to a sick person; all these will come under dravya yajñāḥ, dāna yajñāḥ and dānam is considered a very important yajñāḥ; because in the creation, everything is in a flow; nothing is stagnant.

If you take the river, river receives water from the mountain; one side it receives, the other side it again goes back unto the ocean; and the ocean does not keep; it hands over to the cloud; from the cloud to the river and the river again gives it back to the ocean; if you study the creation; every thing is cyclic. There is oxygen cycle, there is carbon dioxide cycle; there is food chain; everything is cyclic process; cyclic means not only I should receive, I should also give. And when a person's mind becomes कृपणा kripṇā mind or a लोभि lobhi mind, he is interested only in getting; he is not interested in giving; or he is not interested in proportional giving; he gets crores and gives one rupee; that too after one hour thinking; And he asks the priest to give back the 8 anna coin from the karpooṛa thatthu. He does not have 8 anna change; and therefore he puts one rupee and takes back the 8 anna back. So dānam, not only should be there; it also should be proportional to what I receive; then only ēvaṃ pravartitaṃ cakraṃ nānuvartayatīha yaḥ .. (3.16); and once there is a stagnation, then there is imbalance in the society, the divide between the rich and poor will become bigger and bigger and then there is robbery; there is chain snatching, and there is murder for gain, and all when there is a big gulf between the rich and the poor. And if you forcibly give, it becomes communism; that becomes a problem; because our religion does not believe in forcing; that fellow will not get the benefit also. What religion says is neither you should keep; nor you should be forced to give; but out of wisdom, understanding, I should come forward and share. And Krishna emphasises and the upaniṣad also emphasise that these three sādhanās, yajñā dana tapa karma, na tyajyam karyamevathat. The Upaniṣad also emphasises: tamēdam vēdānuvacanēna brāhmaṇa vividiṣanthi. yajnēna, dānēna tapasa anāsakēna.

Three basic sādhanās are yajñā, dāna, tapah; prayer to the Lord, sharing whatever I have and then finally moderation in everything; avoiding overindulgence in anything.

And therefore Krishna emphasises that dravya yajñāḥ; and what they do in the olden days is whenever they get a little bit more money or anything; the method they adopt is they perform a big ritual; like Mahārudram; or Adirudram; or big Chandi homam or some ritual they organise, so that the dānam can be done as part of that yāgha. When dānam is done, outside it may lead to arrogance; that I have given, I have given; so to develop humility; it is done as a part of a temple ritual; or a yajñāḥ in which there is scope of anna dānam; there is scope of dakṣiṇa dānam; there is scope of vastra dānam; chappal danām, kodai dānam; vadi dānam; pusthaka dānam; kṣētra dānam; svarna dānam; and even marriage is done as a part of a yāgah and it becomes a kanyaka dānam. Thus everything was yajñāḥ way of life; therefore dravya yajñāḥ; and then tapo yajñāḥ; tapas means mastery of the sense organs and I have given the definition of tapas before; willful self denial, to establish my mastery over my own organ.

Every word is important; it should not enforced self-denial; like some people say, today Ekadasi upavāsam; and I ask why, because in my house, they do not cook; not available; that means what, if it is available; I am ready, So enforced upavāsam is called starving. Starving does not produce spiritual growth; fasting produces spiritual growth; in starving there is pain and complaint; in fasting there is joy. Therefore tapas means I say No to whatever I regularly use. Whatever I regularly use, I say No. And even as a part of a pilgrimage, this vow is taken; for Sabarimalai, they take 41 days vṛtam; and on those days, they do not use pillow, they do not use chappal and they take only one time food (for three times together they eat, but that is a different matter); they take one time food, and bathing also twice or thrice; so many disciples, they walk also 48 miles without chappal; saying that கல்லும் முள்ளும் காலுக்கு மெத்தை. kallum mullum kālukku mettai. That mettai is purely because of the attitude; physically the pain will be there; when there is wilful self-denial, I forgo the comfort of using a chappal. So thus we have got Śivarāthri vṛtam, where you forgo sleep; every day we sleep without any restriction, and at any time; at least Shivarathri day we keep awake; and we do upavāsa; thus we have got varieties of vṛtams; all the vṛtams are tapo yajñā.

So wilful self-denial, so that my sense organs are under my control. When I say no food today, it listens; No coffee today, it listens; No newspaper in the camp, it listens; I suggest do not read the newspaper for 7 or 8 days; after-all 7 day camp; but it is extremely difficult for most of the campers, I will not enforce. But you will find that when there is a gap after lunch; there is big queue each one struggling for a sheet of Hindu; sheet of Express. So if I can say No to the newspaper, that is a tapas. Similarly when car is not available, use the bus, it is tapas; no car, no class; therefore, why can't you practice some tapas. I will not go by bus, below my dignity. I will not go by auto; therefore I should get over all these ideas; status, this and that; they are all big problem; and therefore tapo yajñāḥ; all types of vṛtams.

Then yōga yajñā; yōga yajñāḥ means yōga yajñāḥ, the practice of aśtāṅga yōgah; the eight fold discipline prescribed by Patānjali ṛṣi; a very beautiful system to integrate my personality.

We have got four or five layers, we have studied, annamaya, prānamaya, manōmaya, vijñānamaya. Annamaya is disciplined by yōgasanas; so that I can sit in a posture for one hour without disturbance. It is a yōgah.

And then for prānamaya disciple, we have prāṇāyāma;

for manōmaya disciple, we have meditation;

for vijñānamaya discipline, we have study.

So thus aśtāṅga yōga is a brilliant scheme, devised by Pathajali muni for the integration of various layers of my personality.

It is like a music programme, in which the musician, the violinist, the mridangist, gada, so many things are there; they all function in harmony, you get a beautiful musical concert. Imagine the musician sings in aadi talam and the violinist is doing in tripura talam and mridangist does tani avarthanam in jamba taalam. Who can listen to that music concert? Life is a music and mind is an instrument; sense organs are instruments; body is an instrument; breathing is an instrument; only when all of them have coordination, then life will become music; symphony it becomes; otherwise it will be cacophony only, it will be only noise and therefore aśtāṅga yōga integrates the personality. This is the third yajñā.

And then the fourth yajñā is svadyaya yajñā; which is pārāyaṇam of the scriptures; learning to chant is also pārāyaṇam; and getting byheart is also pārāyaṇam; and regularly chanting also comes under pārāyaṇam; that means pārāyaṇam consists of three things; first learning to chant; otherwise letters will not be properly uttered; akśara śuddhiḥ would not there; so learning to chant properly. And thereafter in the olden tradition, getting byheart is also part of svadyaya; you have to get it byheart because it will be very useful for analysis. If you want to want to know what is the essence of the fourth chapter, if you do not know the slokās byheart, the ideas will stand in the form of islands; you would not get the total picture; like the close-up study of a person, the nose alone; you see going ear; if you see the nose, you will not see the ear; and look at the leg, you will not see the hand; if you want to get the whole picture, what do you require, we should stand behind and then alone you get the whole picture; So when I teach you, I am concentrating on one slōkā, that means the other slōkās are going out of focus. And by the time you come to 40th slōkā, this slōkā has gone out of focus; therefore it is difficult to get the total picture of the fourth chapter, and therefore what do they do; they get the whole chapter byheart; so that when I say the fourth chapter, in my mind, the whole thing stands; what is the first three slokās, how avathāra part came, then ātma anātma viveka and then the whole thing will come.

Now if I ask you to get byheart; you will not be able to and if I make it compulsory, you will drop coming to the class. So therefore at the end of every chapter, I have to give a summary. Summary and all is not in our tradition. Because if a student gets the chapter byheart, he will automatically get the summary. Therefore, everything, even for Tarka śāstrā, first you have to get the entire śāstrā byheart.

That is why they developed two forms of literature, one is called sūtra; another is slōkā; metrical and aphorism method.

when it is sūtra form, it is all capsule statements.

Athatho brahma jijñāsa. Janmaydasya yathaha; śāstrā yōnitvat; tatva samanvayat; ikshate na sabdam. Everything is in capsule form and the entire vēdānta śāstrā in few sūtras, you can get by heart.

And another method that devised was the metrical composition, you can sing; therefore easier to get byheart. Gītā you can get by heart; because it is in metrical form and not in prose form.

Thus sūtras and slōkā forms are uniquely devised for committing the whole thing to memory. Thus they all come under what: Svadhyaya yajñā, and because we should commit to memory, they never used printed or written version of the book. You are not supposed to keep the book when you study. So you should know the fourth chapter, without keeping the book. What is the way? The only way is to get it by heart. Even now in some of the āśramams, if a young brahmacāri goes to study, first thing they will do is to give the book, ask him to get it byheart and then ask him to come back. So generally the boy never comes back. What a rigid discipline they had. Therefore, if I had to teach Gītā, I have to get it byheart and then only I should come.

Now, you have the book in hand, but if you bring the wrong chapter, then there is the problem. Then if you say that Swamiji! I was brought the first chapter only, then there is a problem. All those things can be avoided if you byheart. So thus svadhyaya yajñā is very very useful and above all, there is one more glory to that. All the scriptures are associated with God and ṛṣīs; and the beauty is when you do pāṛāyaṇam; sooner or later, you will develop a desire to know the meaning. Initially you may do as a routine; but one day or the other, the very pāṛāyaṇam will change your mind and you will develop. If you question that I am chanting the Viṣṇu sahasranam daily, what is its meaning, use? Nothing is visible, etc. Are we cursing the Lord, or is it a nama or is it a story, etc. A desire will come and svadhyaya yajñā is considered a very important sādhanā. Pāṛāyanam.

Then the next one is jñāna yajñāḥ; jñāna yajñā is study of the meaning of the scriptures. Enquiry, analysis. So previous one is what; only studying, learning to chant; no meaning is known; therefore svadhyaya is called sabda grahanam; jñāna yajñā is called artha grahanam. In the first you learn the words, in the second you know the meaning. And that is why they start the svadhaya in early ages; they do the vēda adhyānam in the 5th year, 6th year, 7th year, etc. because it is a young mind, it will easily register, and therefore put the entire veda within 15 years. So even Taittiriya upanisad, everything got byheart, by the 10th year, 11th year. You ask the meaning, they will say they do not know. Later, he gets an opportunity to know the meaning and that is called jñāna yajñā.

Now here one doubt may come. The doubt will if you remember one of my previous classes. If you do not remember; no problem; that is in the 25th verse, I have said that two yajñāḥs are mentioned; one is dēvah yajñāḥ and another is jñāna yajñāḥ. And in the 28th verse, again Krishna says jñāna yajñāḥ; so is'nt it a repetition?

That verse jñāna yajñā is parā jñānam, parā vidya; the spiritual knowledge; Brahma jñāna yajñā it is, whereas here jñāna yajñā means all other sciences or disciplines like karma kanda jñānam, the knowledge of scriptures, rituals, then tarka śāstrā, the knowledge of logic, because the whole scripture involves logic also. The knowledge of logic; the knowledge of mimamsa śāstrām. How to analyse the scriptures. So tarka, mimāmsa, vyākaraṇam, all these come under jñāna yajñā. Secondary disciples. Thus five yajñās are mentioned. Draya yajñāḥ; tapo yajñā, yōga yajñāḥ svadhya yajñā, and jñāna yajñā.

And incidentally for grammar students, if they know Sanskrit grammar, you have to note here dravya yajñāḥ, the word does not refer to the yajñā itself, but it refers to the sādakās who practice that yajñā. For dravya yajñāḥ means the sādakās who practice dravya yajñāḥ. Bahuvrihi samasa; dravya danam evam yajñāḥ; yeshaam te. Tapo yajñāḥ is, tapaḥ yajñāḥ eva yeshaam te. Therefore it is referring to the people who practice these yajñās. And all these people are called yatayaḥ. They are yatis. Literally yati means a sanyāsi. Yati rājaḥ; a great sanyāsi is called yati rājaḥ; and that is how the college got the name Yatiraj College; and now everyone says Ethiraj college. Yati rājaḥ; great sanyāsi called yati rājaḥ; So yatayaḥ means sanyāsi and in this context, yati means any committed spiritual seeker is called yatiḥ; one who does not approach spirituality casually. An amateurish approach; a casual approach; half-hearted approach, that the benefit will not come. The one who takes it as top priority, such a person is called yatihi; even if he is, or she is a grihastha.

Therefore यतयः yatayaḥ; yatayaḥ means committed seekers, they are. And not only they are committed seekers, संशितव्रताः saṁśitavratāḥ; and they are people of firm resolve; so saṁśitam is tīvram, resolve means resolve, that means once they take a vow, they practice. They decide that Ekadasi I will not eat or Ekadasi I eat only this much; milk and fruits only or this only. Once they decide, they follow it. And the unfortunate thing the moment you take a vow, the next day itself there will be obstacle. They would have prepared your favourite. And they will insist on that you taste it, or you are weak. So from next week, we will start fresh, you decide. So if you read the purāṇic story, the Nayanmar stories etc. you will find, they were all people of resolve, and Bhagavān himself comes and serves the devotee. Unless we have a will power, spirituality is impossible. A person of weak-will can never progress in spirituality. And therefore Krishna admires them; they are saṁśitavratāḥ; people of firm determination; so thus how many sādhanās we have got now; in the previous verse 5 sādhanās; in this verse 5 sādhanās. 10 sādhanās.

प्राणापानगती रुद् ध्वा प्राणायामपरायणाः ॥४.२९॥

prāṇāpānagatī ruddhvā prāṇāyāmaparāyaṇāḥ | | 4.29 | |

अपरे apare others, जुह्वति juhvati offer प्राणम् prāṇam exhalation अपाने apānē into the (fire of) inhalation, तथा tathā and अपानम् apānam inhalation प्राणे prāṇē into (the fire of) exhalation रुद्ध्वा ruddhvā Restraining प्राणापानगति prāṇāpānagati the movement of both inhalation and exhalation (some others offer them into the fire of retention).

29. Committed to Prāṇāyāma, others offer exhalation into (the fire of) inhalation, and inhalation into (the fire of) exhalation. Restraining the movements of both inhalation and exhalation, (some others offer them into the fire of retention).

So in this verse, Krishna talks about prāṇāyāma sādhanā, which is also considered a very useful spiritual discipline, because when we study the different layers of our personality, we find annamaya is the grossest layer, the physical body; then the next interior layer, prāṇamaya, the energy sheath; prāna stands for the vital force, our energy, that is the next one. And the next one is the manōmaya, the mental personality; emotional or psychological personality and the prānamaya comes in between annamaya and manōmaya and if a person disciplines the prānic personality, then it will influence both annamaya as well as manōmaya, because prāṇāyāma is intermediary; this side annamaya; this side manōmaya; when prāṇa is disciplined, physical health will also improve, mental health will also improve. And that is why prāṇāyāma was kept as an important sādhanā before every ritual. Every everything. Suklāmbharartham; you pray to the Vinayaka; and the immediate thing is Om Bhuhu; it is prāṇāyāma alone.

And the prāṇāyāma is also of two types, one is prāṇāyāma as a physical exercise; as an exercise for improving the health; then it becomes a secular discipline and veda does not want us to practice prāṇāyāma, as a secular discipline, veda wants to convert prāṇāyāma as a religious discipline. And how to make it religious discipline; make it as a part of any religious sādhanā and also when the prāṇāyāma is done, utter the nāmas of the Lord. Either Rāma Rāma or Krishna Krishna or if a person knows the traditional prāṇāyāma mantra, he can chant om bhuhu, om bhuvaha;

moment mantra is included, prāṇāmaya is called, sa garbha prāṇāmaya; it is a spiritual sādhanā. Minus the name of the Lord, it is called agarbha prāṇāmaya; it can only improve your physical health; it cannot improve your spiritual health. Thus prāṇāmaya becomes a yajñā, if prayer is also included in that. And this prāṇāmaya is a very big discipline, which is discussed and special books are written on prāṇāmaya and we should remember, advanced courses of prāṇāmaya are prescribed for very many material benefits. Even raising the power called Kundalini śakti, is nothing but a prāṇic power; prāṇic force; which is a potential one, Kundalini literally means the coiled power. Any coil has power in it because it works like a spring; the coil is there; watch goes on ticking. Therefore coil literally means potential. So kundalini means potential prāṇic energy. It is compared to a snake, snake word is given to indicate that it remains in coiled form; and coil means potential; kundala means circle. Kundalini means in circled form. Śakti means power, śakti is feminine gender; therefore it is called kundalini, potential power. And this is not a unique thing, we have got potential power at every layer; physical body has got kundalini śakti; what is that; your physical power; we have got running power; but can you run now, when you can not even walk; what has happened to that power; that power we have not tapped; if only we start walking or running, first day you can walk only for half a kilometer, and then 2 kilometers and then slowly you can raise the distance. What happened to that walking power? Now it is kundalini śakti; if you regularly walk, it becomes a manifest power.

Similarly at the prāṇamaya kōśa also there is potential power. Similarly, manōmaya is one's memory is a power, which we are fast losing; because we are not using that memory power and therefore after some years, if someone asks your name, you have to look at your tab and then say. So we need not remember the day, date, etc. we are using the mobiles. We need not remember the phone no, everything is there, there is the computer; so that memory power is what, kundalini śakti. And the power in the water falls, which we tap as hydro electric power, that is potentially in the water fall; that is kundalini śakti. Do not imagine some kind of mysterious power or energy, any potential capacity is called kundalini.

Thus prāṇāmaya, as advanced courses are discussed, to tap the kundalini śakti; and make it flow upwards and go to the mūlādāra, svādiṣṭāna and by which one can get various siddhis, and those discussions are there; but we should remember, they are all at the materialistic level; they are all at anātma level. Kundalini raising and self-knowledge has no connection at all; just as bringing out your walking power; you have raised your kundalini power. Now you can walk ten kilometers. Did you get mōkṣa because of that; What mōkṣa; You have only tapped the kundalini śakti of the annamaya kōśa; with prāṇāmaya you may tap the prāṇic energy of the prāṇamaya kōśa. Similarly by concentration, you can tap the kundalini śakti of mental power. That only now they are talking. In the medical field they say, I think there was a book also: Will Yourself To Cure Diseases; something like that. What they say is when you have a disease, you daily sit for an hour and visualise the disease, visualise your immunity power, visualise a war, between the disease and immunity power. Like the advertisements, for Colgate, toothpaste, and microbes that is fighting; and this win; like that immunity power win; and daily you are supposed to meditate; books are written; and what is kundalini śakti; the mental kundalini śakti, you will your health and that is called sankalpa śakti; you can get health also. But can you say that is mōkṣa; that is not mōkṣa; therefore prāṇāmaya can be used for getting advanced powers; but in vedanta we are positively not interested in materialist powers. Siddis, Patanjali Maharshi himself writes, never use this for material gains; because all siddis are obstacles; they come under māya. Thus a person who comes for mōkṣais easily distracted by these siddis.

So here what is prāṇāmaya meant for? Simple citta suddhi; prāṇāmaya can give focusing power; prāṇāmaya can quieten the mind and we will smoothly breath. Now we are not breathing at all. We do not think of it; it is happening voluntarily; but here it is disciplining the prāṇās.

And this prāṇāmaya is divided into three types; puraka prāṇāmaya, rechaka prāṇāmaya; and kumbhaka prāṇāmaya; pūraka prāṇāmaya is that in which inhalation is given importance. Deep breathing in; pūrakam means filling up; filling up what; not the stomach; that is not prāṇāmaya; filling up the lungs with what; air is called pūraka prāṇāmaya;

rēchaka prāṇāmaya is that, the focus is on emptying or exhalation; deep exhalation. inhalation not in focus. Rēchaka means emptying.

Third one is kumbhaka prāṇāmaya, wherein the focus, the importance, is on retaining; neither inhalation nor exhalation.

Even the kumbakam is supposed to be of two types;

one type is after inhalation, you retain; for a minute, two minutes, etc. that is called ānthara kumbakam; where air is kept inside and retained; and then the second kumbaka prāṇāmaya is after exhalation, one remains for a few minutes, wherein air is outside, not inside and that is called bhāhya kumbakam.

So ānthara kumbhaka, bhāhya kumbaka prāṇāmaya;

And Krishna says different people practice different types of prāṇāmayas; all of them are yajñāḥ. Look at the verse. अपाने प्राणं जुह्वति apānē prāṇam juhvati. This refers to pūraka-prāṇāmaya; that is some people give importance to apānam; apānam means inhalation; in this context, apāṇa means inhalation; and prāṇa means exhalation, some people practice inhalation-prāṇāmaya; in which what is offered, exhalation is offered; means it is made non-existent; because when you offer some oblation into the fire; what happens; it becomes non-existent; in the inhalation-prāṇāmaya; exhalation is offered; that means exhalation is avoided; this is pūraka.

Then प्राणे अपानम् prāṇē apānam; so this is called rēchaka-prāṇāyāma or exhalation-prāṇāyāma; and in the exhalation-prāṇāmaya what is offered, inhalation is offered; inhalation is offered means, it is destroyed, it is made non-existent; when you exhale, can you practice, inhalation; when you practice exhalation, inhalation is destroyed; when you practice inhalation, exhalation is destroyed. What is destroyed is the oblation; this is rēchaka.

And some other people practice प्राणापानगती रुद्ध्वा prāṇāpānagatī ruddhvā; some people stop both inhalation and exhalation; and thus practice kumbaka-pranayam kurvanthi; that we have to supply. In this verse, kumbaka-prāṇāmayam kurvanthi; they concentrate on kumbaka; and kumbaka-prāṇāmaya is supposed to be ideal when the mind is too much restless.

If a person has got the discrimination to make the mind quiet, quietude of the mind through knowledge is permanent quietude; but if a person, there the problem is suppose I want to quieten my mind through knowledge, I will have a problem because to get the knowledge, I need a quiet mind; if you marry, you will be cured of madness; and you can get married only if you are cured of madness. So this is called अन्योन्य anyonya.

So if I get knowledge I will get peace of mind; and unless I have some peace, I will not be able to do even śravaṇam. But some of you may feel that one hour you are not able to concentrate; so therefore, initially you have to find out some grosser method to quieten the mind; that is called relative quietude; prāṇāmaya will bring in relative quietude. With a relatively quiet mind, you study the scriptures, and the knowledge will give you absolute quietude. प्राणायामेन आपेक्षिक शान्तिः; ज्ञानेन अत्यन्तिक शान्तिः prāṇāyāmena āpekṣika śānti; jñānena atyantika śānti; that is prāṇāmaya is like first aid.

What does first aid do; it gives a temporary remedy; but one should not stop with first aid. The very fact that it is called first aid, it is to be followed by second aid; after all second aid is going to come, then why first aid if you ask, you will be close in the accident place itself. The first aid makes me prepared for the second aid, which will give him permanent remedy.

Thus prāṇāmaya is the first aid; ātma jñānam, is the final treatment. So therefore, this also some people practice; all of them are called what prāṇāmaya parāyanā; they are called prāṇāmaya practitioners, and it comes under prāṇāmaya yajñāḥa; अयमः āyamaḥ; means mastery, discipline; you cannot read as prāṇa and yamaha; it is prāṇa ayamaḥ; prāṇa ayamaḥ; यं yam, यमने yamanē to discipline, to master, to regular, यं; यच्चति yam; yatchathi is the root, यमन् yaman name came to Yaman from that, because he regulates the population. By regularly finishing people; or else what will happen; now itself 1 trillion. If Yaman is not there, what will happen? So therefore Yama is called yama because he is a master regulator of the population. Similarly, prāṇa ayamaḥ means the regulation of prana and by regulating prāṇa, indirectly we are regulating apāna, vyāna, udāna, samāna. All the other four are mastered through prāṇāyāma; digestion improves; circulation improves; excretion improves. Otherwise people will have problem; either overworking or under working; So therefore that also must work properly. Everything will be good.

सर्वेऽप्येते यज्ञविदो यज्ञक्षपितकल्मषाः ॥४.३०॥

aparē niyatāhārāḥ prāṇān prāṇēṣu juhvati |
sarvē'pyētē yajñavidō yajñakṣapitakalmaṣāḥ | | 4.30 | |

अपरे apare Others नियताहाराः niyatāhārāḥ of regulated diet जुहवति juhvati offer
प्राणान् prāṇān the Pranas प्राणेषु prāṇēṣu into the (fire of) Pranas सर्वे एते अपि
sarve ete api All those यज्ञविदः yajñavidah performers of Yanja यज्ञक्षपितकल्मषाः
yajñakṣapitakalmaṣāḥ become purified by Yajñā

30. Others of regulated diet offer the Pranas into the (fire of) Pranas. All those performers of Yajñā become purified by Yajñā.

So 11 yajñāḥs are over; now comes the 12th and final yajñāḥ; which is āhāra niyama yajñāḥ; dieting; moderation in eating; which is considered extremely important; and āhāra niyama comes in two stages; the first is quantity control; Krishna will talk about it more in 6th chapter, there I will discuss more; in the 6th chapter talks about quantity control; first you decide how many times you want to eat; and once you have fixed, make a rule that in-between nothing goes inside; Chocolate, popcorn, you should not eat keeping it in the pant packet; and even at the stipulated time, what I eat should be measured. It should not be over-eating. This is quality control; the number of times I eat, and the amount I eat; is quantity control; after controlling the quantity, then comes quality control. Gradually getting rid of tāmasic food; like meat, liquor, and all kinds of things come under tāmasic and gradually cutting rājasic food; and thereafterwards making sātvika āhāra, the quality control Krishna talks in the 17th chapter; so sixth chapter quantity control; 17th chapter quality control; all those things we will see later.

So thus अपरे नियताहाराः apare niyatāhārāḥ; some people practice food discipline; and by this discipline, what happens, प्राणान्प्राणेषु जुहवति prāṇān prāṇēṣu juhvati. So when āhāra discipline is not there; all the pancha prāṇās become sick prāṇās. unhealthy prāṇās, i.e. prāṇā, apāna, vyāna, udāna, samāna. Everything becomes sick. That is what they are trying to control though prāṇic healing, reiki, etc. what they are trying to find out what are the disharmony in the prāṇic personality; and they are trying to control it and all the other things; but this is the basis. But āhāra influences the nature of prāṇā and when a person takes to āhāra niyama; the sick prāṇās are converted into healthy prāṇās and therefore what is offered unto what; sick prāṇās are offered into healthy prāṇās. That means what sick prāṇās are destroyed; and in this place what comes, healthy prāṇās; digestion is very good; breathing is very good; circulation is very good; all of them becomes good.

And Krishna says all these people are great sādakās. सर्वेऽप्येते यजविदः sarve:'pyete yajñavidah; all these people who practice these 12 sādhanās, they are great sādakās, and what benefit they get, यज्ञक्षपितकल्मषाः yajñakṣapitakalmaṣāḥ; they destroy all their impurities; inner impurity; kāma krodhaḥ, lobhaḥ, mohaḥ, madaḥ mātsaryādi; all the impurities including purva janma pāpam; all the prārabdaḥ pāpams are also burnt by these yajñās.

ॐ

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

अस्मद् आचार्य पर्यन्ताम् वन्दे गुरु परम्पराम्

asmad ācārya paryantām vandē guru paramparām

Om

Mental discipline; prāṇāyāma; like this, he gave 12 spiritual disciplines, of which self-knowledge is also one of the sādhanās. And He named; all the sādhanās one one yajñāḥ. But we should remember that all these disciplines can be called sādhanās only when they fulfill two conditions, the first condition is God must be involv̄ed in that. Minus God, all will be mere exercises only; they can never contribute to spiritual growth. They may give physical health; they may give even psychological health, but spiritual growth is impossible unless Īśvara is involv̄ed, and therefore by using the word yajñāḥ, Krishna indicates that they all must involve Īśvara; even regular eating can become yajñāḥ, if you are going to offer the food to the Lord and eat. That is condition No.1.

And the second condition is all of them can be called spiritual sādhanās, only when the motive is spiritual growth. If the motive is material benefit, Krishna will say in the 7th chapter, we can use all these sādhanās, for the material benefit also. Even in management courses, they are introducing these Gita sādhanās; but there the purpose is better performance, so that there is better profit; there is nothing wrong in applying Gītā for that; but we can call it yajñāḥ; they get yajñā status only when the motive is spiritual growth. So thus when the motive is spiritual, and when the Lord is involv̄ed, then all of them are called yajñāḥ. And we saw the last yajñāḥ in verse No.30, first line, in the last class, aparē niyatāhārāḥ prāṇān prāṇēṣu juhvati. Even discipline in food can be called a yajñā, āhāra niyama yajñāḥ; even upavāsa is a type of yajñā only, because if you see the meaning of the word upavāsa, it means being near, vāsaḥ, being, staying, upa means near. Upavāsa we think is going without food, but upavāsa is not going without food, upavāsa means staying near. Staying near what? food? because the word upavāsa does not say staying near, food? āhāra upavāsa? or cum upavāsa; it means Īsvara upavāsaḥ; so upavāsaḥ is day in which I reduce all my all other sensory transactions, so that the time savēd by avoiding those sensory transactions I can use for the religious practice, like pāṛāyaṇam, japa or anything. And that is why, even upavāsa is not mere forgoing food, because according to śāstrā, āhāra is not merely the thing which we take through the mouth alone; āhāra means that which is consumed through all the five sense organs. Even seeing varieties of forms is āhāra for cakṣuḥ. Similarly, varieties of sound is āhāra for the ears. Therefore, upavāsa means not only foregoing not only this āhāra; pancha indriya āhāra; reduction or avoidance.

For what purpose, many people on Śivarāthri day, Vaikunta ekadasi day, they do upavāsa; and watch the night show. So upavāsa and keeping awake is not for an extra show of movie, but it for japa, pooja, pāṛāyaṇam, etc. For upavāsa is a type of āhāra niyamam. So thus all types of quantity control and all types of quality control with regard to food is āhāra niyamaḥ. In the 6th chapter, Krishna talks about quantity control; in the 17th chapter, Krishna talks about quality control; all of them will come under what; āhāra niyama yajñāḥ.

And what Krishna says is when we have got discipline with regard to āhāra, all our pañca prāṇās, pañca prāṇās means the digestive system; because this is essential service; for some people, it works three shifts a day; therefore constant midnight also they eat, because the fridge has come, open the fridge, and put something inside the mouth and go. So āhāra niyama means the undisciplined samana prāṇā, the digestive systems gets healthy and once the digestive system is mastered, then prāṇā, apāna, vyāna, udāna, all these five prāṇās are disciplined by āhāra niyama.

And this also Krishna presents as a yajñāḥ, and what is offered into what; the undisciplined pancha prāṇās are destroyed by developing disciplined pancha prāṇās; the unhealthy pancha prāṇās are destroyed by offering into the fire of healthy pancha prāṇās. Therefore Krishna says here, apare niyatha hara; there are some seekers, who follow āhāra niyama; and by this prāṇān prāṇēṣu juhvati. pañca prāṇānan, pañca prāṇeshu juhvati. We have to add the two adjectives; unhealthy pañca prāṇās are offered unto healthy pancha prāṇās.

With this all the 12 yajñās are completed. And then Krishna says a person can practice, all the 12 of any number that he can offered. Krishna does not say that everyone should practice all the yajñāhs, all the yajñās compulsorily. A person can have any combination; for example, if a person has a got a very sensitive delicate stomach and if they practice upavāsa and acidity problem, and three days even regular sādānā, they cannot do; therefore we have to be very judicious; if the body cannot stand upavāsa, we have varieties of upavāsa; nirjala upavāsa; nothing you take; and then fruits and milk upavāsa; and some people take the Kerala nedrapazham, each one with 6-7 inches long and 300 gms weight, 4-5 at a time and say it is upavāsa!; it is more than the regular food itself. Ok fruits and milk. Some people avoid rice and take everything else!. பல ஆஹாரம் pala āharam; फल आहारम् phala āhāram; फलम् phalam means fruit; they think it is பல pala in Tamil and they take different kinds of foods; and that day they eat more than what they generally eat; so therefore śāstrā allows that fruits and milk alone or milk alone or other types of food; what the śāstrā says is you should practice self-discipline. A let-go philosophy is suitable for the animal but not for the human being; and if the human being is going to have a let-go philosophy, let-go philosophy means, whatever I want to eat, whenever and wherever, eat. Śāstrā says that it is animalistic life and Bhagavān will conclude that he has given the human life wrongly and therefore next janma, back to paśu, ass, cow, elephant, etc. and therefore Krishna says that let a person practice any one of these yajñās in any combinations. So they are called यज्ञविदः yajñavidahṣ. They are yajñā anuṣṭāyinaḥṣ. Those who practice yajñā that is indicated by the sacred thread ceremony also; yajñāḥ upavitham it is called; it is a thread, exclusively worn for the sake of practicing one or more of these yajñāḥṣ.

And if I do not practice any one of them, the yajñopavidam is made redundant. Up to a particular age, we can lead an animalistic life; as Swami Chinmayananda beautifully says: you can start as an animal-man but sooner or later you should become a man-man; when you become man-man, you practice one or more of these yajñāḥṣ; and through these yajñāḥṣ when you get self-knowledge, you are converted into a God man. Animal man to Man-Man to God-Man. Now I am afraid to say God Man, because of all the scams associated with the frauds and cheats. They are now called Godman.

So therefore Krishna says, etc सर्वे अपि यज्ञविदः भवन्ति sarve api yajñavidahṣ bhavanti; they are all called dvijās, twice born. A free-licentious line, you are born once; but once you have a deliberate life, you are twice born; whether you wear the thread, or not, you transform your lifestyle, you are a dvijās; dvijās alone can become ajāha; Brahman.

And what will happen by the practice of these yajñās; Krishna says: यज्ञक्षपितकल्मषाः yajñakṣapitakalmaṣāḥ; by these yajñās, they have destroyed all their kalmaṣāms. kalmaṣām, the impurities. What is the definition of impurities. Anything that obstructs self-knowledge, or spiritual growth is called impurity. Anything that obstructs spiritual growth is impurity; all these impurities, kṣapitams, by the practice of these yajñās. Therefore, all yajñās are glorious; but remember these are not the 12 only. The 12 are only sample yajñās; there are many which Krishna himself mentions in the next sloka. Verse No.31.

नायं लोकोऽस्त्ययज्ञस्य कुतोऽन्यः कुरुसत्तम ॥ ४.३१ ॥

yajñāśiṣṭāmṛtabhujō yānti brahma sanātanam |

nāyaṁ lōkō'styayajñasya kutō'nyaḥ kurusattama | | 4.31 | |

31. Those who partake of the ambrosial Yajñāprasada go to the eternal Brahman. Oh Arjuna! (Even) this world is not there for the non-performer of Yajñās. How can there be the other (world)?

So here Krishna says: if a person practices one or more of these yajñās, and thereafterwards he takes his regular food, because according to śāstrā, eating or drinking is not the first job of the day. Unfortunately our lifestyles are changing; and first of all we do not get up in the morning; the śāstrā says one has to get up before sunrise; because Bhagavān's prathakṣa svarūpam is Surya; suryaḥ prathakṣa dēvathā and Bhagavān in the form of sun is coming to bless us and Bhagavān suryaḥ is our guest and therefore when a guest comes; we should be ready to welcome. Therefore a man of yajñāh gets up before the sunrise and before starting anything, consuming anything, one has to do the morning prayers. Do bed coffee, is against Indian culture; TV switching on and reading all kinds of gossip magazine in the early morning; Śāstrā says start the day with prayers. In fact, snānam itself is the first ritual. If it is the winter season, people think, that it is not perspiring much and they avoid taking bath or think that we will think about it later. After 12 o'clock lunch. No. The snānam itself is a ritual because, snānam according to us, has got a two-fold job; not only it has to wash the physical impurity, which is only incidental; more important is we have to wash the inner impurity which we have gathered yesterday. Because every transaction gives mental dust also. When you go out, you are gathering dust and therefore you come back and take bath and remember, in every transaction we are developing anger, jealousy, anxiety, frustration, they are all inner dust we gather; and if you do not wash this dust regularly, you cannot say that I have taken bath yesterday; regularly we gather dust; and therefore we have to regularly wash our physical body, and parallelly we have to regularly wash our mind also. Therefore we have got snāna mantras also and even if we do not know the special mantra; there is a mantra called अघमर्षणसूक्तम् aghamarṣaṇasūktam;

so:'hamapāpi virajo nirmukto muktakilbiṣaḥ ||

Oh Lord Varuṇa; Varuṇa is presiding deity of waters, when I take snānam, I address the Lord in waters, and say yesterday Oh lord I have overeaten, in some business meeting over-eaten what is not to be eaten; athi aśanam is a pāpam. Athi pānam, drinking anything is; yacca ugrāt pratigrahāt; I have taken varieties of things, which I am not supposed to take from people; for all of them, tanno varuṇo rājāpaṇināhyavmarśatu I so:'hamapāpi virajo nirmukto muktakilbiṣaḥ.

It is called aghamarṣaṇa sūktam. Sin washing hymn and daily during snānam, we are supposed to do that; that we may not know; it does not matter, if you do not know at least some Rāma Rāma Rāma, Krishna Krishna or Sthōthra or guru Sthōthra, pāthāya prathibothithām; something; therefore snānam itself is a yajñā; and after snānam; after prayer; after pūja, after pārayaṇam, if I do all these things and thereafterwards, if I break my fast, that is called breakfast. Now we need not break the fast, because we never fast; 24 hours we are eating. Many of us do not know what is hunger; because we have never given a chance to our body to tell us what is hunger; so therefore, we are supposed to break the fast, religiously after this yajñāh and that food I take is called yajñāh śiṣṭam. My breakfast becomes yajñāh śiṣṭam; Śiṣṭam means prasāda; my lunch become yajñāh prasāda; however hungry I am, I do not eat just like that; I do Brahmārpaṇam and Brahmahavihi or ěkō viṣṇu mahat bhūtam; if you do not know anything, at least say Nārāyana Nārāyana, etc. then you take that food, then it becomes yajñāh śiṣṭam; these sādakās are taking what; yajñāh śiṣṭam āmṛtam; this yajñāh prasādam is called āmṛtam.

Why is it called, āmṛtam hethutvat mōkṣa kāraṇatvāt. since such a life will lead a person to mōkṣa or immortality; āmṛtam, do not think it is nectar drink, it is not in that meaning; amṛtam is mōkṣa kāraṇam ithyārtha; yajñāh śiṣṭa is mōkṣa kāraṇam; mōkṣa kāraṇa bhuta yajñā prasāda bokthārā; bhujah means those who take that. In fact you can feel the change in mind; just try a loose living for a few days; (that is what we are doing) and try this disciplined living for a few days, you can feel that the mind seems to be light; therefore Krishna says yajñāh śiṣṭam āmṛtam bhujah; what will happen to them. सनातनम् ब्रह्म यन्ति sanātanam Brahma yānti; they will all definitely attain Brahman; they will all attain mōkṣa; how can they attain mōkṣa; because I said there are 12 yajñāḥ; of which one yajñāḥ is jñāna yajñā, so if they practice the 11 yajñās initially, those 11 yajñās will lead a person to the jñāna yajñā which is the most powerful; and not only that, these yajñās themselves will create a desire for jñāna yajñā; a religious life will create a desire for philosophical knowledge.

And even after that desire, these yajñās themselves will give sufficient puṇyam to get a guru; sufficient atmosphere for learning; all the necessary conditions Bhagavān will provide, jñānam will be a walk over, and as a result of that; sanātanam Brahma yānthi; they attain immortal eternal Brahman. Thus Krishna glorifies those people who do yajñāh. We can call all of them karma yōgis.

Having glorified these disciplined people, Krishna now strongly criticises, the other people who do not practice even one yajñāha. So Krishna condemns them strongly. He says, अयज्ञस्य ayajñasya, unfortunately, there are people who do not believe in any discipline. And they have got a wrong concept of freedom; human right; wrong concept of human right; why should I follow some scripture; why should I follow some guru; I am a human being, I am a free person; whatever I want to do, I will do. I should know that, if a doctor gives me some discipline, it is for whose benefit;

doctor is not going to get any benefit; if I follow these disciplines, it is only going to lead to my health. Similarly, the scriptures give me discipline, remember scriptures are not going to get any benefit out of it; ācāryās are not going to get any benefit out of it; only I am going to get benefit; but these people do not understand that they are meant for their own spiritual growth; and therefore they do not practice any yajñāḥ; and they lead a life which is called in Tamil; கண்டதே காட்சி; கொண்டதே கோலம். kaṇṭate kāṭci; kaṇṭate kolam. Whatever they feel, (താന്താനി tāntoni in Malayalam, as well as in Tamil I think); it is called kāma vāda; kāma bhakṣa and one more; kāma vāda and kāma bhakṣa means whatever you feel like doing, whatever you feel like talking; whatever you feel like eating; that licentious life those who lead, Krishna strongly criticises by saying: ayajñāsyā, for undisciplined person; अयं लोकः न अस्ति ayaṃ lokaḥ na asti. Even worldly happiness is impossible; because of undisciplined life will first take away physical health; the first causality is physical health; and next casualty is mental health; and he will have all the pleasures around, he might have money and all the luxurious things he might have, but he would have spoiled his body and mind; that he cannot enjoy even a beautiful dance or music programme, because even to enjoy worldly pleasures, I should be a person together. I should be a harmonised person; an organised person; even for worldly pleasures. Therefore Krishna says undisciplined person cannot enjoy even sense pleasures.

ayaṃ lōkaḥ; इह लोक सुखम् न अस्ति iha lōka sukham na asti; and when this worldly pleasures are not possible, what to talk of spiritual joy; which is a subtle ānanda; and which is much much higher than these gross pleasures of this world; कुतः अन्यः kutaḥ anyaḥ; where is the question of para lōka sukham; svargam will not get at all; if he does not go to the narakam, he is savēd; so iha lōka sukham is not there; paraloka sukham is not there; mōkṣa sukham is definitely not possible for whom, ayajñāsyā; the one who does not have any discipline.

कर्मजान्विद्धि तान्सर्वानेवं ज्ञात्वा विमोक्ष्यसे ॥ ४.३२ ॥

ēvaṃ bahuvidhā yajñā vitatā brahmaṇō mukhē |

karmajān viddhi tān sarvānēvaṃ jñātvā vimōkṣyasē || 4.32 ||

32. In this manner, many types of Yajñās are elaborated in the pages of the Vēdā. Know them all to be born of action. Having know thus, you will be free.

So here Krishna says that these 12 yajñās are only sample yajñās. This is not an exhaustive list; we have got hundreds of yajñās, even in the vēdās. Krishna is only borrowing some yajñās from the vēdās; Gītā is never an original work; but it is the elucidation of the vēdās; therefore all these yajñāḥs, if you read Śankarācārya and other ācāryās' Bhāṣyam, they will show which yajñā is borrowed from which part of the vēdā; they give vēdic references to show that Krishna is only bringing out the vēdic wisdom; because in the introduction to the fourth chapter itself Krishna has said:

स कालेनेह महता योगो नष्टः परन्तपः ॥४.२॥
sa kālēnēha mahatā yōgō naṣṭaḥ parantapa || 4.2 ||

Hey Arjuna! vēdic wisdom has been lost and my job is not introducing a new system; I am only reviving the vēdic tradition;

स एवायं मया तेऽद्य योगः प्रोक्तः पुरातनः ।
भक्तोऽसि मे सखा चेति रहस्यं ह्येतदुत्तमम् ॥४.३॥
sa ēvāyaṁ mayā tē'dya yōgaḥ prōktaḥ purātanah|
bhaktō'si mē sakhā cēti rahasyaṁ hyētaduttamam||4.3||

Therefore Krishna himself tells that these 12 yajñās are only samples, like that there are many. एवं ēvaṁ; like the previous 12 yajñās, बहुविधा यज्ञा bahuvidhā yajñā, variety of yajñās, pilgrimage is there, which is not said; and then japa yajñāḥ is not said; there are so many yajñāḥ which are not mentioned and if you want to know more, go to the original.

In fact you need not know more; if you do this even sincerely, it is enough, that itself is big thing; this is more than required; try to follow what minimum you know; because your aim is not scholarship; these yajñās you do not get any benefit like being a yōgāsana scholar; and I ask him, he gives a description of all the yōgāsana; and I ask him how many hours you practice; and he says "I do not practice, but I know what is this yōgāsana and what is that yōgāsana and what are its benefits etc." - all theory - that knowledge will not lead you anywhere; and therefore what minimum you know, you follow; that is what is required; therefore Krishna says: brahmaṇō mukhē; brahma muka means vēdā. So in the pages of the vēdā, in the mouth of the vēdā; means in the pages of the Vēdā; bahuvidhaḥ yajñāḥ, वितताः vitatā; why there are many yajñāḥs, because of the capacity of different people. Suppose a person has got physical health, I can prescribe the bodily physical pooja, you do surya namaskāra; sun salute; there is surya namaskāra mantra; 200 namaskāras are there in that; but this fellow getting up itself a big project; if you say Surya Namaskāra to him; how will it work; if you are not able to do physical yajñāḥ, you try to do vācika yajñāḥ; if that is also not possible, do manasa yajñāḥ; varieties are given; because of athikāri bheda; some yajñās involve money, if you have to do yāgam you need money; if this fellow does not have money, he need not complain, I cannot do any yajñāḥ, I do not have any money, etc. Krishna will say, what money; you need to do japa. And after all your mouth is 24 hours busy; you are talking all rubbish; two fold benefit; one benefit is Īśvara nāma you do; another benefit is at that time at least you will leave the other people from disturbance. It is better than talking all rubbish and hurting. That is why in the tenth chapter, Krishna says, yajñānām japa yajnōsmi; thus varieties are given to suit varieties of sādakās; some brahmacāri can practice, some grihasthā can practice, some sanyāsi can practice.

And therefore all these yajñās are given. Therefore Arjuna, I want you to know one thing: What is that: all the yajñās have to be broadly classified into two: all the yajñās are to be broadly classified into two:

and the other is all other yajñās; non-jñāna yajñās.

Krishna calls them drvya yajñās or you can call them karma yajñāḥ. So one is jñāna yajñā and all others are karma yajñās; remember even meditation or upāsana you practice will come under karma yajñā only. Ok.

And once you have classified all the yajñās into these two groups, you should know what is the role of these two. Whenever you are getting into a train and that too you want to transit - in plane and all, you have to get down and catch another flight - similarly in the train, you get down and catch another train; when you get into the first train or flight, you should know up to what distance you have to travel in that; and when you should get down; where you should get down; and catch the next flight or train; if you do not know, you will be reaching somewhere. Similarly clearly know how far karma yajñās can take and what is the role of jñāna yajñā; this knowledge is very important; otherwise you are getting into a trip; without knowing your destination and direction very clearly, you will be in a trip.

And therefore Krishna says you should know; what is that. Karma yajñās can only give purification of mind; all the karma yajñā, puja, japa, prāṇayāma, even aṣṭāṅga yōga, you should be very clear; अष्टाङ्ग aṣṭāṅga yōga also can only integrate the personality; I will talk about aṣṭāṅga yōga in the 6th chapter, so the yōga discipline of Pathanjali can only give purity of mind; and we have got choices; you can follow any one or a combination of more also allowed; but you should remember that these will take me up to jñāna, purity only. Having attained the purity; by following any yajñās, there is a choice; after purity; all the people will have to come to what; jñāna yajñāḥ. Up to purity you have choice; but after purity,

तमेवम् विद्वान् अमृत इह भवति नान्यप्पन्धा अयनाय विद्यते॥१७ - पुरुष सुक्तम्

tamevam vidvān amṛta iha bhavati nānyaphandhā ayanāya vidyate||17 - puruṣa suktam

सम्पस्यन् ब्रह्म परमम् यति नन्येन हेतुन

sampasyan brahma paramam yati nanyena hetuna || 10|| Kaivalya

tam atmamstham yenu pasyanthi dhiraaha; thesham sukham sasvatham netharesham.

So it is said in all the scriptures that it is established logically also; that you have choice only up to getting the purity, after purity everybody has to come to jñāna yajñā.

And therefore what is Krishna's advice? Follow any karma yajñā; purify the mind, follow jñāna yajñā and be liberated; therefore Krishna here gives warning; तान् सर्वान् कर्मजान् विद्भिः tān sarvān karmajān viddhiḥ; so sarvān means all the yajñās other than jñāna yajñā, all the yajñās other than jñāna yajñā, they are all karmajān viddhiḥ; they are born out of karma; either kāyikam or vāchikam; or mānasam; and therefore you should know their plus point; as well as their minus point. What is their plus point; they can give purity; what is their minus point; they cannot give you knowledge; you will be previously impure ajñāni; after karma yajñā, you will be a pure ajñāni; previously impure ajñāni; now pure ajñāni; previously disturbed ajñāni, now quiet ajñāni; even aṣṭāṅga yōga cannot give jñānam. Even a person might have reached the pinnācle of aṣṭāṅga yōga of nirvikalpaka samadhi, even that person is only a fit person; he cannot get knowledge; jñāna yajñā is a different game or discipline altogether.

What is the jñāna yajñā, we will be curious to know. Krishna will tell later; Krishna here tells this much; Arjuna you know viddhiḥ tān sarvān; all those jñāna yajñās to be born out of karma; and ēvaṁ jñātva; and having thus understood that karma yajñā gives purity and jñāna yajñā gives mōkṣa; and therefore I should follow both; I should clearly know; and follow them both, then विमोक्षयसे vimōkṣayase; mere knowledge is not enough; I should know and follow karma yajñā, purify the mind; and follow jñāna yajñā and attain liberation. ēvaṁ jñātva vimōkṣayase.

śrēyān dravyamayādyajñājñānayaajñāḥ parantapa |

sarvaṁ karmākṣhilaṁ pārtha jñānē parisamāpyatē | | 4.33 | |

अखिलम् akhilam in its entirety (without exception) परिसमाप्यते parisamāpyate culminates ज्ञाने jñāne in knowledge.

33. Oh Arjuna! Jñānayajñā is superior to (other) Yajñās involving materials. Oh Arjuna! Every action without exception culminates in knowledge.

Now Krishna talks about the glory of jñāna yajñāh. And he says jñāna yajñā is the greatest yajñāh. So ज्ञानयज्ञः श्रेयान् jñānayajñāḥ śreyān. Compared to what? द्रव्यमयात् यज्ञाद् dravyamayāt yajñād; compared to all non-jñāna yajñās; what are they; the 11 yajñās Krishna has mentioned here as well as the others, which calls them dravyamayāt yajñā; we can understand it as karma yajñāḥ; They are called dravya maya yajñāḥ because, in all the other yajñāḥ, generally some materials are involvēd. If you do a yajñāḥ, why pitru yajñāḥ; even Ayuṣya hōmam, Vadhyar will have to bring this, that etc. lot of dravyams are involved; and even in pārāyaṇams, etc. at the end you have to conclude with a pooja which involves materials; So many people who do bhagavatha pārāyaṇams and other pārāyaṇams, even though pārāyaṇams does not involve material, generally the pārāyaṇams have to be concluded with the pooja; and for that pooja material should be there; or anna dānam you should do; or you are supposed to visit temples, you have to go to Guruvayoor or Tirupati; which means that most of the yajñās involve dravyam; dravyam means material; therefore Krishna calls them material yajñās; we can understand them as karma yajñā. So other than karma yajñās, jñāna yajñā is superior.

And why it is superior? The logic is given in the 2nd line, सर्वं कर्माखिलं पार्थ ज्ञाने परिसमाप्यते sarvaṁ karmākhilam pārtha jñānē parisamāpyatē. This line can be interpreted in two different ways; we will see both of them; because both of them are useful;

First meaning is all the karmas culminate in jñānam. All the karma yajñās reach their culmination only in knowledge. They reach their fructification, only in knowledge, which means all the karma yajñās are useless; if they do not lead to jñānam. It is like a person cooking elaborately for what purpose, ultimately it is for what; you get vegetables from all over and even the recipe book and you just make it and keep aside and say breakfast is now over. Now what are you doing; preparing the lunch; the proof of the pudding is in eating; therefore all your efforts of cooking gets fructified only when you eat; therefore other efforts gets validated only when you eat and get that trupthi. Similarly all your sādānās are meaningful only when you come to this jñānam and that is this trupthi; and that is why I have said very often that karma yajñās are incomplete without jñāna yajñā. All your sādānās are incomplete, if you do not come to jñāna yajñā. Vēdā does not insist on time, when you should come to jñāna yajñā; vēdā gives freedom; vēdā does not say that you should come to jñāna yajñā today itself. No; if you are not interested in jñānam, continue your pūja, punaskaram, etc.; If you do not want; you should come later. After 5 years; No. I cannot come; after 10 years. After 15, 50 years, no no no, in the entire life I would not come; so in the next birth. No next birth; after hundredth birth; Some time you will have to come; otherwise all your effort is travelling from finitude to finitude, which is really not travelling, it is like pedalling that cycle which is used for reducing your tummy. That cycle if you use, what will be your progress, after half an hour, in terms of distance; you will be there itself; other than jñāna yajñā, you do anything, you will be travelling from finitude to finitude; and therefore one day you have to come to jñānam; therefore karma yajñās are only indirect means of liberation; jñāna yajñā alone is direct means of liberation. And therefore Krishna says He Partha; सर्वं अकिलम् कर्म sarvaṃ akilam karma, all the karmas without exception will find their fulfilment only in jñāna yajñāh; this is one meaning.

And there is a second meaning also. From this you should also understand a very important point. When I say jñāna yajñā alone is the direct means, a person may decide; after all jñāna yajñā is direct means and karma yajñā is indirect. OK I will directly go to jñāna yajñā; why to do this and that pūja etc. So you should remember that karma yajñās are incomplete without jñāna yajñāh, equally you should add, jñāna yajñā is impossible without going through karma yajñā; there is no short cut. You cannot say why should I go through primary and secondary school; and in the end everyone goes to the University and therefore get me admission at the age of five in the university; can you do that; you go to university, when you hear the lecture, you do not get knowledge, you get yawning; why because it goes everywhere except into your head; therefore you have to go through primary school, secondary school, etc. and the primary school is incomplete without university; university is impossible, without going through primary school; therefore there is no short cut. Go through karma yajñāh, go through jñāna yajñā, and be free. This is meaning No.1.

The second meaning is: Krishna says: All the karma phalam are included in jñāna phalam. Samāpyatē means antharbhavathi; jñānam is superior to karma because all the karma phalams are included in jñāna phalam. You know why, the logic is this; all karma phalams are finite in nature; because it is produced in time; you work and you get the benefit; working is finite; the benefit also will be every action has got equal (opposite is not now necessary) reaction, since actions are finite; the results also will be finite; for all karma phalams are finite in nature; whereas what about jñāna phalam; the jñānam leads to the knowledge that aham pūrṇaḥ asmi, brahma asmi; satyam jñānam; anatham brahmāsmi; so jñāna phalam is what; infinite; can infinite be included in finite. No. infinite cannot be included in finite; whereas finite is included in the infinite. Tamil Nadu is included in India; but India is not included in Tamil Nadu. Similarly here also Krishna says jñāne jñāna phale pūrṇaḥ phale sarvam karma, sarvam phalam antarbhavanthi and Krishna had given an example in the 2nd chapter. I do not know whether you remember; what is that example;

तावान्सर्वेषु वेदेषु ब्राह्मणस्य विजानतः ॥२.४६॥

When you have got a huge lake of pure water in front of you, will you go to the borewell? Who will be after the limited water, when he has got a huge lake of pure water; jñāna phlam is like the infinite lake and all the karma phalams are trickling waters from other sources; and because of this reason also; jñānam is superior.

So the first reason is what; jñānam is superior, because it is direct means of liberation; through which everybody has to go through.

Second reason is jñānam is superior because, in the benefit of jñānam all the other karma phalams are included.

So now naturally, we are interested in knowing what is jñāna yajñāḥ; lot of advertisement has been given; sometimes in the newspapers also it is said; the advertisements are inserted to say: watch the same place tomorrow; create curiosity so that you will watch or after 3 days they will say; watch Thursday, watch Thursday, they will say; all these tricks are Krishna's trick only.

OK. all Krishna's method; he has built up and now you want to know what is jñāna yajñā. How am I to pursue self-knowledge; Krishna gives that method also in the next sloka.

उपदेक्ष्यन्ति ते ज्ञानं ज्ञानिनस्तत्त्वदर्शिनः ॥ ४.३४ ॥
tadviddhi praṇipātēna paripraśnēna sēvayā |
upadēkṣyanti tē jñānaṁ jñāninastattvadarśinaḥ || 4.34 ||

विद्धि तत् viddhi tat may you gain that (knowledge), प्रणिपातेन praṇipātena by prostration, सेवया sēvayā by service, परिप्रश्नेन and by proper enquiry, ज्ञानिनः jñāninaḥ the wise, तत्त्वदर्शिनः tattvadarśinaḥ those who have realised the Truth (the sages) उपदेक्ष्यन्ति upadēkṣyanti will impart, ज्ञानम् jñānam (that) knowledge ते te to you.

34. May you gain that (knowledge) by prostration, by service, and by proper enquiry. The wise sages will impart (that) knowledge to you.

So first Krishna points out that jñāna yajñā cannot be practice independently by a person. The other sādhanās he may practice independently, but jñāna yajñā requires an external guidance; and this guidance is two fold; two things are required.

one is śāstrām; scriptures which deals with the Self; because the other books do not deal with the Self; all the other books deal with only the external world because they are all objective sciences; and here I am not interested in anything objective; but I am interested in seeing, knowing myself who am I. If I have to see my own face, what should I do. I cannot be arrogant; I will try myself and see to try to roll your eyes here and there; only your eyes will be troubled; eyes can never directly see your face; therefore what do you do; you go to a mirror; because mirror is capable of showing yourselves; a gross mirror is required for seeing the gross person here. I am interested in knowing my inner nature; therefore require a special mirror; an extra ordinary mirror and that mirror is scriptures; the word mirror; verbal mirror; śāstrā darpaṇa iti. So first thing that we require is scriptures.

Then the second thing we require is I cannot operate the śāstrā darpaṇa myself. I will not know how to use the mirror; because mirror also can help me see my face only when I use it properly. Is not that; Suppose there is a person who takes the mirror and says that he could not see. I used the mirror; I could not see the face, what has happened, he has seen the backside of the mirror; mirror will help you see yourselves only when you use it in the appropriate manner. Similarly śāstrā will bless you with the knowledge only when you know how to operate the śāstrā; if you do not know how to operate the śāstrā; not only it may not give you knowledge, it may end up giving up wrong knowledge; and therefore we require another one who helps you operate the śāstrām properly and that second factor is called guru. So guru and śāstrām together will help me in gaining this knowledge; and therefore Arjuna go to a guru.

The details of which we will see in the next class.

ॐ

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

अस्मद् आचार्य पर्यन्ताम् वन्दे गुरु परम्पराम्

sadāśiva samārambhāṁ śaṅkarācāryamadhyamām

Om

Lord Krishna talked about the glory of knowledge up to verse No.33, beginning from the 25th verse and now in the 34th verse Lord Krishna wants to complete this topic by giving the means of acquiring this knowledge. How can one acquire self-knowledge. And as I said before, the self is not available for any regular instruments of knowledge, because all the instruments are turned outwards; they are extrovert in nature; therefore they can reveal only the objective world. Just as no particular instrument you can use to see your own eyes; however powerful the instrument may be, you can see the objects outside, but not the eyes themselves, and therefore if you have to see your own eyes, there is only one method and that is we have to use a mirror which is capable of reflecting your eye.

In the same way, if the ātma has to be recognised, we require a special mirror, which is capable of revealing the ātma, the local mirror can reflect only the stūla śarīram, the local mirror cannot reflect even our mind, what to talk of ātma. And therefore we require a special mirror which is śāstrā darpaṇa, the words of the scriptures which are capable of revealing our nature to ourselves; and it is not enough that we have a mirror, we should also know how to use the mirror properly. If the mirror is improperly used, it cannot reflect your face. And not only the mirror should be properly used, it must not have any dust covering the surface. If there is any dust, then also the reflection cannot come, even if it comes, it will be dull and vague. And therefore, we require another assistance to help us to use the mirror and that is that assistance alone we call guru; guru holds the mirror properly; he presents the scriptural teaching in such a way that you are able to understand yourselves properly. And even while using that, if there are any doubts, or any dusts in the mirror, the dust is in the form of wrong understanding of the scriptures; incomplete understanding of the scriptures; they are all dust like obstacles and therefore a guru is required to wipe the mirror clean and present the mirror properly, so that one can gain self-knowledge and therefore Krishna tells one requires a guru.

And if at all there are people who have attained knowledge without guru, that should be taken only as an exception and we should never use the exception as a general rule, because exception is exception. Never apply the exception as a general rule; and therefore guru is required. Thereafterwards I said that when we use the word Guru, we have got several different concepts of guru, the initiating guru, the one who gives you a mantra upadēśa; and you receive after pada puja and thereafter you repeat the mantra, that is initiating guru; he will be useful in giving the mantra and therefore citta śuddhi; but that is not going to remove my ignorance. If you chant a particular mantra; Namaśivāya or Nārāyanāya; it is wonderful alright, it purifies the mind alright; but it is never going to give you the knowledge aham brahmāsmi. So therefore, initiating gurus are useful for purification; inspiring gurus are useful for inspiration. So thus all gurus are useful; all gurus are required also; but the guru that Krishna is talking about is the teaching guru, the one who wants to communicate knowledge to the disciple and that is why when Arjuna wanted knowledge, Krishna did not function as an inspiring Guru. If Krishna has to inspire two minutes only required.

क्षुद्रं हृदयदौर्बल्यं त्यक्त्वोत्तिष्ठ परन्तप ॥२.३॥

klaihyaṁ mā sma gamaḥ pārtha naitattvayyupapadyate |
kṣudraṁ hr̥dayadaurbalyaṁ tyaktvottiṣṭha parantapa ||2.3||

Why are acting like a person who is neither male nor a female; this is good for you; you are such a great Arjuna; and Krishna inspired Arjuna but that role did not help Arjuna; and Krishna did not do mantrōpadēśam: “Arjuna, you chant this regularly, your self-ignorance will go”; Krishna did not serve as an initiating guru; because such roles can only prepare the mind; they cannot remove ignorance. When Krishna wanted to remove Arjuna's ignorance, Krishna functioned as a teaching guru. You have to know the difference between an initiating guru, an inspiring guru and a teaching guru.

And Krishna served Arjuna as a teaching guru means what systematic teaching of vedānta exactly like any other science; like physics, like chemistry, like mathematics, like economics; it is a systematic teaching and development, chapter after chapter. And Krishna did not say, Arjuna I am God; therefore you have no right to question, you have to believe me; have faith; no, where teaching is involved, faith mere blind acceptance will not work; the student must be allowed to ask question; teaching question should be allowed; inspiration must be no question; initiation means no question; why Namasivaya if you ask; it is good for you; that is the only answer; do not ask further. Ok, if you do not like that mantra, then chant Narayanaya; there is no logical analysis involved; because there is no knowledge involved; once knowledge has to be imparted, like any other subject matter; systematic teaching has to be done. Arjuna has to carefully listen; that is why Krishna repeatedly says शृणु शृणु शृणु; means what; active listening; not like listening to a katha; when you are listening to a story; thinking is not involved; Rama went from this āśrama to that āśrama. What is the logic behind. If you ask; that was the nearest āśrama perhaps; what more logic one can say; Katha listening is passive and you can also miss some portions; no harm, because it is not a tight build up, whereas learning involves, understanding involves, active listening and also reconciling the statements of the teacher, all these are involved are called samanvaya; I cannot just say one day that knowledge is the only means of liberation; and another day I say there are four means of liberation; then I am not a proper teacher. If I say knowledge is the only means of liberation, I should consistently hold on to that; right from the first class up to the last class; even if you may forget what I have said in the first class; if I am a proper teacher, I have to reconcile every statement; and that is why Krishna allows Arjuna to ask questions. Third chapter begins with questions. Fourth chapter Arjuna asks, Krishna, how come you are contradicting; not blind faith; acceptance or listening; you are saying that you have taught Surya also and you are teaching me also; it is illogical. And Krishna had to answer chapter after chapter, Arjuna asked questions and in the 18th chapter also, Arjuna asked the question. That means what; it is a systematic science, which requires thinking; understanding; assimilating; questioning.

And therefore it is not a half-an-hour business; for initiation maximum time taken is half-an-hour; you should do a pada-pooja, and I have to come and say close to your ears to repeat the mantra I tell him to chant; initiation does not take time; like $E=MC^2$. It is supposed to be an important equation in science. Matter Energy equation. Now suppose I tell you I will teach you physics and then you come in the college and then you do the pada pūja to the physics professor and he says: $E=MC^2$, chant this 108 times; $E=MC^2$, first uttama - loud, then madhyama, medium sound, then mouna, silent chanting; $E=MC^2$. Do it for 15 years; what will you understand; we will only do E and show our teeth; $E=Mc^2$ is not a matter for japa; it is a matter for understanding. And to understand what is E, you require 20 years of college and still they say we cannot understand; M requires so many years of study; C you require study and what is square. Every word I should understand. Similarly Vedānta is also a very significant equation that you are the ultimate reality; and this is not meant for japa; sōham; sōham; sōham. If you chant in Tamil, it will be a tragedy, because there is no difference between sa and ch etc. ha is pronounced as ka; there is a lot of confusion in Tamil; wherever ha comes they say ka; Mohan will be the name, they will say it as mokan; bhagavan is uttered as Bhahavan; ha and ka confusion. After improper chanting for some time, soham soham chant has now become sokam in Tamil; sokam means sorrow; moreover you also chant sokamasmi! which means that you confirm that you are sorrow! Why to chant that. without chanting also it is self-evident matter which has become your nature! Therefore सः saḥ means the content of the macrocosm; अहम् aham means the content of the microcosm; I am talking about the identity of the contents of the macro and micro; this is not meant for believing or repeating, it is meant for knowing; and until you know, you have to hear, you are a right to ask questions; and until you are convinced, the teaching is incomplete; my conviction does not make the teaching complete; the teaching is complete only when you are convinced; and that is why Krishna went chapter after chapter; until in the 18th chapter end, Arjuna said नष्टो मोहः स्मृतिर्लब्धा त्वत्प्रसादान्मयाच्युत । naṣṭō mōhaḥ smṛtirlabdhā tvatprasādānmayā'cyuta||18.73||; Hey Krishna my confusion is gone; I have clearly understood your teaching. And this teaching guru is referred to here by Lord Krishna. Therefore he says; ज्ञानिनः उपदेक्ष्यन्ति jñāninaḥ upadēkṣyanti; the jñānis who have understood this science, vedāntic science; not only they have understood, those who have got this skill of communication also. Knowing is one thing; communication is totally another skill; and a guru enjoys the status of a guru only when he has got both knowledge and communication. Suppose a person has got knowledge; no communication; in college and all sometimes you find some professors; they may be gold medalist; and in their class, you will get a good sleep; they are very good in knowing; but they do not know how to communicate; and suppose there is another person who has a communication skill; but no stuff inside; so what to communicate; no use. Therefore Kalidāśa defines Guru in one of the natakas;

		संक्रान्ति रूपस्य विशेषयुक्ता ।			Samkraanti roopasya visheshyuktaa..
यस्योभयं	साधु	स शिक्षकाणां	Yasyobhayam	saadhu	sa shikshakaanaam.

i.e. Some scholars are also adapt in furthering their knowledge by research, and some are expert in imparting their knowledge to others as a teacher. But a scholar who is an expert in both is recognised as topmost among all scholars.

(In this sloka by the famous Sanskrit poet Kālidās from his treatise "Mālvikgnamitra", the poet emphasises that simply being a scholar is not sufficient. Imparting the knowledge to other seekers is more important and a scholar who does this is the scholar of highest order, like the fulcrum over which a wheel rests and is able to move easily.)

There are some people who have got lot of knowledge inside; but the problem is what; no communication; there are some people sankranthi ranyasya viśeṣa yuktha; sankranthi means communication, transferring the knowledge from oneself to the other; Otherwise I will be teaching mysticism. what is mysticism; what is mystery to the student is mysticism; what is mystery to the student is mysticism; and I go on making statements; you will say wonderful; Swamiji's class is superub, etc. and if you ask him what did he say: you will say that is what is not known; who wants that; I do not want certificates; do you get something out of what I say; that is called communication; so sankranthi ranyasya viśeṣa yuktha.

And then who is a guru; yathrobhayam sadu sukhishithanam; yatha abhayam varthathe; knowledge is also there; and communication also is there; such a person alone should be given charge of gurutvam; and such a guru is called in upaniṣad; sōthriya Brahmanishta guru; Brahma niṣṭā, the one who has knowledge, stōtriya means the one who has got the skill of communication; the method of communication; that stōtriya Brahma niṣṭā guru alone, Krishna is paraphrasing as ज्ञानिनः तत्त्वदरशिनः jñāninaḥ tattvadaraśinaḥ; tatvadarśi means Brahmaniṣṭa; that means he wants to say that you are Brahman only after knowing I am Brahman; now, if I am in doubt whether I am Brahman or not, how can I boldly say you are Brahman; I will discuss all other things; and when the teaching part comes to the statement: you are Brahman, I would utter it in a less sound. Why because I am not sure; so therefore, the one for whom I am Brahman is the most intimate fact; for that person alone the statement tatvamasi you are Brahman can be a powerful word. Like a doctor smoker when he advises his patient not to smoke, his advice will never be powerful advice, because being a smoker, I do not have the moral authority to say do not smoke. If I am not a smoker and I know that, I can boldly say the words will have life. Similarly tatvadarśi alone is one for whom aham brahmāsmi is an intimate fact; therefore we can say tat tvam asi. and not only he is a tatva darsi, he is a jñānina; he has the method of communication, which is called sampradāya, developed in the form of a paramparā. As we saw Kenōpaniṣad class, the teacher said, nobody can communicate this but still my guru used some method, इति शुश्रुम पूर्वेषां ये नस्तद् व्याचक्षिरे iti śuśrūma pūrveṣāṃ ye nastad vyācacakṣire; that technique worked for me; let me try the same method of communication.

And the one who has that method or sampradāya; Śankarācārya calls him sampradāyavid. Śankarā also warns the one who does not have this traditional sampradāya; even if he is a maha jñāni, if he does not have the sampradāya of communication, avoid that person; असंप्रदायवित् मूर्खवत् उपेक्षणीय asaṃpradāyavit mūrkhavat upekṣaṇīya. He might be a jñāni; and if he does not have the traditional key; he does not have the right to be a guru; and therefore avoid such people, do namaskara them, get the blessing; convert them into initiating gurus; and convert them into inspiring gurus; but never use them as teaching guru; and therefore jñānīnastattvadarśinaḥ upadēkṣyanti.

They will communicate to you; what: jñānam. They will happily impart the knowledge to you but you should make sure that you deserve that knowledge. You should become a pāthram for that knowledge. In Tamil it is said: பாத்திரம் அறிந்து பிச்சை இடு. pāttiram aṛiṇtu piccai iṭu. So you should give something to a deserving one. If milk is poured in a wrong container; what will happen; the milk will get spoiled; or there is a container with lot of holes; it is a holy vessel; full of holes; then you keep on pouring, it gets empty. Therefore, I should become a pāthram; and pāthram means qualification is required.

But Krishna emphasises two qualifications here. What are they; jijñāsa and vinayaḥ; one should have intense desire for this knowledge; this is the only remedy for saṃsāra; this alone can remove my frustration in life; my pains in life; I should clearly know that is called jijñāsa, desire for this knowledge, the second thing is what; I should have humility; I should accept my ignorance. In fact, accepting the ignorance is the toughest problem; because ego does not allow; why should I go and study with him; I know everything; I have read so many books; an egoistic person can never gain any knowledge and therefore one should have vinayaha.

And how do you know, the discipline has got vinaya or not; because humility is an invisible thing; it is a mental character; how can I know whether this person is humble or not. Therefore śāstrā says, express your humility, by doing namaskara to your guru; the physical prostration in our tradition symbolises my humility; therefore Krishna says तत् विद्धि tat viddhi.

You learn systematically from the teaching guru; you learn clarifying doubts at regular intervals; you learn; but how should you start; प्रणिपातेन praṇipātena; by doing namaskara to the guru; praṇipādaḥ, falling, pra pādaḥ, totalling falling at the feet of the guru; and also praṇipāda indicates what; humility; but how do I know the śiṣyā is interested in knowledge; but in Indian culture; we go to the jñānis for different purposes; if you go any one of the Śankarācārya, there will be a big queue and see what they are asking; they will be asking for everything except jñānam; son is not getting married; he did not get admission in America; in this litigation I should succeed; I am not being cured of the stomach ache; and the guru will then tell you that I am not being cured of this 'headache' of listening to you!

So therefore, they will be sometime getting frustrated because they have run out for that thing; and they have to talk about everything else and even by mistake they cannot talk of Vedānta. So therefore how can they tell you, you are Brahman, when you are talking about 3rd daughter's marriage. She wants mokṣa from the daughter now; not from samsāra; so if you say Pārthāya prathiboditham, sūkṣma śarīram; stūla śarīram, etc. they would not listen. Therefore how does teacher know that student is interested. Therefore Krishna says परिप्रश्नेन paripraśnēna; you ask for the knowledge; so praṇipāda represents humility; paripraśna represents jijñāsa; jijñāsa means desire for learning.

And then what is the next thing that you have do; सेवया sewayā; seva means, seva in Sanskrit means service; seva means service; service to the guru; what is the purpose of service to the guru; two fold purpose; when a śiṣyā comes to the guru and starts learning, he does not have a scope for all the other types of service; because he has come to the Guru and he is involved in learning; therefore he cannot do any other karma. And if he is lacking in mental purity; there must be some means of purifying the mind; therefore service to the teacher will remove any impurity, if it is still lingering. If he is already pure śiṣyā, no problem; but nobody comes with 100% purity, all the impurities sticking, the very service will remove; that is one purpose; purity qualification.

And the second purpose, for any communication, a rappo must be there; so there must be an understanding between guru and śiṣyā; guru must know the mentality of the discipline, what are his strong points; what are his weak points etc. there must be a weighing of the discipline; and that is why whenever you go to any lecture as a new lecture for the first time, you go, initially you are only trying to get acquainted with the place, even if here there is somebody new, many people are sitting and this samiyyar is talking in English (your thought is that samiyyar should not talk in English) and he is doing this and that; and you are trying to find what type of people come and ladies more or gents more, youngsters more. Now you have the atmosphere is new; co-students are new; the place is new; the teacher is maha new; everybody is new; therefore initially to get into the system; the mind takes time; and therefore one year or six months the teacher says, let us have acclimatisation; base camp and spend a month or two there. suddenly from zero height to 29000 feet height, all your blood vessels will get ruptured; oxygen would not be there; therefore there are all several camps, in each particular height, temperature etc. you have to get acclimatised. Similarly a mental and intellectual acclimatisation is required; that is why some people say also. Swamiji, I have been attending the classes for so long; but now only I am starting to understand; that is also a feeling; so do you mean all the other classes are waste; no; they all have a effect; your mental, physical and intellectual preparation; and I also have adjusted a lot; because I also to should know that if I tell this example, they would not respond, and therefore I have also to change to another appropriate example. come down; come down; come down; I also get acclimatised to the atmosphere of the student; all these things are what; they need a time gap; sevayā.

Time gap alone is not sufficient, the intimacy is required; therefore in the form of service; there is a mutual understanding; Dayananda swami used to tell when we were in the āśrama; where I was, he asked us to write notes; initially I also told the students to write notes and submit to me, so that I will understand what the student is getting and what the student is not getting; and sometimes totally differently also; In fact, in one of my talks, had come in the Hindu paper; I do not know how many of you read it; it was about the kundalini yōga. I had said that kundalini yōga is an advanced prāṇāyāma discipline which may give certain siddhis and all; we do not require, we require only knowledge I have said; but in the paper it had come, kundalini yoga is a means of mokṣam. So therefore, it is not that person commits mistakes; but the listening, there can be gap; so therefore Swamiji asked us to write it; and moreover we were going to propagate also; learning something, which is not correct; so wonderful paramparā will come!. There he used to tell that by/ through the notes and all I am interviewing you, and I also know that through the classes you are interviewing me also, I know. Both are judging each other. So thus a time gap is required and intimacy is required; all these are achieved by what; sevayā; and by this you become a pāthram; and then the communication is successful; jñāninastattvadarśinaḥ tē jñānaṃ upadēkṣyanti; they will impart knowledge to you.

Continuing.

यज्ज्ञात्वा न पुनर्मोहमेवं यास्यसि पाण्डव ।

येन भूतान्यशेण द्रक्ष्यस्यात्मन्यथो मयि ॥ ४.३५ ॥

yajjñātvā na punarmōhamēvaṃ yāsyasi pāṇḍava |

yēna bhūtānyaśēṣēṇa drakṣyasyātmanyathō mayi || 4.35 ||

35. After gaining that (knowledge), you will not get into delusions in this manner once again. Oh! Arjuna, By that (knowledge) you will see all beings without exception in Me as well as in yourself.

So with the previous verse, the glorification of knowledge and the means of knowledge topic is complete. Now in the following verses, beginning from 35 Krishna is talking about jñāna phalam; 35 to 37, the benefit of gaining this knowledge; so there are several benefits; and Krishna presents benefit in different ways in different contexts. So in this verse he presents the jñāna phalam in two different ways. First benefit is mōha nāśaḥ; conflicts in life will end;

One of the biggest problems in life is conflict and Arjuna himself surrendered to Krishna because of his what: conflict only. Arjuna knew dharma śāstrā very well; he was a very educated person; therefore he did not lack dharma śāstrā knowledge, he knew that Duryōdhanādis were atyādāyīs and he himself uses the word atyādāyī. Atyādāyī means criminal deserving capital punishment; atyādāyī means a criminal who deserves only one punishment and that is capital punishment and therefore Arjuna very clearly knew Dharmaputra also clearly knew Duryōdhanā deserves only treatment. And the last attempt also is over; sāma dāna, all are over by Krishna going to Duryōdhanā. In spite of clear knowledge, why did Arjuna have conflict; so that means what; any amount of information you get; any amount of knowledge you get; it is not going to be a guarantee against conflict. Conflict is mainly because of attachment. Because of attachment I do not want certain consequences in future; I am not ready to face the future; Arjuna was not ready to face the day when Bhīṣma and Drōṇa will be absent from the earth; he was not ready for that. If he was not ready for that day, why can't he remain in the forest; he was not interested in continuing in the forest also; the future will be one of the result; either Bhishma etc. would have to be killed; or Arjuna should continue in the forest; Arjuna is not ready to face either of the future.

Our inability to face the future, because of attachment is the cause of conflicts in life. Our inability to face the future, because of our emotional attachment is the cause of conflict; and you cannot avoid decisions in life, you cannot avoid facing future; and therefore what do you do; we postpone our decision; somehow escape; we will see later. And by postponing how long can you postpone; you have to take some decision in life; whether to go to America or remain in India; whether to take this job or that; whether to get married or not; whether to become sanyāsi or not; whether to marry this girl or not; how long can you postpone; and each decision is a risky decision because I cannot control my future; and as somebody said, marriage is not a word; marriage is a sentence! It is only a joke; so therefore it can end up as a wonderful life or it can end up as a sentence or life imprisonment; sentence; where you can never get out.

So therefore every decision exposes me to an unpredictable future; and if I am not ready to face future, I try to avoid decisions. But I cannot avoid decisions; even coming to the class; for many people, every Sunday is a conflict. Whether to come today or not; and there is a little drizzle, phone the Swamiji to check up whether the class is there or not! Decision where to keep it there or here; anyway that is incidental.

Therefore conflict is our weakness born out of attachment because of which I want to avoid facing future; and once I have got self-knowledge, the advantage is, I am ready to face any future. That is one thing through which I get strength; and I have to take decisions for future; whether I am jñāni or ajñāni, with the available data; with best motive; I take a decision. I know the decision can give a favourable situation or it can give an unfavourable situation; but I do not evade the decision because I am ready to face either way; therefore jump and get married; or jump and take sanyāsa; either way; or else you will say, Swamiji you took sanyāsa and are asking us to marry and push us into samsāra. So I am not saying either way. Take one decision or the other, but tell I am taking the decision; future is unpredictable but I have no regret because I am ready to face any consequence.

Therefore, knowledge gives the strength to take decisions and avoid conflict in life; yat jñātvā; by gaining this knowledge dear Arjuna, मोहम् न यास्यसि mōham na yāsyasi; you will never get into conflict anymore; you will never get into conflict anymore; evam means as you have got now; because in the starting of the second chapter Arjuna said,

यद्वा जयेम यदि वा नो जयेयुः । ... ॥२.६॥ na caitadvidmaḥ kataranno garīyo
yadvā jayema yadi vā no jayeyuḥ |... ||2.6||

Hey Krishna, I do not which course is better, whether to fight or not to fight; to be or not to be; and even if I fight, whether we are going to win or loose. So therefore decision making is the most painful and nowadays we have got rahu kalam, guliha kalam, yama kandam; this would not be a problem if we did not know but we all know it; and as such decision-making is difficult; added to that is this; now you have got time for everything. Somebody wanted to give me a book to see; and he lifted the book and looked at the watch and stopped and said Swamiji wait; and I had to wait for one more minute; he was just giving his name or money for the camp or something like that; for that all this. I do not say that Rahu kalam is bluff; I do not say astrology is bluff; astrology instead of helping a person, it is creating; if it is creating more conflict and indecision; again it is another problem.

So therefore, I should know to have strength in life; and some people ask this question; and one astrologer will ask you to start, saying it is the best time; another astrologer you go and ask; then you are finished; he will say that the time you started was the most inauspicious. Just as two doctors will never agree; two astrologers will never agree; and he will say that if this marriage takes place, within 3 months he will lose life or the job; this is the best jathakam, this man says. Third astrologer says something else. If you do not get mad, it is because of God's grace. Therefore, self-knowledge keeps you sane. Self-knowledge keeps you sane. Mōhamēvaṃ naiva yāsyasi Pāṇḍava. This is benefit No.1.

Then the second benefit is: येन भूतान्यशेषेण द्रक्ष्यस्यात्मन्यथो मयि yēna bhūtānyaśēṣēṇa drakṣyasyātmanyathō mayi; जीवात्म परमात्म ऐक्य-दर्शनम् jivātma-paramātma aikya darśanam.

That is the essence of the 2nd line; you will have jivātma parātma aikya darśanam; जीवेश्वर ऐक्य दर्शनम् jīveśvara aikya darśanam you will have. How? Krishna conveys this in an indirect manner. Krishna says after this knowledge, you will know that all living beings, the entire creation is resting in God. The entire creation is resting in God, you will understand; विश्वाधारम् गगन सदृशम् viśvādhāram gagana sadṛśam. Lord is like space, all pervading. Just as the space supports the whole creation; similarly, Iśvaraḥ the चिदाकाश स्वरूपः cidākāśa svarūpaḥ sustains the whole creation, you will know.

And then Krishna makes another statement also; He says not only you will know that the whole world is in God, you will also know that the whole world is in you. The whole world in God you will know and you will also know that the whole world is in you.

If you keep these two statements together what can you derive; whole world is in God; Whole world is in you; means what: you are God. You are God. It is exactly like the wave being told that after knowledge that you will understand that you, the wave, and the ocean are one and the same; how wave is also essentially water; ocean is also essentially water; in that essence water alone everything is resting; similarly Iśvaraḥ is also essentially caitanyam; you are also essentially caitanyam; in that caitanyam alone, the whole creation is resting; so thus jivātma-paramātma aikyam paśyati. That is what is said; भूतानि मयि द्रक्ष्यसि bhūtāni mayi drakṣyasi; you will see all beings in Me, in Me in the Lord, ātmani paśyasi; you will see in yourselves. Ātmani means in the individual self; Mayi means the total self. You will see the entire creation, which is resting in the total Self, which is non-different from the individual self.

Continuing.

अपि चेदसि पापेभ्यः सर्वेभ्यः पापकृत्तमः ।

सर्वं ज्ञानप्लवेनैव वृजिनं सन्तरिष्यसि ॥४.३६॥

api cēdasi pāpēbhyaḥ sarvēbhyaḥ pāpakṛttamaḥ |

sarvaṃ jñānaplavēnaiva vrjinam santariṣyasi || 4.36 ||

अपि चेत् api cet Even if असि asi you are, पापकृत्तम pāpakṛttama the worst sinner,सर्वेभ्यः पापेभ्यः sarvebhyaḥ pāpebhyaḥ of all sinners,सन्तरिष्यसि santariṣyasi you will cross over, सर्वम् sarvam The entire वृजिनम् vrjinam (ocean of) sin ज्ञानप्लवेन एव jñānaplavena eva by the boat of knowledge alone.

36. Even if you are the worst (sinner) of all sinners, you will cross over the entire (ocean of) sin by the boat of Knowledge.

So two-fold jñāna phalam is mentioned. Mōha nāśaḥ; aikya darśanam. Now Krishna gives the third benefit; namely, sarva pāpa nāśaḥ; the benefit of self-knowledge is the destruction of all your pāpam, which cannot be done by any other method; why it cannot be done by any other method; because the other method is what; प्रायचित्त prāyacitta karma.

Now if you have to do prāyacitta for every pāpam you have done not in the janma alone, but all janmas till now; अनादि अविद्य वसनया anādi avidya vasanayā; (you will do the sankalpa, in Avani avittam; crores of janmas we have done pāpam; pāpa muttai is bigger than 100 crore Himayalam; and you have to prāyacittam; and when are you going to do for all these, even if you do one by one. The problem is what; as even you are eliminating the pāpam from one direction; the other side we are busy acquiring fresh ones. Acquiring fresh ones and there are certain karmas for which the karma pāpa can be done very shortly quickly but the pāpa phalam will take several janmas to exhaust; like the pāpam of deserting a young wife after marrying; for that maha pāpam; the Dharmasāstrā says the phalam is for next 7 janmas he will be born a women and he will face similar circumstances. Karma is done in janma; the result one has to bear in the next seven!

So therefore we can acquire pāpams and pāpams; where is the question of exhausting all of them; and therefore Krishna compares the pāpam to the huge ocean; वृजिन अर्नवम् vrjina ārnavam; which you cannot cross normally, whereas jñānam is like a boat and the jñānam will destroy all the pāpam; and not only the past pāpam; sanchita pāpani, sañcita pāpa vināśana liṅgaṁ tat praṇamāmi sadāśiva liṅgaṁ. So not only all the sañcita pāpam acquired in the previous janma; the present pāpams acquired in this janma; and being acquired (we are busy still), the future would-be pāpams; all of them will be destroyed; therefore He says; Hey Arjuna, suppose you are the greatest sinner in the world; Arjuna is not.

But for argument sake Krishna says: Suppose: अपि चेद् सर्वेभ्यः पापेभ्यः पापकृत्तमः api ced sarvebhyaḥ pāpebhyaḥ pāpakṛttamaḥ; you are the worst sinner in the entire world and all the pāpams enumerated in the scriptures, you have very diligently done, even if you have done; सर्वं सन्तरिष्यसि sarvaṁ santariṣyasi; you need worry; you need not have guilt; you can cross over all those pāpams, you should not ask; then you should not ask, Swamiji since I could get rid of all the pāpams, so that I can do fresh pāpams; removing the pāpam is not for doing fresh one; jñānam will destroy all the pāpam and it will not produce fresh ones also. Therefore, ज्ञानप्लवेन एव jñānaplavena eva; plavaha means a boat; if you have a boat, even the deepest ocean you can cross; so jñānam eva plavaha, boat of knowledge will help you, vrjinaṁ santariṣyasi; vrjinaṁ means pāpa sāgara; the ocean of sin; you will be able to cross over; therefore the jñānam is the best remedy and the only remedy for pāpa nāśaḥ; this is the third benefit; mōha nāśaḥ; aikya darśanam; and pāpa nāśaḥ.

More we will see in the next class.

Om

In these verses beginning from the 35th, Lord Krishna is talking about jñāna phalam which goes up to verse No.37. So three verses 35, 36 and 37, the benefit of self-knowledge is mentioned. In the 35th verse Krishna talked about two-fold benefit; the first one being sarva mōha nāśaḥ; mōhaḥ means conflict in life; which is a very big and serious problem; and this self-knowledge will remove all the conflict in life; This is sarva moha nāśaḥ; and then the second phalam he mentioned was sarvatra jīvātmā paramātmā aikya darśanam; in fact aikya darśanam was the second phalam; and the third phalam was sarva pāpa nāśaḥ. And now Krishna is going to talk about the 4th phalam in the verse 37.

यथैधांसि समिद्धोऽग्निर्भस्मसात्कुरुतेऽर्जुन ।

ज्ञानाग्निः सर्वकर्माणि भस्मसात्कुरुते तथा ॥४.३७॥

yathaidhāṁsi samiddhō'gnirbhasmasāt kurutē'rjuna |

jñānāgniḥ sarvakarmāṇi bhasmasāt kurutē tathā | | 4.37 | |

37. Oh Arjuna! The fire of knowledge reduces all Karmas to ashes just as a well-kindled fire reduces the fuel to ashes.

Here Krishna says that the phalam is sarva karma nāśaḥ. Here karma meaning karma phalam. And the śāstrā talks about three types of karma phalam; one is sancitam karma phalam; i.e. puṇyam and pāpam acquired in the past janmas; the second is Prārabdhaḥ karma phalam; that means that portion of the past karma which has matured in the present janma; and therefore ready to fructify. Prārabdhaḥ karma is also sañcitam only, the only difference is Prārabdhaḥ karma is ready and the third one is āgāmi karma which we acquire through the present action. These are the three karmas which are responsible for punarapi jananam; punarapi maraṇam, cyclic process.

Here Krishna says all the karmas are destroyed; sancitam is destroyed; āgāmi is avoided and Prārabdhaḥ is exhausted. Without being affected by Prārabdhaḥ; remember the example of oil being applied in the knife; or you can take, you have got gloves in the hand, with which you touch a live a wire; it does not give you a shock, because you are protected. Similarly Prārabdhaḥ is not destroyed but jñānam insulates the jñāni from the Prārabdhaḥ. That means Prārabdhaḥ produces the result but jñāni's mind continues to be samam, in spite of favourable and unfavourable conditions; events do not change but there is a change in the response to the Prārabdhaḥ; and therefore Prārabdhaḥ karma is as good as destroyed; because it cannot affect a jñāni. So sancitam is destroyed; āgāmi is avoided and Prārabdhaḥ is as though destroyed.

This is the essence of this verse and Krishna gives an example to convey this idea; and the example is knowledge is compared to a huge conflagration of fire; knowledge is compared to agniḥ; not in the form of a small flame; but a huge fire; and all the karmas are compared to all types of objects or all types of wood. So when the fire is very big, any type of wood is put into the fire, it burns; plastic it burns; anything that falls within it is burned down to ashes. Similarly all the karmas are burned down to ashes by jñāna agni.

And therefore Krishna says here; अग्निः यथैधांसि भस्मसात्कुरुते agniḥ yathaidhāṁsi bhasmasāt kurutē; the fire burns down all types of fuel or logs of wood to ashes; edhāḥ means twigs or any type of fuel; it reduces to ashes; but what is important; समिद्धः अग्निः samiddhaḥ agniḥ, the fire is which is well-kindled; If the fire is in the form of a small flame, and over the flame you put a huge chair, or table, what will happen; instead of fire, destroying the table, what will happen, the table will destroy the fire; therefore before offering or putting anything, you have to make sure that the fire is well fanned.

Similarly, when we listen to vedānta for a few months, we do have the knowledge, but the knowledge is only a flame; with this half-knowledge you got you go out and read other books, instead of removing doubts, you will find that it will only put out the flame of the Gītā wisdom you have got and that is why we say that until knowledge stabilises continue to study from a particular ācārya; or a particular parampara; otherwise one may get confused; listening too many people are reading many types of book, can create confusion; until the knowledge becomes clear, confine to śāstrā and also the āchārya; and any doubt comes, you clarify, the fire becomes well kindled and thereafter you read any book, you will be able to understand it properly, it will not create any doubt at all. Otherwise everything will appear to be right also; and everything will appear to be wrong also. So what has happen; confusion. So, therefore, samiddha agni well kindled by śravaṇa manana nidhidhāyasana; in the same way, jñāna agni, the well kindled fire of knowledge, sarva karmani bhasmasāt kurutē; it destroys all the karmas; reduces them to ashes.

Now, in the previous verse Krishna says sarva pāpa nāśaḥ; in this verse Krishna says sarva karma nāśaḥ. Now what is the difference between pāpa nāśaḥ and karma nāśaḥ; because pāpam is also what: karma only. After all what is pāpam; it is nothing but our own past karma which alone has become the present pāpam. Therefore what is the difference between the pāpam in the previous verse and karma in this verse. The difference is: in the previous verse pāpa refers only to pāpa karmas, whereas in this verse, by using the word karma, Krishna wants to say, not only pāpa karmas are destroyed, ultimately even puṇya karmas are destroyed; because puṇya karmas also fall within samsāra only. Ultimately speaking, even puṇya karmas come under samsāra because puṇya karmas lead to what, svarga lokaḥ prāpṭhi. And if you are going to be permanently in heaven; wonderful; but unfortunately, having enjoyed the svargam very well, like people going to the States and coming back to India and complaining about mosquitos. Now here itself we have no complaints because peaceful co-existence, we are practising; we are not even aware; not only that our body is immunised also; perhaps the mosquito will fall sick after biting us; and by pure water, pure air, all these, next day, they fall sick. I do not say do not go to America; but the thing is: if this is the story of America; what to talk of heaven, millions of time superior to America and having immunised and enjoyed, you come down and you feel terribly miserably. Tell me, so puṇyam is source of joy or sorrow? According to Vēdānta; pāpam gives immediate sorrow; puṇyam gives later sorrow; therefore according to vedānta puṇyam is also bandhaha; and that is why the upanishad it says, tada vidvān puṇya pāpē vidhūya; niranjanam paramam samyam upaithi; jñāni goes beyond puṇyam and pāpam; and in the Gītā itself Krishna is going to say in the end, Sarva dharmaan api parityajya; mām ēkam saranam vraja; wherein Krishna says that you transcend both dharma and adharma; anyathra dharmaat, anyathra adharmaat, asmat krita akrita, mōkah is beyond puṇyam and pāpam. And therefore jñāgni sarva karmani means puṇya karmani api bhasmasāt kurutē.

तत्स्वयं योगसंसिद्धः कालेनात्मनि विन्दति ॥ ४.३८ ॥

na hi jñānēna sadṛśaṃ pavitramiha vidyatē |

हि hi indeed विध्यते न पवित्रम् vidhyate na pavitram – there is no other purifier, इह iha in this world, सदृशं ज्ञानेन sadṛśaṃ jñānena like knowledge योगसंसिद्धः yōgasamsiddhaḥ prepared thro yōga, विन्दति vindati one attains तत् tat that (knowledge), आत्मनि ātmani in the mind स्वयं कालेन svayaṃ kālena easily in time.

38. Indeed, there is no other purifier in this world like knowledge. Prepared through Yōga, one attains that (knowledge) in the mind easily in time.

With this previous verse, jñāna phalam topic is over, sarva moha nāśaḥ; aikya darśanam, sarva pāpa nāśaḥ; sarva puṇyasyapi nāśaḥ; these are the four fold phalams given in this context; different other phalams are given in other contexts in other places also.

Now Krishna wants to conclude his discourse in the following verses 38 to 42, in which he wants to talk about certain sadanās; certain dos and do nots. And in the first line of this verse, Krishna talks about the greatness of the knowledge, ज्ञानेन सदृशं पवित्रमिह नास्ति jñānena sadṛśam pavitramiha nāsti; there is no purifier which is as great knowledge; knowledge is the greatest purifier in the creation; even though there are so many other purifiers; for example, ganga snanam is going to remove our sin; the prayaschitha karma like maharudram, athirudram, they are also considered to be pavithram; pavithram means purifier. And the nama japa is also considered to be purifier; thus there are so many purifiers in the world; but among all the all the purifiers, jñānam alone is the greatest purifier; why because they all can destroy all types of pāpams or impurities but they cannot destroy one basic impurity; in fact which is the original sin according to Vēdānta; in Christianity there is an original sin; and we have got another one; and what is that; ajñānam; that is in Avani avitta sankalpa; there is; anādi avidya vāsanaya; avidya is the basic impurity.

Now all the other prayaschitha karmas are purifiers; they may destroy varieties of impurities, like gohatya, this hatya and that hatya, suvarna sthēyam; sura panam, all these pāpams they will remove but they cannot remove ajñānam; gaṅga snānam cannot remove ajñānam; if gaṅga snanam can remove ajñānam, this is easiest method for me, instead of running the classes for years together; by some how, even talking loan, to take you all to Gaṅga and forcibly make you take bath in the Gaṅga; simpler; ganga snānam can remove the other impurities; jñāna gaṅga snānam.

सकृते गीताभसि स्नानम् संसार मल मोचनम् ॥

mala nirmocanam puṁsām, jala snānam dine dine |
sakṛte gītābhasi snānam saṁsāra mala mocanam ||

The Gītā waters alone can permanently remove saṁsāra; all the other sacred waters can remove certain pāpam, but they cannot remove ajñānam, the basic impurity. And therefore ज्ञानेन सदृशं पवित्रम् jñānēna sadṛśam pavitram; there is no purifier equivalent to knowledge; and who will get this knowledge.

Now the sādānā topic is coming; योगसंसिद्धः कालेनात्मनि विन्दति yōgasamsiddhaḥ kālēna'tmani vindati; saṁsiddhaḥ means a qualified person; a prepared person; a refined person; a cultured person; who has prepared himself for the knowledge-seed to sprout into the mōkṣa tree to give the ānanda phalam; before throwing any seed, we have to prepare the land, there should be proper temperature and if any fertiliser is required that should be there; the water content must be exactly as it is needed; for different types of crop, different types of conditions are required; similarly, the atma jñāna seed to grow; the mind must be prepared; and the one who has prepared mind is called saṁsiddhaḥ puruṣaḥ; and what is the method of this preparation; there it is irrigation and tilling the land, etc. for the cultivation of the mind, what is to be done; the method is yyyyyyyōgaḥ; yyyyyyyōgaḥ is two-fold, karma yyyyyyyōgaḥ and aṣṭāṅga yyyyyyyōgaḥ; or karma yyyyyyyōgaḥ and upāsana yyyyyyyōgaḥ; or in simple language a religious life.

In fact, our vēdic religion prescribes only that life which will prepare us for self-knowledge; in fact vēda does not even ask us; do you want self-knowledge; vēda as the mother, has decided what is good for us is self-knowledge; and vēda has decided that we have to prepare the mind and vēda has prescribed a life-style meant for spiritual growth; the uniqueness of vēdic culture is ,it is primarily meant for spiritual growth; it does not ignore material growth; it does not ignore material growth; but it keeps in mind the spiritual growth of a person. Therefore we need not even know the principles or mechanisms behind our way of life; but just follow the way of life; it is meant for inner growth alone; and that is called yōgaḥ; so yōga saṁsiddhaḥ means the one whose mind is prepared through a religious way of life; which takes care of physical health; which takes care of emotional health; which takes care of the moral health; which takes care of the emotional health; which takes care of the intellectual health, it is an integral system; so yōga saṁsiddhaḥ. To put in vēdantic language; sādanā catuṣṭaya saṁppannā, तत् विन्दति tat vindati; he will attain this knowledge.

Where will he attain this knowledge; ātmani; pure mind; because any knowledge has to take place in the mind only, including spiritual knowledge; no knowledge can take place in ātma; ātma is never the locus of knowledge, no knowledge can take place in the body; every knowledge has to take place in the buddhi alone and therefore ātmani sukṣma buddau śudda buddau; this person gains this knowledge; and how much time it will take; Krishna does not want to commit; because when a student joins the college; the teacher can teach; how many attempts, the student will take to pass the examination, God alone knows; so therefore you keep on writing, I told you, this person wrote the CA examination 27 times; and 27th time also he failed; and he came out, he saw a board there; Jesus never fails; somebody they have written; so he wrote underneath; let him try CA. Therefore so frustrated that he was sure that Jesus would also fail in the CA exam. Like that, how do we know; Krishna says; कालेन विन्दति kālēna vindati; before long he will attain; so do not ask the question; how long it will take; enjoy the journey; instead of asking the question, how many kilometers, enjoy the journey.

Continuing.

श्रद्धावल्लभते ज्ञानं तत्परः संयतेन्द्रियः ।

ज्ञानं लब्ध्वा परां शान्तिमचिरेणाधिगच्छति ॥४.३९॥

śraddhāvāṁllabhate jñānam tatparaḥ saṁyatēndriyaḥ |

jñānam labdhvā parāṁ śāntimacirēṇādhigacchati | | 4.39 | |

श्रद्धावान् śraddhāvān one who has faith, तत्परः tatparaḥ who is devoted संयतेन्द्रियः saṁyatendriyaḥ – whose sense organs are restrained or controlled, लभते ज्ञानम् labhate jñānam attains Knowledge लब्ध्वा ज्ञानम् labdhvā jñānam having attained Knowledge अचिरेण अधिगच्छति acireṇa adhigacchati he will soon attain परां शान्तिम् supreme peace. parāṁ śāntim

39. One who has faith, who is devoted, and whose organs are restrained attains knowledge. Having attained knowledge, he will soon attain supreme peace.

So in the previous slōkā, one sādānā has been mentioned, yōgaḥ, it is a very very broad name for all the sādānās; in short it can be said to be a religious way of life; so the benefits of a religious way of life; it is impossible to discuss; there are so many; therefore follow that. Then in this verse some more sādānas are prescribed;

No.2, the second sādānā is śraddhā; faith; śraddhā in the validity of scriptures; until we clearly understand; because this scriptures are valid; they are beneficial; and if I have a doubt in the validity of scriptures; and if I am not able to understand, keep that doubt aside and listen. In fact that will be best method; until at least Gītā is over; you just know; this is not convincing to me; it is not very clear to me; in this there is another problem that may come; and everything you keep aside; and at regular intervals you go on reading those questions and doubts, as you progress, you will find, one by one the doubt is cleared; and if you do not have the patience, the guru is there; go and attack; ask questions. So guru always welcomes questions; he is not afraid of questions; this is matter for knowing, not believing; every vēdāntic ācārya is ready to allow infinite question and if the student does not have questions, the ācārya will introduce questions; you ask like this, they will say.

We have got a series of text books called; siddhi granthas; they are exclusively question-raising test; if you do not know how to raise to question; they will show you what all questions you can raise; all fundamental questions; so therefore what is required perhaps I have not understand clearly; therefore let me not reject the teaching; let me question my understand rather than the scriptures. This attitude is called śraddhā; not blind swallowing; but question and understand; and such a person śraddhāvān labhathe jñānam; such a person will get conviction. He will definitely get conviction; this is the experience of every vēdāntic student; every vēdāntic ācārya; there is thorough confusion; and therefore śraddhāvān jñānam labhate; and not only questions from other religious people; questions from the latest science; Vēdānta is ready to face the latest development in science, in addition to all the systems of philosophy in the world. So it is thorough an comprehensive; more interesting; and therefore śraddhāvān jñānam labhatē; therefore give the benefit of the doubt to śāstrā; No.1.

Then the next sādāna given in the ślōka is तत्परः tatparaḥ; tatparaḥ means what, be sincere and committed; you should also cooperate with the teacher; just you should not ask questions for the sake of asking questions. Previously I used to have question at the end of every chapter, I used to tell, any question you would like to ask, I will keep the next class for questions. Now to ask questions; the first thing required is what; you have to reflect over what I have said; that means to raise questions you must work on the teaching; and you will find that they do not have time; just Gītā text, they touch only at 6.30 next Sunday; where is the time; so therefore what they used to do is in the question answer session, they used to study, what all notes given; and then ask a question: Swamiji why are we doing pradakṣiṇam in the temple. We have taught the Gītā and I expect only questions for the clarity of understanding regarding my teaching; just swamiji is sitting idle; and I am also idle; so let me question something, just as time pass, or just to test the swamiji; this should not be attitude; that would not work; I should do homework and it is called mananam; and I should attempt to find answer based on the teaching that I have received.

Without mananam, legitimate doubts cannot come; without mananam legitimate doubts cannot come; either there would be no doubts or it would be funny doubts; this has no connection with the subject matter; and therefore; tatparaḥ means sincerity is required for knowledge to take place; commitment is required; home work is required; quality time is required; that is called tatparatvam. If that sincerity is not there; not that Gītā will not give benefit; some stray ideas will come; at least you get some nice jokes; some thing or the other, it will not be a consistent system of teaching you would not get; some stray thoughts about prāṇāyāma or other information; you will get the benefit; but the expected benefit will come only when a person is sincerely committed. Therefore commitment is the second thing;

And third one is संयतेन्द्रियः saṃyatendriyaḥ; saṃyatendriyaḥ means disciplines, sensory discipline; sensory discipline is required; focussing capacity is required; even to listen for one hour, the duration of one year it requires a tremendous focussing capacity and especially when it is a consistent serious talk; Rāmayaṇa story if it is, you can go to your home mentally in between, etc. Rāma would have gone from one āśrama to another āśrama in the vanavāsa; nothing is lost; which you can pick up; you can get up from sleep, also; but this is a terse system of teaching, in which there is development of thought from one topic to another; when you miss the intermediary link, you would not get the connection at all. it is a science by itself; and therefore a person should have focussing capacity. saṃyatendriyaḥ, these are the three sādānās; in this verse; what are they; śraddhā; tatparatvam; and saṃyatendriyatvam; faith in the validity of the scriptures, commitment and focusing capacity.

And if a person follows as these things, jñānam labdva; certainly it will get most wonderful system from the Gītā or from the Upanisads; you will get the knowledge and परां शान्तिम् अधिगच्छति parāṃ śāntim adhigacchati; and the result of knowledge is the parāṃ śāntim, permanent peace of mind.

This is also important; suppose I say you get this knowledge, you will not have rebirth. Suppose I say; now what is the proof; that there is a rebirth itself is a belief; and that there will not be rebirth is also a belief. How do I know; so there is somebody who is a jñāni and he has attained mokṣaḥ; he is not reborn, suppose I say. I say Sankaracharya is a jñāni, therefore he is not reborn; it is a matter to be believed. How do I know? Suppose I say you will go to Vaikuntha; what is the proof and I have not seen Vaikuntha and after death you will not come and catch my collar also; I do not have a collar; you cannot catch my aṅgavastram also; because I am very much sure that you will not come back in this form; if you come as a ghost, that is a different matter.

So we do not give a posthumous benefit; Krishna promises a benefit, here and now which you can check. Gītā will give you peace of mind; it is a promise; and not ordinary peace of mind; parāṁ śāntim; a peace that passeth all understanding; it is possible; and every jñāni tells this from his own personal experience. and therefore Krishna says parāṁ śāntim adhicacchati. But He says how long it will take; again if you ask, अचिरेण acirēṇa; because for the jñānam to flow as peace of mind, we should take care of our old habit and problems. This Krishna will discuss in the 6th chapter, and we have got the habitual problem; habitual problem will not go merely by jñānam.

Suppose you have changed the place of your book or toothpaste; from this almirah to another; now vāstu śāstrā has become a widely accepted thing; and he advises to keep the toothpaste on the eastern side. OK. If there are vāstu fellows, do not get angry. I shifted from the western to eastern; now I have changed it; jñānam is there or not; I have changed it myself; but next day when I go, where will to the old place; the problem is not ignorance; the problem is of habit.

Therefore our actions and responses are governed by two factors, one is our knowledge; and another is our vāsana; knowledge will take care of part of the problem; but we have to handle our vāsanās, or habits also; and habit changing requires deliberate effort; I should change; and it is not that easy; and well-entrenched habits like emotional problems like inferiority complex, no self-image, or jealousy or anger or irritation or missing something in life; they are all so entrenched that in fact I have to handle it one at a time; each problem I might have to handle; and therefore depending upon your sincerity, time and the amount of importance that you give, the benefit also will take proportional time, therefore Krishna does not want to commit, because it is not in Krishna's hands; or else they will catch Krishna's collar; Gītā I learned, but I have not changed; I have not changed like Brahman; Brahman non-changing is OK. But my mind should not be non-changing like the Brahman. Mind, our behaviour, our habits, our responses should change; not only for my sake; but for family members' sake; otherwise they will ask: what was the use of attending the Gītā class: what have you "achieved"? So therefore not only you, they will comment along with your teacher; so I want to save myself and every ācārya wants to save, they say acirēṇa; before long; so therefore Krishna says: acirēṇa.

Continuing.

अज्ञश्चाद्ध्यानश्च संशयात्मा विनश्यति ।

अज्ञः च ajñāḥ ca the ignorant, अश्रद्धधानः aśraddadhānaḥ who has no faith, च संशयात्मा ca saṁśayātmā and who has a doubting mind, विनश्यति vinaśyati perishes संशयात्मनः saṁśayātmanaḥ for one who has a doubting mind न अयं लोकः na ayaṁ lokaḥ neither this world अस्ति asti there is न परः na paraḥ nor the next न सुखम् na sukham nor happiness.

40. The ignorant who has no faith and who has a doubting mind perishes. For one who has a doubting mind, there is neither this world, nor the next, nor happiness

In this Krishna wants to deal with the negative traits; in the previous verses he was talking about the positive traits which have to be inculcated; imbibed, required, nourished. Now he talks about certain negative traits which we have to handle; and there he talks about three negative traits and He wants to say which one is the worst of this three.

No.1 ignorance; regarding anything; ignorance with regard to the world; so I should be informed if I want to live a normal life. Even if you want to go to the railway station; better read the newspaper and find out which roads are blocked; which road there is diversion; or whether the train is going; that is basic. If I have that information, even simple things I cannot do; in fact some people say that I have come to Vedānta I do not want to read newspapers; reading newspapers is a must; even though it has got lot of unnecessary things; there are lot of important information which I have to know. Therefore we are talking about worldly

and the second thing is aśraddhā, lack of faith is the second; in the scriptures aśraddhā; so lack of knowledge is one negative trait; lack of faith in scriptures is the second negative trait;

and the third one is samśayaha; doubt. And here Krishna says, among these three, the doubting Thomas, that person is the worst one; who will face lot of problems; How; suppose a person is not an informed person; a person is not worldly wise; but he has got faith in the scriptures and he does the prayer and whatever pooja and other things he does; then what happens; because of his lack of knowledge; the worldly benefits he will not get; because he is an ignorant person; he does not have worldly wisdom; and therefore whatever ānanda he can derive from the world that he cannot get; but because he has got śraddhā; in the scriptures even though he does not have ihalōkha sukham, because of his śraddhā and sincere following of the scriptures, karma etc. he will get, para lokaḥ sukham he will get. Therefore a person who is ajñāni but who has got śraddhā, he will get para lokaḥ sukham but he will not get ihalōkaḥ sukham.

Now let us think of the 2nd type of person; he does not believe in scriptures; so karma puṇyam, pāpam, svargam, narakam, is rubbish; I do not believe in all these; but I believe in the pleasures of this world and I want to be well-informed and therefore he has got what; worldly knowledge, he is jñānaḥ, but he does not have srāddha; then what will happen to him; because he does not have śraddhā; para lokaḥ sukham he will not get; because he is well informed, he will get what iha lokaḥ sukham. First type of person is ignorant and therefore iha lokaḥ sukham is not there; but para lōkaḥ sukham is there because of śraddhā. For a second type of person, because of lack of śraddhā, para lōkaḥ sukham is not there; but iha lokaḥ sukham is there; but the samśayatma; doubting thomas, even though he has got worldly knowledge, he is not very sure; sometime they might have changed the time today; every where he has got doubt; after taking the car or bus or anything, in the middle, he will have a doubt whether he locked the door properly or not. Some people get the doubt in the middle of the class; Gone is that day's class. So he only has just held the lock and he was himself hanging. But again doubt; so he cannot have iha lōkaḥ sukham; because in every thing he has got doubt; and what about para lōkaḥ sukham; a man who doubts this lōkaḥ itself; how will he not doubt the scriptures, puṇyam, pāpam, etc. therefore na ayam lōkaḥ, na paraḥ lōkaḥ.

So ajñāścāśraddadhānaśca saṁśayātmā vinaśyati; all these three types of persons have negative traits; and therefore they perish in life; but who is the worst one; saṁśayātmanaha, ayam lōkaḥ nāsthi, he cannot enjoy this world; na paraha lokaḥ, he does not have the para lōkaḥ also; then what about mokṣaḥ; when these two are not available, how can mokṣaḥ be; so na sukham; there is not even mokṣaḥ sukham; nothing is possible; and therefore what is the worst enemy; saṁśayaḥ; Life requires basic trust; trust even with regard to the family members; trust with regard to our office subordinates; because you have to give responsibilities; delegation is involved; and if I do not have trust, what will happen; I have to do every job. Swamiji used to tell; this Lady appoints a cook; and not sure whether she will do it properly and walks behind; do not do it like this; that like that; and she would be doing almost the whole cooking herself; giving the salary and he says amma cooks well and he will grow well; and similarly you appoint a driver; and sit behind in the car, and drive the driver and ask him to honk the horn; go slow; break it; then why can't you drive; they cannot trust the husband; trust the wife, trust the children, trust their subordinates, basic trust is required; and trusting is unavoidable and trusting involves risk also; because there is risk, if you refuse to trust, you cannot live at all; because your children are growing and they go various places, can you always watch them; we educate the children and especially when they go abroad, how much you can follow; what he is doing; whether he is into drugs; or drinks, etc. It is not possible and therefore trust is a very important value in life; it has got a risk factor; but at the same time it is inevitable risk factor; it is required in the case of Vedānta also; whether Vedānta will give you benefit or not, how will you know; you come to and attend the class and see whether there is any benefit; and if he says that there is no benefit at all; I myself will say, kindly do not come. Therefore up to that there must be śraddhā; and therefore न सुखं संशयात्मनः na sukhaṁ saṁśayātmanah.

ātmavantam na karmāṇi nibadhnanti dhanañjaya | 4.41 | |

धनञ्जय dhanañjaya O Dhananjaya कर्माणि karmāṇi actions, न निबध्नन्ति na nibadhnanti – do not bind योगसंन्यस्तकर्माणम् yōgasamnyastakarmāṇam one who has renounced all actions through knowledge ज्ञानसंछिन्नसंशयम् jñānasamchinnasamśayam who has destroyed all doubts by knowledge, आत्मवन्तम् ātmavantam and who is mindful.

41. O Arjuna! Actions do not bind one who has renounced all actions through knowledge, who has destroyed all doubts by knowledge, and who is mindful.

So here Krishna is summing up the sādānā and the phalam; a person has to go through three levels of sādānā; योगसंन्यस्तकर्माणं yōgasamnyastakarmāṇam; yōgaḥ means jñānam; and what is the jñānam; I am the ātma which is akartā; akartru-ātma-jñānam is called here yōga and by this yōga. A person gets detached from all actions; because actions belong to the body, mind, complex; he allows the body mind complex to function in the world; but he does not have over attachment or identification and therefore he has renounced the karma identification; this is the first stage;

then ज्ञानसंछिन्नसंशयम् jñānasañchinnasamśayam; yōgasamnyastakarmāṇam refers to the śravaṇa stage; then the next stage jñānasañchinnasamśayam, he has negated all the doubts by gaining conviction through mananam; jñānam means conviction; I should be convinced; I need not convince any other person; that is not relevant; and I cannot convince others also; because there are many people who do not want to be convinced. Therefore I should be convinced of this knowledge; I should ask my own mind; are you convinced of this knowledge; and I should study until I am convinced; therefore the second stage is he has removed all doubts through conviction; and the third stage is आत्मवन्तम् ātmavantam; this is the nidhidhyāsanam stage and in which a person is alert to avoid forgetfulness of this teaching. This is not a teaching to be confined to this particular enclosure; jñānam must be available in my day-to-day life; ஏட்டு சுரைக்காய் கறிக்கு உதவாது ēṭṭu curaikkāy kaṛikku utavātu; you have got wonderful notes; note will get liberated; it does not have bondage, that is a different matter; what is the use of cassette and notes; it should be here (inside me) to help me in crisis; so ātmavān means the one who leads an alert life; the one who keeps this knowledge green during transaction; apramatham, jñāna niṣṭām; this is the third stage; so the one who has done the

karmāṇi na nibadhnanti; just concluding; just take five more minutes and conclude.

तस्मादज्ञानसम्भूतं हृत्स्थं ज्ञानासिनात्मनात्मनः।

tasmādajñānasambhūtaṁ hṛtsthaṁ jñānāsinā'tmanaḥ |
chittvainaṁ saṁśayaṁ yōgamātiṣṭhōttiṣṭha bhārata || 4.42 ||

भारत bhārata O Arjuna, तस्मात् tasmāt hence ज्ञानासिना jñānāsinā with the sword of knowledge छित्त्वा chitvā destroy एनं संशयम् enaṁ saṁśayam this doubt आत्मनः ātmanaḥ about the self हृत्स्थं hṛtsthaṁ which is in your mind अज्ञानसम्भूतम् ajñānasambhūtam and which is born out of ignorance उत्तिष्ठ uttiṣṭa get up, आतिष्ठ योगम् ātiṣṭa yōgam and take to Karmayōga.

42. O Arjuna, Hence with the sword of knowledge, destroy the doubt about the self which is in your mind, and which is born out of ignorance.
Get up and take to Karma yōga.

Now Krishna gives direct advice to Arjuna. Arjuna you also get rid of doubt, which is your worst enemy. I have given two valid lessons; follow karma yōga, purify the mind; follow jñāna yōga, enlighten your mind and be free; this is the basic teaching of Gītā; karma yōga is for purification; jñāna yōga is for enlightenment. So having clearly grasped this teaching; may you remove the doubt regarding the sādāna.

Therefore he says; ज्ञानासिना jñānāsinā, by the sword of understanding, आत्मनः संशयम् छित्त्वा ātmanaḥ saṁśayam chitvā; may you destroy your doubt regarding karma yōga, and jñāna yōga sādānā; because Arjuna wanted to give up the karma; and he wanted to go away; that means he wanted to go jñāna yōga without going through karma yōga; Krishna says first go through karma yōga and then alone jñāna yōga; for having clearly grasped through the sword of knowledge, may you remove the doubt, what type of doubt, अज्ञानसम्भूतम् ajñānasambhūtam; all doubts are products of ignorance; any doubt is product of ignorance; that is why any doubt can go only by proper knowledge; therefore jñāna aśinā, with the sword of knowledge, with the knife of knowledge, may you destroy the ignorance and ignorance caused doubt and what is the doubt, to fight or not, to be a grihasthā or sanyāsi; to take karma yōga or jñāna yōga; with regard to all these things, you remove all the doubts, and you have to remove your doubt, because हृत्स्थं hṛtstham, it is in your own mind; guru cannot do anything with regard to śiṣyā's mind; guru can only assist, but the actual destruction should be done by the śiṣyā only; Ten people can take a person to water; but that person alone should drink water; I can give you supporting logic; scriptural quotations; experiential backing; I can only do the supporting part, with your intellect, you have to apply and remove your own doubts; therefore hṛtstham means you have to clean your doubting mind; I can only assist you; you have to clean; therefore chitvā hṛtstham saṁśayam;

What should you do; योगम् अतिष्ठ yōgam ātiṣṭa; may you take to karma yōga; which is the appropriate path for you for the time being. You are not fit for sanyāsa now; either postpone it; or do not take it; but now you are not fit for sanyāsa; therefore be a grihasthā; do your duty, even though it is bitter duty; unpleasant duty of killing your own kith and kin; you cannot avoid that; therefore, उत्तिष्ठ uttiṣṭa; Arjuna get up, take your bow, arrow and do your duty.

With this Krishna completes this present discourse.

Om

I will give you a summary of the 4th chapter of the Gītā. The fourth chapter can broadly classified into three portions; the first portion dealing with avathāra ~ incarnation of the Lord; the second topic jñāna karma sanyāsa; which is the central theme of the fourth chapter, and the third topic is jñāna sādana phalāni; the means of gaining knowledge and the benefits of gaining the self-knowledge; These are the three topics we find in the fourth chapter.

I will discuss each topic briefly; the first I said is Īśvara avathāra, which is discussed from verse No.1 up to verse No.15, and in this portion, Krishna shows the difference between Īśvara avathāra and jīvā-janma. Even though both of them superficially appear the same; because Lord also seems to have parents, Janmāṣṭami, Rama navami, etc. date of birth; and the Lord also grew up like any other human being; and since they look the same; we should know what is the technical difference between jīvā-janma and Īśvara avathāra; and we saw basically there are three differences; one is at the level of cause of avathāra and janma, the second is at the level of the very nature; svarūpa and the third is with regard to the very purpose. So kāraṇa, svarūpa and uddēśam; lakṣyam, the purpose. At the kāraṇa level, at the cause level, the difference we saw was that jīvā's janma is caused by ignorance; it is because of ignorance jīvā has got the ego; and it is because of the ego, he acquires puṇya pāpam, and it is because of puṇya pāpam, he is forced to take this body; therefore for the jīvā, janma is a fall; it is clean fall because he is helpless. So ajñānam is the kāraṇam.

Whereas in the case of Īśvara, the cause of avathāra is certainly not ignorance; but it is because of the sarvajñatvam; it is omniscience of the Lord as well as the compassion of the Lord. And therefore it will not come under falling down but Lord descends down to uplift the human being; so when a person falls into a well, he has gone down; the one who wants to rescue this person, he also goes into the well; but there is a difference between them; one has fallen; another has descended to help him out; and that is why, in the case of Īśvara, we use the word avathārah; avathārati; the one who comes down; purely out of compassion; and by coming down the Lord has to go through lot of worldly problems also; Rama had endless problems; Krishna had endless problems; and going through all of them; the Lord comes down; and therefore, it is jñānam. In the case of jīvā janma; ajñānam is kāraṇam; in the case of Īśvara avathāra; jñānam and karuna is the kāranam.

The second difference that we saw was with regard to the very nature; svarupam; and there I pointed out two differences; one is since jīvā comes down because of ignorance, jīvā is bound; jīvā does not know his higher nature and therefore jīvā suffers because of self-ignorance; and therefore he is baddha svarūpaḥ. Which problem Īśvara does not have; for Īśvara, it is a leela, it is a sport; it is a game; Rama will never complain about his life; Krishna will never complain about his life; in fact, He was smiling all the time; even while killing rākṣasās. He smilingly destroyed; which made the rākṣasās more angry; therefore baddha svarūpa v/s muktha svarūpa; bandha and muktha is one difference.

And the second is a purely technical difference we saw; that in the case of jīvā; the body is made out of the five elements; māya does not directly produce the body; māya produces the five elements and through five elements, jīvā śarīram is formed; therefore it is called boudika śarīram; whereas in the case of Īśvara, it is supposed to a direct conversion of māya into śarīram. So therefore it is called māyika śarīram; and that is why in the case of Narasimha avathāra etc. there is no time gap at all; ten months the mother carrying; all such things, etc. the pillar was broken, suddenly Narasimha comes out of what; it is directly produced from Māya. Therefore what is the second difference; boudika śarīram jīvāsya; māyika śarīram avathārasya; therefore we call māya mānuṣa vēśaḥ; these are the two differences at the level of the svarūpam.

Then I talked about the difference at the level of purpose; for what purpose they two come down. In the case of jīvā, the purpose of janma is the exhaustion of puṇya-pāpa. the exhaustion of the acquired puṇya pāpa is the purpose, because puṇya-pāpa can be exhausted only through experience of sukha duḥkha; and sukha duḥkha can be experienced only when there is śarīram; Śarīram bina sukham va duḥkham va anubōkthum naiva śakyath. How do you know that; suṣuptē, duḥkham va sukham va nāsthi. In suṣupti, we do not have a operating body; therefore we do not interact with the world; and therefore we do not exhaust our puṇya-pāpa. If we exhaust puṇya-pāpa because there is a dream body; and there is a dream world; and there is a dream interaction and therefore dream sukha duḥkham. Therefore śāstrā accepts the exhaustion of puṇya-pāpa, either through the physical body or through any other body, but body is required; therefore we assume the body to exhaust our puṇya-pāpa and that is why type of body is determined by the type of puṇya-pāpam. So I am responsible for the type of body that I have; therefore what is jīvā janmanā uddēśam kim; puṇya pāpa kṣayam. While exhausting puṇya pāpam, we choose to acquire fresh ones; that is a different issue; but this is the primary thing that is taking place; not only in human births; even in the case of animal birth, it is the puṇya pāpa kṣayam; the only difference is the animals cannot acquire fresh karma whereas manuṣya can acquire but what is common to both is puṇya-pāpa kṣayam. So this is jīvā janma uddēśam; whereas Īśvara 's avathāra is not for puṇya pāpa kṣaya because the Lord is puṇya-pāpa atītaḥ; because he does not have ajñānam.

So then what is the purpose of avathāra;

abhyutthānamadharmasya tadā "tmānaṃ srjāmyaham ||4.7||

Īśvara is responsible for the arrival of this creation; and Īśvara is responsible for the maintenance of the creation; not only He is sṛṣṭi kartā, He happens to be a stithi kartā and for the maintenance of the creation; whatever is required, He has to do; and generally Lord does not want to come down and poke his nose in our affairs; hoping that we are all decent fellows. But if necessary, he will come. He has given the method of maintaining the creation, i.e. called dhārmic way of life; He has manufactured the creation; and He has given a manual for the ideal use of the creation, to get the optimum benefit. That is called dharma śāstrā; and Bhagavān expects that we human beings will understand what is dhārmic living; by our common sense itself; and if common sense is not required; the vēdic scriptures will help and then the world will be fine; but in spite of common sense ~ as somebody said, common sense is the most uncommon thing ~ so if we are not using the common sense, and if we refuse to follow the manual given by the Lord also; then Bhagavān says; I will be forced to interfere and I take avathāra.

And this avathāra maintains the creation in two ways; one is the direct and drastic method; the drastic process like the doctor removing whatever is not required in the body; gall bladder stone; remove the gall bladder; appendicitis; remove that; similarly, one drastic method is what; whichever is like a tumor, malignant tumor in the creation, adharmic people; militant, terrorists, are malignant. So Bhagavān has to do a surgery; militantodectomy! finish off; this is a drastic procedure; but it cannot be used all the time; so any organ is sick, you keep on removing that organ; there will be no organ at all; it will just a body bag it will be.

Therefore everywhere that would not work; and therefore Bhagavān has got a second method; and that second method is educating the humanity; drastic procedure is not going to work all the time; so this organ problem; cut off that organ; head off the head for headache; for head ache, śīracēdam cannot be done; everywhere you cannot apply that; so Bhagavān has got two methods;

In certain avathāras, he destroys the rākṣasās; like Narasimha avathāra, etc. it is destruction; but in certain avathāra, Bhagavān does a two-fold job; one is the destruction; and the other is the education; telling the humanity, be responsible; because your head is over the shoulders, so it means head should be higher; unlike the animal; animals have got head and stomach at the same level; horizontal; that is why animals are called तिर्यन्च tiryanka; thiryank means horizontally growing one; and therefore their head must be how much developed; as much developed as required for filling the stomach; same level; but in the case of human beings; stomach is down below; head is up above. Therefore we cannot live just for eating; we have more responsibility and therefore Bhagavān educates us and expects us to take more responsibility; and that he has done in two avathāras; especially because of which alone those two avathāras are important avathāras, i.e. Rāma avathāra and Krishna avathāra; and in Rāma avathāra; Rāma taught by living;

मथुर्यावतारं खलु मर्त्यं शिक्षणं

rakṣovathai na kēvalam vibhō |
kuthōnyatā sya rāmatā sva ātmani
sītā kṛtāni vyasanāni īśvarasyaḥ ||

marthyāvatāra khalu martya śikṣaṇam; educating the human being is also important; rakṣovathai na kēvalam, not mere destruction of Kaṁsa, Mustika, Chānura, malla, etc. educate also to be done; similarly Rāma's purpose was killing Rāvana but also educating; and that is why it was called Rāma ayanam; ayanam means the way of Life; the path which was tread by Rāma; Rāmasya ayanam, ramasya dharma mārga; Rāmāyanam;

In Krishna avathāra, do not try to do what Krishna did; because right from birth, he started stealing butter; similarly he did so many peculiar things; do what Rāma did and also do what Krishna said: If you want to do what Krishna did, you should do everything that Krishna did; I will ask you to first lift the desk, mountain is not necessary; and then you can start the stealing; getting up is a great achievement; therefore if I have to follow Krishna, I should follow in all respects; since I cannot do that; better I follow what Krishna said; the purpose of avathāra is what; dharma rakṣaṇam, vēda rakṣaṇam, educating; and therefore Krishna says; Hey Arjuna, my purpose was to teach the humanity, because the vēdic teaching has become weaker; and therefore, I was very happy when you became a disciple and therefore

Through you I decided to revive the vēdic teaching; and therefore revival of dharma, both by teaching and destroying the adhārmic people is the purpose of avathāra.

So thus the cause is different; the nature is different; the purpose is also different; Krishna said as the Lord I taught the vēda in the beginning of the creation; and again as Rāma avathāra; I am again re-teaching the same wisdom, through Krishna śarīram also.

And having talked about avathāra, Krishna concluded that discussion by making a beautiful statement; and that is whoever knows the Lord completely;

जन्म कर्म च मे दिव्यमेवं यो वेत्ति तत्त्वतः ।
त्वक्त्वा देहं पुनर्जन्म नैति मामेति सोऽर्जुन ॥४.९॥
janma karma ca mē divyamēvaṃ yō vētti tattvataḥ|
tyaktvā dēhaṃ punarjanma naiti māmēti sō'rjuna||4.9||

whoever knows the Lord completely, that person will get freedom; and there the emphasis is Knows the Lord completely, because the Lord has got two natures; one is the higher and the other is the lower nature; and what is the secret of this; the higher nature of the Lord is never subject to birth and death.

prajApathishcharathi garbhe anthah | ajAyaMAno baHuDhA vijAyathe |
thasya DhIrAh parijAnanthi yoniM | MarIchInAm padhaMichChanthi veDhasah |3 | have you heard somewhere; ajayamano bahuda vijayathe; (purusha sūktham);

wherein the Upaniṣad says, Lord is born without being born; how do you reconcile this contradiction. பிறக்காமல் பிறந்தார் Pirakkamal pirandar; so how do you reconcile; from the higher nature, dehi driṣṭya; chaitanya driṣṭya; svarūpa driṣṭya;

Bhagavān is birthless; from the standpoint of his superficial body; it is only a superficial case from the standpoint of the body, he is subject to birth and death;

but from the standpoint of Krishna paramātmā, the Krishna paramātmā is ajōpi sannapyatma, bhūtanam īśvarōpisan. Hey Arjuna, I am never born; I am born as it were; so thus the one who knows the birthless higher nature of the Lord and the birthed lower nature (our english) of the Lord, the one who knows; in the 7th chapter, Krishna will call it para prakriti and apara prakriti, the one who knows he will be liberated.

So thus, Krishna concludes the avathāra topic with the 15th verse; and this is unique in the entire Gītā because in no other chapter, avathāra is discussed; only in this chapter, the avathāra topic comes and it is so important, even this slōka is incorporated in the Viṣṇu Sahasranāma also;

अभ्युत्थानमधर्मस्य तदात्मानं सृजाम्यहम् ॥४.७॥
yadā yadā hi dharmasya glānirbhavati bhārata|
abhyutthānamadharmasya tadā"tmānaṃ srjāmyaham||4.7||

in Mahabharatham TV Serial also. Parithranaya sadunam; ... if you are watching that, it is important.

Now the next topic is jñāna karma sanyāsaha; which is the central theme of not only the 4th chapter; but also the entire Bhagavad Gītā; very important portion; from verse No.16 to 24. And in this portion, Krishna wants to point out that there are two types of renunciation; two types of karma sanyāsa;

one type of renunciation is the popular renunciation; in which a person quits the society and becomes a monk, a sanyāsi; in which he has given up all the karmas; karmas means duties; because, as long as he is a member of the society, he has got duties at various levels; and the individual duty, family level endless duties; so if all the children and grand children are with us, we have got certain types of duties; OK, we want to avoid that; and therefore we ask them to go away; we will leave alone, then we have got another set of duty; everything we ourselves have to attend; Swamiji, I have to myself go to the bank, post office; along with the son, the grandchild also comes and I have to take care of him; what to do, do one of them; so therefore there will be family duties, there will be social duties, and also the election is coming, sanyasi is not supposed to vote; so no duties; so no duties means not eating and increasing the weight; he is supposed to dedicate himself to the pursuit of the highest; and if he have the attained the highest; then share it in any way that he can afford, that he can do; this is the physical renunciation, external renunciation; this is called chaturtha āśrama; the fourth state of life; and it is a ritualistic process also in which a person should not live in the house, even if he proposes to live in the house, he has to stay in an outhouse like thing;

and there is a second type of sanyāsa; which has nothing to do with our external personality; it is purely inner; by discovering detachment; exactly like the lotus leaf which is within the water; but it does not get wet by the water; like the non-stick tava; non-stick pan; modern things are useful for vēdānta; you keep on enjoy dosai but do not get stuck; similarly become a non-stick tava;

And how can you accomplish that; there is only one method of accomplishing that; you have to switch or change your understanding about yourselves. Self-knowledge has to be there; self-elavation has to be there; because as body, karma association cannot be avoided. as mind karma association cannot be avoided; because body and mind are integrally related to the world; therefore interactions are inevitable; therefore you have to discover a different eye which is higher than the body mind complex, which is called ātma tatvam; and once I recognise the atma, which fortunately happens to be asangaha; which happens to be ākāśa tulyaḥ; just as ākāśa is associated with everything but it is not polluted by anything; similarly I have to do self-enquiry; and clearly understand I am not the body; I am not the mind also; body-mind-complex is part of this creation; and this part; Bhagavān cannot stop it; let those interactions continue; but let me understand, like a cinema actor or a drama actor, who plays the role extremely well, crying when it is required; sometimes, even producing real tears without glycerine or onion, he just chooses to identify with the role and even cry; but even at the time of crying, he knows I am playing the role of Rāma, Krishna; or any role for that matter; but in the green room, I am different from all these.

So this is only permanent solution; but it is a difficult solution, which requires śravaṇam, mananam, and nidhidhyāsanam; so thru jñāna yōga, thru vēdānta vicāra; when I learn to detach from actions internally, that is called internal renunciation; and Krishna gives it the title, jñāna karma sanyāsaḥ; it is a beautiful terminology; jñāna karma sanyāsaḥ; what is the vighraha vakyam; if you are sanskrit students; karmanam sanyāsaḥ, karma sanyāsaḥ; śaṣṭi tatpuruṣa samāsa; jñānēna karma sanyāsaḥ; jñāna karma sanyāsaḥ; tritiya tat puruṣaḥ. If you translate into English it will mean renunciation of action through knowledge; without physically stopping the action; continuing to do everything as before. It is like selling a house and continuing to live in the same house. Now when you have sold and continue to live in the house, even the house may be the same, things may be the same, in your mind, what is not there, the ownership is not there, therefore the attitude itself changes. If it is our house we will think 3 months for drilling for a nail; but if it is a rented house, we will do without a second thought; so these are all certain changes; purely one signature exchange;

In the case of a jñāni, what happens he has sold the house to the Lord; and he continues to use the same house but a small signature he has put and handed over to the Lord; this is called internal renunciation; thereafter he is trustee of the body and therefore he handles the body, because it is Īśvara 's property, all these he will do, but there is an internal transformation; this alone Krishna calls jñāna karma sanyāsaḥ; all the verses in the section are beautiful and important verses.

यस्य सर्वे समारम्भः कामसङ्कल्पवर्जिताः ।

yasya sarvē samārambhāḥ kāmasaṅkalpavarjitāḥ |

jñānāgnidagdhakarmaṇaṁ tamāhuḥ paṇḍitaṁ budhāḥ ||4.19||

What transformation it brings out. the interactions are objectively seen; and the consequences are also objectively seen; this objectivity removes reactions towards the situations. Not that he will be like stone; certainly he is going to see the differences between success and failure; but the impact is reduced; like a parachute when the plane comes very fast; and when the run way is very very short to reduce that speed, suppose they have a parachute behind pulling, similarly, the jñānam will serve to reduce the impact of the life situations; Even the worst shock, it may disturb me for a few days, but I have got the flexibility to recover and continue to live.

Even though he is fully involved in action, the surprising thing is when you see his relaxation, it appears as though he is not involved in anything; like you are in the railway station; and when the train is about to start; you can find always there will be some people, in the last moment they will be searching for the compartment with the ticket; and when those fellows are searching for the compartment, and you have come to send off someone who is already in the train and when you are on the platform, what happens to you; when the train is starting; you are sthithaprajñā.

jīvānmuktha; even when you see the other person running, not at all affected; Imagine that state of mind, when you yourself are in the position; Very difficult but it is worth trying; it is easy to say; but very difficult; do not ask me whether Swamiji, can you do it. It is very difficult but it is worth all the effort; You are ready to miss the train. So therefore naiva नैव किञ्चित्करोति सः naiva kiñcit karōti saḥ, beautiful slōka; if I get into that, it will become another fourth chapter, instead of summary.

So one more point in this section, I would like to state in this section and I consider it as most important; while describing this jñāni, Krishna talks about both a householder-jñāni as well as a sanyāsi-jñāni.

कर्मण्यभिप्रवृत्तोऽपि नैव किञ्चित्करोति सः ॥ ४.२० ॥

karmaṇyabhipravṛttō'pi naiva kiñcit karōti saḥ || 4.20 ||

ब्रह्मार्पणं ब्रह्म हविर्ब्रह्माग्नौ ब्रह्मणा हुतम् ।

ब्रह्मैव तेन गन्तव्यं ब्रह्मकर्मसमाधिना ॥ ४.२४ ॥

brahmaiva tēna gantavyam brahma karma samādhinā || 4.24 ||

In fact Brahmārpanam is the description of a householder-jñāni. Brahmārpanam verse is considered to be the most important verse of the Gītā itself, not because you chant it before eating; because it talks about highest knowledge; it is the description of a sanyasi-jñāni, but a grihastha-jñāni.

From this we come to know that the liberation is not dependent on the āśrama; liberation is dependent on your wisdom or the lack of it; If wisdom is not there, every āśrama is bondage; in fact sanyāsa āśrama is the greatest risk without wisdom; whereas in Grihastha āśrama, one can survive as a ajñāni. What we are all doing; are not we successfully doing. So grihastha can happily manage, without jñānam. but a sanyāsa life without jñānam is the riskiest thing; and that is why the moment a person takes sanyāsa; if he is already a jñāni, no problem, it is called vidvat sanyāsa. Otherwise immediately he should have the facility for the pursuit of knowledge, because that is the nearest; either I should be a jñāni, and I should be in the pursuit of jñānam; if I am neither a jñāni and neither am I enquiring into this; if I am a sanyāsi, risks are many. and that is why in our tradition, Swami

Dayananda and Swami Chinmayanda, etc. what they do is; they never give you sanyāsa diksha first; what they do, they give the teaching; and thereafter they say, sanyāsi if you want to become, you can or if you want to marry, marry. I remember our Swamiji saying: I myself will search for a girl and get you married. After knowledge, it does not make difference. therefore it is sanyāsa is risky without knowledge, therefore Krishna says what is important is jñānam; without jñānam, every āśrama is risky; with jñānam, every āśrama is wonderful; Therefore Arjuna concentrate on jñānam. So this is the second topic; beautifully titled jñāna karma sanyāsa; if you want to translate inner renunciation through knowledge; this is the second topic;

Then the third topic from 25th to the end 42, Krishna talks about the jñāna sādana phalāni. To attain this knowledge, what preparations are required. Krishna talks about many sādanas, known sahakari sādānani, supporting sādana;

And what are they; I will just briefly mention; he talked about 12 yajñās; do you remember;

daiva yajñā, which is regular worship, any type of worship we do at home to any deity; and he talked about viṣaya bhoga yajña, convert all your interactions into worship; whatever you give you take it as offering to the Lord; whatever you take it, either take it as a prasada; or offering to the Lord within you. As I said, even food can be considered and offering to the Lord within; Viśhya bhoga yajñāha; then damah yajñāha; sense mastery; so discipline of the sense organs, not being a slave;

then he talked about sama yajñāha; mastery of the mind; so that it is your equipment, not that you are the equipment; of the mind; like some people taking the dog for a walk; alsetain; really solid and you will find dog is going in front and this fellow is struggling to go behind; you wonder who is leading whom; it should not be, let there be clarity; you lead the mind, the mind should not lead you;

kaṇ pōṇa pōkkilē kāl pōkalāmā? kāl pōṇa pōkkile maṇam pōkalāmā? maṇam pōṇa pōkkilē maṇitaṇ pōkalāmā?

they sing; bring all that; therefore sama yajñāh, the mental discipline; and then he talked about dravya yajñāh; danam; so charity itself is a yajñāh, tapo yajñāha; moderation in everything. so indulgence is weakness; over indulgence is weakness; tapas means moderation; dravya yajñāh; tapo yajñāh, yōga yajñāh; practising the ashtanga yōga;

then svadhyaya yajñāha; parayanam of scriptures in any languages; with the knowledge of the meaning, or without the knowledge of the meaning; without knowledge it will become mechanical, with knowledge, it will be enjoyable; that is called svadyaya; or parayanam;

then he talked about jñāna yajñāha;

one is the spiritual knowledge which is the highest and sacred knowledge, self-knowledge and then acquire the self-knowledge, whatever other disciplines you have to know; language knowledge; because you to have learn the śāstrā; in one language or the other, even if you avoid Sanskrit knowledge, if I give you in English, you should know English; if it is in Tamil, you should know Tamil; therefore the language knowledge; and thereafter some thinking is required; lot of logic is involved; vēdanta is a logical science; some thinking, not much; at least some; they are called aparavidya; subsidiary sciences, some auxilliary sciences, called vēda angaani; basic knowledge, whatever is required;

so both of them are called jñāna yajñāh;

then he talked about pranayama yajñāha; practice of pranayama; is also another wonder yajñā; if you do it with devotion and with the Lord's name; pranayama as a therapy does not become yajñāh; that is OK. there is no wrong with that; but pranayama as a spiritual discipline means I should either chant the traditional mantra, Om Bhu. Om suva, or at least chant Rama Rama, Krishna Krishna, Namasivaya, anything; so this is pranayama yajñāha; and krishna talked about ahara niyama yajñāha; āhara niyama means what; discipline in eating; it is good for the body also; extra weight will go away; we will have some mobility, which is now very doubtful; and in addition to that, ahara niyama controls our mind also; more about ahara niyama Krishna will talk about in the 6th chapter, and in the seventeenth he will talk about satvika ahara, rajasa ahara; and tamasa ahara; etc.

So thus all these yajñās he talked about; Then he talked about the importance of guru; so one should approach a guru, who can communicate this teaching.

As I had said before, there are different types of guru; inspiring guru, initiating guru; blessing guru; pāda pooja receiving guru; all gurus are OK; but we require a guru, who can bring out the essential teaching of the śāstrā; in a way that I can understand; and also I can have clarification; when I read the books certainly it is useful; but when I find certain portions are not clear, I cannot contact the author; sankaracharya, Adi sankaracharya is great and he has written wonderful bhashyams. but when I have a doubt somewhere, I require to clarify with someone and therefore Krishna says

upadēkṣyanti tē jñānaṃ jñāninastattvadarśinaḥ | | 4.34 | |

May you have a spiritual guide and you revere him; worship him, serve him, etc. that is also part of the sādana; guru seva; and then later Krishna talks about two more sādanas;

श्रद्धावल्लभते ज्ञानं तत्परः संयतेन्द्रियः ।

ज्ञानं लब्ध्वा परां शान्तिमचिरेणाधिगच्छति ॥ ४.३९ ॥

May you have the faith in the words of the scriptures and the guru; And if you are not able to swallow any statement; if it appears to be superstition or blind faith or something, or if it appears to be illogical, you can certainly ask questions, but never reject the scriptures and the āchārya; and if I reject the scriptures and acharya; scriptures have nothing to lose, āchāryas have nothing to lose, I only will lose something wonderful. Therefore if you are not able to understand, raise questions; any number of questions; it is free; no charge also; some people said; three questions only; each question Rs. 300. If anybody is there, please do not misunderstand; somebody told me; so he asked how many questions I can ask, he said you have already asked one question and therefore you can now ask two more, if you feel; so for asking the questions how many questions you are asking, you have to pay. The traditional masters; no charge; every thing free.

So therefore śraddhā; and then finally Krishna emphasised one more and that is tat paraha; tat paratvam, commitment, be sincere; so half hearted effort will not produce the benefit and do not criticise the scriptures, you should make a sincere attempt, in understanding and also in following what you are convinced of. Once I have the conviction, I should have the courage without bothering what the other people will think; Swamiji at this age itself, if we come to vēdanta, others are asking so many questions; therefore I want to secretly come. Why should you come secretly and the office I do not want to say, they all tease me; that means I do not have the courage to follow what I am convinced; the courage is required. That is what Vivekananda emphasised also everytime; be courageous. Krishna is going to tell in the sixteenth chapter, abayam satvasamduddhi; if you are convinced of something, why do not you follow; so thus all these things come under jñāna sādhanani; and of all these things what is the main sādhanam; jñāna yajñā; that is the pursuit of the scriptural study; it is most important one because knowledge alone can remove ignorance; all the others can support; like having a candle stand; decorative stands are there; and you can have a colourful candle; all are wonderful but what removes the darkness, is what; the flame; therefore give importance to all, flame, no flame; showcase candle; therefore all the other sādhanas have got their roles; but none of them can remove ignorance; avirodaya karma na vidyam vinivarthaye;

विद्य विद्याम् निहन्तेव तेजस् तिमिरसन्डवत् ॥

vidya vidyam nihantteva, tejas thimarasangavat. Atma bodha..

jñānam alone can remove ignorance. and jñānam can come only through scriptural enquiry; because scriptures are like a mirror to show your face; you can never replace the mirror; if you want to see your face; try to see your face, without a mirror; without a reflecting surface. What choice I have; I require a reflecting surface to see my face; why cant' accept the śāstrā darpaṇa helps me see the original nature and therefore jñāna yōga is the primary sādana and all others are supporting sādana; that Krishna himself makes clear:

Hey Arjuna, jñāna yajñā is the proximate sādana, direct means of liberation; with regard to all the other sādanas you have option; everybody may not be able to give jñānam; I myself am living on alms; when I myself am taking from others, how can I give; everybody cannot do dānam; so, the other sādanas are optional; that means optional means what, you can choose any one or two or three, of these things. Similarly prāṇāyāma yajñā, everybody may not be able to practice prāṇāyāma; therefore practice a select few, selected from the other sādanas;

But with regard to jñāna yōga; no option; everybody has to come to that one day or the other; as nicely said, you can enter the temple prakara through any of the gates, northern, southern, eastern or western, but to enter the sanctum; you have got only one gate. Thus Krishan glorified jñānam in that context;

And having talked about jñāna sādanas, he talked about the phalam also; he mentioned four types of benefits for jñānam; what are they; No.1 mohanasaha; all the conflicts in life are gone; not because I have control over future; not because I have got knowledge of the future; but knowledge gives me the strength to face the future; all our conflicts are born out of our weakness; our incapacity to face the future; once jñānam is there; I just take it to account, the known factors, and jump.

And the consequences can be positive or negative; but I am confident, I can face because as I said every step in life involves risk and unpredictability; jñāni knows that; if he starts a big āśrama, if it works well, good, if not, equally wonderful; so moha nasa is benefit no.1.

No.2 pāpa nāśaḥ; all the pāpams done up to now, belonging to the past jñāna, as well as the present janma; up to the time of gaining knowledge, whatever I have acquired; they all come under sanchita; all the sanchita karmas are destroyed, all the agami karmas are avoided; and all the prarabha karmas are de-fanged; decoffinated; coffee without coffee; desugarisation; sugar, minus sugar; like that prarabha karma will be rid of its hurting capacity; like a cobra without fang; So this is karma nasaḥ;

and then the third one is sarva karma nāśaḥ; karma is separately mentioned to include puṇyam also; he destroys not only pāpa karma, even puṇya karmas, because puṇya karmas are also because of punarapi jananam, punarapi maranam cycle and therefore sarva karma nāśaḥ also;

And then comes the fourth, which is a technical result and that is jiva Īśvara aikya darsanam; he recognises the essential oneness of jiva and Īśvara ha. Just like the wave understands that the essence of me, the wave and the essence of ocean, both are one and the same. Ocean may be big; wave may be small; only from the stand point of name and form, but when you go to the essence both are nothing but water. Similarly, I and God are one; aham brahmasmi is also the benefit; so thus he talks about the benefit also in this section and concludes saying Arjuna I hope now you are very clear about your course of action. So after talking many things, what ultimately I should do, that itself is in doubt Swamiji, if you say; wonderful talk, I donot know what to do; therefore Krishna says Arjuna you have to follow Karma yōga first, purify the mind and then gain jñāna through jñāna yōga and be free.

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

अस्मद् आचार्य पर्यन्ताम् वन्दे गुरु परम्पराम्

sadāśiva samārambhāṁ śaṅkarācāryamadhyamām

Om

In the three chapters of the Gītā, the 2nd, 3rd and 4th chapters, which have gone by, Krishna has primarily discussed two topics, one is regarding sādhanā and the other is regarding life style. With regard to the sādhanā, spiritual discipline, Krishna has made it very clear that everyone has to go through karma yōga sādhanā and jñāna yōga sādhanā to attain liberation; and there is no choice with regard to these two sādhanās.

And we should know the reason also for that; between karma yōga and jñāna yōga, there is no choice because, karma yōga is the means to come to jñāna yōga; karma yōga is the sādhanam, jñāna yōga is the sādhyā. Karma yōga is not a means for liberation; karma yōga is only a means to come to jñāna yōga; and jñāna yōga is the means to liberation.

Therefore these three things and their relationship should be very clear; karma yōga is the means, jñāna yōga is the end; jñāna yōga is the means, mōkṣa is the end.

And we can never talk about a choice between means and end; you can have a choice between two types of means, whether this means is better or that means is better, a choice is possible; like reaching the temple, you can have two roads and you can chose between two roads. Similarly, you can have a choice between two types of ends, sādhyōr madhy ē vikalphaḥ sambhavathi; but you cannot have a choice between means and end.

I have given a example also before; when a person wants to choose between two pants; whether this pant is better or that pant is better; he can choose. Similarly when there are two or more shirts, he can stand in front of it and ask the question, whether this shirt is better or that shirt is better; between two shirts there can be choice; between two pants there can be choice; because choice is only between similar. But can there be a choice whether today I should wear pant or shirt, to come to the class, I hope you do not do that; you can never have a choice between these two; they are not similar. Similarly, karma yōga and jñāna yōga you can never choose between the two, because they are not similar; karma yōga is the means, jñāna yōga is the end; whoever wants the end will have to necessarily take the end also. How can you choose without choosing or going through the means; similarly if I have to choose the means, I have to necessarily choose the end also, because choosing the means is valid and meaningful only if I have chosen the end also. Getting into a bus is meaningful only when you have chosen not only the bus but also the destination. You cannot choose the bus without choosing the destination; we are not getting into the bus for a joy-ride; similarly, if you have chosen the destination, you have to necessarily choose the means also.

Suppose I go to a doctor, and I say that I have got stomach pain; I want to remove the stomach pain niṣṛtiḥ is my end; and the doctor says wonderful; you have chosen help, freedom from pain; you have to take this tablet; and I argue I am only interested in removing the pain; I do not want to take the tablet; that doctor will not give medicine for the stomach pain; doctor will have to gain medicine for madness; if I chose the end of removing the pain; I have to choose the means also; therefore choosing the means and end is complimentary; one choice will validate the other choice and the other choice will validate the first choice.

Therefore never ask the question should I follow karma yōga or jñāna yōga; it is meaningless question, karma yōga is the sādhanā to come to jñāna yōga.

And between jñāna yōga and mōkṣa also, you cannot choose one because, jñāna yōga is the means for liberation. So with regard to karma yōga, jñāna yōga is the end and with regard to mōkṣa, jñāna yōga is the means. Just like a person occupies both the father status and son status, how; with regard to his son, he is the father; and with regard to his father, he is the son. Rāma is father from the standpoint of Lavakuśa and Rāma is son from the standpoint of Daśaratha. Similarly, jñāna yōga is means or end?; what reply should be given. You should not answer when I ask the question jñāna yōga is a means or end, you should ask the question, from whose stand point, if I ask Rāma is father or son, never answer the question; from whose standpoint? Remember, from karma yōga standpoint, jñāna yōga is the end; karma yōga has to culminate in jñāna yōga; and from mōkṣa angle, jñāna yōga is the means. So this alone Krishna struggled and struggled and He thinks that He has communicated but Arjuna continues to have problems; but he seems to be clear to some extent.

In these two verses of the 2nd chapter, Krishna has clarified; Arjuna! karma yōga will lead you to jñāna yōga; and jñāna yōga will lead you to liberation; So this is one part of the teaching. This is the teaching from the angle of sādānā.

And Krishna had to teach this because there is a lot of confusion with regard to sādānā. Still there are people who think karma yōga and jñāna yōga are alternative means of liberation; still majority of people think and they talk about different paths to liberation; if you are an active person, you attain mōkṣa through karma; if you are intellectual person, you attain mōkṣa through jñāna yōga; 'you go through karma path and I will go through jñāna path'; we will meet in mōkṣa; even now there is a very big confusion. Śankarācārya struggles to clarify this confusion and he says karma yōga cannot lead you to liberation, it will take you to jñāna yōga; jñāna yōga will lead to liberation; this is one part of the teaching;

Then there is second part of teaching also with regard to the lifestyle; because a person can lead two types of lifestyles; one is life of activity in society; and the other is life of seclusion; withdrawal; pravṛtti or nivṛttiḥ; life of work or life of withdrawal. Life in society or life in seclusion. So life of activity is called grihastha āśrama; and life of withdrawal is called sanyāsa āśrama; thus there are two āśramas open to every human being; in fact, in the olden days, after gurukula vāsa for 15-20 years, for every individual both āśramas are open, one can either get married and take to grihastha āśrama or one can take to sanyāsa and take to a life of seclusion.

Now with regard to this lifestyle; we use the Sanskrit word niṣṭā; so previously I talked about sādanā topic;

now the second topic in the Gītā is niṣṭā topic; niṣṭā means lifestyle.

And with regard to lifestyles; main two lifestyles, what is Krishna's teaching? Krishna wants to point out that with regard to lifestyle, a person has got a choice. With regard to karma yōga and jñāna yōga there is no choice, everyone has to go through karma, everyone has to go through jñānam; there is no choice; Sādanāyōr vikalpaḥ nāsthi; vikalpaḥ means choice; there is no choice; but the niṣṭayōr madhyē, between two types of lifestyles, there is a choice. Therefore Krishna wants to say, a human being can get married and lead a life of a grihastha; or a human being can become a monk, a sanyāsi, and live a life of seclusion; but what Krishna wants to emphasise is whatever be your lifestyle, you do not have a choice with regard to sādanā.

That means what?; in both the āśramas; one has to follow karma, as well as jñānam. In both the āśramas; one has to follow karma as well as jñānam; and that karma alone is called āśrama dharmaḥ; so grihasthāśrama dharma will be the karma yōga of a grihastha; sanyāsa āśrama dharma will be the karma yōga for a sanyāsi; a grihastha will keep the sacred thread, a sanyāsi uses a danda, that danda is like the sacred thread; grihastha has got rituals and prayers and pūjas and pārāyaṇams, and sanyāsi has also rituals, prayers, pūjas, pārāyaṇams. the type of pārāyaṇams vary; for grihastha, Viṣṇu Sahasranāma, etc. are emphasised but for the sanyāsi, Upaniṣad, Bhāṣyams, etc. are emphasised; pūja is required; For a grihastha, saguna īśvara nāmas are given, like Namaśivāya; Nārāyaṇāya etc.; for a sanyāsi, upaniṣad mahāvākya mantras are given for japa, or Omkara japa, haṁsa mantra japa, mahāvākya japa, thus for both, the pūja etc. are common, because both require what, the necessary mental condition to come to jñāna yōga; a sanyāsi also should qualify himself to enter jñāna yōga; a grihastha also has to qualify himself or herself to come to jñāna yōga.

So what is Krishna is saying: Take to any āśrama, but go through svadharma; and following svadharma is called karma yōga and by following svadharma what will happen, you will smoothly come to jñāna yōga; and once you are ready for jñāna yōga; Krishna says both grihastha and sanyāsi should come to jñāna yōga, which is vēdānta vicāraḥ; self-enquiry; Grihastha also must approach a guru and do self-enquiry; sanyāsi must also approach a guru and do self-enquiry; therefore both persons should do karma yōga; and both persons have to go through jñāna yōga; and both of them will get liberated; therefore what is the conclusion; in sādānā there is no choice; in lifestyle, you have a choice.

And if you ask which lifestyle is better, as I had told you before, both lifestyles have their own plus and minus points. In grihastha āśrama there are lot of plus points. Some of you may wonder, Swamiji, I do not think that there is something like plus point in Grihasthāśrama; do not say like that! if there is no plus point, nobody will be entering Grihastha āśrama at all; all kalyana mandapams are booked 2 years before; indicating that they are seeing something; either there is an actual plus point or there is a perceived plus point. So certainly there are plus points; the plus point is ideal for following pañca mahā yajña; doing lot of noble service to the society; grihastha āśrama is useful and there is security. In fact many people get into only for the sake of security; in the old age, our son will take care of me; whether he actually does is a different matter; but there is a hope that the children will take care; and I can have bank balance; and I can have ornaments, I can have LIC; Sanyāsi cannot do all those things; he cannot have life insurance; he cannot have shares; he cannot own a house, he cannot own anything. so grihastha āśrama has got lot of support; security is there; but the minus point is what; equal responsibility; LKG admission it will start; in fact even before you get a child, you should work for admission. And now for the admission what amount you have to give that alone we used for our entire education. So therefore, security is plus point, responsibility is minus point in the sense, responsibility means anxiety; what will happen to child; whether he will get tenth; Swamiji your full blessing is necessary; test and examinations come, there will be too much crowd with the Sanyāsis. Swamiji my son is writing 10th; Swamiji my son is writing 12th; special blessings; anxiety is there; and if you are forward community, almost doomed; in Sanyāsa āśrama, there is no responsibility; no wife, no husband; no children, you need not bother about anything; if you get hunger, Bhavathi Bhikṣām Dehi; somebody will give Bhikṣā; so there is no responsibility; but there is no security also; which is plus, which is minus; every āśrama has got its own plus and minus points. Therefore Krishna wants to say that take to any āśrama and pursue both the sādānā and get liberation; so this sādānā teaching; niṣṭhā teaching; both Krishna has given in chapters 2, 3 and 4.

Now Arjuna wants further clarity regarding this. And therefore first he wants to ask about the niṣṭhā or lifestyle; because the problem is once choice is given, there is a headache. Always decision making is difficult; suppose you get the admission for your son in one university only; no problem; suppose there are two or more universities; problem; similarly you want son-in-law, there is only one available; and you have go ahead putting the burden on the Lord; but you have got five jatakams and all of them perfectly matching; all are fine ones, which to choose, headache, the greatest problem in life is decision-making; and that is why we always either postpone or avoid; or ask Swamiji; so that you can wash of the hand and put the responsibility on him. We do not want to take decision because we do not want to face the consequences of our decisions; we do not have the mental strength; therefore Arjuna also faces the same problem; Krishna you are telling both Āśramas are OK; now what should I do; what should I do, just tell; if you see in the 4th chapter, Krishna has talked about both Grihasthāśrama jñāni as well as sanyāsa āśrama jñāni.

What one verse talks about a grihastha jñāni, who is in grihastha āśrama and he has attained knowledge and another verse talks about a sanyāsi, who has attained jñānam.

So that means you can be in any of the āśrama; and since Krishna has talked about both āśrama; Arjuna is again confused; what should I do. Emotionally his mind votes for sanyāsa now; you know why; because he has to kill his people; till now he was silent about sanyāsa; when everything is fine, nobody wants to talk about sanyāsa; but there are problems are over, Swamiji, I want to come to your Āśrama. But then I have to do my hair splitting; Isn't it; And I do not even have the hair for that; at least you can do that; I cannot even do that; so therefore, when problems come, we have this problem. Arjuna, in crisis, he wants to escape and therefore, he wants Krishna's endorsement. And therefore the fifth chapter begins with the same niṣṭā confusion; confusion regarding the life style; whether sanyāsa is better or grihasthāśrama is better.

With this background, the teaching starts and Krishna wants to clarify all about sanyāsa; that is why the very chapter is called sanyāsa yōgaḥ or karma-sanyāsa yōgaḥ. Krishna is threadbare analysis what is sanyāsa; and the beauty is in spite of this clear analysis Arjuna manages to have confusion further also. In fact he makes the omnipotent Krishna himself helpless. Sometimes the students are so powerful; that even the best teacher they make helpless; because you find in the 18th chapter also; Arjuna asks the same question;

संन्यासस्य महाबाहो तत्त्वमिच्छामि वेदितुम् ।

त्यागस्य च हृषीकेश पृथक्केशिनिषूदन ॥१८.१॥

tyāgasya ca hṛṣīkeśa pṛethakkeśiniṣūdana || 18.1 ||

In the 18th chapter also, he asks about Sanyāsa; in the 5th chapter also, he asks the same topic. With this background we will have to enter the chapter; we will read the first verse.

अथ पञ्चमोध्यायः

संन्यासं कर्मणां कृष्ण पुनर्योगं च शंससि॥

यत् श्रेयः एतयोरेकं तन्मे ब्रूहि सुनिश्चितम् ॥५.१॥

arjuna uvāca

sannyāsaṁ karmaṇāṁ kṛṣṇa punaryōgaṁ ca śaṁsasi |

yacchrēya ētayōrēkaṁ tanmē brūhi suniścitam | | 5.1 | |

अर्जुन उवाच arjuna uvāca Arjuna asked कृष्ण kṛṣṇa Oh Krsna शंससि śaṁsasi you are praising संन्यासं कर्मणाम् samnyāsaṁ karmaṇām karmasannyasa च पुनः ca punaḥ and again, योगम् yōgam karmayōga सुनिश्चितम् suniścitam definitely ब्रुहि

मे bruhi me tell me तद् एकम् tad ekam that one एतयोः ētayōḥ among these two
यत् श्रेयः yat śrēyaḥ which is good (for me).

1. Arjuna asked – O Krishna, you are praising karmasannyasa and again, karma yōga. Definitely tell me that one among these two which is good (for me).

So in spite of Krishna's clear teaching, Arjuna continues to have the confusion; therefore he asks the question, in the beginning of the chapter, Arjuna uvāca; Arjuna asked Lord Krishna; and what did he ask; He Krishna, you are glorifying both the āśramas; this is sometimes the problem in our scriptures; you will grihasthāśrama is also glorified; and sanyāsa āśrama is also glorified; in fact grihastha is supposed to be the pillar of the society who nourishes all the other three āśramas; because all the other three āśramas live on Bhīkṣā; brahmacāri has to live on Bhīkṣā alone; vānaprasthi has to live on Bhīkṣā alone; sanyāsi also has to live on Bhīkṣā alone; so if the three āśramas have to received Bhīkṣā, somebody has to. suppose grihastha also starts going for Bhīkṣā; who will give; so therefore, grihastha has to give Bhīkṣā and therefore grihastha āśrama is glorified in Hinduism. There are certain other monastic religions, who glorify the sanyāsis and they bring down grihastha āśramas; in certain religions, even in Hinduism itself; there are certain sampradāyās who glorify sanyāsis and who criticise grihasthāśrama; they say do not go near the grihastha too much; attachment will come; do not stay in their houses, etc. but that is not the Hindu culture; that is not the vēdic culture; Grihastha āśrama is a glorious āśrama; to help a person in spiritual sādanā.

So when you call Rāmaṇāśram, Rāmakrishnāśrama, this āśram, etc. why do you call āśrama; because that is a place of spiritual sādanā; so when you use the word āśrama it is a place of spiritual sādanā, even family life is called grihastha āśrama; which means our śāstra tells, in family also, one can follow spiritual sādanā; and therefore Grihastha āśrama is never inferior āśrama and therefore Hey Krishna you have glorified योगम् शंससि yōgam śaṁsasi; yōgaḥ means the karma niṣṭā; the lifestyle of a grihastha; life style of activity; life style of social involvement. That is the meaning of yōgaḥ. In short, grihastha āśrama. śaṁsasi - you are glorifying. Where has Krishna glorified; in the previous chapter;

कर्मण्यभिप्रवृत्तोऽपि नैव किञ्चित्करोति सः ॥ ४.२० ॥
tyaktvā karmaphalāsaṅgaṃ nityatrptō nirāśrayaḥ |
karmaṇyabhipravṛttō'pi naiva kiñcit karōti saḥ || 4.20 ||

Grihastha āśrami jñāni is so glorious that he lives amidst activity and relationship but still he is still like the lotus leaf in water, unaffected by that; in the third chapter, Krishna gives the example of Janaka Maharaja, who was in the society, but he was untainted. These are all glorification of what āśrama; grihasthāśrama; karmaṇyabhipravṛttōha; very much involved; and in the next verse, sanyāsam karmanam ca śaṁsasi; you are also glorifying the renunciate; the one who has given up all the karmas. Where did Krishna glorify him; in the next verse itself;

निराशीर्यतचित्तात्मा त्यक्तसर्वपरिग्रहः ।
शारीरं केवलं कर्म कुर्वन्नाप्नोति किल्बिषम् ॥ ४.२१ ॥ nirāśīryatacittātmā tyaktasarvaparigrahaḥ |
śārīraṃ kēvalaṃ karma kurvanna"pnōti kilbiṣam || 4.21 ||

Krishna uses the word tyaktasarvaparigrahaḥ, one who has given up all the possessions and relationships which is the lifestyle of sanyāsa; him also you glorify; therefore karmanām sanyāsam śaṁsasi, yōgam ca; Śankarācārya says: yōgam ca, anushtanam cha śaṁsasi; performance of karma you are glorifying; renunciation of karma you are glorifying, you are blowing hot and cold; like the politicians election campaign. Full of contradictions.

So Krishna tell me; what should I do. So यत् श्रेयः एतयोः yat śrēyaḥ ētayōḥ; between these two lifestyles tell me which one is better; do not ask me to do both; it is like asking me to have the cake and eat the cake. I cannot follow both because, they are diagonally opposite; grihastha āśrama and sanyāsa āśrama; karma anuṣṭānam and karma tyāga and diagonally opposite to perform the karma and to be in the grihastha āśrama is opposed to sanyāsa āśrama and to be in the sanyāsa āśrama is opposed to grihastha āśrama; therefore I cannot parallelly follow life of activity and life of seclusion.

If you stay in Society, seclusion is not possible; if you are in seclusion, you cannot be in society; therefore I cannot follow both and therefore I have to necessarily chose one of the two; therefore ētayōḥ ēkam; between these two lifestyle, very careful, not between two sādānās; in sādānās there is no choice; everybody has to follow both karma yōga and jñāna yōga; here the choice is with regard to what, lifestyle between these two lifestyles, tell me ekam; tell me which one is better;

And then do not make vishy washy statement, it is also OK; that is also OK; do not give me evasive answer; सुनिश्चितम् तन्मे ब्रूहि suniścitam tanmē brūhi; if you want to take time for thinking, I will have a cup of coffee and come and wait!; but do not ask me to decide; I want to give the decision making to you; you think over and tell me what I should do; so tan suniścitam mē brūhi; so this is Arjuna's question; and Krishna wants to again teach; how much patience is required; to repeat the same thing again and again; Krishna out of compassion, repeats the same as though it is new topic. Because if Krishna tells that I have already taught this like that person, in that wedding concert, generally nobody listens; because it is meant for commadarie, speaking to each other, etc. So these people nobody to appreciate, there was only person sitting in front and nodding the head; and the eyes are open; and therefore he was not sleeping. It is not nodding out of sleep. He thought at least one person is listening; and therefore he did todi raga alapana for one hour; this fellow was saying sabhash, wonderful, and all those things; and after the alapana, ragam, talam pallavi, tani avarthanam, and this person sends a chit, I hear that your todi raga is wonderful; can you please sing that for me; So if this singer does not commit suicide, it is only because of powerful prārabdham; Similarly, Krishna cannot say that I have talked about that only in the last three chapters, Arjuna will feel bad and therefore as though it is a fresh topic, again Krishna starts from LKG. So he says:

संन्यासः कर्मयोगश्च निःश्रेयसकरावुभौ ।

तयोस्तु कर्मसंन्यासात् कर्मयोगो विशिष्यते ॥ ५.२ ॥

śrībhagavānuvāca

sannyāsaḥ karmayōgaśca niḥśrēyasakarāvubhau |

tayōstu karmasannyāsātkarmayōgō viśiṣyatē || 5.2 ||

श्री भगवान् उवाच śrī bhagavān uvāca The Lord said उभौ ubhau both संन्यासः sannyāsaḥ sanyāsa च कर्मयोगः ca karmayōgaḥ and karmayōga निःश्रेयसकरौ niḥśreyasakarau are conducive to liberation तु तयोः tu tayoh However, among these two, कर्मयोगः karmayōgaḥ karmayōga विशिष्यते viśiṣyate is better कर्मसन्न्यासात् karmasanyāsāt than sannyasa

2. The Lord said – Both sanyāsa and karma yōga are conducive to Liberation. However, among these two, Karmayōga is better than sanyāsa.

So first Krishna points out that both āśramas are equally good; because as far as plus and minus points are concerned, every āśrama has got its own plus and minuses. That is the nature of the world; that is why in the vēdānta, the world is called dvandva; it is a beautiful name; dvandva means nothing in the creation is absolutely good; everything in the creation will have its own minus points; only that bank is better than this bank; rented house is better or owned house; interview both types and they will come out with the problems; in rented house, we have to vacate; whereas the owner is worried that you will claim the house; and therefore you want to own the house, if you want the house, there are other set of problems; so which is better; everything has wonderful points and everything has minus points also; and therefore Krishna says both āśramas are equally good; संन्यासः कर्मयोगः च उभौ निःश्रेयसकरो karmayōgaḥ saṁnyāsaḥ ca ubhau niḥśreyasakarau.

Both āśramas are equally good for following your sādānā; which sādānā; both the sādānā; karma yōga sādānā and jñāna yōga sādānā; You will find in grihastha āśrama; karma yōga can be efficiently followed, but for jñāna yōga the obstacles are more, because you require an undistracted life; in grihasthāśrama, the duties are all seen as obstacles; to attend this wedding; that funeral; that function, etc. visitors; phone, not able to open the book, etc. therefore in grihastha āśrama, karma yōga can be ideally followed; for jñāna yōga; you do not have quiet time; in sanyāsa āśrama karma yōga cannot be ideally followed because he does not have the resources to do lot of karmas; there is no money with them; he cannot do any good karma; he has to manage with limited activities, like japa, pūja, susrusa, etc. therefore there are certain advantages in following some sādānās; and certain disadvantages in following certain other sādānās.

but in both you can follow the sādānās and attain liberation; therefore ubau api niḥśreyasakarau; niḥśreyasameans mōkṣa; in both āśramas one can follow the sādānā and attain liberation.

So if both are equal, then you cannot talk about inferiority or superiority, but still one thing is possible; what is that; with regard to a particular person and the mental make up, we can say for this particular person this āśrama is safer; for the other particular person, this āśrama is more conducive; like asking whether science group is better, economic group or biology group is better or home science is better or nutrition; all sciences are equally good; but we can ask the question for me, which is better; for some people mathematics, will not come at any cost; for others history; or some other thing, literature or something.

So therefore even though objectively all sciences are equally good and wonderful and useful, for my mental make up I can ask, which is better group for me. Similarly śāstra also talks about which one is better with regard to the nature or mental make up of a person.

And what Krishna wants to say is sanyāsa āśrama requires a particular mental make up which is not that easy; sanyāsa āśrama requires a particular mental make up which is not that easy; if that mental make up is there; sanyāsa āśrama is wonderful; but if that mental make up is not there; sanyāsa āśrama can be terrible; sanyāsa āśrama by itself is neither wonderful nor terrible; for an unprepared person it is dangerous and for a prepared person, it is wonderful; and Krishna says for majority of people, to have the mental make up for sanyāsa āśrama is not that easy. Therefore, Krishna says: for majority, life of activity, grihasthaāśrama is safer and ideal;

And therefore Krishna says: तयोस्तु कर्मसंन्यासात्कर्मयोगो विशिष्यते tayōstu karmasaṁnyāsātkarmayōgō viśiṣyatē; grihastha āśrama life is superior and better than karma sanyāsa; than sanyāsa āśrama; for whom?; for most of the people. And that is why in the vēdās also, there are two statements, one is the general rule for the entire humanity and there is a particular rule for exceptions; Jabala upaniṣad; Śankarācārya repeatedly quotes: bramhacarya samapya grihibhavet; grihibhuthava vani bhavet; vaniboothva, praprajat; the general rule is one goes to grihastha āśrama from brahmacharya āśrama.

This is the general rule; athava; every rule has got an exception, which one you say first; general or exception; always present the general rule only first; the upaniṣad also presents the general rule applicable to majority; like the rule, if the green comes you should go and if the red comes you should stop. but there are particular cases, some cars with red light on the top, or whatever you call it; ambulance or minister or something like that; the signals are not relevant; exceptions; so therefore the upaniṣad says: athava; itharatha yatha ahareva vrajet; thatha ahareva pravrajat; from brahmacarya āśrama itself one can take sanyāsa āśrama; and when a person wants to do that exceptionally śāstra tells it should be done with the help of a guru's advice; that is why sanyāsa āśrama traditionally given only when there is concurrence between both the guru and the śiṣya; if the guru feels śiṣya is ready, guru tells you can take sanyāsa; and he asks the question; how do you feel; and sometimes śiṣya tells, I am afraid, I do not want to take now; I will take later or I do not want to take at all; even though the guru advises, śiṣya withdraws and sometime śiṣya is all enthusiastic I will take, guru says not necessary, you go through this āśrama; the idea is that there should be concurrence between the guru and the śiṣya; because it involves lot of risk also.

And the greatest risk is sanyāsa āśrama is one way traffic. One traffic means; one can go to sanyāsa āśrama from brahmacarya āśrama; one can go to the sanyāsa from grihasthāśrama; from vanaprastha; from all these there is a route, but there is no route to sanyāsa to any of the other three; therefore it is an irreversible decision; And that is with regard to euthanasia and other things also there is a big problem; that is why the Government is hesitating; wherever irreversible steps are involved, one has to be extra careful.

Therefore Krishna says: तयोस्तु tayōstu; between the two āśramas; karma sanyāsāt, better than sanyāsa āśrama, karma yōgaḥ viśiṣyatē; grihasthāśrama excels, it is better choice. not better choice for all; for majority of the people.

And that is why we say Gītā is meant for the general public. whereas the upanisads always addresses the mature people, and therefore you will find upanishad always glorify sanyāsa. Na karmana prajaya danena, tyage naikena amruthathva manasu; vēdānta vijñāna sunichartharha sanyāsa yōgāth; you will find full of sanyāsa glorification; and if you read Śankara bhāṣya, 10 times more; Śankarācārya if you say man means sanyāsi.

That is why I do not teach bhāṣyam in the public, because repeatedly he talks about sanyāsa; you will develop doubts; Gītā is very good because the teacher is grihastha; who is the teacher Krishna, what type of grihastha, 16008 remember, Krishna 16008 wives that means maha grihastha, Arjuna is not inferior, wives everywhere he goes; he is also maha grihastha; Vyāsācārya is a grihastha; teaching grihastha compiled by grihastha and therefore it is ideal to teach the society; कर्मयोगे विशिष्यते karmayōgō viśiṣyatē; you can all be happy. I am in minority now;

3. O! Arjuna ! He who does not desire (and) does not hate is to be known as a permanent sanyasi. Because, one who is beyond the pairs of opposites is completely freed from bondage effortlessly.

Now that Krishna has recommended Grihastha āśrama. Then a person may wonder, is there a method by which I can get the advantages of both āśramas; kundrattathi buddhi; our buddhi; we want to have both; cake and also to eat; is there any method by which I can be a grihastha and also enjoy the advantages of sanyāsa āśrama also. Krishna knows Arjuna must be thinking of that; Krishna also tells there is a method; And what is that; He says: handle your raga dvesha; raga dvesha alone makes grihastha āśrama burdensome; there are so many situations which are beyond your control; because in grihastha āśrama your life is governed by so many people around; for Sanyāsi there is no problem; His life is not governed by wife; not children; his life is not influenced by many factors because he does not have relationship with many factors; but in the case of grihastha āśrama there are so many factors both animate and inanimate; and beings as well they as jāmātha daśamō grihaḥ; a grihastha āśrama has got 9 planets governing his life and his son in law is the 10th planet; because what is planet that which influences you that which you cannot influence. A planet is that controls you and which you cannot control; son in law is exactly like that; whatever he does affects your daughter at the same time you cannot do anything also; Like that there are so many relationship; when you get married to a girl; you are not putting knot in one neck; parallelly you are putting the knot in many necks; so many thing; generally you do not know because they are hidden; you do not see that; it is not three, three thousand knots are putting; so there are so many infinite factors, so if you develop rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ likes and dislikes your life will become miserable. Therefore, what you have to learn is how to manage your rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ; so that whether your likes and dislikes are fulfilled or not, you learn to adjust and manage; which requires tremendous strength;

And therefore Krishna says a grihastha is a sanyāsi, if he has learnt to handle likes and dislikes; viruppu veruppu; when some relationship lands on Sunday evening before coming to Gītā class; what to do; not anything; you have to sit biting the teeth; but some people do an intelligent thing; they bring that person also to the class. but if it is geetha class, I do not mind; anybody can understand; but if it is an upaniṣad class, it becomes my problem; because when I look at their face, they do not understand, because upaniṣad is a higher state; you have solved your problem and the problem is given to me; so therefore, handle your rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ; grihastha āśrama is equal to sanyāsa āśrama; nivṛtta ragāsyā grihaṁ tapōvanam. The house itself is a āśrama who has managed his rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ. How to manage rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ he is not talking here; some other context we will discuss. That is trick.

More details in the next class.

Om

From Lord Krishna's teaching in the previous three chapters, we came to know that there is no choice with regard to spiritual sādhanās, especially karma yōga and jñāna yōga. You should remember that all spiritual sādhanās are broadly classified into two; one is jñāna yōga, which is the pursuit of jñānam, and the second is the karma yōga, which is meant for preparing the mind for knowledge; and all the sādhanās that we do to prepare the mind will come under karma yōga only; even Pathanjali's aṣṭāṅga yōga will come under karma yōga only; all forms of meditations we do to refine and sharpen the mind; so all forms of sādhanās, including aṣṭāṅga yōga and varieties of meditations; they also come under karma yōga only. And even the word bhakthi yōga depending upon the meaning of Bhakthi will come under one of these two yōgas only. When bhakthi yōga is understood as pooja, or any type of saguna dhyānam, all that type of bhakthi yōga will come under karma yōga only.

And bhakthi yōga means the śāstric study, so the word bhakthi yōga is used in different meanings in śāstrā; and one of the meanings of bhakthi yōga is śāstric study; and when bhakthi yōga has the meaning of śāstric study, which we will see in the 12th chapter of the Gītā, there the bhakthi yōga must be equated to jñāna yōga. So thus the word bhakthi yōga is common for both karma yōga and jñāna yōga; lower level of bhakthi yōga is called karma yōga; higher level of bhakthi yōga is called jñāna yōga; thus there is no exclusive bhakthi yōga, separate from karma yōga and jñāna yōga; and therefore all the sādhanās will fall within these two alone.

And according to the scriptures, everyone will have to go through karma yōga to prepare the mind, and everyone has to necessarily come to jñāna yōga to attain liberation; and therefore I said in the last class, there is no choice with regard to sādanās. But we do have a choice with regard to the lifestyle that we adopt, either we can be in the society and we can pursue both karma and jñānam; or we can be outside the society as a sanyāsi, and follow both the sādanās; and in fact there is also a third option, which I told in the third chapter, what is the third option: Be in the society, follow karma yōga; get out of the society and follow jñāna yōga; these are the three options.

Can you see the three options; One option is: be a grihastha; follow karma and jñānam;

Option No.2 is do not become a grihastha at all, from brahmacharya āśrama straight away take away to sanyāsa and in sanyāsa āśrama, follow both purification and knowledge; this is the second option;

the third option is: enter Grihastha āśrama, follow karma yōga, quit grihastha āśrama (do not be afraid, it is only an option) and become a sanyāsi and follow jñāna yōga;

In fact third option is really the vision of the Vēda; Vēda wants us to go through all the āśramas; but the compromised version is what: Be in grihastha āśrama itself and follow both karma yōga and jñāna yōga and therefore Krishna wants to say: in lifestyles you have very many options, but of all those options, best āśrama is grihastha āśrama. So in the election, Krishna is going to vote for grihastha āśrama, therefore you can all be happy; only I am in the defeated party and therefore Krishna said better tayōstu karmasannyāsāt karmayōgō viśiṣyatē; karma sannyāsāt; means sanyāsa āśramāt; karma yōgat means grihastha āśrama viśiṣyatē; is superior.

Then naturally the question will come, how can a person follow spirituality in grihastha āśrama, when there are lot of problems all over. So for that Krishna says, grihastha āśrama by itself is not a problem. Grihastha āśrama by itself is not a problem, if you know how to handle grihastha āśrama; then you will have the advantage of grihastha āśrama and you can avoid the problems of grihastha āśrama; and how to do that?

In grihastha āśrama, the primary problem, in fact in any āśrama, but especially in grihastha āśrama, is rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ; it is the likes and dislikes that we have with regard to everything that we are involved; we have got an expectation from everything we are associated with, right from the type of house, and thereafterwards we have expectations from the spouse and the ideal spouse, our imagination is such that even if Bhagavān comes, it will not work; everyone has his own pluses and minus; children, you have got tremendous expectation; thus as a grihastha I am involved in so many thing and with regard to everything I have got an ideal in my mind; and when things fall short of my ideal, it disturbs me tremendously; therefore we should know how to handle attachment and aversion; and therefore Krishna says: यो न द्वेष्टि न काङ्क्षति yō na dvēṣṭi na kāṅkṣati; that intelligent householder, who knows to know to manage the rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ, dvēṣṭi refers to dveṣaḥ; kāṅkṣati refers to rāgaḥ; the one who knows how to handle; one who conquers, one who is a master of விருப்பு வெறுப்பு; na dvēṣṭi, that person is nitya sanyāsi. Krishna tells such a grihastha will have as much peace of mind, as a sanyāsi can have.

What is the advantage in sanyāsa āśrama; sanyāsi does not have any duties and all, for wife or children, and therefore he will have a quality time or quality mind to pursue vēdānta; that is the advantage of sanyāsa āśrama; he need not bother about children's education or their marriage, all those things; therefore the advantage of sanyāsa āśrama is a light mind. Krishna says if you know how to handle rāgaḥ dveṣaḥ; you can also enjoy the same light mind as a sanyāsi enjoys; and therefore such a grihastha as good as a sanyāsi. Only he does not have kāvi; kāvi_less sanyāsi; who is kāvi_less sanyāsi; the one who has mastered the rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ; therefore, स नित्यसंन्यासी sa nityasannyāsi. That is why in the stories and all, they quote Janaka; how Janaka was learning vēdānta from his guru; along with other sanyāsis, and these sanyāsis looked down upon grihastha Janaka; because there is problem; some sanyāsis do have a problem of looking down upon grihastha; we are all sanyāsis! So sanyāsis were looking down upon Janaka; and the Guru wanted to reveal the superiority of Janaka, and he created an illusion of a huge fire accident, in which the palace also was burning; the thatched kutia of the sanyāsis were also burning, with their meager dress of extra koupinam; only one is there; nothing else; but when the report came, that the whole place is on fire; these so called sanyāsis, they were so attached to the thatched shed and their meager dress that they ran to save those possessions; and it seems Janaka was listening to the vēdānta teaching; and he was completely unaware of all those things and these sanyāsis went and saw that the whole thing was an illusion, the guru created to teach a lesson and when they came back, they found that still the class is continuing and you know who is the only student; Janaka. So Krishna says: saḥ nityasannyāsī; Kāvi does not guarantee detachment. So a person can have kāsāya vasthram and a person can have external dress and internal attachment; and therefore Krishna says a grihastha is a inner sanyāsī, if he has mastered rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ. And here also we have to note an important point, Krishna does not say, you should not have rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ. Krishna does not say you should not have rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ; because a human being cannot exist without rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ. We certainly will have certain likes and we certainly will have certain dislikes. As our Swamiji beautifully says, even Gods have got their liked-musical instrument; Saraswati does not choose flute; Krishna does not choose veena; they also like particular instrument; they also like particular vāhanam; Vināyakar chose what you see, the moonchor, the rat. And therefore Krishna himself said in the third chapter, indriyasyēndriyasyārthē rāgadvēṣau vyavasthitau. You will certainly have certain preferences in life; that is inevitable. In fact the very definition of your personality is based on your like and dislikes; whenever somebody wants to interview someone, and you want to know the personality of that person, they will ask the question, which book you like, which dress you like, which author you look, which music you like, northern, southern, western; how do you define a personality, in terms of likes and dislikes only. Therefore Krishna does not want you to get rid of likes and dislikes. Krishna says do not be a slave of your likes and dislikes. If you are able to fulfill them, wonderful and if you are not able to fulfill them; you should know how to face them; so mastery of likes and dislikes is converting them into non-binding desires.

I have discussed this in the third chapter; have desires, but make it dharmic and non-binding. Non-binding desires means what: I want my child to become an IAS officer, or I want him to become this and that; any parent and every parent can dream; and you do not know what he or she is going to become; and with all your effort, your son may end as a sanyāsi like me; my parents would never have perhaps dreamt; they had seen so many dreams and ultimately it ended in my becoming a sanyāsi. So how do you know; therefore have dreams; but be ready to face whatever happens; this is called management of rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ; not destruction; but management of rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ if you have, you are a sanyāsi.

Therefore Krishna says, Hey Mahābāho; hey Arjuna, निर्द्वन्द्वो nirdvandvō, that person who has managed the pairs of opposites consisting of rāgaḥ and dveṣaḥ, lābha and naṣṭa, māna and apamāna, samyōga and viyōga; all these pairs, the one who can handle; such a person is called nirdvandva; a master of the pairs of opposites; and such a person बन्धात्प्रमुच्यते bandhāt pramucyate; he will or she will definitely attain mōkṣa; without going to sanyāsa āśrama, remaining in grihastha āśrama, such a person can attain mōkṣa. How: of course, following his two sādhanās, first karma yōga and next jñāna yōga; there is no escape from jñāna yōga; being in grihastha āśrama, attending the Saturday-Sunday classes; in those days, these classes were not available; if you have to study Vēdānta, you have to go to Rishikesh.

So you are supposed to go there; instead we have come here. So therefore, wonderful; this is gurukula; make use of this opportunity; you are following jñāna yōga remaining in grihastha āśrama; and how सुखम् sukham; comfortably; you can go and eat at home; you do not have any problems of sanyāsa āśrama; at the same time, you get the benefit of jñānam. How lucky you are; so therefore, sukham means effortlessly, they get liberated.

4. Ignorant (people) assert that samnyasa and karmayōga are different, not the wise. By resorting to any one of them properly, one attains the results of both.

Therefore Krishna concludes, both āśramas are equally efficacious. Krishna does not talk about four āśramas here. He is talking only two āśramas into account; here āśrama means way of life; and the two āśramas in Krishna's mind are Grihastha āśrama, known as pravṛtti marga; and sanyāsa āśrama, known as nivṛtti marga, life of seclusion. And Krishna does not take the other āśramas because, brahmacharya āśrama is more a preparation for grihastha āśrama; so more it is a stepping stone for grihastha āśrama and therefore brahmacharya āśrama is included in grihastha āśrama. Similarly vānaprastha āśrama is a stepping stone for sanyāsa āśrama; and therefore vānaprastha āśrama is taken as integrally included in sanyāsa āśrama; therefore the four āśramas, Krishna has essentially divided into two; grihastha and sanyāsa and Krishna says both ways of life are equally efficacious; nobody should compare and develop a superiority complex, neither should a grihastha feel that he is superior to sanyāsi nor should a sanyāsi feel that he is superior to grihastha.

And Krishna strongly warns, if a person says one of these two is superior to the other, that person is ignorant; बालाः प्रवदन्ति bālāḥ pravadanti; bālāḥ means childish people; immature people, uninformed people; only they pravadanti; pravadanti means prattle, உளரல் uḷaral in Tamil; do not listen to it; so bālāḥ pravadanti; only the ignorant people prattle; what do they say: साङ्ख्ययोगो पृथक् sāṅkhyayogo pṛthak, sāṅkhya means sanyāsa āśrama, the life of seclusion, yōga means grihastha āśrama, life of responsibility, life in society. These two āśramas are pṛthak; means they are separate. They are not equal; they are unequal; one is superior to other; iti bālāḥ pravadanti;

Then what about the informed people. न पण्डिताः na paṇḍitāḥ; wise people never will say that. And that is why in our tradition, we have got both grihastha guru śiṣya parampara also; we have got also sanyāsi guru śiṣya parampara also. In Mundakōpaniṣad we saw:

ॐ ब्रह्मा देवानां प्रथमः सम्बभूतः विश्वस्य कर्ता भुवनस्य गोप्ता ।

स ब्रह्मविद्यां सर्वविद्याप्रतिष्ठांमथर्वाय ज्येष्ठपुत्राय प्राह ॥

ōm brahmā dēvānām prathamah sambabhūtaḥ viśvasya kartā bhuvanasya goptā |
sa brahyavidhyām sarvavidhyāpratiṣṭhāmatharvāya jyēṣṭhaputrāya prāha ||

Thus in Mundakōpaniṣad; a guru śiṣya parampara is given, wherein Guru is father, śiṣya is the son. Therefore they are grihasthas or son; Father and son; pacca grihastha; he taught his son, he taught his son; thus in the Taittiriya upaniṣad:

भृगुर्वै वारुणिः | वरुणं पितरमुपससार |

अधीहि भगवो ब्रह्मेति | तस्मा एतत्प्रोवाच |

bhṛgurvai vāruṇiḥ | varuṇam pitaramupasasāra |

again father teaches the son; And in fact, among all the upaniṣads, the most important portion is called tatvamasi prakaraṇam; where the teaching of tatvamasi comes; and do you know this teaching took place between who and who; again father and son. श्वेतकेतुर्हारुण्येय आस तँ ह पितोवाच śvētakēturhāruṇēya āsa taṁ ha pitōvāca. taṁ ha pitōvāca; the greatest teaching of tattvamasi took place in grihastha āśrama; between father and son. So thus, the scriptures talk about the grihasthāśrama jñāni parampara, as well as sanyāsa āśrama jñāni parampara; that these two paramparas existed indicate that you can get jñānam in any of the āśramas.

And therefore Krishna says एकमप्यास्थितः ēkamapyāsthitaḥ; take to any one of the lifestyles; according to one's inclination; and one's prārabdhaḥ also plays a role; that is why in the jātakam also it says sanyāsi jātakam; so that is how even in the mathas and all; when they choose the śiṣya, they not only observe their family and their what you call character, their age, everything, and they also see their jatakam; because even in the horoscope that sanyāsa is given; therefore so many factors are there influencing a persons āśrama also; and therefore according to your prārabdhaḥ; according to your inclination take to any āśrama; but what is important is one has to stick to it sincerely.

malittalum niṭṭalum vēṇṭām; ulakam palittatai olittu viṭu.

so maḷittalum niṭṭalum vēṇṭām; you need not go on changing your hair style. What is sanyāsa? Shaving your hair; you shave your head and all those things; they are not going to give you jñānam. Not that if there is no hair on the head, knowledge will directly penetrate without obstacle. No obstacle you know! Is it gaṅga jal which got struck in Śiva's jada? No. So therefore, external changes do not matter; inner transformation is important; therefore ēkamapyāsthitaḥ; following any of the āśrama, efficiently, सम्यग्भयोर्विन्दते फलम् samyagubhayōrvindatē phalam; a person will get the result, which is common to both the āśrama. And what is the result common to both āśrama; Jñānam; so jñānam is the common goal of a grihastha also; of a sanyāsi also.

Continuing.

यत्साङ्ख्यैः प्राप्यते स्थानं तद्योगैरपि गम्यते ॥

एकं साङ्ख्यं च योगं च यः पश्यति स पश्यति ॥ ५.५॥

yatsāṅkhyaiḥ prāpyatē sthānaṁ tadyōgairapi gamyatē |

ēkaṁ sāṅkhyam ca yōgam ca yaḥ paśyati sa paśyati || 5.5 ||

तत् स्थानम् tat sthānam That goal यत् प्राप्यते yat prāpyate which is attained
साङ्ख्यैः sāṅkhyaiḥ by sannyasis गम्यते gamyatē is reached योगैः अपि yōgaiḥ api
by karmayōgis also सः यः पश्यति saḥ yaḥ paśyati He who sees साङ्ख्यं च योगं च sāṅkhyam ca yōgam ca and karmayōga sannyasa एकम् ekam as the same (effect) पश्यति paśyati sees (properly).

5. That goal, which is attained by sannyasis, is attained by karma yōgis also. He who sees sannyasa and Karma yōga as the same (effect) sees (properly).

So the same idea Krishna reinforces in this sloka also; pointing out that sankyaihi स्थानं प्राप्यते sthānaṁ prāpyatē; sāṅkhyaiḥ means sanyāsina; sthānaṁ means mokṣam; sanyāsis do attain mōkṣa; by following karma yōga and jñāna yōga; purificatory sādhanās as well as sādhanās for knowledge; and what are the purificatory sādhanās; I told you the other day, Sanyāsis have also got their āśrama karmānis, which is indicated by their danda; just as for other people, the sacred thread represent their religious sādhanās; for a sanyāsi, sacred thread is removed, it is removed by danda; they have got danda tarpaṇam, japa, pārāyana; guru śuśrūṣā, etc.; they all will contribute to citta śuddhiḥ; and not only citta śuddhiḥ; they have study the śāstrā also; therefore sanyāsis attain mōkṣa by purifying and knowing.

So then Arjuna will say, I will become sanyāsi; because he wants to become a sanyāsi. So immediately Krishna says: तत् योगैः अपि गम्यते tat yogaiḥ api gamyate; grihasthas also get the same result, tat means tat sthānam; and what do you mean by sthānam, mōkṣam, lakhṣyam; the same destination, can be reached by yogaiḥ; yōgaha means here, grihasth āśramabhi, by the grihasthaāśrama people also; sāṅkhyaihi means turiya āśramaibhi here, sanyāsisibhihi yat mokṣa sthānam prapyathe, tat evam mokṣam sthānam grihasthāśramabhihi prapyathe eva.

And can you say the sanyāsi's mōkṣa is little bit better than grihastha's. Mōkṣa is always one; so sanyāsis will get a bigger infinite; and I will get smaller infinite; mōkṣa means infinite; there are no two infinities; there is no difference in the mōkṣa; So tat yōgai api gamyatē; and therefore sankyam yōgam cha ekam bhavathi. Therefore both sanyāsa āśrama and grihastha āśrama are ēkam, ēkam means eka phalakam; they are equally efficient.

And as I said in the last class, as far as plus and minus points are concerned, in both āśramas, plus and minus points are there; only the type of plus and minus points will vary; exactly like having your own house and rented house. We can have a patti mandram here; சொன்த வீடு நல்லதா வாடகை வீடு நல்லதா conta viṭu nallatā vāṭakai viṭu nallatā and each one will come and say வாடகை வீடு நல்லது என்று சொல்லி வாய்ப்புக்கு நன்றி கூறி விடைபெறுகிறேன். vāṭakai viṭu nallatu enṇu colli vāyppukku naṇṇi kūri viṭaipeṇṇu. Everything has got plus and minus; therefore ēkam iti yaḥ paśyati; the one who sees this fact; आश्रयोर् एक फलत्वम् यः पश्यति, सः पश्यति āśrayor ēka phalatvam yaḥ paśyati, saḥ paśyati; that person alone truly sees the other people have got wrong perception.

And all these things Krishna is emphasising for what purpose; Krishna does not want Arjuna to go away from the battlefield and Arjuna somehow or the other wants to run away; It is a tug of war; this man is running and Krishna is pulling this side; and if Krishna says sanyāsa āśrama is superior, Arjuna will run away; therefore Krishna says, the one who sees both as equal, he alone has got the right vision.

Continuing.

संन्यासस्तु महाबाहो दुःखमाप्तुमयोगतः ।
योगयुक्तो मुनिर्ब्रह्म निचिरेणाधिगच्छति ॥ ५.६ ॥ sannyāsastu mahābāhō duḥkhamāptumayōgataḥ |
yōgayuktō munirbrahma nacirēṇādhigacchati | | 5.6 | |

माहाबाहो māhābāho Oh Arjuna! संन्यासः saṁnyāsaḥ Sannyasa दुःखम् आप्तुम्
duḥkham āptum is difficult to attain अयोगतः ayōgataḥ without karmayōga तु मुनिः tu muniḥ But the devout योगयुक्तः yōgayuktaḥ karmayōgi अधिगच्छति
adhigacchati attains ब्रह्म brahma Brahman निचिरेण nacireṇa before long.

6. O! Arjuna, Sanyāsa is difficult to attain without Karma Yōga, but the devout Karma yōgi attains Brahman before long.

Here Krishna adds a new information. Until now he said both āśramas are equally efficacious, as far as they are concerned, they are looked at objectively; like different subject matter that is there in an university; physics is superior or chemistry is superior or mathematics is superior; you can never say one science is superior to the other because every science is beautiful by itself; and as long as utility is concerned, all the sciences are equally useful.

If you study your life, every moment, chemistry is involved, physics is involved, mathematics is involved; even though all the sciences are equal, if I have to choose one of them; a particular one may be good for me, because of my mental make up, inclination; not that objectively the sciences are inferior or superior but my mental make up may make one of them more conducive to me. So like the whether condition; there are certain places where there is dry heat; and there are certain places where there is humid heat; which is better; if you are in one place, the other will seem better; both are equal, but you can analyse which particular one is better for my constitution; for some people dry heat is OK; many people cannot survive in Madras; because it is humid weather; therefore objectively they are all the same having equal plus and minus point, but depending upon my personality, I may enjoy physics more, I may enjoy mathematics, or I may enjoy economic, I may enjoy statistics, I may enjoy history; or I may enjoy so many things; fine arts, music, there is degree in music. Earlier it was not there; now it is there; BA Music, MA Music; etc. everything is there.

Similarly, Krishna says even though both āśramas are equally efficacious, from the standpoint of a person's preparation level; we can find out which one is better and if you are going to study from that angle, Krishna says for a mature and prepared mind, sanyāsa āśrama is OK, fine; it is wonderful; whereas for an unprepared mind, sanyāsa āśrama is not, not because the āśrama has got some problem but because of my mental immaturity, the life may appear lonely; who is there for me? whatever it be, who is there for me? No one to care for me, is there. And if you are a sanyāsi, they come and tell their problems to you; no one listens to your problems! Nobody will ask: do you have any problem. So therefore a person can miss companionship; there are people who get married at the age of 80; for what purpose; companionship. So it need not be physical or any psychological reason; it can be for any reason. In fact a person can become more and more lonely as a person grows more and more old; and it can lead to tremendous depression; in fact one lady was telling; they were in America; in America; they were in a lonely place, generally itself population is 1/3 and the area is 3 times bigger or 4 times; more area, less population; normally itself no. of people are less; they are in an area, where people are still not there; and the husband goes to work; now it is totally silence; and she felt so lonely, and so depressed and created so many problems for the poor husband; and they were almost about to divorce also; so much quarrel; because of tremendous depression; you may say it is silent like āśrama; another person says it is silent like cremation ground. Silence remaining the same, for one it is an āśrama silence, for another one it is a cremation ground silence. And you know what happens; somebody advised to come back to India; and she is in Madras, not any one of you, do not worry, whenever I give the example, I will not give from the current class; all my examples will be like that only; all your stories will be told in Anna Nagar! OK. If you do not want to tell your stories anywhere, do not share it with me. Now she tells that even though my husband goes, I hear lot of car, bus noise; that itself is psychological health for me; that sound is comfortable; And in India there is no shortage of noise; anywhere you go, noisy; so for someone silence may be wonderful; but for someone silence may cause tremendous depression; Bhṛthari says:

केशाम्चित् एतत् मद मोह नाशनम्
स्तानम् विविक्तम् एमिनाम् विमुक्तये
कामादुराणाम् अति काम कारणम्

Jñānam sathaam mana matati karanam, keshamchit etat mada moha nasanam;
sthanam viviktham, eminaam vimukthaye;
kamaduranam ati kama karanam.

A silent place for a mature person, it is a blessing; he will think of ātma brahman, but the very silent place, for another person, it can rake up all the inner problems and other things can come; and one may go crazy and therefore Krishna says, to enjoy sanyāsa āśrama, one requires a level of mind which is not that easy. Therefore, हे माहाबाहो संन्यासः आप्तुम् दुःखम् hey māhābāho saṁnyāsaḥ duḥkham āptum. So enjoying a sanyāsa way of life is not that easy. Even though when we have problems all over, we may think that one has to escape from this; but generally a person who is unhappy in grihastha āśrama and jump to sanyāsa āśrama, it is 99% jumping from frying pan to fire; if everything is fine and one quits that is maturity; if one quits when there is problem, that is a problem. and therefore dukham aptum ayōgatha; whereas योगयुक्तो मुनि yōga yuktō muni; so that munihi, munihi means a contemplative minded person, who loves seclusion, who has such a mind is called munihi; mananāt munihi; mounāt munihi; Munihi, two derivationasss for muni; the one who enjoys mounam; because in sanyāsa āśrama; there is no much scope, other members are not there; and for many people it is difficult now to talk; and if there is nobody else to talk, they will start talking themselves; you might have watched, people talking to themselves; while walking on the road, they will talk. When there is a pressure, you have to talk at least to the wall; therefore muniḥ means the one who enjoys mounam; muniḥ is one who enjoys contemplation; so that person who has got a contemplative mind, how, yōga yukthaḥ; by the practice of yōga, either in this life or in the previous life. So the one who has prepared the mind through the appropriate sādhanās, saha muniḥ; ब्रह्म अधिगच्छति brahma adhigacchati; such a sanyāsi will attain Brahman; will attain mōkṣa; नचिरेण nacirēṇa; nacirēṇa before long, that person will attain.

And therefore Krishna's advice is for majority of people grihastha āśrama is ideal; and for a minority, sanyāsa āśrama is ideal; and also one person may think that he is fit for sanyāsa. That is why I told, invariably sanyāsa is taken with the advice and recommendation of a guru who knows; so when there is concurrence between Śiṣya and guru, then alone sanyāsa is given. And that is why the newspaper also we read so many pseudo-sanyāsi news and after reading many such items, any sanyāsi comes, the public call all those names; so why because such sanyāsi numbers will increase why because they take to sanyāsa without making sure that they are ready for that; therefore why risk; therefore grihastha āśrama is safe; this is Krishna's advice.

Continuing.

योगयुक्तो विशुद्धात्मा विजितात्मा जितेन्द्रियः ।
सर्वभूतात्मभूतात्मा कुर्वन्नपि न लिप्यते ॥ ५.७ ॥
yōgayuktō viśuddhātmā vijitātmā jitēndriyaḥ |
sarvabhūtātmabhūtātmā kurvannapi na lipyatē || 5.7 ||

विजितात्मा जितेन्द्रियः vijitātmā jitendriyaḥ having mastered the body and sense organs विशुद्धात्मा viśuddhātmā the pure minded योगयुक्तः yōgayuktaḥ Karma yōgi सर्वभूतात्मभूतात्मा sarvabhūtātmabhūtātmā (becomes) the Atma which is the self of all things अपि कुर्वन् api kurvan though acting न लिप्यते na lipyate he is not affected.

7. Having mastered the body and sense organs, the pure-minded karmayōgi (becomes) the Atma which is the self of all beings. Though acting, he is not affected.

So up to the 6th verse, Krishna made a comparative study of both āśramas, and he said both āśramas have plus and minus points; both āśramas are equally efficient; but for majority, life of activity is better. With this He concludes the topic of lifestyles.

Now in the following slōkā, Krishna talks about the sādhanās which everyone has to practice irrespective of the lifestyle, wherein there is no option at all; Grihastha also must go through those set of sādhanās; Sanyāsi also must go through those set of sādhanās.

And what are those stages; those stages are beautifully described in this verse; it is a verse of sādhanās. What to do? What we are supposed to do, whether we are grihastha or sanyāsi. What is that? Krishna is now taking a grihastha and He is talking about the stages of sādhanās, because He has already said Grihastha Āśrama is superior. Therefore in His mind, a grihastha is in front; so what all stages he should go through.

First stage is Yōgayukthaḥ; What do you mean by that; karma yōga yukthaha; one should become a karma yōgi first as described in third chapter. I do not want to go to the details of the third chapter, we have already seen; but to put in a nutshell, karma yōgi is one, who balances materialistic pursuits and spiritual pursuits. Karma yōgi is one who does not spend the whole day in earning money only. When the whole life is dedicated to material pursuits, and he says I have no time for religion, no time for scriptural study, no time to follow, but time is there for everything else; and now the number of things for distractions is so many. A karma yōgi knows that every individual is a mixture of matter and spirit; ātma is spirit, anātma is matter; dehi is spirit, deha is matter, we are all a mixture of both of them. That means our life should have a balance between spiritual pursuit and material pursuit; and therefore I should find time for pancha maha yajñās mentioned in the third chapter and this spiritual life is meant for my inner growth. I do have many activities for material acquisitions; nothing wrong; Vēda tells acquire money; nothing wrong in it; but do not think that life is only arta kāma pradhāna; life has also got dharma mokṣa; are you balancing between the two; and it should go in such a way that initially the material pursuit may be more; and spiritual pursuit may be less, because he is making his life; and he has to therefore he has to climb the corporate ladder; have to become the manager; general manager, vice president, president, the more you want to climb, the more time. OK initially you may say you do not have time; but the aim is the proportion must gradually change. It may be material pursuit more; but there should be time for spirituality; and gradually the spiritual pursuit should become more and more dominant and the last stage of life should be spirituality; spirituality; that is how brahmacārya, grihastha; vānaprastha; sanyāsa; how beautifully you decide, whether you physically go through the four āśramas or not; psychologically, initially 75% materialism, 25% spirituality. At least, Swamiji, no time; to come to the Sunday class itself is a big thing; I touch the Gītā book next Sunday before I come to the class; does not matter; but hopefully, you will be able devote more and more time. Not only you have to work in that direction, you should also pray to the Lord, Oh Lord I must be able to gradually urvārumika iva bhandanāt mṛtyor mukṣīya mā mṛtāt. Just as a raw mango ripens and until it ripens it holds on to the tree and once it ripens, it falls. In the same way, initially, I am stuck in all these things and finite and minor things; and a time must come I naturally detach from the finite and the materialist things and I am hooked to the spiritual goal; and this balancing is called yōga yukthatvam; giving importance to inner growth.

That is why I have told you before, what I am is more important than what I have; Initially we are only bothered about what I have and whether we want it or not, to just tell the neighbour, you purchase it; because there is status symbol, comparison; we should also buy because they have purchased; I am more bothered about what I have, less bothered about what I am; what I am should become more and more important; and ultimately a liberated person possesses what;

पाणिद्वये भोक्तुममत्रयन्तः।

कन्थामपि स्त्रीमिव कुत्सयन्तः

कौपीनवन्तः खलुभाग्यवन्तः॥२॥

mūlaṁ tarōḥ kēvalamāśrayantaḥ

pāṇidvayē bhōktumamatrayantaḥ|

kanthāmapi strīmiva kutsayantaḥ

Śankarācārya describes a jñāni who does not possess anything at all but still he is pūrṇa; therefore ultimately what matters is not what I have but what I am; If this importance is understood, I have become a beginning karma yōgi.

And this karma yōgi will gradually become what विशुद्धात्मा viśuddhātmā, viśuddhātmā will get a purer mind where the vairāgyam becomes more and more; he depends less and less on external factors; because he has understood that dependence is saṁsāra; and independence is mōkṣa. Therefore my aim should be not from dependence to more dependence but my aim should be from dependence to less dependence; not only physically even psychologically. I should become independent; which is called detachment; and this detachment or vairāgyam is called viśuddha ātmatvam; because rāgaḥ-attachment is the impurity; detachment is purity and viśuddha ātma rāgaḥ-rahithaha atma; in this context, ātma means mind; therefore rāgaḥrahithaha, atma anthakaranam yasya. bahuvrihi samāsa; this person has got vairāgyam.

And then what will happen. Next class we will see that.

Om

In the first six verses Lord Krishna clarified Arjuna's doubt, regarding grihastha āśrama and sanyāsa āśrama and his teaching was that there is a choice between these two āśramas and therefore, any āśrama can lead a person to the destination viz., mōkṣa; but still Krishna personally suggests that sanyāsa āśrama is a risky āśrama if a person is not mentally prepared for that. And it is a riskier āśrama because it is a one way traffic. A person cannot experiment with sanyāsa āśrama and he cannot say that I do not like, therefore let me come back. In the Bhāgavatham it is very strongly criticised as a wrong action; and strong words are used against it; if a person enters sanyāsa āśrama and renounces his renunciation; and the words used are very strong; it is like the Bhāgavatham uses the word, savai vanthashi apthrapaha; such a person is a shameless person like a person eating what he himself has vomitted; such a powerful word is used; and therefore for a immature person sanyāsa āśrama can prove risky and is riskier because one cannot return back. Whereas in the grihastha āśrama, risks are less; and not only that, after going through grihastha āśrama a person is given freedom to take sanyāsa from grihastha āśrama itself. When a person enters grihastha āśrama, for him two āśramas are still open, he can continue in grihastha āśrama and attain mōkṣa; or after being in grihastha āśrama for sometime, he can take to sanyāsa also, which chance is not in sanyāsa āśrama, therefore Krishna recommends grihastha āśrama for majority of people, this is the essence of the first six verses of the fifth chapter. Any āśrama is OK but grihastha āśrama is preferable.

Having clarified that doubt of Arjuna, now Krishna comes to a different topic and that is the topic of sādhanā and as I have repeatedly said, as far as sādhanā is concerned, there is no choice at all, whether one is grihastha or sanyāsi, one has to initially go through the steps of purification. And therefore in both āśramas, rituals are prescribed; of course in Sanyāsa āśrama, the sādhanās are of a different nature, but in sanyāsa āśrama also, there are sādhanā for purification. In Grihastha āśrama also, there are sādhanās for purification, which is called āśrama dharma.

साधनं प्रभवेत्पुंसां वैराग्यादि चतुष्टयम् ॥३॥

sādhanam prabhavētpuṁsām vairāgyādi catuṣṭayam ॥3॥

Śankarācārya says in his aparōkṣānubhūti; sva varṇāśrama dharmēṇa, every body can get purity of mind by following his or her own varṇa or āśrama; the type of karma will defer; but the phalam is uniform; what is the uniform phalam; citta shuddhi. And having attained citta śuddhiḥ in both the āśramas; all the seekers should thereafter go to which is vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam, and attain mōkṣa, remaining where they are. So these steps of sādhanā are beautifully presented in the seventh verse; what are the steps everyone should go through, irrespective of the āśrama. And Krishna is concentrating on a grihastha, because Krishna has recommended grihastha āśrama; therefore he is keeping in mind a grihastha, a man or women in the society;

And what is the first stage of sādhanā; yōgayuktaḥ; become a karma yōgi; yōgaḥ here means karma yōgaḥ; yōgayuktaḥ means karma yōgēna yukthaḥ; karma yōgi bhavā; and what is the indication of a karma yōgi; Krishna has talked about that in the third chapter, five-point programme he gave,

nirāśīrnirmamō bhūtvā yudhyasva vigatajvaraḥ ॥ 3.30 ॥

We saw the five factors or conditions which make a karma yōgi; I do not want to go to the details; to put it in brief, the main indication of a karma yōgi is he gives spiritual growth top priority. Inner growth he gives top priority; even though he knows material well being is required; material prosperity is required; he knows the value of material prosperity but considers spiritual growth as more important than material possessions.

As I said before, what matters is not what I have, what matter is what I am. My peace does not depend upon what I have; my peace depends upon what I am; security does not depend upon what I have; security depends upon what I have;

happiness does not depend upon what I have; happiness depends upon what I am; karma yōgi focuses on this principle. And having focused on this principle, he dedicates the entire thing to the Lord as a pooja, īśvarāpaṇa bhuddya, as a dedication to the Lord, he does every actions, and receives every result of action, as īśvarā prasāda.

These are the three conditions which make a karma yōgi, giving priority to spiritual growth; dedicating the very life as an offering to the Lord and accepting every experience as prasādam from the Lord. Such a person is called yōgayuktaḥ; and what is the result of this sādhanā; this sādhanā changes the personality. So what I am becomes different; while the society is going to measure your success in terms of your possession, vēdānta measures your success in terms of your personality transformation; karma yōga may not bring success as the society sees but karma yōga brings success as vēdānta sees.

And what is that transformation; viśuddhātmā bhavathi; viśuddhātmā means pure minded. viśuddhātmā anthakaranam yasya. And what is purity of mind; purity of mind is freedom from all the unhealthy ways of thinking; kāma krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ mātsaryaḥ, etc. that negative tendencies are the unhealthy tendencies, which Krishna calls in the 16th chapter, āsuri sampath, the removal of āsuri sampath will take place, and in its position, daivi sampath is developed.

दानम् दमश्च यज्ञश्च स्वाध्यायस्तप आर्जवम्॥ १६. १ ॥

abhayaṃ sattvasaṃśuddhirjñānayōgavyavasthitiḥ |
dānaṃ damaśca yajñaśca svādhyāyastapa ārjavam || 16. 1 ||

we were seeing in the morning class, what are the positive virtues. So development of positive virtues and freedom from negative tendencies is viśuddhātmā; saṃskṛta ātma bhavathi; this is the second stage.

and then what is the next stage, विजितात्मा जितेन्द्रियः vijitātmā jitēndriyaḥ; so they should go together; ātma means here body very interesting: there are two words; viśuddhātmā and vijitātmā.

in the word viśuddhātmā, ātma means mind;

And jitēndriyaḥ, the one who has mastered the sense organs. So vijitātmā means the one who has mastered the body, and jitēndriyaḥ means the one who has mastered the sense organs. In short the one who is the master of his own organs; one who is the master of his organs, his own personality.

So vijitātmā, jitēndriyaḥ and both are important; it is like making use of a river properly. When you have to make use of a river properly, two things are required; one you have to dam the river, otherwise the water will go waste by flowing into the ocean; that is damming the river; but if you dam the river and you do not challenge the water, the water will increase and increase and there will be pressure and then in over_pressure the dam will be damned; therefore it involves two things; one is not allowing the water to be wasted; storing and then directing. Similarly we have got physical energy; we have got sensory energy; we have got mental energy; we have got intellectual energy; in fact we have so much energy, but it is all wasted away; this person stores and challenges; this is called mastery over one's own organ; so viśuddhātmā bhavathi; jitēndriyaḥ bhavathi.

Once a person has purified and mastered his organ, he has become a qualified person for self-knowledge and such a person is called jñāna yōgyaḥ puruṣa; so the pre-condition for self-knowledge is purity and mastery over the organ; purity and mastery over the organs, is jñāna yōgyata.

Up to this religion comes; the entire religion is meant for jñāna yōgyata prāp̥thi; the entire vēda purva bhāga is meant for jñāna yōgyata prāp̥thi and once I have got jñāna yōgyata, the next stage, philosophy, comes from vēdānta. I have to go to vēdānta; from karma kānda, I have to go to jñāna kānda; and that stage is indicated by single word सर्वभूतात्मभूतात्मा भवति sarvabhūtātmabhūtātmā bhavathi; the karma yōgi gets converted into jñāna yōgi; the active person gets converted into contemplative person; the extrovert person gets turned towards himself; so he is called sarvabhūtātmabhūtātmā.

And through jñāna yōga, what knowledge he will get, that knowledge Krishna is presenting in a single word, it is a very significant word. So this jñāna yōga involves three stages:

- the first stage is understanding that I–am-the-consciousness which is different from the body; is the first stage of jñānam; I–am-the-consciousness which is different from the body. To remind you of my example, just as recognising that the light is something different from the hand; even though light is intimately associated with the hand, light is a separate entity, which survives, which continues even after the hand is removed. Similarly when I say I–am-consciousness, consciousness is something independent of the body. So this we saw elaborately in the second chapter of the Gītā; from verse No.12 to 25. So you have to remind yourselves of that portion; I do not want to get into the details now; this is the first stage;
- the second stage of knowledge is, I-the-consciousness behind this body is the same consciousness behind every body; like the light which is upon this object, is the same light which is upon this mike also; this mike also, this book also; the division belongs to the mike and book; in the light, there is no division at all; it is one light; one indivisible light; one whole light, one formless light is pervading every formed object. Similarly there is one formless-consciousness, which is pervading every formed-body; this is the second stage of knowledge.

So what is the first stage; the first stage is I-am-the-consciousness behind-my-body; the second stage of knowledge is I-am-the-consciousness behind-every-body.

- and then there is a third stage also, which Krishna will tell in some other context; in this context, he does not tell that; therefore I am also going to keep it in suspense; some other context, I will tell that;

So Krishna says: sarvabhūtātmaḥ sarvabhūtātmā; jñāna yōgi is one who knows that I am the ātma behind my body and all the bodies; sarvabhūta ātma; I am not only eka bhūta ātma; bhūtam means śarīram; sarva bhūta ātma means I am not only behind his śarīram; but I am behind sarva bhūtam;

sarvabhūtasthamātmānaṃ sarvabhūtāni ca'tmani |
īkṣatē yōgayuktātmā sarvatra samadarśanaḥ || 6.29 ||

tasyāhaṃ na praṇaśyāmi sa ca mē na praṇaśyati || 6.30 ||

We are going to see the details again in the 6th chapter; here note this much, jñāna yōgi is one who knows, I am the consciousness behind this body and every body.

Then because of this knowledge, what benefit does he attain; because of this knowledge, what benefit does he attain. Krishna says the benefit is detachment from the body; freedom from dēha abhimāna, which is the most powerful thing; I never say I have an incidental body, I always say that I am the body; I may not say I am the body; but every details about myself I give is only from the standpoint of the body. First I tell my age or cover my age; whatever that be, and even covering the age is because of dēhābhimānam only; telling the age is also because of dēhābhimānam; when you say that I am the son or daughter of so and so; again it is from the standpoint of the body only. In fact, our entire life is governed by dēha abimana and by this knowledge, the radical shift that take place is I see myself as the consciousness functioning through the body but not the body itself; and once there is detachment from the body, Krishna says there is detachment from the actions of the body also; So dēha abhimāna tyāga leads to karma abhimāna tyāgaḥ; because all karmas belong to the body alone; all the karmas belong to the body, when I identify with the body, necessarily I will identify with the karmas also. To put in technical language, dharmi abhimāna will lead to dharma abhimāna. In fact Śankarācārya introduces his Brahmasutra bhāṣyam, only with this basic statement. All our problems are based on two abhimānam; one is the identification with the body and the other is identification with the properties of the body; and the whole vēdānta is tackling this abhimāna.

And therefore Krishna here says सर्वभूतात्मभूतात्मा कुर्वन्नपि न लिप्यते sarvabhūtātmaabhūtātma kurvannapi na lipyatē; he is not tainted by any action; he does not identify with any action; even when the body is active; kurvannapi; like travelling in the car; when the car is going in 80 kilometers per hour, you do not gasp. You are in the car; but the fast running belongs to the car, you do not have gasping; similarly, jñāni does not have karma abhimāna; this is called ahamkāra abhimāna abhāva; and this idea we saw in the third chapter also; refer back;

ahaṅkāravimūḍhātmā kartā'hamiti manyatē || 3.27 ||

The one who identifies with the body and becomes a karmi, and consequently a Bhōkta also. Krishna says he is vimūḍaḥ; and then who is a wise person:

tattvavit tu mahābāhō guṇakarmavibhāgayōḥ |
guṇā guṇēṣu vartanta iti matvā na sajjatē || 3.28 ||

Jñāni is one who is able to objectify his own body, as part of this creation. Just as I look upon several other bodies, as part of this creation, subject to arrival and departure, I read the obituary column, with total detachment; and I also know the philosophy behind; one day we all have to leave; and we are all great philosophers, with regard to somebody else's death; why we are great philosophers; why because we are objective with regard to other bodies; but when you are objective, you accept natural laws; objectivity leads to the acceptance of god's law; whereas subjectivity leads to resistance; protest; anger; depression; against what; God's law.

and jñāni does not have subjectivity with regard to his own body and therefore he is able to accept the law of the lord, this body is born; asthi, jayathe, vardhathe, vipariṇamathe, apakṣiyathe, vinaśyathi; and this is called detachment; न लिप्यते na lipyate; not affected; This is explained further.

disciplined knower of the Truth मन्येत manyeta understands न करोमि na karomi I do not do किञ्चिद् एव इति kiñcid ev iti anything at all, धारयन् इति dhārayan iti bearing in mind that इन्द्रियाणि indriyāṇi sense organs वर्तन्ते varante remain इन्द्रियार्थेषु indriyārtheṣu in sense objects.

8-9. Even while seeing, hearing, touching, smelling, eating, moving, reclining, breathing, talking, evacuating, opening the eye, closing the eye, the disciplined knower of the truth, understands “I do not do anything at all” bearing in mind that the sense organs remain in sense-objects.

So the wise person's way of life is talked about; which is the result of jñāna yōga. So he has gone through karma yōga and he has gone through jñāna yōga also and now he is a jñāni; and he can be either a grihastha jñāni or sanyāsi jñāni. If you remember 4th chapter, Krishna talked about both jñānis. So this ślōkā is relevant for both grihastha-jñāni and sanyāsi-jñāni; both quiet withdrawn-jñāni as well as active-jñāni; in our tradition itself we had some jñānis who are utterly withdrawn; they did not even move away from the āśrama in which they were, or the locality in which they were; people like Ramaṇa Maharshi or Tapōvanam, etc. They were not that active; we also had great jñānis who are more active than ordinary grihastha; Why Śankarācārya himself is supposed to moved around India several times; Badrinath you go there is Śankarācārya temple, Kedarnath you go, there is a temple, and when 8th century or 7th century; how did you go; if we want to go from here to there, etc. we think of which bus etc. we will get; so Śankarācārya had gone; he had established maṭhās; he had debated with so many people, he had written so many vēdāntic works; so many devotional works; shanmaṭha sthapana he did; in fact his activities were much much more than any grihastha. but what is common to both; detachment; and therefore Krishna says a jñāni always had this knowledge, aham naiva kinchit karōmi; the real-I, the higher-I, the ātma svarūpam does not do anything at all; it is akartā. It is akartā; it does not do anything at all; it is akartā; therefore it is abōktā; it does not do any action because it is incapable of doing any action; exactly like when the hand moves, the light does not move at all; the light appears to move; but it does not. And even when he understands that I am akartā and aboktā, he allows the body and senses to function in the world according to his designation, because when he does not have anything personal to accomplish, what will determine his action; the need of the society will determine this action; because the jñāni does not have anything to accomplish; he is pūrṇa puruṣa; krita kṛiyata; and what will be the motivation for his action; the motivation will be love and compassion towards the society; the suffering society; the ignorant society; the confused society; and not that he entertains love and compassion; jñānam naturally brings out the love and compassion. As our Swamiji beautifully says we need not acquire love; because the innate nature of everyone is love; innate nature of everyone is compassion; but now the love and compassion are suppressed because of selfishness, which is due to abhimāna; when the abhimāna goes away; he does not acquire; but already available love and compassion gets thrown out; just manifested.

And how does love and compassion express itself; it expresses itself in the form of action, which is required. If he is surrounded by poor people who require the help, food, clothing, etc. he will provide that; if those things are already there; but their needs is knowledge, he will provide the knowledge; bhukti mukti pradhātaca tasmai śri guravē namaḥ; so if money is required, whatever money he gets he will give; food is required; whatever is required he will give; everything is there; but ignorance is there; solid in the society; what will he give; he will give knowledge and therefore, he allows his body-mind-complex to function according to the requirement, and all those actions will be dhārmic actions. Because actions become adhārmic because of dēha abhimāna; once dēha abhimāna is gone, any action will be dhārmic only; because when selfishness is not there; his identification will be with what, the entire world.

തോന്നുന്നതാകിൽ അകിലം ഞാൻ എന്ന ഭാവമതു തോന്നേണമേ, വരദ നാരായണായ നമഃ

nān-enna bhāvamatu tōnnāyka vēṇamiha; tōnnunnatākil-akilaraṁ nān-enna
bhāvamatu tōnnēṇamē, varada nārāyaṇāya namaḥ

Oh Lord, I should not have I notion; if at all I have an I notion, that I should be identified with the entire creation; and when I am identified with totality; I am God; and identified with totality; whatever I do will be God's action; and God can never do adharma, jñāni also is incapable of adharma; and therefore his actions will continue. what are the actions;

पश्यञ्शृण्वन्स्पर्शजिघ्रन् अश्नन् paśyañ śṛṅvan spṛśañ jighran aśnan; these five indicate pancha jñānendriya karmāṇi; seeing, hearing, touching, smelling, and tasting; asnan means tastin. So the jñānēndriyas continue to do their karma; not jñāni stops all the actions; and similarly he allows the karmēndriyas also to function; what are they; स्वपन् स्वशन् प्रलपन् विसृजन् गृह्णन् उन्मिषन् न्निमिषन् svapan svaśan pralapan visṛjan grhṇan unmiṣan nnimiṣann; so they all indicate karmēndriya karmāṇi; pralapan, talking; visṛjan excreting; grhṇan, taking; unmiṣan nnimiṣann, even opening the eyes and closing the eyes; and svapan, svaśan, even breathing in and out and svapan and even reclining or sleeping; all these actions will continue, there is no change in action; not that after jñānam he walks with the hand, standing upside down; there is no change and not that he eats through the nose or ears; same mouth he will eat, same teeth he chews; everything will be the same; because Arjuna asks:

sthitadhīḥ kiṃ prabhāṣēta kimāsīta vrajēta kim || 2.54 ||

Because we all got a notion that a jñāni must be different from other people; some difference must be there!; some physical difference we expect; or some kind of language difference we expect, or all the time sitting with closed eyes, etc. we expect; or he should be laughing to himself, looking up, etc. and we have got all kinds of funny notions; and if anybody is very normal like other people, this person cannot be a jñāni, because he is eating with his mouth; jñāni is one who has jñānam; other than that, there is no difference at all in his activities and this jñānam brings about a radical attitudinal change towards the life situations.

And because of this attitudinal change, there is a change in responses also. When one small problem comes, an ajñāni cries profusely for weeks together; whereas this person ~ as they talk about that stoic philosopher, when a big tragedy took place, he asked What?; and the next moment, he remembered the teaching, and said So What: That's the difference between ajñāni and jñāni. Life will have ups and down, but ajñāni is shocked; What he asks and sometimes he has heart attack also; and like that person, so he had a weak heart and he got a lottery prize 10 lakhs and somebody had to reveal this to that person, and therefore his doctor agreed to reveal the news; and the doctor called this person and if you get lottery prize etc. what will you do, and after preparing for half an hour, suppose you have got 10 lakhs, what will you do; and the patient said that I am surviving because of you; your contribution to my life is so great, therefore five lakhs I will just give to you.

Doctor collapsed and died; therefore that is what indicates the shock. For a jñāni there is nothing called shock, even if it arrives, it does not take much time, for changing from what to so what; that is Gītā; Gītā is going from what to so what; OK; you can ask but come to the next class.

So therefore, so unmiṣan nmiṣann api, इन्द्रियाणीन्द्रियार्थेषु वर्तन्ते indriyāṇīndriyārthēṣu vartantē; because he understands that my body is also made up of matter; the world is also made of matter; matter and matter will have to interact; nobody can escape from interaction; some people think peace of mind has to be attained by getting away from the world; and they try to close the eyes and ears; mudras are all there; how long you will keep like this; and they want to close the mind also in the name of yōga; they want to remove every thought from the mind, and sit in nirvikalpa samādhi, so that they can avoid interaction but Bhagavān says how long you can escape, because prārabdhaḥ karma will not allow you to sit in samādhi permanently;

How can we avoid interaction; so jñāni allows the interaction with the knowledge that indriyāṇī, boudika indriyāṇī, indriya ārthēṣu; boudika viṣayēṣu, indriyāṇī means sense organs, viṣaya means sense objects; they will interact and it will produce sensations, stimuli; vartantē. It will be like that; when the weather is very warm, you will sweat; when the weather is pleasant it is not only pleasant for us, but for the mosquitos also. Therefore they come in plenty; therefore that goes on. Therefore how can you escape from the interaction with the senses; therefore वर्तन्त इति धारयन् vartanta iti dhārayan; dhārayan; jñāni remebers this in and through all the inter actions but in and through all of them, what does he remember, you go back to the 8th slōkā, first line, तत्त्ववित् युक्तः मन्येत tattvavit yuktaḥ manyēta.

So tattvavit means jñāni; yuktaḥ means an integrated person, who is alert person. When you lead a mechanical life, Gītā is not available to help you in crisis; mechanical life, Gītā is useless. But when I lead an alert life then this knowledge is there all the time to protect, that person is called yuktaḥ; alert; deliberate; conscious, that is what buddhistic people recommend; so they have got special training; everything you practice deliberately; tea drinking; it is a big practice; you have to take the tea and then slowly lift; we will finish in two gulps; and then bring the mouth and slowly drink, every action you do deliberately; this is a training; so deliberate life, one who leads is called yuktaḥ; he always remembers what; अहम् नैव किञ्चित्करोमी aham naiva kiñcitkarōmī. I have got a higher-self; in front of which the lower-I is insignificant and negligible;

Continuing.

ब्रह्मण्याधाय कर्माणि सङ्गं त्यक्त्वा करोति यः ।

So what happens to a jñāni was mentioned in the previous two ślōkās. What happens is: he discovers a higher-I; in front of which the lower-I and its problems will appear small. It is like during the freedom struggle, people were worried about India's liberation struggle; I-the-Indian was prominent and predominant and because of that, they plunged into freedom struggle; and received blows. And they were sent to Andamans. You should go the cellular jail and see what all things those people suffered; they could have lead a very very happy life; all that things are kept; how punishments were given; how 3rd degree torture methods were used; what made them put up with all those things. Their body is also made up of the same material; not only they went to jail; they said they will go again to jail; even though they have tasted the treatment; what made them say that: very simple; they had two 'I'_s; one the physical-I which certainly suffers and they had another I, ideological-I you call it; or intellectual-I; I-the-Indian; and I-the-individual; and when that I was predominant; somebody is ruling us; we have to work for the national freedom; they found that these sufferings were insignificant. Not that they are absent; but you discover something far superior in front of which this will become smaller. It is like you have got a cup of water, in which there is some salt; it is saltish water; and you want to remove the saltishness from the water; and I say that that you should not evaporate but the remove the salt; you have to remove the saltishness; what do you do; you go on adding water; and when it is diluted with so much water, then salt is technically there; but it is not felt at all. It is not that jñāni does not have body pain; when sickness comes, biological pain cannot be avoided; jñānam does not give you freedom from biological pain; and we do not call biological pain as samsāra; what we call as samsāra is our psychological problem; a child has got only biological pain; the child does not build upon that; this pain if it increases, what will it be; what disease it will be; what treatment it will need; how much money it will cost: how will the family affect; child does not have those problems. So jñāni also goes through ups and downs but what happens is in the discovery of a bigger I, like the freedom struggle person, whose suffered the physical pain, but every time they said Vandē Mātaram, one more; but they did not stop vandē Mātaram; even though they knew that I am going to get one more; what made them do that; it is a discovery of a different-I; and if this simple elevation from individual to Indian gave them such a strength then what to talk of the expansion of the I; from Indian to I-am-an-Asian; then I-am-a-human-being; then I-am-a-living-being; then I-am-the-Being; being means tat brahma aham asmi. So the I expands to such an extent that these become insignificant; this is the jñāni's method of conquering ahamkāra; but it requires discovering the higher I, which is extremely subtle. And suppose there is a person who cannot discover that subtle-I. What to do. He does not understand that ātma ātma ātma you say; we are not able to understand. Now basic question, the ātma is there or is it our imagination; so therefore Krishna says until you discover that higher abstract self, may you develop devotion to the Lord with any form that you like. That is what I say, if you are a not able to depend upon the higher self; learn to depend upon God; that is why I said world-dependence to God-dependance to Self-dependence. World-dependence to God-dependence is called karma yōga; and God-dependence to self-dependence is called jñāna yōga. Before coming to Self, depend on God. Here Ratnagirisvar is there; He will take care of us, we will surrender to him. With this grace; I will be able to face the ups and downs of my life; and therefore Krishna comes down in this slōkā from jñāna yōga to karma yōga again.

And what is the difference between the two; in jñāna yōga there is the dependence on higher-Self, which is abstract; whereas in karma yōga, the dependence is on God, as an external principle as Rāma, Krishna, Devi; which is relatively easier; for everybody dvaita bhakthi is easier; Advaitam is difficult; Krishna says be a dvaiti; no hurry. In other religions, in one life you have to accomplish everything; so there is a time pressure. In our religion, there is no time pressure at all; come very slowly; not in this janma; Ok, carried forward, try in the next janma; you need not write all the exams again; carried forward is there; one paper at a time.

And therefore Krishna comes down and says: कर्मणि ब्रह्मण्याधाय karmāṇi brahmaṇyādhāya; until you discover the higher-self, may you depend upon sagunam brahma; brahmaṇi means saguṇa brahmaṇi, saguṇa brahma is what: ísvaraḥ; iṣṭa dēvatā; so develop devotion towards an iṣṭa dēvatā; and that is why we have got purāṇams and purāṇams and purāṇams and if you read Rāmāyanam, Rāma becomes so real to you, it is not an abstract principle; Bhāgavatham you read; Krishna will become so real to you; by reading such scriptures, I will discover bhakthi in any particular form of the Lord; and once I discover what do I do; surrender to the Lord; and not only surrender, karmāṇi brahmaṇyādhāya; dedicate all your actions to that Lord. So sarvāṇi karmāṇi brahmaṇyādhāya; kāmya karmās also you can dedicate; niṣkāmya karmās also you can dedicate; sarvāṇi karma; if it is an niṣkāmya karma, you do not expect any result of it; whatever result comes, you give to the Lord itself; I did not expect any money, but they gave some money; I do not need that money; I donated to the very same institution; we often hear. So some award is given; donate the same to that institute; if it is a kāmya karmā; where I expect the result; receive the result but receive it as what ísvara prasāda; so this is called brahmaṇi sarva karma ādhānam; the details we will see in the next class.

Om

We saw in the beginning of the 5th chapter, that there is a choice with regard to the lifestyle that a person takes to: either pravṛtti mārga which is grihastha āśrama pradhāna; or nivṛtti mārga which is sanyāsa āśrama pradhāna. With regard to these two basic āśramas, the śāstrās give us choice. And later Krishna also pointed out that between these two āśramas; grihastha āśrama he recommends for two reasons, the first reason is that it is less risky;

and the second reason is after entering grihastha āśrama a person can still go to sanyāsa āśrama later, but after entering sanyāsa āśrama, one cannot come back to grihastha āśrama;

because of these reasons, Krishna recommended Grihastha āśrama as a better option; and having talked about the two forms of optional life styles, now Krishna is talking about the sādhanās that one has to go through, in spite of the differences in the lifestyle and the sādhanā happens to be the same, that if initially sādhanā is for mental purification or jñāna yōgyatha prāp̥thi and the next stage of sādhanā is jñāna prāp̥thi. A sanyāsi also should get jñāna yōgyatha and jñānam. A grihastha also should get jñāna yōgyatha and jñānam.

And for getting jñāna yōgyatha, one has to take to some activity, karma is the only method of getting jñāna yōgyatha. The type of karma may vary, but karma is the only method of getting jñāna yōgyatha. In simple language, jñāna yōgyatha can be translated as purity; so it can be either kāyikam karma, or vācīkam karma or mānasam karma; according to the availability and situation, but can concentrate more on kāyikam-physical, vācīkam-verbal, or mānasam-mental. Even doing a mānasa pūja, if a person cannot do physical pūja for various reasons, then the same pūja can be replaced by mānasa pūja, that is why Sankaracharya has written several mānasa pūjas; Shiva mānasa pūjas;

कल्लोलोल्लसितामृताब्धिलहरीमध्ये विराजन्मणि- द्वीपे कल्पकवाटिकापरिवृते कादम्बवाट्युज्ज्वले। रत्नस्तंभसहस्रनिर्मितसभामध्ये विमानोत्तमे

maṅtramāṭṛkāpuṣṣamālāstavah by Śankara

First ratna simhasanam; then argyam; padyam, naivēdyam. etc. Everything wonderful gem slōkās, Śankarācārya has given; thus chanting this will become vāchika pūja; mentally visualising the meaning of this will become mānasa pūja, and all these pūjas will also purify the mind; in short there must be karma; karma alone can purify.

Śankara says in Vivekachūdamaṇi; cittasya śuddhayē karma; and having practised karma for citta śuddhiḥ, one will get jñāna yōgyatha or purity, thereafter one has to come to vēdānta vicāra and vēdānta vicāra alone can give jñānam. What karma gives the other ones cannot give and what the other one gives, karma cannot give; like different nutrients from different types of food; what wheat can give another particular vegetable, perhaps lemon cannot give; that is why they talk about the balanced diet; so that you get all the nutrients; similarly purity cannot be gained without karma; and knowledge cannot be gained without vēdānta vicāra; therefore Krishna says follow karma, purify, study scriptures, know and be free. This is the vaidika marga; and thereafter Krishna wants to point out, mere mechanical performance of karma does not guarantee purity.

So not only karma is important; the method of doing that karma; the attitude with which we do karma; the attitude with which we look upon the result of the karma; they also are important; mere karma does not guarantee purification and that is we add a suffix, karma yōgaḥ. The yōga indicates the proper method of doing karma, because of which, karma will become purificatory thing; therefore karma minus yōga cannot purify; karma plus yōga purifies.

Now the question is what are those conditions which will make karma into karma yōga; which alone we are seeing now in the 10th verse; an important verse; a beautiful verse; karmāṇi brahmaṇi ādhāya.

The first condition is it should be dedicated to the Lord as an offering ādhānam means samarpaṇam; brahmaṇi ādhānam, īśvarē samarpaṇam īśvarāparṇa. This īśvarāparṇa dedication will itself bring about a change in the personality. Dedication is not a physical action; because karma is not a material; you can take and put in front of Lord's photo. How do you dedicate karma to the Lord. It is only mentally telling the Lord; Oh Lord, यत् यत् कर्म करोमि तत् तत् अकिलम् शंभो तवाराधनम् yat yat karma karōmi tat tat akilam śambho tavārādhānam; it is a saṁkalpa; which converts karma into a worship; and what is the advantage of this dedication; the first advantage is whatever I dedicate to the Lord, I will do properly, sincerely, wholeheartedly. Because I cannot keep a second hand thing for pūja. I do not know people do that; it is only for the temple, small plantain is OK. They have got special clothes for the dānam for śrāddham; it should be the other way around; what I give the Lord should be the best; and therefore I will not judge the action; any action is done wholeheartedly; I do not require a supervisor to see.

first the action is done with dedication, and second advantage is when there is remembrance of the Lord, dedication to the Lord, that karma becomes pūja, pūja will purify the mind; and therefore sarvani karmāṇi brahmaṇi ādhāya.

Then what should be my attitude to the result; karma phalam; the attitude will depend upon the type of karma that I am doing, there are two types of karma, the scriptures prescribe certain karmas exclusively for spiritual growth; like sandhyā vandanam; it does not promise any material benefit; it is exclusively prescribed for spiritual growth; going to temple; or any other japa; which I said in the third chapter as pancha maha yajñāḥ, otherwise called nitya naimittika karmāṇi, otherwise called vihita karmāṇi. There are certain actions, exclusively meant for purification; the ideal example is daily prayer; with regard to such purificatory action, I can totally dedicate them to the Lord, because there is no material benefit involved in it. It is exclusively meant for citta śuddhiḥ; so निष्काम कर्म विषये पूर्णतया ईश्वर अर्पणम् niṣkāma karma viṣayē pūrṇatayā īśvara arpaṇam; and the result will not disturb me also because there is no material result involved for me to get disturbed.

Then we have got a second set of actions called sakāma karmāṇi, where we do expect result, like working in some concern, some company where we expect salary; or we are working to build a house for ourselves which we want; not for dedicating to the Lord; for myself; so they all will come under kāmya karma; and when we are involv̄ed in kāmya karma, what is the attitude; I have discussed this elaborately in third chapter, I dedicate it to the Lord and then receive the same thing back as īśvara prasāda; give to the Lord and take back; like autograph some people bring; Swamiji, Gītā chapter we have purchased; please autograph it; so when they give, I am not supposed to keep it for myself; I have to return to them; so then you are taking the very same thing as prasādam. Similarly, salary I keep it in front of the Lord's photo and I take, buy new clothes, keep it in front of the Lord and take; and I take a new house or build a new house, I keep the Lord's photo and enter the house, making it as the īśvara's prasāda. Thus in the case of kāmya karmas, my attitude is īśvara arpaṇam, and then take it back as prasāda; in the case of niṣkāma karma, I dedicate it to the Lord because I do not expect anything in return; and in both these attitude, īśvara arpaṇa and prasāda buddhi; what is the advantage; anxiety over karma phalam goes away. In this īśvara arpaṇa buddhi and prasāda buddhi; what happens; lubrication happens, my life goes smoothly, without violent reaction; Why there is no violent reaction, because whatever happens is taken as God's will; and my attitude towards God is what, God can never be unjust. God can never do injustice and if at all I feel that the benefit I get is disproportionate, improper I only take it that I do not know what are the factors involved; God knows better.

Therefore what I get is what I deserve; not what I desire; once I know that God cannot be unjust; anything that I get is prasāda and therefore Krishna says sangam̄ tyaktvā; give up the anxiety regarding future; which is the biggest problem for every householder; in grihastha āśrama the biggest problem is what: anxiety; and they say, whatever happens to me, it is OK, but nothing should happen to my son, daughter or grandson, even when the great grandson becomes 97, nothing should happen to him; so lokā samastā ma pouthraha cha sukhinō bhavantu. Let the whole world and my grand son, as though the grandson is outside the world, in some other world, lokā samastā sukhinō bhavantu, means your wonderful grandson is also included; that extra anxiety is also taken care of; that is called saṅgam tyaktvā; sign of karma yōga is calmness of the mind; the sign of true devotion is calmness of the mind; karma yōgi will plan for the future, but he is not going to be anxious over the future; this Krishna calls saṅgam tyāgaḥ; therefore Arjuna; dedicate all your actions to the Lord; and give up all your concerns over the future.

And then what is the benefit of that; स पापेन न लिप्यते sa pāpēna na lipyatē; he will not be affected by any papam, the karma will not produce pāpam for him; even if there are certain defects in the action. Suppose I am doing the pūja for citta śuddhi; in that pūja any defect comes, nothing happens; but when the same pūja is done for the material benefit; then it can create, no result or it cannot sometimes produce negative result also. So for a karma yōgi, pāpa bhayam is not there; and therefore pāpēna, na lipyatē, he is not affected or tainted; therefore his life is like what: padma patram ambasa iva; just as lotus leaf is in water, it is like grihastha; why because it is amidst people; grihastha is one who is amidst people, amidst responsibilities; amidst problems; like the lotus leaf, which is in water, but it is not tainted, wet by water. So therefore padma patram ambasa, ambasa means water; just as he is not affected. Similarly, he will have so many responsibilities; but we can see him smiling; otherwise the problem what we face is what; no smile at all; the price that many people pay for entering grihastha āśrama is as somebody nicely said, it is a situation in which a person loses bachelor's degree and never gets the Masters. So therefore you can be a grihastha and still continue to smile, because you do not worry too much.

Continuing.

11. Without attachment, karma yōgis perform action for the sake of purity with the body, mind, intellect, and sense organs without identification.

So here Krishna says Karma yōga can be at any level; kāyikam, vāchikam or mānasam according to one's convenience. In our vēdic religion alone we have got maximum option. If we can do that, you do that; if you cannot do that; you do the next thing; if that is not possible, next thing; patram puṣpam phalam toyam; not all the four; any one of them; if patram is not available, puṣpam, if puṣpam is not available, tōyam, etc. any of them you offer you me bhakthya prayacati; bhakthi is important; so that we have got maximum option; nobody can say I cannot follow karma yōga; I am so busy, therefore only you should do karma yōga.

Therefore nobody can say I cannot do karma yōga, because in one way or other, it is possible, because we have got kāyikam, vāchikam or mānasam; therefore Krishna says: kāyena karma kurvanthi yōgina; karma yōgina; they perform physical action, when they can afford that; those people who cannot afford kāyēna, they can do vācha; so that is not said but we can supply; vācha, verbal action, like nāma japa, or pāṛāyanam, they all will come under vāk karma; when a person cannot do kāyikam karma, not that the body is well off, out of laziness I should take to vāk karma; option you have given, so I am doing vāk karma; if you say that, your cholesterol will increase; for better for health, wherever possible kāyikam karma should be done; because one of the benefits of kāyika karma, is beating laziness; one of the worst enemy of the human being is laziness. I do not say that: śāstrām itself says that: आलस्यम् हिम् मनुष्याणाम् शरीरस्तो महान् रिपुः ālasyam him manuṣyāṅām śarīrasto mahān ripu; the greatest enemy of a human being which is there right from birth itself; and which is there in your physical body is ālasyam; and our Hinduism is very convenient; so if you have to go to some place to visit the Lord, they will say, you only have said Īśvara sarvabhūtānam hṛdēsē arjuna tiṣṭati; and why cant you do a big pūja if you ask, patram puṣpam phalam toyam he has said and therefore I will give that; so therefore, kāyika karma is extremely important; for those who cannot afford, vāchika karma, and then the next one is what, mānasa; mānasam karma, all types of meditations, all types of upāsana come under mānasa karma, mānasa pārāyaṇam, mānasa japa, mānasa pūja, they all will come under mental activity, and then buddya, intellectual karma, which is in the form of vicāra, study, so when you are trying to understand the meaning of the Gītā, it is an action done by the buddhi;

so kāyena mānasa buddya indriyaiḥ api, and with the help of various sense organs, jñānēndriyāṇi, karmēndriyāṇi, etc. through all these organs, yōginaḥ karma kurvanti, केवलैः kevalaiḥ; kevalaiḥ is important, because when we get success often we claim the success as our accomplishment; it can go to our head; I did, I did; failure if it comes, we blame others; I was not involved much; success if it comes, before the photos I will stand and say I did I did; success can lead to arrogance; failure can lead to frustration and disappointments; and therefore to avoid arrogance; Krishna says kevalaiḥ, even when you succeed remember, you were able to do all these actions, because all these organs are a gift from the Lord; therefore that I could think like that; that I could plan like that; that I could implement, there also Lord's grace is involved; that's why in the third chapter, Krishna said, nirāśīrnirmamō bhūtvā yudhyasva vigatajvaraḥ (3.30); be humble in success; and therefore kēvalaiḥ means abhimāna varjithai; without abhimāna, without identification; yōginaḥ karma kurvanti;

सङ्गम् त्यक्त्वा saṅgam tyaktvā, without the anxiety with regard to future; that is the main indication of karma yōga; no anxiety, no tension, no stress. Now everywhere we find only stress, stress, that alone is the topic, and new new methods are coming from stress relief; people are talking about prāṇāyāma, yōga, nature trips; we ourselves destroy nature; and then to get the nature, you have to travel 100 kms and there would be some people who employ themselves to take you to the nature; and you have to pay 1000 dollars, and there you are asked to do yōgam; here you did not do the sandhyavandanam, when asked to do; now he goes and that is where you pay 500 dollars to go to some Falls and Garden or something and they teach you prāṇāyāma. You follow vēdic life, you do not have the problem at all; therefore saṅgam tvaktva; giving up worry about the future;

śuddha-ātma, it is not the caitanya-rūpa-ātma; but it is antakaraṇa rūpa ātma; that is why Gītā is confusing, because one word is used in different meaning; ātma sometimes means satcidānanda ātma; sometimes it means mind; in this context, it is mind; sometimes it is the physical body also; jithātmana praśanthasya paramātma samāhitaḥ; there ātma means the physical body also; so which meaning we should take we should know; that is why we have developed a special method of studying the scriptural literature; the Western people do not have the method; that is why all their translations go haywire; because they study the dictionary; in dictionary you can take any of the 25 or 50 meanings given there.

You take a sanskrit dictionary; take a word pratipatti, but if have a sanskrit dictionary, you read the word pratipatti, 35 meanings are there; which will you take; so, to understand the meaning, we have a special key called mīmāṃsā; and only by using the mīmāṃsā method, we can extract the meaning of the scriptures, that is how Sankaracharya has commented upon and then we know where to take ātma as body, ātma as mind. Similarly the word yōginaḥ is there; yōgi can be anyone; in this context we will interpret the word yōgina as karma yōginaḥ; if you are studying sixth chapter, we will take yōgi as dhyāna yōgi; thus the very same word can have different meaning in different contexts; we should use the appropriate meanings, here ātma śuddhi means citta śuddhi; this point has to be carefully noted; because Krishna clearly says karma yōga is only for purity of mind; that means what; karma yōga cannot give you jñānam. Krishna did not say that Karma yōgis will practice this for jñānam; Krishna says karma yōgis will practice only for citta śuddhi; that is why Sankaracharya writes in the Vivekachūdamani, cittasya śuddayē karma na tu vastupalabhyatē; ātma jñānam you will never get through karma, for which you have to do guru mukhataḥ vēdānta śravaṇam; that Krishna will tell later.

yuktaḥ karmaphalaṃ tyaktvā śāntimāpnōti naiṣṭhikīm |

ayuktaḥ kāmakāreṇa phalē saktō nibadhyatē || 5.12 ||

त्यक्त्वा कर्मफलम् tyaktvā karmaphalam renouncing the result of action युक्तः yuktaḥ the disciplined (person), आप्नोति शान्तिम् āpnōti śāntim attains peace नैष्ठिकीम् naiṣṭhikīm born out of the discipline (of karmayōga), सक्तः फले saktaḥ phale attached to the result. कामकारेण kāmakāreṇa due to the impulse of desire अयुक्तः ayuktaḥ the undisciplined (person), निबध्यते nibadhyate is totally bound.

12. Renouncing the result of action, the disciplined (person) attains peace born of the discipline (of Karma yōga). Attached to the result due to the impulse of desire, the undisciplined (person) is totally bound.

So in this verse, another beautiful and important verse, Krishna says, karma yōga also will give peace of mind; jñāna yōga also will give peace of mind; but the difference is karma yōga will give a relative peace of mind, which is required for coming to jñāna yōga; and jñāna yōga will you absolute peace of mind. So thus karma yōga is like the first aid, and the jñāna yōga is like the main treatment; you know the importance of first aid; you recently read a news-item that all the auto rickshaw drivers should be taught first aid; if they drive properly, no one would need first aid, that is a different matter! any way they drive like that; first aid is extremely important for saving the life; but at the same time, first aid is called first aid, because it is only first aid; the very fact that it is called first aid indicate that there is a main treatment; then you cannot argue, second aid is there; why first aid; so therefore first aid is very important to save the persons and thereafterwards one has to come to the main treatment; in spiritual sādhanā, karma yōga is first aid; jñāna yōga is the main treatment; and therefore Krishna tells that here; yuktaḥ; shantim apnoti; yuktaḥ means karma yōgi; karma yōgēna yuktaḥ is called yuktaḥ; this is another word which has got several meanings; the word yuktaḥ occurs in Gītā several times and each time it has got a different shade; so here yuktaḥ means karma yōgi. What is the benefit that he will get; शान्तिम् आप्नोति śāntim āpnoti; everyone is telling you know, no nimmathi nimmathi etc. everything is there except nimmathi.

Therefore karma yōga can give śānti; in fact, karma yōga alone can give shanti; money can never purchase śānti; house can never get śānti; air-conditioner can never give you śānti; they all can give you physical comfort; material possessions can guarantee only physical comfort; if you need mental comfort; karma yōga alone can help you in the first stage; and therefore śāntim āpnoti;

And how did he get that śānti; नैष्ठिकीम् naiṣṭhikīm; which is born out of karma yōga niṣṭa; which is born out of commitment to karma yōga; and how did he get the śānti; what is the mechanism; mechanism is karma phalam tyaktvā; he dropped his concern for the karma phalam; so karma phalam tyaktvā; so karma phalam saṅgam tyaktvā; that means he has given up the anxiety for karma phalam; the future can become a bondage also; future can become an assistance also for us.

When we are thinking of the future; for the sake of planning; then future is useful to me; because I can take into account all the possible obstacles and I can provide for all those obstacles and if I intelligently think of the future, it will make me more efficient in the present; but at the same time, if I am going to think of future and worry; worry with regard to future will make me deficient in the present; future can make me efficient; if I use it for planning; future can make me deficient, if I use it for worrying.

Similarly past also; past can be used in two ways; when I use my past for regrets; I did it like that like this; or they did it like that, did it like this, etc. if you go on talking like that; past becomes a burden for me; past makes me deficient; if I do not use the past intelligently.

On the other hand, if I learn lessons from the past, and become a mature person; an experienced person, then the very same past becomes, makes me efficient in the present. So thus if past is properly utilised, I become efficient, if past is improperly utilised, I become deficient.

Similarly, future is properly utilised for planning, I become efficient; if it is improperly utilised; I become deficient; karma yōgi is one who uses his past also, his future also very very intelligently; and therefore karma phalam tyaktvā; future is not a burden for him.

On the other hand, अयुक्तः ayuktaḥ; ayuktaḥ means the one who is not a karma yōgi; akarma yōgi or karmi; what happens, he does not know how to use the past and future intelligently. So the past is also abused; how? one failure comes; how we abuse the past; one time we fail; then we are going to think OK; this time failure; this time failure, we become pessimistic.

So the past leads to pessimism; or fatalism; most of the people are fatalistic; two times they fail; they begin to say; what is in our hands; everything is in His hands;

we are only puppets; He is making us dance, and we are dancing; good philosophers we are, two times failure; so past can lead to pessimism.

Past can lead to wisdom also; ayuktaḥ is one who has got lot of pessimism; and not only that, lot of anxiety also about the future; and therefore what happens to him; phale sakthaḥ; all the time concerned, worried about what will happen to me, what will happen to me; so many precautions he has done; but he does not know that life is a series of risks. Everything involves risks, including crossing the road, as long as auto rickshaws and these water lorries, these things are there, even crossing the road is risk. Therefore every step being risk, if you are going to worry about risk, you cannot do anything; and therefore true security is only surrender to God. That is why Krishna will tell in the 9th chapter:

The real security is Bhagavān LIC. It is not local LIC, real insurance is Bhagavān and Bhagavān alone. I do not say you should drop LIC. keep all securities, but the only real security is Bhagavān alone. The moment we understand that there is a very big relaxation.

And therefore phale sakthaḥ, so the akarmayōgi all the time worrying about future, because of what kāma kārēṇa, because of the force of his desire, because of the force of his expectation, phale sakthaḥ; निबध्यते nibadhyate; such a person is a samsāri, a shackled person; a bound person. Therefore Arjuna, do not be a karmi, but be a karma yōgi.

सर्वकर्माणि मनसा संन्यस्यास्ते सुखं वशी ।

सन्त्यस्य sanyasya renouncing सर्वकर्माणि sarvakarmāṇi all actions मनसा manasā through knowledge वशी vaśī the self-controlled person देही dehī remains सुखम् आस्ते sukham āste comfortably पुरे नवद्वारे pure navadvāre in the city of nine gates न एव कुर्वन् na eva kurvan without doing any action, न कारयन् na kārayan and without instigating (any one.).

13. Renouncing all actions through knowledge, the self-contained person comfortably remains in the city of nine gates without doing any action (and) without instigating (any one).

So with the previous verse, Krishna has completed the topic of the various stages of sādhanā, which he started from the 7th verse. Verse No.7 to 12 is various stages of sādhanā, one should go through; emphasising the importance of karma yōga.

Now from the 13th verse, i.e. this verse, up to the 21st verse, Krishna is going to talk about jñāna yōga, which is the next stage after karma yōga; whose importance many people do not know at all; and many people think jñāna yōga is optional, many people do not know the importance of scriptural study; why to study all those. Is it not enough that I continue to be a devotee; I follow values, I do my regular pūjas; and I do all these things and lead a normal life; will I not get liberation; should I study the scriptures. This is the basic question.

Krishna wants to say that it is important; without that one cannot get jñānam. So when you come to jñāna yōga is your choice, that you have to come to jñāna yōga is choiceless. You can postpone it, you cannot avoid it. Not now after retirement; hope that you will survive and also all your organs will be intact; big hope; so therefore, 13 to 21 is jñāna yōga; self-knowledge which is the central theme of the 5th chapter; karma yōga is only an incidental topic, the 5th chapter, primarily deals with jñāna yōga;

And what is jñāna yōga; Krishna has defined that in the 4th chapter, tadviddhi praṇipātēna paripraśnēna sēvayā | upadēkṣyanti tē jñānaṃ jñāninastattvadarśinaḥ (4.34); this is the practice of jñāna yōga; Krishna said in the 4th chapter, what does it mean; jñāna yōga is systematic and consistent study of vēdāntic scriptures for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent guru. Systematic and consistent study of the vēdāntic scriptures; because there are other dharma śāstrā granthah;

dharmā śāstrās will give you only the knowledge of dharma; and dharma is important for purity of mind, but dharma śāstrā cannot give you self-knowledge, because they do not deal with Self. Or even if they deal with, it is only hinted at in a few verses. Therefore consistent and systematic study of vēdantic scriptures which dwell with this knowledge; what knowledge; who am I; what is this world; who is God; what is the relationship between me and world; what is the relationship between me and God; what is the relationship between God and world; why are we created; and what is our goal; these basic questions we call vēdantic scriptures; jīva-jagat-īśvara-bandha-mukthi; these five topics should be there; jīva-jagat-īśvara-bandha-mukthi; the scriptures which contain these five topics is called vēdantic scriptures, in any language. So consistent and systematic study of the vēdantic scriptures for a length of time under the guidance of a competent guru is called jñāna yōga and when a person goes through this jñāna yōga; he discovers a very very important fact and what is that fact, we saw in the second chapter; I-am-not – the-body; I-am-not-the-mind, but I-am-the-consciousness who is functioning through the body. I am transacting through the body-mind-complex, but I am not the body-mind-complex. When the body-mind-complex dies or dissolves, I do not die, my transactions stops. Which we experience regularly during sleep; body-and-mind becomes inactive or passive; I have not died in sleep; if sleep is equal to death; we will never go to sleep; we will somehow keep awake by even putting chilli powder in the eye! We are not worried of sleep because I know that sleep is not the end of me, it is the end of my transactions. And that is why we are ready to sleep anywhere, including, OK, I do not want to say. So therefore I-am-the-consciousness who is behind the body, the body may end, but I do not die at all; not only I-am-the pure-consciousness, I am akartā and aboktā; I do not do any action at all. Remember the example of the light, the light is on the hand alright; but all the movements belong to the hand alone; the light does not move from one place to another; in fact light cannot move, because it is already pervading;

And therefore, what does a jñāna yōgi do. सर्वकर्माणि मनसा संन्यस्या Sarva karmāṇi mānasa sanyāsyā; he discovers the fact that I am the actionless ātma. Therefore all the actions are transferred to the body mind complex; it is a shift in the identification; and therefore instead of claiming the actions as mine, I hand over the actions, the body-mind-complex; the body-mind-complex will have to act in the world and it will have to reap the result also. We discussed this elaborately in the second chapter also; in the third chapter also; that is what is said here; sarva karmāṇi sanyāsyā. Sanyāsyā; a jñāni renounces all actions;

How does he renounce the actions? Very important slōkā it is. Śankarācārya quotes this slōkā very often; one of the very important slōkās of the Gītā; how does he renounce the action? He does not physically renounce the action; actions will continue at the body and mental level; but he does not claim the actions as his actions; because he is detached from the body mind complex and therefore he says I do not act; in my presence the body-mind-complex acts. Previously I said I act, but now the vision is what; in my presence, the body-mind-complex acts; not only that; the body-mind-complex cannot avoid action.

And therefore mānasa sanyāsyā; he renounces through knowledge; it is internal renunciation; through detachment; not external renunciation; urvārumika iva bhandanāt mṛtyor mukṣīya mā mṛtāt; many people chant this verse whenever sickness comes; or śaṣṭiabdapūrthi or sathabhiṣēkam comes. trayāmbhakaṃ yajāmahe has become a very popular mantra, for physical health and longevity. There is nothing wrong in doing it; but the original purpose of the mantra is not for physical immortality; because physical immortality is impossible; and whoever claims physical immortality is possible; they themselves have disappeared; they are out.

Therefore immortality is not physical; immortality is gained by the knowledge that I-am-not-the-mortal-body. This knowledge is called attainment of immortality; I-am-not-the-mortal-body; and therefore body's mortality does not belong to me; this knowledge is called urvārumika iva bhandanāt mṛtyor mukṣīya mā mṛtāt. Therefore mānasa sanyāsyā; and once I have known that I-am-the-immortal-ātma; and I have learned to accept the body's mortality; then the greatest advantage is fear of death is gone, which is the biggest fear and therefore how does a jñāni remain; सुखम् आस्ते sukham āste; there is a relief; there is lightness; what is enlightenment; making myself light; light; opposite of heavy; mind become light; now it is how: it is heavy; Swamiji: மனலே வந்து பாரமாயிருக்கு maṇasē vaṇtu pāramāyirukku; and therefore I want to get rid of the mind; therefore wherever I go; the mind comes; even if you go to the mānasarovar, the mind will come together; you cannot drop it at Madras; therefore how to kill the mind; take to alcohol; and a time comes when you are not able to continue; you are not able to withdraw also; very big problem. You try to get out of your mind by various wrong methods; अशान्तस्य मनोभारः aśāntasya manobhāraḥ; when śānti is not there; mind is a bhāraḥ. This knowledge removes the bhāraḥ of mind; sukham āste वशी vaśī; vaśī means jñāni; man of control; man of mastery; he remains how: न एव कुर्वन् न कारयन् na eva kurvan na kārayan; without involving in any action directly or indirectly; because he does not do any action; in his presence, body mind complex acts.

Therefore na ēva kurvan means neither doing actions directly or kārayan; making others act; some people, they do not act; but they kill others in the home doing all the work; that is called kārayan; other people turn like a top. Ātma is neither kartā nor kārayitā. More in the next class.

Om

In the first part of the fifth chapter, Lord Krishna pointed out that there is a choice with regard to the lifestyle that a person wants to take to; the choice being one of seclusion, withdrawn life, and the other is life of activity, amidst the society. One is called the pravṛtti; the other is called nivṛtti; one is called grihastha āśrama; the other is called sanyāsa āśrama. In fact these two āśramas are supposed to be the primary ones, brahmacarya āśrama is only a support for grihastha āśrama; and vānaprastha āśrama is only a support for sanyāsa āśrama; the actual āśrama is only two; grihastha and sanyāsa; and active lifestyle and withdrawn lifestyle; a life of possession, a life without possession.

Having pointed out that there is a choice with regard to the lifestyle, Krishna pointed out that whatever be one's lifestyles, there is no choice with regard to sādhanā; everyone has go through two stages of sādhanās; the first stage of sādhanā being purificatory discipline; and for purification, the śāstrā prescribes varieties of activities; some of them are kāyika karmāṇi, physical, some of them vācika karmāṇi, verbal; some of them are mānasa karmāṇi, mental; and in each karma, we have got choices also; so thus thousands of physical activities; thousands of verbal activities and thousands of mental activities. We can choose anyone that is suitable; If one is grihastha āśrama with lot of wealth; he can do enough sādhanās in which he can spend the wealth; and if a person is poor and incapable of spending money, then there are cheap sādhanās, "cheap" sādhanās which does not involve even a single paisa of expenditure, but still it can purify and therefore according to one's own inclination; according to one own's resources; according to one's own facility; one has to do kāyika, vācika, mānasa karmāṇi; to attain jñāna yōgyatā; this jñāna yōgyatā prāp̥thi is the first stage; which a grihastha also should go through; which a sanyāsi also should go through; and having attained jñāna yōgyatā; fitness for spiritual knowledge, thereafter one has to enter into jñāna yōgaḥ, that is the second stage of sādānā; which is the discovery of our own higher self.

We have two selfs as it were; one is the lower-inferior-relative-I-called-the-ego and the other higher-superior-absolute-I. The lower-I, the ego is defined as the body-mind-complex, with the reflected consciousness; borrowed consciousness; chidāabhāsa sahita kārya kāraṇa saṅgātaḥ ahaṁkāra; the definition of ahaṁkāra; the body-mind-complex or the body-mind-sense-complex, sense organs are also included; this complex with the reflected consciousness; this is called ego-I. This ego-I is kartha, ego-I is bhōktā; this ego-I has got sañcita karma; āgāmi karma; prārabdhaḥ karma; and this ego-I alone travels from lōkā to lōkā; body to body; this ego-I alone requires śrāddhā, tarpaṇa, and all of them are associated with the empirical-I.

And in the second stage of spiritual sādānā what we want to do is to discover another superior-I which has no connection with the inferior-ego-relative-I and that-I alone we talked about in the second chapter as the consciousness principle, the chaitanya tatvam; otherwise called ātma tatvam.

And discovering that I is called jñāna yōgaḥ; which is being discussed from verse No.13 of this chapter, up to verse No.21 and there I had discussed the nature of the higher-I in the second chapter, which you have to recollect in this context.

What are the features we saw in the second chapter; first we said that consciousness is an independent principle; which is not bound by the limitations of the body; remembering the example, exactly like the light principle, which pervades the hand, but which is independent of the hand. So thus my higher nature is pure chaitanyam.

And then Krishna pointed out that this consciousness is ekam; bodies are many, minds are many, but the consciousness which pervades the body mind is ekaḥ. Then Krishna pointed out that this consciousness is therefore only sarvagataḥ; it is all pervading like space.

And then Krishna pointed out that even when the physical body is destroyed; the consciousness will continue to exist; but it cannot transact or express because the body is the medium for the expression of consciousness. Again remembering the light; when there is the hand, you can see the light reflected; when the hand is removed; the light continues to exist there; but you are not able to perceive that light. So thus consciousness is ekaḥ; consciousness is sarvagataḥ; consciousness is nityaḥ; eternal.

And then Krishna pointed out in the second chapter that this consciousness is nirvikāraḥ, not subject to modification; again comparing the light itself, even when my hand is moving; the light does not move at all; the light has got a seeming movement, when the hand is moving; when I am folding the fingers or hand; the light does not get folded up. Similarly Krishna said;

nāyaṃ bhūtvā bhavitā vā na bhūyaḥ |
ajō nityaḥ śāśvatō'yaṃ purāṇō

The reflecting medium body has got 6-fold modifications; like potential existence in the womb of the mother; the body has got birth; the body has got growth, body has got transformation, the body has got decay; body has got death; body has shadvikāraḥ; but the chaitanyam pervading the body is nirvikaraḥ.

And then Krishna pointed out in the second chapter, in fact all those ideas are reinforced in this portion. That is why I am connecting the 2nd and 5th chapter, that is why in the in the 2nd chapter verses No.12 to 25, I have very very elaborately discussed.

And then Krishna pointed out that if consciousness cannot undergo any change, it cannot perform any action; because action involves change; and if I have to do physical action, the physical body will have to undergo change, it cannot be motionless. If verbal action is required; mouth has to undergo change or modification. That is we get tired after some time. Some people can speak for one hour; some people 2 hours; even those people after some time, they get tired; why because action involves movement; even mental activity requires movement in the form of thought movement. Therefore action is defined as vikārātmakam karma; chalanātmakam karma; action requires or presupposes movement, If consciousness is without modification, consciousness cannot do any action. Exactly like what:

ākāśa; among the five elements, the space alone is all pervading; just as the all-pervading space cannot do any action; consciousness also cannot do. What actions space does; does space move from one place to another? space does not do any action; cannot do any action. Why because space cannot move at all; even vibration is not possible for the space.

And therefore Krishna says consciousness is akartā; you have to remember everything; ekaḥ; sarvagathaḥ; nityaḥ; nirvikaraḥ; akartā; free from all actions. When I say action, neither good karmas nor bad karmas are there, for the higher-self. Then what about all our puṇya pāpams; whenever we talk about our puṇya-pāpam, it is referring to which Self; not the higher self; but our inferior lower self.

And if ātma is akartā; natural consequence is it will be abhoktā also; because if karmas are not there; how can there be karma phalam.

यह कर्ता भवति सह भोक्ता भवति; यह कर्माणम् कर्ता भवति सह कर्म फलानम् भोक्ता भवति
yaha kartā bhavati saha bhōktā bhavati; yaha karmāṇam kartā bhavati saha karma phalānam bhōktā bhavati

தினை விதைத்தவன் தினை கொய்வான்; ஆத்மாவிக்கு தினை விதைக்கறதும் கிடையாது; தினை கொய்யறதும் கிடையாது.

And then Krishna wants to say that the wise person is one who has owned up the higher self, as his real nature; and because of the constant claiming of the higher self, the ego has become an insignificant entity for him. Previously the ego appeared extremely important; and therefore as a kartā, I am obsessed with how many actions I have to do and I am getting old; time is not enough; I have to do Over time. So thus as a kartā, I am obsessed with the actions that I have to do; and anxious about the results that I will get; so thus ahaṁkāra appeared too big; but in the case of a wise person; he learns to look at the ahaṁkāra from the mountain called ātma.

When you look at a coconut tree from the ground, it is too big; but when you look at the same tree from a mountain; it has become small; all your life's problems will appear very very big, if you study from ahaṁkāra standpoint; but you look at the same problem from the standpoint of ātma; all the problems, even the greatest problem will appear like a pin-prick; jñāni has not avoided the problems of ahaṁkāra; jñāni looks at his own ahaṁkāra from ātma's standpoint. If I am looking at the body from ahaṁkāra's standpoint, naturally I am worried about old age and death, and especially when I grow old, I am worried about the children; how they will survive without me; we think we are taking care of the children; in fact, the fact is without us they will be better off; so therefore, all these problems will appear so big; but when I shift my I from the body to ātma, this body to learn to look at objectively and this is one among the millions of bodies; and billions of bodies have appeared and disappeared; nothing has happened to the creation; in fact, it is going perfectly well; giants have appeared and disappeared; what tragedy is going to happen; if one speck of dust disappears from the earth. So thus, the benefit of discovering the higher self is I learn to look at the ahaṁkāra objectively and therefore the karma, puṇya pāpams, all of them become insignificant; just as the dream becomes insignificant after waking. Dream is very very powerful when we are in dream; but the dream becomes insignificant after waking.

And therefore what is the difference between jñāni and ajñāni. Jñāni is one who claims ātma as himself; ajñāni is one who claims ahaṁkāra as himself; ahaṁkāra means body-mind-complex as himself. Therefore in the Gītā, all the descriptions of jñāni are the descriptions of ātma. So jñāni is described in the form of ātma description, why because jñāni identifies with ātma;

All ajñāni's description will be description of ahaṁkāra, because ajñāni identifies with ahaṁkāra; therefore what you are depends upon what you identify with. What you are depends upon what you identify with. Identify with your lower-self, you are saṁsāri; identify with your higher self, you are free; when, here and now. Therefore Krishna in the 13th ślōkā points out jñāni has identified with Ātma. And since he has identified with ātma; he does not say I-am-the-body; but he says I-am-in-the-body, I am pervading the body, and I am blessing this body; and this body will disappear after sometime; but I, who am blessing the body, will not disappear and therefore where is the worry of death; therefore Krishna says he enjoys his life. So sarvakarmāṇi mānasa sanyāsyā; so all these actions jñāni renounces by shifting the identification from the body to ātma; he does not renounce the action but he

So sarva karmāṇi sanyāsyā; he renounces and how does he do that; mānasa; here mānasa means jñānēna; by wisdom; and what is that wisdom; I am not the temporary lower-self, the body; I am the higher self, the ātma, iti akarthru ātma vijñānēna sarva karmāṇi sanyāsyā;

Vaśī; Vaśī means jñāni, who is a master; swami. As a body, I am a slave because as body I am controlled by the external forces; as consciousness, I am the controller of the external forces. As the dream individual, I am the creature in the dream; after waking up I am the creator of the dream. So just shifting the I, makes a very big difference; and therefore, Vaśī, this master, this jñāni, sukham āstē, leads his life very comfortably. Other people may be worried about his bodily condition, but he is not worried about who will take care of me in my old age, in the last stage who will give me a drop of water; who will put the rice in the mouth; who will do śrāddham for me; whether the children are there; there are children but there is no boy to do the karma; all these worries are from ahaṁkāra standpoint; ātma does not have all these; therefore sukham āstē, very very comfortable.

And if you ask him where are you, he says, नवद्वारे पुरे navadvāre pure; puram means the physical body, the body is compared to a small kingdom; the physical body is compared to a small kingdom; and the skin, the outer skin is compared to the city walls; like the wall of China; which goes round China; so that it will protect the kingdom from the external attack. Similarly, we also have got a wall of protection; you know what is that wall; the very skin itself; and if all over the kingdom, walls are there, you cannot transact with the external world, therefore there should be what; gateways for interaction with the outside world; and therefore the physical body has got navadvāraṇi, 9 gateways; and what are the 9 gateways; sapta śiṛṣanyani; 7 holes are there on the face for interaction; the śabdaḥ sparśaḥ, rūpa:, rasa:, gandhaḥ, sound, forms, smell, taste, and touch, from the external world enter the body city, through what gate, the eyes, ears, etc. there are called entrance gate.

And we have got two gateways down below; for the removal of the waste from the body, the excretory holes are there; there are exit gate; some gates are entrance gate, one way traffic; the excretory organs only for excretion.

but there are certain two way gates also; what is that; mouth; when I am speaking, I am conveying my ideas to you; therefore ideas are coming from inside it is going out; exit gate; and when you eat food, what is happening; the very same mouth is functioning as entrance gate.

So thus body is a wonderful city; with a city wall; and 9 gates for interaction; and there are roads and roads; you know what are the roads; all the blood vessels are compared to the roads; there are highway roads, aorta; pulmonary artery, and since bigger roads are there; all the capillaries are bylanes; small streets; go the North Madras; Mylapore; we have got bigger roads; and we have got smaller roads, and often there is traffic jam also; blockage of the blood vessel; then you have to do clearance; angiogram, angioplasty, bye-pass surgery; the flyovers. Similarly within the body also, what is bypass surgery; too much problem; blocked vessels; there are so many workers also; all the prāṇās are considered to be the workers in the body. And for this body city; who is the king; ātma is the king. As long as the jīvātma is there to bless the body; this body city is life and active; When the blessing is not available, the body cannot survive, even for a few hours; even the dearest son, he has to come within a few days after the death; otherwise dispose of the body; why because the rāja is not there.

And therefore who is ātma; ātma is the rāja; and jñāni is identified with ātma; therefore we say jñāni is the master of his body. Therefore dehi, the ātma, the jñāni, nava dvāre pure, in this body, he resides, he pervades and what action does he do, naiva kurvan; consciousness is akartā; does not do any action; so before the class; so many people are coming and going; there are setting up the chairs; spreading the carpet, etc. mike is kept, adjusting this, etc.; all these activities are going on; blessed by the light principle, the light itself does not do any action; what is the job of the light; illumines the action; but it is not involved in the action; this is called sākṣi bhavaḥ; and since the light only illumines, the light cannot get the good result of good action also, it does not have the bad results also, in the light a doctor may do a surgery and save a person; in the same light, another pickpocket, pick the pocket, but the light does not have the puṇyam of the surgery; light does not have the pāpam of the picking the pocket, but puṇya karma and pāpa karma took place when, in the presence of the light; light is required but light is not involved; अकर्तृत्वे सति प्रकाशत्वम् साक्षित्वम् akartṛtvē sati prakāśatvam sākṣitvam. So illumining something without involvement is called sākṣi bhāva; jñāni remains as a sākṣi.

And not only he does not do action; na kārayan; because action is two fold, one is direct action; another is indirect action. What do you mean indirect action; instigating another one to do action is called indirect action; direct action, the one who has is called kartā; the one who does indirect action is called kārayitā; the instigator. In any criminal action, not only the actor has got crime; if there is somebody who has instigated that, the instigator also will have to take the punishment; because nowadays they say, there are gūndas who can be employed; their job is crime; even up to killing; and suppose somebody pays the criminal to do the crime, not only the criminal is doing the crime; the one who has instigated him, he also is tainted by the crime.

Now the question is ātma may not be doing any action; thus ātma instigates one to do action; if ātma is the instigator, every criminal will say what; I did not do that; the ātma inside made me do it; like people saying, எல்லாம் பகவான் செயல் ellām Bhagavān ceyal; it is a terrible argument, if it is not properly understood; people say we are only puppets; we do not do anything; every action is done by Bhagavān; you know what is the consequence of such an approach; and if we are instrument; and Bhagavān is doing action through us, for all the crimes, who will incur pāpam; the instrument or the user of the instrument; so if a person kills someone with a knife; knife is never punished; the instrument is never punished; the one who has used the instrument alone is punished. Similarly if you say Bhagavān instigates me to do all these things; or ātma does, ātma will have puṇyam and pāpam.

Therefore Krishna says do not blame ātma; do not blame Bhagavān, ātma na kārayan; it does not instigate also. Ātma does not ask a criminal to do a crime; and ātma does not ask a saint to do a noble action; ātma is simply present as the witness, exactly like what, light. Light will illumine; if we have good thinking, in the light we will do good action; but if our mind is not good; we will do bad actions in the same light; goodness and badness belongs to the lower-I; the higher I does not have either goodness or badness; अन्यत्र धर्मात् अन्यत्र अधर्मात् anyatra dharmāt anyatra adharmāt; ātma does not have puṇyam also; pāpam also; therefore naiva kurvan; na kārayan āste.

नकर्मफलसंयोगं स्वभावस्तु प्रवर्तते ॥ ५.१४ ॥

na kartṛtvam na karmāṇi lōkasyasrjatiprabhuḥ |
na karmaphalasaṃyogaṃ svabhāvastu pravartatē || 5.14 ||

14. The Ātma creates neither doership nor objects. Nor contact with the results of actions for the people. But Maya operates.

In chanting also, there are rules for chanting; so लोकस्यसृजति प्रभुः lōkasyasrjati prabhuḥ is there; some people chant it as lōkasya srjati prabhuḥ; that is not correct. after lōkasya gap should not be there; similarly secondline, स्वभावस्तु प्रवर्तते svabhāvastu pravartatē; they chant without gap here; that is also wrong; here svabhāvastu pravartatē; gap should be given; how do you know where to give the gap and where not to give the gap; either you should learn the rules; or you should learn to chant from someone. The rule is when a short vowel is followed by a double consonant, there should be a gap; when a short vowel is followed by a single consonant, there should not be gap. Look at the first line; lōkasyasrjatiprabhuḥ; lōkasya has got short vowel; vowel consonant, we all learned; the lōkasya, ending vowel is there; अ a is a short vowel; it is followed by सृ sṛ, is a double consonant? sṛ is made is made of स sra and रु ru, sa is a consonant, ru is a vowel; so sru comes under consonant plus a vowel; therefore it is only a single consonant; therefore you should read lokasyasrijathi prabhuhu; that is right; what is wrong; lokasya srijathi parbhuhu. Are you able to make the difference. lōkasyasrjatiprabhuḥ is the right reading.

Now coming to the second line, svabhavasthu, it is ending in the vowel short उ 'u'; and it is followed by प्र pra; pra is a single consonant or a double constant? The previous one sru, it is sa plus ru, which is vowel; whereas pra when you say, it consists of pa प plus ra र plus अ ah; it is not पा pa plus रु ru. The रु ru vowel, it is प्र pra which is a constant; रु ru is a vowel; रा ra is a consonant; one should know the difference between रु ru and रा rah; रु ru is a vowel; रा rah is a consonant; therefore, pra is a double consonant; and since pra is a double consonant; after the vowel, you have to give a gap; therefore what is the right changing; svabhāvastu pravartatē; and what is wrong chanting; svabhāvastupravartatē

This you have to observe throughout. Where short vowel; where conjunct consonant; double consonant is called conjunct consonant; in Sanskrit just as in English, pronunciation rules are there; for many 'pronunciation' itself is a problem; they will say pronunciation; there is no pronunciation; it is pronunciation; pronounce is the verb; the noun is not pronunciation; it is pronunciation; it is n.. u.. n..; like English rules; but in English rules are arbitrary; in Sanskrit they are systematic and logical; therefore if you do not observe those rules, what you do is when I chant, very clearly listen; and then exactly reproduce lōkasyasṛjatiprabhuḥ; lōkasyasṛjatiprabhuḥ; Ok. That is aside.

Now let us come to the topic. Krishna says ātma does not produce any thing at all; prabhuḥ; prabhuḥ; means ātma; which means master; so prabhuhu, the ātma; na sṛjati; does not create anything; and what are those things; kartṛtvam; doership. so the body has got natural doership; mind has got natural doership or technically ahaṁkāra has got natural doership; ātma is not responsible; exactly like what Krishna will explain that in the 2nd line; there we will see; the doership is not created by ātma; karmāṇi na srijathi; even the objects of action, the ātma does not produce; ātma does not produce the karta; ātma does not produce the karma; and na karma phalam sanyōgaḥam; ātma does not produce the interaction between karta and karma phalam; it does not produce karta; it does not produce karma, it does not produce karma phalam; and it does not produce the interaction or association between kartā and karma phalam. In short, ātma does not do anything. na karma phala samyōgam, OK; if ātma does not do anything; how come all these are doing actions; who is responsible for all these actions; Krishna says स्वभावस्तु प्रवर्तते svabhāvastu pravartatē; it is the innate nature of the body to be active; it is the innate nature of the mind to be active; ātma does not do; exactly like electricity blesses all the gadgets generally; electricity does not ask the radio to produce sound; electricity does not ask the fan to rotate; electricity blesses all of them; if the fan rotates, it is inbuilt nature of the fan which has the potentiality to rotate; it is the inbuilt nature of the radio to being out the audio; it is the inbuilt nature of the television to do its function; functions are not determined by the ātma; functions are the innature of the gadget; it just blesses.

Similarly here also, the mind does its activities; the senses do their activities; the body does its activities; ātma is only a witness. Again remember the example of light; light remaining the same, a criminal does a criminal action; a saint does a saintly action; light is not responsible for the saintliness of the saint; or the criminality of the criminal. Therefore do not blame the light; at the same time, do not say, light is not required because in the presence of light alone, they can do their respective actions; so svabhāvastu pravartatē.

अज्ञानेनावृतं ज्ञानं तेन मुह्यन्ति जन्तवः ॥ ५.१५ ॥

na"dattē kasyacit pāpaṃ na caiva sukṛtaṃ vibhuḥ |

ajñānēna"vṛtaṃ jñānaṃ tēna muhyanti jantavaḥ || 5.15 ||

15. The Ātma takes neither the pāpaṃ nor the puṇyaṃ of anyone. Discrimination is veiled by ignorance. Hence the beings are deluded.

So in the previous verses, Krishna said ātma is akārtha; and akarayitha; neither ātma is a doer; nor is ātma an instigator. Now in this verse Krishna says therefore only ātma is aboktā; it does not have any puṇyaṁ or pāpaṁ;

न पुण्यं न पापं न सौख्यं न दुःखं
न मंत्रो न तीर्थं न वेदा न यज्ञाः .
अहं भोजनं नैव भोज्यं न भोक्ता
चिदानंदरूपः शिवोऽहं शिवोऽहम् .. ४

na puṇyaṁ na pāpaṁ na saukhyaṁ na duḥkhaṁ na maṁtrō na tīrthaṁ na vēdā na yajñāḥ .
ahaṁ bhōjanaṁ naiva bhōjyaṁ na bhōktā
cidānaṁdarūpaḥ śivō:'haṁ śivō:'ham .. 4

na puṇyaṁ na pāpaṁ; ahaṁ bhōjanaṁ naiva bhōjyaṁ na bhōktā; If I am none of them who am I; cidānaṁdarūpaḥ śivō:'haṁ śivō:'ham. Therefore Krishna says कस्यचित् पापम् न आदत्ते kasyacit pāpam na ādatte; ātma does not take any pāpaṁ done by anyone.

Then what about puṇyaṁ; our nature is what; we will say we do not want pāpaṁ; puṇyaṁ is OK. but here Krishna says न च एव सुकृतम् na ca eva sukr̥tam; nor does ātma incur or acquire any puṇyaṁ; विभुः vibhuḥ; vibhuḥ is the name of ātma; vibhuḥ is the all-pervading one; ātma asanga svarupaha ākāśavat; just as the space does not get wet when there is rain, the space does not get burned when there is fire; in the same way, the space like consciousness is not tainted by pāpaṁ also; and it is not improved by puṇyaṁ also.

So then we may get a very big doubt; now this seems to be a very convenient teaching; so it seems a criminal did a very big crime; and then ran away; and then the police caught the criminal and he was tried in the court; and before passing the verdict; the criminal quoted this slōkam; I do not do any karma; I do not do any puṇyaṁ karma or pāpa karma; I have not killed anyone at all; and therefore I should not be given any punishment; in my presence the body only did the action; do not punish me. So this is called the devil quoting the scriptures; and fortunately the judge also was well learned in the Gītā; so therefore judge also said; yes; it is very true; you are the ātma; you are akartā; abhoktā; you have not done any pāpaṁ at all; therefore you do not require any imprisonment; and you cannot be imprisoned also; because you are all pervading; in your presence the body did the crime and therefore I am imprisoning the body; so will you be able to accept that.

If you are able to withdraw from the body when a wrong action is done; you should be able to withdraw from the body when the body suffers the result of wrong action; when you are doing karma, you are saying that you are not the body, and when the body suffers, if you say that you are the body, then it is a problem. Either identify with the body throughout or dis-identify from the body throughout; partial identification is dangerous philosophy. Therefore, at the body level karma is there, karma phalam is there, and therefore laws of karma will function. Therefore at the body level, I have to be dharmic; but I have to own up my punya paapa athitha svarupam; at the level of the ātma; therefore we should not mix up the higher self and the lower self.

And therefore here krishna is talking about from ātma angle; I am akartā, aboktā; then why do people suffer; what is the cause of all suffering; Krishna says the cause of suffering is dēha abhimāna; the bodily identification; the ahaṁkāra identification; to remember the third chapter, ahaṁkāravimūḍhātmā kartā'hamiti manyatē || 3.27||. It is deha abhimāna which is the cause of all the problems; and why is there deha abhimāna; body identification. Because of the ignorance of the higher nature; when I do not know my superior self, I identify with my inferior self. Therefore Krishna says ajñānena avrutham jñānam; because of the ignorance of the higher nature; all the jīvas are suffering; so from this it is very clear that our basic problem is ajñānam. And if ajñānam is the problem; what is the solution. There is only one solution; jñānam; that is going to be talked about, which we will see in the next class.

After talking about karma yōga as the first stage of sādānās, now Lord Krishna is talking about jñāna yōga, as the second stage of sādānās. In Karma yōga sādānās, we have something to do and in jñāna yōga sādānās, we have something to know. We should know the difference very clearly. And when I talk about jñānam, we should remember, it is only the knowledge of ātma. In vēdāntic context, whenever we talk about jñānam, it means jivātma paramātma aikya jñānam.

Before doing karma yōga; also we have to take the knowledge of karma yōga. Karma yōga also requires knowledge; knowledge about karma; knowledge about karma phala; and knowledge about the attitude with which we have to do the action. Therefore karma yōga also presupposes knowledge but that knowledge is not ātma jñānam. Therefore the knowledge that is required for karma yōga is not the ātma jñānam. For karma yōga we do not discuss the nature of ātma; we do not discuss the nature of Brahman, we do not discuss the aikyam between jivātma and paramātma. And therefore that knowledge, we are not discussing here.

First we have to gain the knowledge about karma yōga; which is not ātma jñānam. Having gained the knowledge about karma yōga we have to practice karma yōga, because gaining the knowledge about karma yōga will not liberate us. After gaining the knowledge about karma yōga, we have to practice karma yōga and purify the mind. And after purifying the mind, we have to gain the knowledge of ātma, that particular knowledge alone is liberating knowledge. And therefore whenever we talk about jñānam in the context of Gītā; you should remember, it is only one particular knowledge and that is advaita jñānam; jivātma paramātma aikya jñānam. All the other forms of knowledge, we do not call knowledge; that we should very clearly remember and that jīvātma paramātma aikya jñānam is discussed from verse No.13 up to verse No.21.

Here Krishna talked about higher nature, known as ātma, which is different from the physical body; which is different from the mind; which is otherwise known as ego. ahaṁkāra vyatirikta ātma jñānam. Ahaṁkāra is our lower self and ātma is our higher self; about that ātma, Krishna talked about till now; na"dattē kasyacit pāpaṁ na caiva sukṛtaṁ vibhuḥ; this higher nature is akartā; this higher nature is abōktā; and therefore it is free from puṇyaṁ and pāpam and therefore it is free from samsāra; and having talked about the higher nature Krishna says all our problems are because of the ignorance of this higher nature; like a person who is suffering in dream; he has lost all his money in dream; and he is wandering on the street; without food and he is also harassed by other people to get out of the dream suffering, he has to do only one thing; what is that: wake up to know that: I am comfortable lying down in an air-conditioned room; where power is there; this is to be added! Where electricity is there: I do not have any problem; so the dream suffering belongs to the unreal lower self, the waker is my higher nature, which is free from all suffering. And from vēdāntic angle, the waker himself is lower self, compared to which we have got still a higher self, which is identical with Īśvara himself. Śankarācārya tells in his Maniṣa pañcakam,

sarvaṁ caitadavidyayā triguṇayā:'śēṣaṁ mayā kalpitam |

I am that parambrahma, which has created this whole universe and which has created this small physical body also; and having created this world and the body, I have chosen to come down and identify with this body to play a drama; in fact, we are all avathārams of Lord; we have created this world and this body; and we have chosen to identify with the body and play a drama; but what has happened is, the drama has become damn serious; and it has become so serious that we have even forgotten the fact, that we alone are responsible for all this drama; like a person suffering in dream has forgotten the fact, I the waker has created this dream; and that is why in Kathōpaniṣad, we will be seeing the ācārya says; uttiṣṭatā jāgratā; (how long are you going to sleep, how long are you going to suffer in this nightmarish samsāra) Please wake up; and what is our nature, we generally do not wake up; even if we walk up, as we do when we were children, we walk up and roll to the other side and again continue to sleep. Some people get up, sit, drink coffee, bed coffee, without brushing the teeth in yesterday's account, and again lie down and sleep. Similarly, in every vēdānta class, we wake up and thereafterwards, we again go to sleep and therefore Krishna says; ajñānēna āvṛtam jñānam. All our problems are because of the ignorance of our higher nature; so ajñānēna āvṛtam jñānam; jñānam means knowledge; knowledge of what, knowledge of our own higher nature; and because of this self-ignorance, jantavaḥ muhyanti; Krishna does not want to call us even human being; Krishna says jantavaḥ muhyanti; you know what is a jantuḥ; an animal is called jantuḥ; and Krishna calls us all of us jantuḥ; and what is the derivation of the word jantuḥ; punaḥ punaḥ jāyathe iti jantuḥ; the one which is subject to repeated janma is jantuḥ; and when I am identified with body I have got punarapi jananam and therefore an ignorant human being is jantuḥ only; whereas wise person is no more a jantuḥ; because wise person does not say I am subject to birth; what does he say:

nāyaṃ bhūtvā bhavitā vā na bhūyaḥ |

I am not a jantuḥ, subject to birth and death; I am ajaḥ; janma rahitham brahma; and therefore all our problems are because of self-ignorance. So this verse is a very important verse; because here Krishna gives the diagnosis for our samsāra rōgaḥ; so because of the ignorance, jantavaḥ muhyanti; they are deluded, because once I am identified with the body, identification is one but the consequences are many. Just to see a few consequences: First consequence is: I become a finite entity; so spacially finite; and therefore I have a eagerness to travel all over; I have to see this, see that; world tour I have to go; Niagara I have see; Eiffel tower I have to see; therefore inordinate greed to travel; because I feel spacially finite; then time-wise also I am finite; when I mistake myself as the body; and I do not accept my time-wise infinitude; I do not want to die. I want to survive. And that is why even those people, it seems a person had written to the doctor and family members; if I get an incurable disease, please do not treat me; he has given permission and it was written; but before taking any action; the family members and doctors once again asked this person; would you like to survive, would you like to have a treatment; or would you like to die; then he changed his opinion and said; I would like to live; now he says; do not treat me; I do not mind dying; but when actually time comes; one more day, one more day; last grandson's thread ceremony is coming and I would like to see with my eyes. And once that is over, something else will come; because nobody wants mortality. Therefore identification with body leads to spacial limitation; timewise limitation; and thereafter so many other problems also; Therefore Krishna calls all of them as mōhaḥ; delusions galore; and therefore jantavaḥ muhyanti; samsāram anubhavanthi.

Now the question is what is the solution; diagnosis over; now what is the course of treatment; what antibiotics should be taken; what surgery should be done; that is going to be given in the next verse, which is also an important verse. 15 and 16 are important. I will tell you why it is important later.

तेषामादित्यवज्ज्ञानं प्रकाशयति तत्परम् ॥ ५.१६ ॥
jñānēna tu tadajñānaṃ yēṣāṃ nāśitamātmanaḥ |
tēṣāmādityavajjñānaṃ prakāśayati tatparam || 5.16 ||

16. However, knowledge illumines that supreme (Ātma) like the Sun for those, whose ignorance of the Ātma is destroyed by Knowledge.

The solution is going to be talked about. In the previous verse Krishna said that ignorance is the root cause; ajñānēna āvṛtam jñānam. Now if ignorance is the cause of problem, then what should be the solution; the ignorance must be removed. If a particular germ in water has caused the stomach upset, if some bacteria are responsible for a particular disease; what is the solution; that particular bacterium should be destroyed; for that only they have antibiotics. If ignorance is the bacteria; then we should find out a medicine to destroy ignorance. And which antibiotics will destroy ignorance-bacteria; there is only one medicine and that is jñānam.

Ignorance can be destroyed only by jñānam. Śankarācārya gives the example, just as darkness can be removed only by light. Suppose a person asks a question; there are how many methods to remove darkness; how many methods are there to remove darkness? Suppose somebody comes and tells; by sweeping you can remove darkness; and another person comes and tells; do yōgasana in the dark room; another person says do meditation in the dark room; and another person says chant Viṣṇu sahasranama in the dark room; with due respect to all these activities, in practice, none of them can remove darkness; because there is only one thing that is opposite to darkness and that is light; Śankarācārya tells this beautifully in Ātma Bodha;

विद्याविद्यां निहन्त्येव तेजस्तिमिरसङ्घवत् ॥ ३॥ avirōdhitayā karma nāvidyāṁ vinivartayēt |
vidyāvīdyāṁ nihantyēva tējastimirasaṅghavat || 3||

What a beautiful verse. It says action is not opposed to ignorance; and therefore action cannot destroy ignorance. Any ignorance. Suppose I have physics-ignorance. To remove physics-ignorance, I do daily one hour walk in the college; science college; and another person says: No No No; you should do aṣṭottara arcana to the physics professor. Physics professoraya Namaha! Will your ignorance go? Remember pooja is a karma; arcana is a karma, upasana is a karma; pradakṣiṇam is a karma; all those karmas have got their own results; we do not say they are useless; all of them have got their own results; but the result cannot be destruction of ignorance. If I want to destroy physics ignorance, what should I do; I have to study physics. There is no other means. Therefore Śankarācārya says, karma avidhyāyām na nivartatē; you may be doing lōkika karma; you may be doing vaidika karma; people Swamiji I get up 3 o' clock in the morning, I go to the temple, I do pārayāṇam; and I do sandhyavandana, I do brahma yajñā; we do not say that they are bad, they are excellent; but they cannot remove ignorance problem. Then what can they do; they can purify the mind; you have to attain knowledge to remove ignorance.

Now tell me how many paths are there for mōkṣa; Only four? Two or one? If ignorance is samsāra kāranam, mōkṣa can only be one path, which is not a path, that path is jñāna mārga eva. So karma yōga leads to liberation; bhakthi yōga leads to liberation; rāja yōga leads to liberation; all these things are not acceptable to Krishna, not acceptable to vēda also. This many path philosophy is not vēdic. There are many paths to purify the mind; that is the confusion; there are many paths to purify the mind; but there is only one path to liberation. That is why beautifully puruṣa sūktham says:

तमेवं विद्वानमृत इह भवति । नान्य पन्था विद्यतेऽयनाय tamēvaṁ vidvānamṛta iha bhavati |
nānya panthā vidyatē:'yanāya

there are not many mārgas to mōkṣa; tamēvaṁ vidvān, vidvān means jñāni; jñānam alone liberates. And therefore Krishna says here: ज्ञानेन तदज्ञानं नाशितम् jñānēna tadajñānaṁ nāśitam; knowledge alone destroys that ignorance.

Now the question is which knowledge; that is also important; any knowledge cannot destroy any ignorance; any knowledge cannot destroy any ignorance; a particular-knowledge can destroy only a particular-ignorance; physics-knowledge can destroy chemistry-ignorance? Physics-knowledge can destroy physics-ignorance; chemistry-knowledge can destroy chemistry-ignorance; but none of them can destroy Self-ignorance. He might be a P.hd. in physics and chemistry but as far as self-knowledge is concerned, vēdānta calls him an educated ignorant person; other people are illiterate ignorant people; these people are educated ignorant people. And therefore Krishna very carefully uses the word ātmanaḥ jñānēna ātmanaḥ ajñānam nāśitam; through self-knowledge alone self-ignorance is destroyed.

Now the next question is how to get self-knowledge; how to get self-knowledge. For this question, Krishna does not give an answer here, because he has already given the answer in the fourth chapter; and he expects us to remember. If you do not remember, I will remind you. In the fourth chapter, 34th verse Krishna said:

upadēkṣyanti tē jñānaṁ jñāninastattvadarśinaḥ || 4.34 ||

So what is the method of getting the knowledge; I have told you several times; systematic consistent study of the vēdāntic scriptures for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent ācārya. The systematic and consistent study of the vēdāntic scriptures for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent ācārya is called jñāna yōga. By that method one should gain self-knowledge.

Then what will happen; what will that knowledge do; Krishna says: तेषाम् tēṣām; for those wise people, ज्ञानं तत् पराम् प्रकाशयति jñānam tat parām prakāśayati. So the knowledge will reveal their own higher nature for themselves. So just as a torchlight will reveal an object; similarly, self-knowledge will reveal for me, my own higher nature; and a wonderful higher nature. So if it is going to be a miserable nature; better not to hear; but here it is going to reveal a nature: you are śudda svarūpaḥ; you are ever pure; that is the fact; and you are ever secure; that is the fact; you are ever full and complete; that is the fact; you need not depend upon any blessed one to be comfortable. In fact, whatever wonderful things you seek in life; they are within you; do you seek love; you are embodiment of love; in fact you need not get from anyone; you can freely give love; without the worry of exhausting; go on giving; and suppose the other person says: I do not love you. I can happily say that is your problem; still I love you; and not one person but to everyone in the world

nirmamō nirahaṅkāraḥ samaduḥkhasukhaḥ kṣamī || 12.13 ||

This wonderful Self you are; that higher Self, the self-knowledge will reveal.

And like what; Krishna gives an example; अदित्यवत् ādityavat; like the Sun. Imagine you are walking on the road; in the early morning before sunrise; all over there is darkness; and since the place is well illumined and especially you are walking in Madras, where you do not know where there is hole; whether it is flyover hole; manhole, for electricity, for water, how, because the road is not lit up, I fall and suffer; and imagine when the sun rises, the whole place is so bright, that I do not fall at all. Similarly, because of inner darkness, I am falling everywhere during my life's journey. For the wise man, the whole road is lit up; that there is no question of falling down. By falling down I mean figurative falling, in the form of anxiety, tension; worry; there is no fall at all; because the life is well lit up.

17. Those who the knowledge of that (Brahman,) who have that (Brahman) as the Ātma, who are established in that (Brahman,) who have that (Brahman) as the supreme goal, and whose impurities are completely destroyed by knowledge attain the goal of non-return.

Another beautiful verse. In fact all these verses are nice from 13 to 21. In this verse, Krishna talks about various stages of sādanās; that a person has to go through from the L.KG of spirituality. So I will rearrange the words for the sake of convenience so that we will get a chronological order of various stages.

What is first stage. तत्परायणाः tatparāyaṇāḥ. Tatparāyaṇāḥ; tat means what; my own higher self; independent self is parāyaṇāḥ; parāyaṇāḥ means the ultimate goal of my life; so now I am the lower self ego the ahaṁkāraḥ; and what is problem with ahaṁkāraḥ; it depends upon various external factors to be happy and secure; so anybody can upset me; every relationship is subject to strain and problem, because I cannot control the behaviour of the other person; and the other person's behaviour upsets me. I do not know why my husband is like that; wife is like that; I do not know how and why my children are like that; and as the family expands, the number of people that can disturb me goes on increasing; that is why somebody nicely said: सर्वं परवशं दुःखं sarvaṁ paravaśaṁ duḥkhaṁ; dependence on external factors is unhappiness because all the time I have to keep on adjusting other people, changing other people and then sometimes they call Swamiji also to their house to change their children. In the name of bhikṣa, they call and then indirectly ask questions keeping the child. It is not that they want to know; they want to correct the son; when they tell, the boy is not listening; so put everything through Swamiji. And the son is intelligent: therefore he says "Amma do not try to influence me indirectly". Therefore all the time we are struggling to change other members; change situations; constant adjustment of the knobs of the world; and at the age of 90, I come to know that I cannot change the people. What a miserable life; and therefore, the intelligent attitude is what: I should be happy and secure; not because of external conditions, I should be happy, fulfilled and secure, in spite of external conditions: That is called the inner freedom. In fact, this inner free self is called mokṣa; this independence is called Brahman. Do not think mōkṣa is going to forest; or mokṣa is some event happening after death; mōkṣa is the capacity to be comfortable even when the situations are not to my expectations. And therefore the advantage is I am not afraid of my future. Because I am ready for any type of future, because I know that future cannot influence my pūrṇata; as Krishna said in the second chapter:

tadvatkāmā yaṁ praviśanti sarvā
sa śāntimāpnōti na kāmakāmī || 2.70 ||

The ocean does not depend upon the rivers for its fullness; and if the rivers are going to claim that I am adding water to you; what will the ocean do, suppose the rivers Kaveri, Ganga, Yamuna etc. it goes and tells the ocean, I am supplying water to you; what will the ocean do; it would not even answer; because the ocean knows the river is not supplying water to the ocean. On the other hand, it is the other way round; ocean water alone gets evaporated and it again pours down as rain and the rainy waters accumulated become the river. So just as the ocean is full; whether the rivers flow or not; and whatever be the quality of river also. Ganga also merges, our coovam also merges; and what is my full self. I am like the ocean; experiences are like the rivers. Wonderful experiences come; and terrible experiences come; experiences do not come at all; like ocean aham ever pūrṇaḥ. What a wonderful state of mind it should be.

So once I clearly understand the glory of that freedom; thereafterwards, the effort in my life will be not to change the world; my struggle to change the world, my struggle to change the people, I will drop. And my aim will be struggle to change myself; what type of change, from the dependent-lower-self; I want to discover the independent-higher-self. And once my struggle is to transform myself, I have become a spiritual seeker. Until then, I am only a material groper, you know groping, doing something without knowing what to do; I am only a materialistic groper, not knowing what to do for peace of mind; but once I have known that self-transformation is required, I have become what; Tat parāyaṇāḥ. I have got direction in my life.

So what do I want now; not that I want to change my wife, children or grandchildren or governments, I want to change myself; and once I attempt that, then what is the next stage; तद्बुद्धयः tadbuddhayaḥ, I come to the scriptures which talk about my higher-independent-self and therefore I come to know that paramātmā, that higher nature of mind; buddhi means here jñānam; tat buddhihi means ātmā jñānam. In between stages Krishna slips karma yōga etc. we have to supply, Krishna wants to give a broad outline and therefore He skips karma yōga and comes to jñāna yōga. In jñāna yōga what do I discover; I discover my higher nature; tat buddhayaḥ means ātmā jñāninaḥ; so this is the next stage.

Then what is the next stage of sādānās; even after knowing my higher-self, I do not identify with that higher-self; I continue to identify with my lower-egoistic-self only; because I have fallen in love with my individuality; I as a father, I as a husband, I as a grandfather, I have got so much identification with my body-mind-complex, that I do not want to give it up. Like the slum people, even if government provides them better houses, you know what do they do; the better houses are given out for rent; and they come back the same slum. And the bonded labourers are rescued by the Government; and they are put in some rescue homes or so; and within a month or few weeks, you know what they do; they give up that rescue home and go back to the same old place, where they were bonded labourers. We were under the control of British for a few hundred years and when some of the freedom fighters wanted freedom; many of the Indians resisted that and they said: why all that: let them rule itself; Even now there are some people of the older generation; who feel british rule is better; When I am controlled by someone, after some time, that slavery itself, I get addicted to and therefore I continue to be the ahaṁkāra. This is called vāsana; dēhātma vāsana; and therefore what do I say; I am samsāri; and I have got a higher self and that ātmā is liberated; I am asamsāri. Now after coming to the class, Swamiji I come to know that I have got a higher self; as if it is somewhere up, and that is liberated. What is the use? So therefore comes the next sādānās.

What is the next sādānās; I have to train myself to switch my identification from the lower individuality, the father-I, the wife-I, the mother-I, the husband-I, all these the MA-I, the Bsc.-I, Phd-I, all these are egoistic-I. In fact we go to one more extent and say even the devotee-I is an ego. And I am a great devotee; I have given so much land to the Lord; and some people have got I am a sanyāsi-I; that is a still bigger ego; all of you grihasthās should do namaskārams to me. Of all the four āśramas, sanyāsa āśrama is supposed to be greatest āśrama, I have renounced everything. The śāstrā says you have renounced everything, but you have not renounced the notion that 'I have renounced everything'. Therefore śāstrā says:

उभे सत्यानृते त्यजा ॥
उभे सच्यानृते त्यक्त्वा ।
येन त्यजति तत् त्यज ॥
tyaja dharma-adharmamca |
ubhe satyānṛte tyajā ||
ubhe sacyānṛte tyaktvā |

After renouncing everything, the abhimāna that 'I am a great renouncer', that abhimāna also you renounce; but it is not that easy. I have finished Gītā; another ego; I have finished Brahmasūtra also; another ego. So that ego is very very powerful. Even though you constantly say E go, (old E, in English means You) E go, repeatedly you say, it will not easily go; therefore comes the practice of shifting the I from the relative I to the absolute Brahman-I.

In fact, this takes the longest time. Knowing about the higher self is easy; but dropping the abhimāna with the lower self is not that easy. And therefore Krishna says tat ātmanaḥ; tat ātmanaḥ means identifying with the higher self. And in fact, in the traditional stages of sādānās, sanyāsa āśrama is only to facilitate this disidentification. It is only to facilitate because, when a person takes sanyāsa, he cuts off all the relationships, because every relationship invokes a corresponding ego; So wife invokes husband ego; son invokes parent ego; parent invokes son ego; every relationship invokes an ego; And therefore in sanyāsa āśrama; says; Asaṅgōham; Asaṅgōham. Then thereafter also sanyāsi ego, guru ego; śiṣyā ego; they all are there; all of them have to be dropped; any personality is samsāra. And therefore tātmanaḥ means identify with the higher self; and the higher self is father or mother?

न ताता न माता, न गुरुर् नैव शिष्यः; न बन्धुः न मित्रम्
na tātā na mātā, na gurur naiva śiṣya; na bandhuḥ na mitram

Nothing is there; that is all from the standpoint of the body; but that does not mean you go home today and say that you are no more wife or husband; do not tell at all that; as it is problem; so having understood the higher nature, you decide to play the role of a husband; you decide to play the role of a wife; role of a brother; convert every action into role playing; this is called nidhidhyāsanam. So morning I should remember all my activities are role playing; and night I should again remind myself that all these are role playing; so this is called nidhidhyāsanam; tat ātmanaḥ.

So then the next and final stage is तन्निष्ठाः tanniṣṭhāḥ; so once a person deliberately practices this; Śankarācārya has written many slōkās to assist this process; they are all called nidhidhyāsanā slōkās;

न च श्रोत्रजिह्वे न च घ्राणनेत्रे .
न च व्योमभूमिः न तेजो न वायुः
चिदानंदरूपः शिवोऽहं शिवोऽहम् .. १..

manōbuddhyahamkāraccittāni nāham
na ca śrōtrajivhē na ca ghrāṇanētrē .
na ca vyōmabhūmiḥ na tējō na vāyuḥ cidānaṁdarūpaḥ śivō:'ham śivō:'ham .. 1..

न मे द्वेषरागौ न मे लोभमोहौ
मदो नैव मे नैव मात्सर्यभावः .
न धर्मो न चार्थो न कामो न मोक्षः
चिदानंदरूपः शिवोऽहं शिवोऽहम् .. ३..
na mē dvēṣarāgau na mē lōbhamōhau madō naiva mē naiva mātsaryabhāvaḥ .
na dharmō na cārthō na kāmō na mōkṣaḥ
cidānaṁdarūpaḥ śivō:'ham śivō:'ham .. 3..

Every time I repeat this body is an incidental equipment I use. These sense organs are incidental instruments I use. Even the mind and intellect are only incidental media, I operate through; I am not the instruments; I am the consciousness behind the instruments; this when I repeatedly practice, it becomes spontaneous and natural. So when a person gets married from bachelorhood to householder-hood, for some days he does not remember, whether he is a bachelor or a householder. After repeatedly practising, now even in dream, he will dream as only a householder. So even though the external change takes place, the internal change takes time; in our case, we all are given different names; when we take a bramācārya diksha, we are given a new name; and we ourselves forget our new name; and when somebody calls us by that new name, we do not respond; after some time the new name sets in. Then when we are given sanyāsa, another new name; so each time, the change externally happens quickly, but the internal transformation takes time; and when the transformation is complete, it is called tanniṣṭhāḥ; so they get established in their higher nature.

So can you guess these four stages of knowledge;

- first value for discovering the higher self;
- then the next stage is discovering the higher self;
- then the next stage is learning to identify with the higher self and gradually dis-identify from the lower self;
- and then the fourth and final stage is the identification with the higher self becomes natural.

And such people; what will happen to them; they are called brahma nishtaha; they are called jñāna niṣṭhāḥ;

What will happen to them; ज्ञाननिर्धूतकल्मषाः jñānanirdhūtakalmaṣāḥ; they are free from all the impurities; washed off by knowledge; all the impurities are gone. And varieties of impurities are there;

- ignorance is an impurity;
- and after studying the scriptures, doubt is another impurity; everything is fine; but, that but will always butt in;

- and thereafterwards ignorance is also gone; doubt is also gone; but habitual vāsanās, dēhabhimāna continues; that is the third impurity.

Ajñāna, śaṁśaya, viparyayaḥ; ignorance, doubt, and habitual body identification. All these come under kalmaṣāḥ. And all these kalmaṣāḥ are nirdhūtam; wiped out by the power of knowledge. This is called jīvan mukti; so such people enjoy jivan mukti; how long; as long as their prārabdha karma is there; and once the prārabdha karma is over; their body falls off; they do not die; because they are higher self; which is eternal; the incidental body falls off; and they do not have punarjanma. Therefore Krishna says; अपुनरावृत्तिम् गच्छन्ति apunarāvṛttim gacchanti; they attain vidēha mukti; apunarāvṛtti means vidēha mukti; they do not have punarapi jananam; punarapi maranam cycle. More in the next class.

ॐ

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

अस्मद् आचार्य पर्यन्ताम् वन्दे गुरु परम्पराम्

sadāśiva samārambhāṁ śaṅkarācāryamadhyamām

Om

From the 13th verse onwards, Lord Krishna has been discussing jñāna yōga which is the central theme of this chapter; and this jñāna yōga alone leads to inner renunciation or inner detachment, which alone is the real renunciation according to Krishna. External renunciation can be practised only to some extent; nobody can totally renounce externally. Even if a person gives up family relationships; even if he gives up money, job, everything; still he will be staying in some āśrama or kutia; which he cannot renounce; still he will have to some food, clothes, etc. which he cannot renounce; externally only partial renunciation is possible; total renunciation is possible only internally.

And what is that internal renunciation; discovery of that higher nature, the ātma; and how the ātma is not associated with anything in the creation. Just as the space accommodates everything, the space is not connected to, hooked to, anything. If space is connected to any object, when the object travels the space also will travel. This nature of space by which it is close to everything; but not connected to anything is called asaṅga svabhāva. The screen in the movie is asaṅga svabhāva; the screen is associated with every scene in the movie, but the water in the movie does not wet the screen, fire in the movie does not burn the screen; why, the screen is asaṅgaḥ; asaṅgaḥ; it is intimately closer but not tainted by anything. And this asaṅgata is the svarūpam of ātma; and when I recognise my asaṅga svarūpam, I know I accommodate everything but I am not related to anything.

And this understanding of the relationless-ness is called sanyāsaḥ; and this real renunciation takes place only through wisdom; and such a person will move with everyone but is not attached to any person; he loves every person but not hooked to any person. He lives in every place but he is not rooted to any place, which is born out of inner renunciation. and this inner renunciation is possible through jñānam which is called vidvat sanyāsaḥ; and because of this reason alone, this chapter itself is called sanyasa yōgaḥ; inner detachment through knowledge. And in this 17th verse, which we saw in the last class, Lord Krishna talked about the stages of this particular wisdom:

the first stage is having a value for this wisdom; you cannot pursue something seriously unless you have a value and especially when it is a difficult pursuit, you cannot casually approach. If you have to go to Manasarovar, unless you have a tremendous value, you cannot spend thousands of rupees acclimatise and do lot of things. Not a joke; so when a pursuit is not that easy, if I have to put my heart and soul in it; it is possible only when I have a sincere value, which Krishna called parāyaṇātvam; obsession with self-knowledge. Somehow I have to attain that. That obsession is called; that deep yearning, as somebody gave the example; when I am under the water for a minute or two; how I want to come out and breathe; so that yearning for breathing; how much is there; that must the thirst for that wisdom; and that value is called tat parāyaṇātvam.

And the next stage is knowing the ātma as the consciousness in the body; it is the second stage;

And the third stage is learning to identify with the ātma as myself. Previously I say I-am-the-body and I have ātma; and I should have sufficient training to reverse the whole process, instead of saying I-am-the-body, I-have-the-ātma; I should put it the other way around; I-am-the-ātma; and I have an incidental body; which will be taken away (this has to be repeated then only one gets the buddhi!); which will be taken away at any time by the Lord without any notice. At least for company, rent and all, one month's notice and all is there. Bhagavān need not give any notice; therefore body is an incidental medium possessed by me; I am the consciousness and that too what consciousness, eternal consciousness which the Lord will never take away; In fact Lord cannot take away. So can you see the stages;

- First stage is value for knowledge.
- Second stage is knowing I have ātma;

- Third stage is owning and claiming I am the ātma;
- Fourth and final stage is this owning up becomes very spontaneous to me.

So in and through all my transactions, I do not forget this truth. Just as a cinema actor or a drama actor may play different roles but in and through all the roles; the actor will know who he is behind several roles. Similarly, jñāna niṣṭā means I know fatherhood is a role that I play; I am not the father; I am not the mother; I am not husband; I am not wife; all are relative roles. In fact, even I am not a human being; because the humanness is from the standpoint of the physical body only; thus all these personalities and roles should become mere roles only. And this constant effortless awareness is called jñāna niṣṭā; and how do I know I have that constant awareness; what is the indication of that niṣṭā; any knowledge is spontaneous, if it is accessible to me during crisis. Any knowledge is spontaneous, if it is accessible, not in the class, it is very nice in the class; during the crisis it should be accessible; it is in the notebook or in the cassette record, etc. if you say; what is the use:

पर हस्ते च या धनम् ।
अवश्य काले सम्प्राप्ते न स विद्या न तत् धनम् ॥ pustakasya ca yā vidyā
para hastē ca ya dhanam |
avaśya kālē samprāptē
na sa vidhyā na tat dhanam ||

Pustakasya ca yā vidyā; a knowledge which is very well recorded in the books and cassettes and para hastē ca ya dhanam; the money which is in some other hands; avaśya kālē samprāptē, when I really need, na sa vidhyā na tat dhanam. It should be available for me and this effortless, spontaneous accessibility, availability, indicates aham jñāna niṣṭā.

And what is the benefit; the benefit is I am jīvan muktaḥ while living and after death I am vidēha muktaḥ; which means I am free from the cycles of punarapi jananam and punarapi maranam. Up to this we saw in the last class.

18. The wise (people) see the same (Brahman) in a Brahmin who has knowledge and humility, in an elephant, in a dog, and in a dog-eater.

In these two verses, Krishna talks about the benefit of this knowledge; What type of transformation, this knowledge brings about in the seeker's life; so this transformation is not a temporary transformation; but the very way he looks at the people and creations, there is a change; because according to vēdānta; our problems are not because of the world and the people; our samsāra is not caused by the world and people, because in the very same world, the liberated jñānis also live. It is in the very same world; they enjoy ānanda; the jñāni sings.

Translation:

To the one who has realized Brahman in all aspects, the whole world becomes the heavenly garden; all the objects the kalpavṛkṣās (the wishyielding trees); every water-flow the holy Ganges; all his actions, virtue and auspiciousness; the elevated as well as the foolish talks (words) the Vedāntavākyaś; the entire earth, Vārānaśī. Every thought or awareness of his reveals to Him only Brahman.

For a jñāni, the whole world is a relaxation ground, nandanavanam, and all trees are kāmadhēnu and all places are Varanasi; all rivers, including coovam is gaṅga is for him; that means world remaining the same, the people remaining the same if the jñānis can enjoy ānanda, it means the problem is not with the world but the problem is in the way that we see the world, our perspective. Therefore vēdānta is not going to transform the world, but vēdānta is going to transform my perspective of the world and what type of perspective of view I will have with regard to the world; the psychology is this; as somebody nicely said, world is like a mirror. World is like a mirror. I see only myself in the world. I am seeing only myself in the world. Therefore the way I look at the world depends upon the way I look at myself. For example, suppose I am very much bothered about my dressing; how I should dress. For some people, it is a very very big issue. They have to stand in front of their bureau; to wear this or that; half an hour to decide which dress is to be worn; whenever I come in contact with the people which aspect I will see in them; if I am dress-conscious, I will see how the people are dressing; if I am hair-style oriented; I will study the hair-style. If I am physical look oriented, I will study the physical personality. If I am the emotional personality oriented; I will see the emotional personality of people. If I am an intellectual, again I will look for intellectuality in others. And that is why Ramaṇa Maharshi tells beautifully in Sat darśanam;

सरूपधीरात्मनि यावदस्ति।
अरूप आत्मा यदि कः प्रपश्येत् सा दृष्टिरेकाऽनवधिर्हि पूर्णा ॥६॥ sarūpabuddhirjagadīśvarē ca
sarūpadhīrātmani yāvadasti| arūpa ātmā yadi kaḥ prapaśyēt
sā dṛṣṭirēkā:navadhirhi pūrṇā ||6||

Even God that you visualise depends upon which aspect of your personality, you are obsessed with. If I am obsessed with my physical look, my picturisation of God will be sunderah; or sundari; not more than that; because I am body-oriented; God I picturise as beautiful; if I am an emotional person, for me the Lord becomes a symbol of love, compassion, care, etc. If I am a rational person, intellectual; I look at the Lord as the omniscient one; therefore as I look at, so I look at the Lord; if I am saṅuṇa jīva; īśvara also will be saṅuṇa īśvaraḥ only; if I understand I am nirṅuṇa caitanyam; then perception of the God as nirṅuṇa caitanyam. Therefore both world and God, I look based on my understanding of myself.

And therefore Krishna says, jñāni looks upon himself as what; ātma; he looks at the body as vāsāmsi jīrṇāni yathā vihāya; it is a temporary dress. And if jñāni looks upon himself as I am ātma; then how will I look upon everyone; Same thing; therefore in jñāni's vision, everyone is ātma; every one is caitanyam; and just as I am the ātma with an incidental body; similarly, all of you are ātma with an incidental body; with a superficial quoting; and if I look upon and I as both ātma; Krishna says there is no difference at all; sarvatra sama darśanam.

Therefore the benefit of knowledge, Krishna says, is sarvatra sama darśanam and this sama darśanam is not through the physical eye; it is through the eye of wisdom. ज्ञान चक्षुषा, दिव्य चक्षुषा, सर्वत्र समं असङ्गं सच्चिदानन्दम् चैतन्यम् पश्यति jñāna cakṣuṣā, divya cakṣuṣā, sarvatra samam asangaṁ saccidāndam caitanyam paśyati. And what about the physical organ; they will see the differences but the differences are seen as superficial differences; thus differences will become less pronounced and samatvam will become more pronounced.

This is the change of perspective which is like a hundred rupee note in the hands of a child and in your hand. For the child, all the papers are the same. Sama darśanam; a five hundred rupee note also is a piece of paper, it may tear it and throw or it will try to eat; and you do see the paper; not that you are missing the paper, but in and through the paper, you see some other thing; which is borne out of understanding. In the same way, jñāni is sama dṛṣṭi; ajñānis are viśama dṛṣṭi. Jñāni is abhēda dṛṣṭi; ajñānis are bheda dṛṣṭi; this is the essence of the ślōkā; that is sama darśanam is spontaneous.

Therefore Krishna says, पण्डिताः समदर्शिनः paṇḍitāḥ samadarśinaḥ. Here paṇḍitāḥ means jñānis, ātma jñānis. Even though in English and other languages, the word paṇḍitāḥ means a scholar in any field, in school and all we say, Hindi paṇḍit, Sanskrit paṇḍit; in other languages, pandit means a scholar in any field; but in the Gita, paṇḍitāḥ means ātma jñāni. And incidentally, this is the explanation of the word paṇḍitāḥ which Krishna has used in the first verse of his teaching. In the 2nd chapter, 11th verse;

gatāsūnagatāsūmśca nānuśōcanti paṇḍitāḥ || 2.11 ||

If you want to know what is the definition of paṇḍitāḥ, it is given in this verse; paṇḍitāḥ sama samadarśinaḥ. Not through the physical eye, every careful. In physical eyes, I see differences; there are different colours and different forms and different smells, the fleshy eyes are meant to see the differences; and suppose the eyes begin to see everything same. If everything is seen as same; ready for cataract surgery. This eye if it sees samatvam, one has to go hospital; if jñāna eye sees samatvam, you are ready for moksha. Therefore do not miss that. paṇḍitāḥ sama samadarśinaḥ; here the word sama means sama ātma darśinaḥ.

And where do they see the samatvam; he gives a big list of widely different things in the world; what are they; विद्याविनयसम्पन्ने ब्राह्मणे vidyāvinayasampannē brāhmaṇē. So brāhmaṇa is one extreme in this case; brāhmaṇa means a cultured informed educated, refined person is called brāhmaṇa; satva guṇa pradhānaḥ brāhmaṇa, And in fact, in Brihadaranya upaniṣad, the ācārya says, the real title brāhmaṇa can be given to only a brahma jñāni. The other people can be called brāhmaṇa in the secondary sense of the term; but the primary meaning of the world brāhmaṇa is jñāni.

tasmādbrahmaṇaḥ paṇḍityaṃ nirvidya bālyēna tiṣṭhāsēt | bālyam ca paṇḍityaṃ ca nirvidyātha munir amaunaṃ ca maunaṃ ca nirvidyātha brāhmaṇaḥ | sa brāhmaṇaḥ kēna syād

"Therefore the BrāhmaNa, having known all about scholarship, should try to live upon that strength which comes of knowledge. Having known all about this strength and scholarship, he becomes meditative; having known all about meditateness and its opposite, he becomes a BrāhmaNa (knower of Brahman)."

After śravaṇam, mananam, and nididhyāsanam, when a person becomes brahma niṣṭhaḥ; he alone deserves the title brāhmaṇaḥ.

So here a brāhmaṇaḥ, who is endowed with what character, vidyāvinayasampannē; who is very rich person; rich in what; what is the real wealth, according to śāstrā, the real wealth is jñānam; the material wealth is only secondary wealth; real wealth vidya dānam; sarva dānāt pradhānam. Because the other wealth can purchase only finite things in the creation; whereas knowledge is the only wealth, with which we can "purchase" the infinite mōkṣa itself; and therefore we have this well-known saying विद्या धानम् सर्वं धानात् प्रधानम् vidhyā dhānam sarva dhānāt pradhānam.

In Taittiriya upaniṣad;

.. द्रविणं सवर्चसम् । सुमेधोऽमृतोक्षितः । इति त्रिशङ्कोर्वेदानुवचनम् ॥ १ ॥

.. draviṇa savarcasam | sumēdha amṛtōkṣitaḥ | iti triśaṅkōrvēdānuvacanam || 1 ||

So this knowledge is said to be dravinam, the wealth; and therefore, the world sampanna is what; brāhmaṇa is one who is rich in knowledge wealth. According to varṇa āśrama dharma, a brāhmaṇa is not supposed to be materially rich, he is supposed to voluntarily practice poverty. According to tradition, I am not asking you now; according to tradition, a brāhmaṇa has to be voluntarily poor; and voluntarily simple.

And if he is poor in the material sense of the term; this material poverty is amply compensated by another wealth and what is that wealth; jñāna dhānam; and therefore vidyā sampannaḥ; a brahmin is one who is rich in knowledge wealth and because of this knowledge, he has got what; vinaya sampannaḥ, and he is an embodiment of humility; vinayaḥ means humility; amānitvam; because vidya cannot come, without vinayaḥ; as I had said the other day, water will flow only to a lower level, from higher level; similarly only a humble mind can receive the wisdom. And that is why we indicate the humility by bending; indicating what, when I bend I accept I am in a lower level. and when I bend in front of someone I accept that; the other one is higher level; and therefore adhihi bhagavaḥ; please give me wisdom; therefore, without humility, wisdom cannot come; and therefore brāhmaṇa is one who is the embodiment of wisdom and humility. This is the highest in this case.

Then Krishna talks about the other ones also; then गवि gavi; gavi means in a cow; गौहः gowhu; means a cow, which is very much respected in our tradition; it is considered to be a sātvic animal; that is why गौ go pooja is part of our culture; गवा मङ्गेषु तिष्ठन्ति सर्वे देवाः gavā maṅgēṣu tiṣṭanti sarvē dēvāḥ

All the dēvās are supposed to be in the body of the cow, that is why even now in the village, whenever they see a cow, they will do a pradakṣiṇam; because pradakṣiṇam to a cow, is supposed to be equal, to the pradakṣiṇam of all the dēvathās; and therefore the satvic cow is the second.

Why does Krishna enumerate all these things; you should know the purpose of all these enumeration; Jñāni sees same ātma in all these.

What is the third one: हस्तिनि hastini; hasti means elephant. And that is also very much respected in our tradition. In the temple festivals, elephant comes, elephant is worshipped as the embodiment of Vināyaka; therefore hasti;

And then शुनि śuni; among the animals, according to tradition, the lowest category is śva or dog; that is why in the olden tradition, they were not keeping, but nowadays, we should not do; and perhaps keep the dog first; because whether there is elephant or cow in the house, a dog is a must! and for many people, the attachment towards the dog is so much, that if you say dog is considered a lower animal, they get angry. Do not get angry; he gives the list; śva is the dog.

And the next one is श्वपाकः śvapākaḥ; śvapākaḥ means an uncultured person; literally it means the one who eats a dog; dog eater. In our culture, meat eating itself is looked down upon; not accepted because it involves himsa;

na magum samsaniyāt; mamsam na asniyāt; na surām pibet; one should not take liquor. One should not eat meat; especially if one has come to the spiritual field. and therefore meat eating itself is considered to be a tāmasic karma; which promotes tamo guna; And among the meat eating people also, the dog eater is considered to be the worst one; and therefore Krishna puts in the spectrum, the dog eater as the last one; so the other side of the spectrum, we have got a brāhmaṇa; in this side of the spectrum; we have got śvapākaḥ; in between all human beings all animals, we have to include even plants.

Now the question is all these are same or different. Very simple, as even we read the list, we know they are all widely different; In fact differences alone are glaringly perceived; how can an elephant and a cow be the same; as even you see the size, you see the difference. So therefore differences are there; but what Krishna wants to say is differences belong to the superficial sthoola sūkṣma level. The physical bodies are different; the minds are different; even the culture that you talk about, even the character that you talk about belongs to the śarīram or ātma; so when you say a brāhmaṇa is sātvic person; and a śvapākaḥ is a tāmasic person, these two characters, sātvic and tāmasic characters belong to the body or ātma; the character belongs to the body alone; some characters belong to stūla śarīram; some characters belong to the sūkṣma śarīram; all the guṇās also belong to the śarīram; ātma is nirguṇaḥ; and therefore all the differences belong to the anātma only; and jñāni's vision is focused on what; ātma. and therefore sarvatra; sarvēṣu śarīreṣu sama darśinaḥ.

But we should be very very careful here; when we say jñāni is sama darshi; that sama darśanam is only in the back of his mind; in the sub-conscious mind, this wisdom is like tampura śruti; it is constantly going; but he knows that in transaction, differences have to be accommodated and dealt with accordingly. Otherwise what will happen; you give a glass of water; sarvathra, sama darśinaḥ; we will not know which is glass, which is water; he cannot swallow the glass; does it happen. So a wise man knows that at the empirical level; at the transaction level; man is man; women is women; book is book; glass is glass; water is water; he does not get confused; vyavahārē bhēdāḥ; therefore their I have to follow what dharma. So in vyavahara, I have to follow dharma śāstrām; and for following dharma śāstrām, the ātma jñānam in the background will be helpful. That is why Sankaracharya says in one of his works;

क्रियात् द्वैतम् न कर्हिचित् ।
अद्वैतम् त्रिषु लोकेषु न अद्वैतम् गुरुणा सह ।
bhāvāt dvaitam sadā kuryāt
kriyāt dvaitam na karhicit | advaitam triṣu lōkēṣu
na advētam guruṇā saha |

So bhāvāt dvaitam sadā kuryāt. Let the advaita jñānam be there in the background. In Vyavahāra everything has to be treated as it deserves to be treated. kriyāt dvaitam na karhicit; and advaitam triṣu lōkēṣu, na advētam guruṇā saha.

After studying the advaita śāstrām from the guru; the śiṣyā goes and tells; both of us are one; until I have done namasakāra to you; for a change, why can't you do namasakāra to me. Do not ask like that; guru is guru; he has to be respected. let the wisdom be there in the background; and therefore, samadarśanam is in the subconscious mind; exactly like even if you handle hundreds of ornaments, knowing the difference; bangle is an ornament which has to be put in the hand; chain is an ornament, necklace is an ornament to be put on the neck; ring is an ornament which has to be put on the finger; even though I treat the ornaments differently; all the time I know what: sarvathra gold darśanam. But that gold darśanam does not confuse you; you treat them differently; that is called vyavahārika bhēda, but you are aware of their svarnataḥ. This is called wisdom.

Continuing.

इहैव तैर्जितः सर्गः येषां साम्ये स्थितं मनः।

निर्दोषं हि समं ब्रह्म तस्माद् ब्रह्मणि ते स्थिताः ॥५.१९॥

ihaiva tairjitaḥ sargō yēṣāṁ sāmyē sthitaṁ manaḥ |

nirdōṣaṁ hi samaṁ brahma tasmād-brahmaṇi tē sthitāḥ | | 5.19 | |

इह एव iha eva here itself सर्गः जितः sargaḥ jitaḥ birth is over come तैः taiḥ by them येषां मनः yēṣāṁ mana whose mind स्थितं साम्ये sthitaṁ samye is established in sameness, ब्रह्म हि brahma hi Brahma is indeed समम् samam the same निर्दोषम् nirdoṣam and defect less, तस्मात् tasmāt therefore ते te sthitaha they are established स्थिताः sthitāḥ in Brahman.

19. Here itself birth is overcome by them whose mind is established in sameness. Brahman is indeed the same and defectless. Therefore they are established in Brahman.

So this is another important verse. I do not feel like saying that this is an important verse, because all these verses are very important. So this verse is important from a particular angle, because in the philosophy there is one discussion whether liberation is while living; or it is after death. This is one of the discussion in the philosophy. And many philosophers point out that liberation is not possible while living; liberation is only after death and they describe liberation as going to a particular place after death. Either they will say Śiva loka prāp̥thi; Viṣṇu loka prāp̥thi; or some prap̥thi; this is how liberation is understood by many people; but in advaitam, we emphasise it is not so; liberation is possible here and now. And in support of this view, we take this particular verse wherein Krishna clearly says one gets freedom: इहैव ihava; iha means here, now itself, here and now liberation is possible for whom; तैःसर्गः जितः taiḥ sargaḥ jitaḥ taiḥ means by the people of abēda dṛṣṭi; sama dṛṣṭi; taiḥ; means sama dṛṣṭi; jñānibi; by the jñāni, sargaḥ jitaḥ; sargaḥ means punarapi jananam punarapi maranam cycle, otherwise called samsāra; jitaḥ; means conquered; so samsāra is conquered; samsāra is overcome; samsāra is mastered by the jñānis here and now; that means samsāra does not affect them.

Why? because there vision has changed; going back to the example that I give when the wave was taking itself to be a wave, imagine wave is self-conscious; so when a wave looks out itself as a wave, what will be its thinking; I am born out of the ocean; and I have got a date of birth; and now I am growing older and older; and even I am giving chocolates to other waves, today is my birthday; I am also afraid that as a wave I will disintegrate and merge into ocean which is my death; therefore as I look upon myself as a wave, I am a mortal wave; subject to the power of the wind, because the wind alone decides my birth and death; the wind indicating prārabhda. But imagine the very wave has shifted the vision and instead of mistaking itself to be a wave, it claims that I am water with an incidental form; the wind has not created me; I have been there all the time; wind has only given a shape to me; and that shape is incidental; and the shape is bound to go. So whether shape is there or not, whether form is there or not; I am the eternal water; and even when the Sun evaporates me; I the water will continue in the form of steam or humidity; and even when I am pouring down; I continue as a rain, and when it pours into streams, I am called rivers; my names are different; but I am the eternal water; then that wave is an enlightened wave.

Similarly here also, because of the shift of the perspective, I am no more subject to birth and death; na jāyatē mriyatē vā kadācit, nāyaṁ bhūtvā bhavitā vā na bhūyaḥ. Just as in sleep, I am not transacting through the body, during sleep, my transaction ends; but I continue to survive. The end of transaction is not the end of me. Similarly during death; this physical body may go away; and I will stop transaction through this body; but I am surviving. And therefore the fear of mortality is gone;

And therefore Krishna says sargaḥ jitaḥ; mortality or samsāra is won over by them; by them, means by whom, yēṣāṁ manaḥ sāmyē sthitaṁ; whose mind is established in sama darśinaḥ. Even for one moment the wave forgets its true nature; the wave is afraid; I am going towards the shore; if I reach the shore, I will die; nearby the husband wave, wife wave, grandson wave, I have to take leave of all of them; even the momentary slip, I am mortal; So therefore the mind should have the nistaḥ; therefore Krishna uses the word sama darśine sthitham; but not in transaction remember, it is in the subconscious mind. When people ask who are you; he would not say: I am stūla sūkṣma kāraṇa śarīra vyathiriktha avasata traya sākṣi svarūpaḥ; pancha kōśa vilakṣaṇa satcidananda svarūpaḥ; if you say, that they will run away fast. So for worldly transactions say I am son of so and so and I am the son the father, this mother, and my degree etc. give the bio-data for worldly purposes, but let there be deep all these bio-data are stories; which people will forget in a few decades.

And therefore, येषां मनः साम्ये स्थितं yēṣāṃ manaḥ sām्यē sthitaṃ; then what is the nature of that; sama vasthu; समं ब्रह्म samaṃ brahma, so that sama vasthu, sama means the same inherent entity which is in every one is called Brahman; otherwise called chaitanyam; and that is why everyone starts by saying what: I am. Whatever qualifications you may add; how do you start your introduction; I am. Therefore what is the common factor in all of them; I am. And the word is I is chit svarūpam; because a conscious entity alone can say I; table cannot say that; therefore I means consciousness, am means existence; this consciousness-existence, sat-chit alone is common to all of us; which we are saying I am; so I am refers to what ātma; thereafter we add so many things. son, daughter, educated, big man, small man, all the later additions belong to either stūla sariram or sūkṣma śarīram. So therefore, that sama vasthu is called Brahman; why is it called Brahman; because that consciousness seems to be in and through every living being; wave has a location; but water does not have a location; because water is in and through all the waves. Similarly, body is located, mind is located, but the consciousness is in and through all the bodies and mind; therefore how big it is. It is brahma; brahma means anantham. So that anantham Brahma is the uniform thread which is inherent in all the people and what is the nature of that Brahman निर्दोषं nirdōṣaṃ; that Brahman is ever shuddham. It is ever beautiful; it is ever secure; it is ever pure; why can't you claim the ever pure Brahman, why do you claim, the ever impure body. Why are you crying attached to the body. Use the body but own up the ātma; this is what the jñāni has done; therefore ब्रह्मणि स्थिताः brahmaṇi sthitaḥ; jñānis are ever established in Brahman.

ॐ

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

अस्मद् आचार्य पर्यन्ताम् वन्दे गुरु परम्पराम्

sadāśiva samārambhāṁ śaṅkarācāryamadhyamām
asmad ācārya paryantām vandē guru paramparām

Om

Lord Krishna has been dealing with the topic of jñāna yōga from verse No.13 onwards; which runs up to verse No.21. And we saw that jñāna yōga is the process of discovering my higher self or my real nature and this discovery has to take place in two stages, the first stage is I am not the body-mind-complex, but I am the consciousness which is pervading the body-mind-complex and which is different from the body-mind-complex. अनात्म व्यतिरिक्त अत्म स्वरूपः अहमस्मि; क्षेत्र व्यतिरिक्त क्षेत्रज्ञः अहमस्मि; anātma vyatirikta ātma svarūpaḥ ahamasmi; kṣētra vyatirikta kṣētrajñāḥ ahamasmi; this is the first stage of discovery;

And then comes the second important stage in which I discover the fact that I, the consciousness, who am pervading this physical body, is the same consciousness which is pervading all the other physical bodies also; which means the bodies are many, but the pervading consciousness is one. And that non-dual pervading consciousness I am. And when I discover that my real nature is consciousness and naturally when I look at you, I also know that your real nature is also consciousness; because the way I look upon myself will be the way that I look upon you also. If I take myself to be the physical body, I am going to take you also; as the physical body; as I said in the last class, as I see myself, so I see the world also; and if my vision of myself has undergone a radical change, my vision of the world also will change.

And in the case of a jñāni; jñāni sees himself as ātma and therefore he sees everyone else also as ātma; and to remember the example that I gave, the example of many waves in the ocean. And imagine that the wave is a sentient wave, capable of thinking and knowing; if the wave is going to look upon itself as a wave; then it will look upon all the other waves also as perishable mortal waves only. And imagine the waves discovers that I am not a wave, but my essential nature is water; and the wave-ness is only an incidental feature; the incidental wave-ness will come and go, but the essential water-ness will not come and go; and therefore I am essentially water. If the wave discovers this fact, then the wave will look upon itself as water; and the wave will look upon the other waves also as water only.

And therefore Krishna said, vidyāvinayasampannē brāhmaṇē gavi hastini| śuni caiva śvapākē ca paṇḍitāḥ samadarśinaḥ (5.18); I see the ātma the essential nature in me; the word see is within quotes; see through the eye of wisdom; I see or look upon you as a essentially ātma, with incidental nāma rupa. And just as I take myself to be the immortal ātma; I will look upon you also as the immortal ātma only. If I take myself as śuddha ātma; I look upon you also as śuddha ātma; I will address you as pure one; immortal ones; beautiful ones; wonderful ones; ever secure ones; that is how I will address you because I see myself as नित्य शुद्ध बुद्ध मुक्त स्वरूपः nitya śuddha buddha mukta svarupaḥ.

And having discovered this beautiful inner nature; a wise man will never like to come down to the perishable incidental superficial body nature. Having enjoyed a higher thing, how will a person like to think of a lower thing; having got a wonderful house in a clean area; will a person again try to live in slum area; and therefore Krishna said nirdōṣaṃ hi samaṃ brahma tasmād-brahmaṇi tē sthitāḥ; having discovered the pure I, the wise people abide in that I only; they do not want to get obsessed with the physical body. They do take care of the physical body as the Lord's property, but they are not obsessed with the incidental superficial mortal physical nature. And what is the reason; nirdōṣaṃ brahma and samaṃ brahma. Up to this we saw in the last class.

sthirabuddhirasammūḍhō brahmaavid-brahmaṇi sthitaha || 5.20 ||

प्राप्य प्रियम् prāpya priyam facing the pleasant, न प्रहृष्येत् na prahr̥ṣyet he is not elated च प्राप्य अप्रियम् ca prāpya apriyam and facing the unpleasant न उद्विजेत् na udvijet he is not depressed, ब्रह्मवित् brahmavit a knower of Brahman स्थिरबुद्धिः sthirabuddhiḥ is firm in knowledge असंमूढः asam̐mūḍhaḥ free from delusion स्थितः ब्रह्मणि sthitaḥ brahmaṇi and is established in Brahman.

20. Facing the pleasant he is not elated, and facing the unpleasant he is not depressed. A knower of Brahman is firm in Knowledge, free from delusion, and is established in Brahman.

A jñāni even after gaining the knowledge will have to live in the same world; because according to vēdānta, mukti is here and now; it is now something attained after death. And since mukti is here and now, a jīvan muktha continues to live in the same world; and a jīvan muktāh's life is governed by what? It is governed by the same laws which govern the life of a ignorant person also.

Our lives are governed mainly by three factors; dēśa, kāla prārabdha. Our life is governed by three forces; one is the place influences the life; the surrounding, the environment, the people, etc. That is dēśaḥ, because whether I like or not; I have to face the onslaught of the world; and the second thing I cannot escape is kālaḥ; whether I like or not, the time is flowing; and as even the time is flowing, the body is ageing;

शिशिरवसन्तौ पुनरायातः |
कालः क्रीडति गच्छत्यायुः
तदपि न मुञ्चत्याशावायुः ||१२||
dinayāminyau sāyaṁ prātaḥ
śīśiravasantaḥ punarāyātaḥ |
kālaḥ krīḍati gacchatyāyuh
tadapi na muñcatyāśāvāyuh ||12||

Whether I like it or not, kālaḥ would have its say on the body; there are wrinkles; you come to discover that you have so many joints in the body, which you never noticed before; suddenly you discover that knee joints are there; and then the hair also turns grey; whether you like or not; these are kālaḥ krīḍati gacchatyāyuh. Just time has got its onslaught and the third factor which varies from individual to individual is prārabdha; even though dēśa and kāla are the same; if you take two people, living in the same Madras, dēśa is same or in the same house, both are 60 years old; age is also same; but you find that one person at the age of 60 is agile and active; another person at the age of sixty is like hundred year old person; he cannot sit and somehow if we manages to sit; getting up is a problem. So dēśa and kālaḥ remaining the same, how come different people have different experiences; you can give only one reason; what is that prārabdha; purva janma karma.

So thus three factors are going to influence our life; whether we are jñānis or ajñānis. Therefore Krishna says a jñāni's life is also governed by dēśa, kālaḥ prārabdha; therefore even he will have to go through ups and downs caused by dēśa kālaḥ prārabdha; which means favourable and unfavourable. And if ups and down are going to be the same for jñāni and ajñāni then what is the benefit of gaining knowledge. I thought that after knowledge I will not have problems; now you are saying after coming to the 5th chapter, that jñāni will also have ups and down. If you have told earlier, I would not have come at all; then, what is the benefit of gaining knowledge; if dēśa is going to affect, kālaḥ is going to affect, even prārabdha is going to affect?

So Krishna says the difference will be in the response to the situation; jñānam does not change the situation; jñānam gives the inner strength to have a balanced response towards both ups and downs; and this samatvam is the benefit of ātma jñānam. And therefore Krishna says प्रियम् प्राप्य priyam prāpya. So a jñāni also gets favourable situations; when prārabdha is fine, people love him and adore him, give him nice bhikṣaḥ; and all those things; why, if you ask, it is good prārabdha, and when such good prārabdha gives experiences, a jñāni is not carried away by those experiences, because he knows that those experiences are caused by dēśa kālaḥ prārabdha and therefore they will arrive and they will also go away; and therefore, it is not that he rejects them; he appreciates a favourable situation; but he is not hooked to or addicted to a favourable situation. And what is the difference between appreciation and not getting addiction; when I get addicted to that; I am not prepared to loose that experience. And when that experience is lost; I go through a tremendous vacuum; jñāni is one who appreciates a favourable situation and when that situation goes away, it does not create a vacuum in him; as we saw in the 2nd chapter,

tadvatkāmā yaṁ praviśanti sarvā
sa śāntimāpnōti na kāmakāmī || 2.70 ||

The ocean is ever full; during summer; water may get evaporated, and during rainy season, rivers may pour water into the ocean; whether the water is taken away or added; ocean continues to be pūrṇamadaḥ pūrṇamidam; so that inner fullness continues and therefore Krishna says न प्रहृष्येत् na prahr̥ṣyet; means he does not get elated; he does not get carried away by favourable situation.

And extending the same thing; Krishna says अप्रियम् प्राप्य न उद्विजेत् apriyam prāpya na udvijet; since he did not lose his balance, during favourable situations, when the unfavourable situation comes, he has got the same balance; and the best example they give in our puranas is the story of Rāma. One day the news comes that Rāma is going to become the Ayodhyadipati, an emperor, and Rāma heard the news and welcomed it; and not carried away by that; and next day, because of another reason, the kingdom was taken away; not only he lost the kingdom; but he had to go to forest also; and when such a news came, the victim was Rāma, but you find everybody in Ayodhya could not face the situation, except the one who is the victim.

na lakṣyatē na vanam gantu kāmasya tyajatāśca vasundarām | sarva lōkhātigasēva lakṣyatē citta vikriyaḥ

Valmiki says in Rāmāyanam, when Rāma had to go to forest; na citta vikriyaḥ; that is the samatva buddhi; and Lakṣmaṇa becomes so wild; and he says I will finish that old man; he has forgotten Daśaradha is his father; decency, language is thrown to the wind; Lakṣmaṇa gets so wild and says I am ready to finish off the whole Ayōdhya if it is required; and I will make you the king; suppose he finishes the entire Ayōdhya and makes him the king; what is the use; whom will Rāma rule; that is why it is said that in anger we do not think what we say or do; Lakṣmaṇa gets wild and says all kinds of things; and Rāma talks about the power of prārabdha; and he defines prārabdha as any choiceless situation is prārabdha.

And once you have understood it is choiceless, instead of putting forth effort to change the choiceless situation; and wasting your time and effort; start putting effort to change your attitude. Either way effort is required; if the situation can be changed, effort is required to change the situation; if the situation cannot be changed; then also effort is required in what direction; effort is directed towards my own mind; and whatever wisdom has to be injected, you have to inject and say: मनादेम Maname, face it; getting dejected cannot improve the situation; getting angry cannot improve the situation; thus jñānam gives the inner strength the face the situation; and therefore apriyam prāpya na udvijet; he is not depressed also.

And all because of what: he says ब्रह्मवित् Brahmavit; all these are possible because he is Brahmavit; he is the knower of Brahman, which means ātmavit, he has got self-knowledge; through self-knowledge, he has discovered this inner strength. And what kind of ātma vidyā he has got. A mere knowledge is not enough; that knowledge must be a conviction; if conviction is not there; during crisis, I will have problems. Many people study vēdānta for years; and then when there is a crisis in personal or family life; they ask why did I get this; why do we get this. The answer is for years together; either I have worked for this in this janma and if I have not worked for this in this janma; I am getting the result of purva karma; I have been saying this 108574 times; and at that time, we nod the head; and say Swamiji the law of karma is fantastic; but it just comes superficially; if the law of karma is assimilated I will never ask the question; "Why Me"? Whenever problems come, we ask the question; why me; this question comes from a mind which has not assimilated the law of karma; once I have assimilated, there is no question of why Me, because I get what I deserve.

And therefore let me work to face it; in one of the two ways; what are the two ways; if it is a choice-ful condition; I try to change it; if it is choiceless condition; I strengthen to face it; And therefore, mere knowledge is not enough to face the crisis; it should become a conviction; Self-knowledge should be a conviction; law of karma should be a conviction.

And therefore Krishna says; स्थिरबुद्धिः sthirabuddhiḥ, so this wise person is one of conviction; buddhiḥ means knowledge; not intellect; in this context, buddhiḥ means jñānam; and sthira means firm; and what do you mean by firm knowledge; doubtless knowledge; which means I should ask myself "Am I convinced of the fact, that I am the consciousness different from the body"; you need not convince other people; you need not even declare to other people. At regular intervals you have to ask to inner consciousness am I convinced of the fact that I am the consciousness different from the body. If I am not convinced; what to do; study further; still not convinced; study further; how long should I study; still you are convinced; if I am not convinced in this janma; what to do; study in the next birth; you can do that in instalments; conviction is a must; I should be convinced of the law of karma; that nothing happens by chance. nothing happens by accident; everything is perfectly according to law; every experience I go through, is perfectly according to Law and if it appears to be injustice, it is only because I do not have the total picture of my life; I do not have the total picture of even the present life; what to talk of all my past lives; and without having the total picture; what right I have to talk about justice and injustice; and therefore whatever happens is what: just. So there are jñānis who have suffered from diseases; people say I have attended Gītā classes for many days: some people if you attend Gītā class, you would not catch cold, if you have any such expectations, better drop. So people might be great bhaktha; great pooja they might have done; even jñānis like Rāmakrishna parāmahamsa or Ramaṇa Maharshi; they had bodily suffering; so we do not say jñānam will stop physical ailment; jñānam will give you the inner strength to face it; or to have a proper perspective of that; that is what we are saying; and that requires what? Conviction.

Therefore sthirabuddhiḥ; so śravaṇēna brahmavit bhavathi; mananēna sthirabuddhiḥ bhavathi; you get knowledge through śravaṇam; you get conviction through mananam. What do you mean by mananam; raising question; you keep on raising questions; until you have no more questions; because Vēdānta allows you to ask questions. It is not that do not ask questions; have faith in me; No. Vēdānta allows any number of questions; and until you are convinced; that is why Gītā ran into 18 chapters; and at the end of the Gītā, Arjuna said naṣṭō mōhaḥ smṛtirlabdhā; I am convinced; until then, you can ask any number of questions; questioning and answering is called the process of mananam. And through mananam, you become what; sthirabuddhiḥ.

And then there is a third problem; even after conviction we have got habitual responses to the situation; I know I should not do this; I know I should not get angry; Swamiji I recognised it only after the tragedy is over; So this is called habitual problems; and therefore we have to go through nidhidhyāsanam also which is a deliberate life; constantly in keeping the teaching in your mind; and alert life is nidhidhyāsanam; more about nidhidhyāsanam; we will study in the next chapter; internalisation; assimilation; soaking my personality in this wisdom; that means even when I lead a mechanical life also, it should be in keeping with the teaching; it should become spontaneous and such a person is here called asamudhaha; asamudhaha means viparitha bhavana rahithaḥ; so thus three stages are talked about: brahmavid; sthira buddhihi; asam mudhaḥ; through śravaṇam; he becomes brahmavit; through mananam he becomes sthira buddhi; through nidhidhyāsanam he becomes असंमूढः asammūḍhaḥ; through śravaṇam; he gets knowledge; through mananam, he eliminates doubts; through nidhidhyāsanam; he eliminates habitual negative tendencies.

And such a jñāni; what is the benefit that he enjoys; na prahr̥ṣyēt priyaṃ prāpya nōdvijēt prāpya cāpriyam; ups and downs in life are incapable of shaking him; such a person is ब्रह्मणि स्थितः brahmaṇi sthitaḥ; he is called jīvan muktaḥ; brahma niṣṭāḥ; sthitha prajñāha; of the 2nd chapter.

स ब्रह्मायोगयुक्तात्मा सुखमक्षयमश्नुते ॥५.२१ ॥
bāhyasparśēṣvasaktātmā vindatyātmani yat sukham |
sa brahmayōgayuktātmā sukhamakṣayamaśnutē | | 5.21 | |

असक्तात्मा asaktātmā one whose mind is not engaged बाह्यस्पर्शेषु bāhyasparśēṣu in external objects विन्दति vindati attains सुखम् sukham that ānanda, happiness यद् आत्मनि yad ātmani which is in the 'Ātma' सः ब्रह्मयोगयुक्तात्मा saḥ brahmayōgayuktātmā he whose mind is engaged in the meditation of Brahman अश्नुते aśnute attains अक्षयम् सुखम् akṣayaṃ sukham lasting Ānanda.

21. One whose mind is not engaged in external objects attains that Ānanda which is in Ātma. He whose mind is engaged in the meditation of Brahman attains lasting Ānanda.

So Krishna talks about the transformation, the jñāni enjoys as a result of this knowledge; in fact all these slokas that is 18, 19, 20, they are all talking about the transformation caused by knowledge; first he said sarvatra sama darśanam; vidyāvinayasampannē; that sama darśanam is one transformation. And then conquering mortality or the fear of death is the second benefit; because of fear of death is the basic innate instinctive fear; so therefore that conquering the fear of death is second transformation; then the third transformation he gave in the 20th verse is he has the right perspective in facing ups and downs of life; he is prepared for that; like a man who wants to climb Everest; he should be prepared for the different conditions of weather; altitudes and the consequent changes, he must be prepared; similarly, he has acclimitised himself for the life's ups and down. In fact, this is the first job we have to do before we start the life; suppose I want to play football and I go for coaching; among varieties of training; there is one particular important training; and that is how to fall on the ground; because they will be pushed; and if you do not want to be pushed; you should stand outside the ground; while you run, the falling takes place; and you see they know how to fall without getting hurt; and not only that; even as they fall, they get up, limp once or twice; and then start walking, and then they running; and again they go after the ball; similarly, the whole life is like a game; and there is countless psychological fall; here we are not talking about the physical but psychologically we have to face several falls; and we are never preparing ourselves; and vādānta or jñānam is only a coaching, so that tragedies come, I do fall, I do get upset; but the thing is what; I do not get permanently hurt; and the recovery period also is very short; I cry for perhaps half an hour; and again I start my life, because life is meant for living; whether others are there with me or not with me; I cannot say he is not there; why should I live; she is not there; why should I live; that is all foolish things; I have come to make my life; people are there I have to live; people are not there; I have to live, This capacity, I get. And this inner flexibility is another transformation; mentioned in the twentieth verse; and in the 21st verse; Krishna's talks about jñāni's ānanda.

So jñāni's ānanda; ānanda means the fulfilment; the joy that jñāni derives from his own higher nature; ātmānandaḥ; jñāni has learned to tap ātmānanda; it is really happens; Rāmākrishna mission āśrama was there. It seems they did not have any water resource anywhere; and therefore they had to talk to the Government and had to put a long pipeline connecting to some river or some canal; and they spend lakhs of rupees and somehow they were getting water; and of course when you get water from outside, its own problems, it will come, it will not come, etc. will be there; and then one Engineer came and he had some machine to find out where water is there; somebody like a water diviner; he came and said why can't you dig here and showed a particular place. In one area of the ashram; just where the ashram front gate is there; and dug there and discovered there is huge source of water and that Swami was jumping it seems. Until now the water was there or not; it was there; but since it was not discovered, there was dependence and the consequent troubles and problems; and even if they get the water, it is bonus; even many of you may have a good borewell water; and when there is some corporation problem, these people with their own good borewell, they are all sthitha prajñās. Similarly, ānanda waters also we can get through the borewell. We do have a source and that infinite source is our own svarūpam;

ānanda ātmā | brahma pucchaṁ pratiṣṭhā | ānandaṁ brahmaṇo vidvān | na bhibēti kutaścaneti |

jñāni is one who has learned to tap his own pūrṇātvam, fulfilment; whereas all the ajñānis are those who are depending upon all the miserable external sources of water, which can dry at any time; not only that; the other people can even blackmail me; because once I depend, the philosophy is what; blackmail. I will give, I will not give, price increase. Thus ajñāni has got anātma as source of ānanda; jñāni has got ātma as the source of ānanda; and since the jñāni has got an inner source of ānanda; he does not depend upon any external object. not that he hates them; he does not hate; when they are available corporation water we will use; they are not available; I have got this ānanda; and Krishna says all the pleasures of external objects put together are included in the ātmanānanda; as we saw in the second chapter,

Ātmānanda is superior all the anātma ānandas put together; why because all the anātmas; anātmas means sense objects are finite in nature and all the finite objects put together is equal to: finite plus finite plus finite is equal to infinite? finite only; Therefore add all the ānandas of the world; that is limited; whereas ātmānanda is superior to all of them.

Therefore Krishna says brahma yōga yuktātma; second line; brahma yōga yuktātma; so the jñāni whose mind is associated with Brahman; which taps brahmānanda; so brahma yōgaḥ; is brahma jñānam. Here brahma yōgaḥ means brahma jñānam; and brahma jñānam is the knowledge that I am brahman; and the one who has particular knowledge, the word ātma means here mind; so brahma jñānēna yuktēna ātma anthakaranam yasya; bahubrihi samasa; that jñāni whose mind is endowed with brahma jñānam, which is an eternal perennial source of ānanda; like people having UPS system, uninterrupted power supply and it is connected to that; and when there is a regular power supply they will use; and when that power supply goes away; it gets automatically connected to UPS and they will continue to computer job; and the jñāni has got UAS; uninterrupted ānanda supply; connected to ātma; not that he uses it all the time; when anātma is there, he will enjoy; when people are there; things are fine; it is there; and when everybody goes away; he would not sit and cry; connected to UAS. ātmanaeva ātmana thustha; things are there; fine; all these we have seen in third chapter very beautifully:

naiva tasya kṛtēnārthō nākṛtēnēha kaścana |

He has got psychological independence with regard to inner fulfillment. What a beautiful life you imagine.

Therefore brahma yōga yuktatama jñāni; akṣayam sukham asnute; akṣayam sukham; inexhaustible sukham means ānanda; fullness; purnatvam; akshaya pātram; we have heard in Mahabhāratha; how Draupadi had the akṣayapātham; why it is called akṣayapāthram; any amount of food you take, still it can give; so imagine like that you have got akṣayapāthram; which gives sukham and that akṣayapāthram is ātma; and therefore अक्षयम् सुखम् अश्नुते akṣayam sukham aśnute.

Since this ānanda is infinite ānanda; Krishna says that all the worldly pleasures are included in this ātmānanda; because all finite things are included in the infinite; just as when I say India; all the states are included; Similarly, in Ātmānanda; what all Ānandas are included, you can take all the gross pleasures of eating; subtle pleasures of art, dance, music, science and whatever ānanda you name; they are all included in ātmānanda; It is not that if you have this ānanda; you miss the other ānanda; normally we think if you are coming this class; whatever programme there at home, some movie is going, when you are here; you miss there; similarly one person may think, if I go to spiritual pleasure, will I not miss this wonderful sense pleasures of the world; In fact, many people sympathise with us Sanyāsis; Pavam; poor chap; there is no wife; no children; at least he should have taken sanyāsa after some time, after enjoying all these! So many people sympathise with us; while inwardly I sympathise with them; what I want to say is: getting spiritual ānanda is not missing any other pleasures, because all the pleasures in the world are included in this; and therefore jñāni does not miss anything in life; only ajñāni in spite of acquiring any number of things; he will be missing something;

And therefore he says; बाह्यस्पर्शेष्वसक्तात्मा bāhyasparśēṣvasaktātmā; this jñāni is not interested in, not obsessed with the external sense pleasures; he does not hate; very careful; he does not hate anything; hatred is as much a weakness; as attachment. and therefore if a sanyasi is going to be given a good tasty bhiksha; he will enjoy nicely; why cant' he enjoy; therefore asakta means not obsessed with them; bāhya sparśa means the sense pleasures; bāhyam means external world; sparśa means contact; contact with the external world, viz., sense pleasures, askataḥ ātma. Here also the ātma means the mind; asakthaḥ means detached; not obsessed; and this jñāni who is not obsessed with the external world, he will get the ātmānanda, which is akṣayam; akṣayam means infinite;

22. Oh Arjuna ! Those pleasures which are born of contact are indeed sources of sorrow only, (because) they have a beginning and an end. The wise (person) does not revel in them.

So with the previous slōkā, the jñāna yōga topic is over; which started from the 13th verse; this portion is the central portion of the 5th chapter; verse 13 to 21; is the essence of the fifth chapter; viz., jñāna yōgaḥ; otherwise called inner renunciation; inner detachment; being physiologically or mentally independent of the world; physically he is with everyone; but mentally he is not hooked to anyone; this inner renunciation otherwise called jñāna yōga is talked about; and the jñāna yōga phalam was also hinted; and now in verse No.22 and 23, Krishna is going to talk about a sādhanā; a discipline required for self-knowledge. Thus two verses are jñāna yōga sādhanā. The details of which we will see in the next class.

Om

With the 21st verse, which we completed in the last class, Krishna has concluded the topic of jñāna yōga, which topic he started from verse No.13. From verse No.13 to 21, he dealt with jñāna yōga. And this jñāna yōga is the central theme of the 5th chapter, which is known here as sanyāsa yōga; inner renunciation or detachment. Hereafter the fifth chapter is going to wound up.

In the following verses beginning from the 22nd, Krishna is going to deal with two topics; one is the mental preparation required for self-knowledge, which will be dealt with in verse No.22 and 23; and from the 24 onwards, Krishna will talk about the benefit of self-knowledge. Thus two verses will talk about jñāna sādhanam and the rest of the verses will deal with jñāna phalam. And varieties of mental disciplines are discussed throughout the Gītā. In these two verses Krishna is going to highlight a particular discipline which we will see now.

ये हि सम्स्पर्शजा भोगाः दुःखयोनय एव ते

आद्यन्तवन्तः कौन्तेय न तेषु रमते बुधः || ५.२२ ||

yē hi saṁsparśajā bhōgā duḥkhayōnaya ēva tē |

ādyantavantaḥ kauntēya na tēṣu Rāmatē budhaḥ | | 5.22 | |

So here Krishna talks about the basic human problem, which is the universal problem of human being; a spiritual seeker has to discern this basic human problem and he should have a sincere desire to get out of this bondage; which alone we call as samsārah. What is that? Krishna says, every sense object in the world, which we contact through our sense organs is capable of giving us pleasure, fulfilment or happiness and therefore they are called viṣayāḥ; objects of the sense organs, which are capable of giving bhōgaḥ; or sukham. And all those pleasures born out of those sense objects are called by Krishna, संस्पर्शजः saṁsparśajāḥ bhōgaḥ; pleasures or joys borne out of contact or interaction. Saṁsparśajāḥ means interaction; jaha means born out of, saṁsparśajāḥ means born out of sensory contact and bhogāḥ means happiness, joy, fulfilment. So saṁsparśajāḥ bhōgaḥ; contact-born pleasures. And contact between what and what?; the sense organs and the sense objects. We have got five-fold sense organs; eyes, ears, nose, tongue, and skin; and we have got five-fold sense-objects also; in the form śabdaḥ sparśaḥ, rupa:, rasa:, gandhaḥ. Mere presence of sense objects cannot give pleasure. Similarly mere presence of sense organs also cannot give pleasure? You require what; the contact between the sense organs and the sense object; and because of this, whatever pleasure comes is called saṁsparśajāḥ bhōgaḥ. In fact the entire world is capable of giving saṁsparśajāḥ bhōgaḥ.

What gives me bhōgaḥ may not give you bhōgaḥ; but you have some other object of pleasure and when I use the word object, it need not be inert objects only; it means living beings also; you enjoy their company; as long as they are around you, at home, you are happy and you cannot imagine a life in their absence. Even that fulfilment, Krishna calls as saṁsparśajāḥ bhōgaḥ; through the sense organs, you have a got a emotional contact, and therefore an emotional fulfilment. It can be a human being; it can be a pet also. So thus objects, situations and beings, all these put together, we call viṣayāḥ; and the sense organs are called indriyani; indriya viṣayāḥ saṁsparśajāḥ bhōgaḥ; all pleasures are born out of indriya viṣayāḥ saṁsparśajāḥ.

And here Krishna here tells that all these pleasures are wonderful; it is like rose, but the problem is every rose has got its thorn. Similarly all the bhōgaḥ have got a problem also; every worldly pleasure is mixed with pain also.

And we saw in the upaniṣad class, three fold pain; one is the pain of acquisition; No.2 the pain of preservation; and No.3 the pain of loss; and each pain is more intense than the previous one; if acquisition is duḥkham; preservation is duḥkha taram; and loss is duḥkha tamam; and therefore Krishna says दुःखयोनय एव ते duḥkhayōnaya ēva tē. All those sense pleasures are mixed with pain also. There is no such thing called pure pleasure in the world. There is no such thing called pure joy. Every pleasure is like a coin; just as every coin has got two sides; every pleasure has got the reverse also; दुःखम्.

And what is the reason for this. Krishna gives the reason also; आद्यन्तवन्तः ādhyantavantaḥ; the reason is all contact born pleasures have got a beginning; whether it is a relationship with another human being; or possession of a particular object, the contact has a beginning. Therefore it has got ādhi; and what is the universal law?; the universal law is everything that has got a beginning has got an end also; So ādhi antavantaḥ; so if their arrival is pleasure; their departure will be pain. Suppose the departure is pleasure, some people give happiness when they go away; I told you; some people give happiness wherever they go; some people give happiness whenever they go. If an object gives pleasure by their departure; then the very same object will give pain by its arrival. So very simple law; if arrival gives pleasure, the departure will give pain; if departure gives pleasure, arrival will give pain and the world is full of arrivals and departures. So ādhi antavantaḥ kauntēya; therefore the basic truth that Krishna wants to say is that the world or the objects are a mixture of pleasure and pain.

So then how to handle that? If the objects are a mixture of pleasure and pain; what are the options for us; what can I do? Here alone, we get entrapped; one option is what: we decide to possess the object; this is one object; so one possibility; when I choose to possess the object, certainly, I will get pleasure from that object; but what is the problem. Since every object is mixed with pain; I should have the strength to face the pain aspect of the pleasure. But unfortunately my mind is not prepared for facing the consequences; I am prepared for the rose, but I have not prepared for the thorn; and since I am not prepared, it gives pain and consequent problem. Therefore if I decide to have them, the problem is what; I cannot face the consequent pain.

Now to avoid this, what should I do; since every object has got pain in it; let me renounce everything; give them up; I will forego. That is also a problem, because when I give up things, I face the problem of emptiness of the mind; bankruptcy of the mind, loneliness of the mind; I miss things and people. People complain; I do not have a companion; I should have married. So therefore, if I do not have things; there is an advantage alright; those things will not cause pain; because I do not possess; but here the problem is what; I have to face the emptiness of the mind; if I do not have those objects; and it is because of the emptiness of the mind; that the people are running after possession. So therefore, if I give up the object, I have to face, limitations; emptiness, missing. If I possess the objects, I will have to face the pains which are mixed with the objects and their pleasures.

Now what will you do; either way I am in trouble. Having things also problem; not having things also problem; When I have got lot of work, I complain; I am tired, irritating and all; and when there are no work at all; I complain; I am bored to death; so this is called samsāra. Having things also I face problems; not having things also I face problems. In having things what is the problem? Whatever be the pains that the objects will cause, I am not able to withstand; and not having the thing, what is the problem; emptiness is problem; and therefore, if I diagnose this problem; then I can find the solution; because I will have to one of the two; there is no third way; either I should possess things and suffer the problem of possession or I should dispossess things and suffer the pangs of dispossession; emptiness. Which will I choose; and I do not have a third alternative also.

Now, we have got only two possible solutions; one solution is what, I should decide not to possess anything; No wife, no children, no money, nothing, I will be ĕkāki; aparigrahaḥ; but if I decide to do that; what is the problem I will face; I will miss things in life; there is emptiness; there is craving for belonging; I want somebody to claim as mine; I want somebody to claim me as theirs; somebody should say you are mine; I should want to say somebody that you are mine. Śankarācārya calls it: अहम् येषाम् मम येते aham yeṣām mama yētē problem; these persons are belonging to me; and I belong to them; therefore one option is I decide not to have the object at all; but if I decide that course of action, I will have to face the loneliness and the only remedy is what; I should discover fulfilment in myself so that I will not feel loneliness, ātmanyēva'tmanā tuṣṭaḥ; yastu ātmarati ēvasya, ātma triptasya mānavā; if I have discovered fulfilment in myself; absence of things, I will not call loneliness; it will be aloneness; it is advaitam.

Therefore one option is what: give up the world but learn to be happy with yourselves. This is called discovery of pūrṇatvam; discovery of fulfilment within myself. Therefore if I decide to give up, I should discover the fulness in myself; what is the option; Swamiji I do not like to give up. I want to have everything; I would like to have wife; children, house, car and in fact everything; Krishna says wonderful; I do not say you should not; if you decide to have things; then what is the problem; the possession will certainly give you pleasures, but everyone is going to give equal amount of pain also; if you decide to possess things; which should be your solution; you should discover sufficient mental strength to withstand the consequent pain. Sufficient strength if you decide to have children; the children will do lot of things; right from age one; mischievous children one type of problem; and they do not do anything; another type of problem; and they are very obedient, one type of problem. Not at all obedient; another type of problem. So develop the mental strength, if you decide to possess or develop the pūrṇatvam, if you decide to give up things; and if you do not have these two solutions, the world will cause problems, whether you possess them or whether you renounce them. So I should know how to handle the object, whether I decide to possess or whether I decide to dispossess. If I do not have this remedy; the world will cause problem either by their presence also; or by their absence also.

Now the question is how to discover that pūrṇatvam if I decide to give up everything. How to discover the inner strength if I decide to have things; and the beauty is: for both there is only one method; and that method is self-knowledge; self-knowledge will simulatenously give you two faculties; self-knowledge will simultaneously give two faculties; you will be able to give up everything; and you will have the pūrṇatvam; or you will be able to possess everything; and then face the consequent pains also; and that is why once you get the jñānam; either way it is OK; you decide to have things; no problem; you decide to give up things; no problem. If you do not have self-knowledge; possession also will be problem; non-possession also is problem. Interview parents with children they will complain: he did it like this, like that, etc. daughter like this; complaint; and interview parents without children; they are going from temple to temple, somehow I should get a child; having is also problem; not having also is a problem. As long as you do not have inner resources; Kausalya and Daśaratha got Rāma after doing special yāga; and Rāma because of Lord's blessing was born to them and they were the happiest people in the world and when the occasion came, that Rāma had to go the forest; the very same Kausalya said that it would have been better not to have children. We could have been happy without them. And especially not to have a wonderful son like Rāma. If it is a useless child, going to forest is a blessing; same Kausalya once wanted a child and then complains. That means as long as I am ignorant; having is also problem; not having is also problem; as long as I am wise, having also is not a problem; not having also is not a problem; because the world is a mixture of both pleasure and pain.

And therefore बुधः तेषु न रमते budhaḥ tēṣu na ramatē; a wise person is one who is not carried away by the pleasures that the world can give; is not carried away by the pleasures that the world can give. He is aware of both the plus and minus points of the world; So natēṣu ramatē; he does not revel; he does not get carried away.

śaknōtīhaiva yaḥ sōḍhum prāk śarīravimōkṣaṇāt |
kāmakrōdhōdbhavaṃ vēgaṃ sa yuktaḥ sa sukhī naraḥ | | 5.23 | |

सः नरः saḥ naraḥ that person यः शक्नोति सोढुम् yaḥ śaknoti sōḍhum who is able to manage वेगम् vegam the impulse कामक्रोधोद्भवम् kāmakrodhodbhavam born of desire and anger इह एव iha eva here itself प्राक् शरीरविमोक्षणात् prāk śarīravimokṣaṇāt before the fall of the body युक्तः yuktaḥ is disciplined सः सुखी saḥ sukhī he is happy.

23. That person who is able to manage the impulse born of desire and anger here itself before the fall of the body is disciplined. He is happy.

So in the previous verse, the value of mental preparedness was pointed and what is mental preparedness, mental preparedness for having things, or to give up things. Having things also requires mental preparedness; because it will cause its own pain; and not having things, will also cause a source of emptiness. Unless I know how to handle these two, I am going to suffer in life. And this mental preparedness or awareness is one value; and then alone I will know the importance of self-knowledge.

Now the second value that Krishna highlights in this 23rd verse is handling of rāgaḥ; and dveṣaḥ; otherwise called kāma and krodhaḥ; rāgaḥ means attachment to certain objects, dveṣaḥ means hatred or aversion towards certain other objects; and according to vēdānta; both are born out of misconceptions; rāgaḥ or attachment is born out of the notion that the world will give permanent happiness and security. Attachment towards anything or any person is born out of the misconception that the object or person will give me permanent security and fulfilment; and it is a misconception because no object in the creation, no person in the world can give permanent security and fulfilment because everything is (you have to connect it to the previous sloka) ādhyantavantaḥ kauntēya; everything is subject to change; so therefore rāgaḥ is misconception. Similarly dveṣaḥ is also another misconception; aversion is born out of the notion that the world is capable of giving me sorrow; this is also another notion; because if the world is capable of giving sorrow; the liberated people will not be able to live in the world, but we find that jñānis are those people who live in the same world and they do not have sorrow.

So if the world is source of sorrow; everybody should be universally unhappy; every simple thing; suppose a particular music is playing; maybe north indian music; south Indian music; may be pop music; western music; you find in the same house, one person is extremely unhappy, that if pop music or something cinema music; that is played the classical-music-oriented-parents, they feel very very unhappy; but the children, the teen agers, they are jumping. It is very clear that the music itself is not the source of disturbance; because somebody else is happy and therefore the world is neither a source of joy, nor a source of sorrow; and therefore dividing the world into source of joy and source of sorrow, according to vēdānta is the fundamental misconception. It is I who make the world a source of joy; and it I who makes the world a source of sorrow also.

And as long as I do not discover this fact; I am going to blame the world. And as long as I blame the world, I will try to correct the world; I will try to change the world. In fact, all fashion changes are only because of that. I think that you change the dress; you change the hairstyle, or you put the ear ring in one ear also; two ears also; you feel that after some time; it goes out of fashion; you want to do something else. From this it is very clear that my study or understanding of the world is improper and unfortunately you can never change the world to your parameters. And by chance you change also, it is not going to be ideal all the time. And that we know that is why there is constant anxiety also; when everything is very ideal; especially in India, we have that constant fear, evil eye; whether it is there elsewhere, because people say that you have got a good husband/wife, wonderful children, both are brilliant, enough money, few people tell, I feel jittery; and ask to tie something or do something etc. You yourselves feel that ideal conditions would not last long.

So therefore we have to know that problem is not with the world; problem is with myself, and moment I recognise that; I transcend rāgaḥ and dveṣaḥ; both attachment and aversion. When I look at the world through the spectacles of attachment and aversion, I am living in a private world of mine and therefore I am constantly affected. When I remove the rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ spectacles; I live in the objective world of God, which is neither source of sorrow; nor source of joy; sunrise is happy or unhappy? Ignorant people will say it is happy or unhappy?; the one who wants to work, will say that it is happy thing; those who would like to permanently sleep, they are against sunrise. So the ignorant people will say happy or unhappy occasion; wise person will say sunrise is sunrise; sunset is sunset; birth is birth; death is death; growing is growing; and declining is declining; association is association; disassociation is disassociation.

That world is seen as God's creation without any subjective projections. Until we come to that; vēdānta will not work. Vēdānta requires objectivity; from jīva sṛṣṭi; we have go to Īśvara sṛṣṭi; from Īśvara sṛṣṭi alone, we can go to asṛṣṭi; that is the absolute; my creation; god's creation; to no creation. No creation is the absolute wisdom. Here Krishna says we can see that later; go from your creation to god's creation and Krishna accepts that this is not easy thing; because we have subjective orientation; and therefore we always judge and dub things as good or bad; and it is not easy; therefore Krishna says you have to work throughout your life to get out of the hold of rāgaḥ and dveṣaḥ; and Krishna says you have the entire lifetime to work on it; it is not one year thing or two year thing; you get over before your die; next janma you can learn vēdānta; let it be your lifelong project.

Therefore शरीरविमोक्षणात् प्राक् śarīravimōkṣaṇāt prāk; before the fall of the body; fall of the body; what; death; before the fall of the body; शक्नोति सोढुम् śaknoti soḍhum; suppose a person is able to handle, manage, master, कामक्रोधोद्भवम् वेगम् kāmakrōdhōdbhavaṃ vēgaṃ, the powerful influences of attachment and aversion; vēgaṃ means powerful influence, or impulse of kāma, desire and impulse of krodhaḥ or anger; Krishna does not say you should get rid of them; Krishna says you be a master of them. Because in this third chapter, Krishna mentioned rāgaḥ and dveṣaḥ will be there in the mind; attachment and aversion cannot be totally wiped out; your aim is only to manage them; handle them; just like physical body means, there will be some sickness; so rainy season comes or winter season comes; all over there is cough; there is a viral fever; or Madras eye; so something or the other; the physical body cannot be ideally healthy; there is no question of ideal body does not exist; but what is health; even if sickness comes; I have got sufficient health to overcome the sickness and continue my journey of life.

Similarly in the mind the rāgaḥ and dveṣaḥ may arise; let them arise; but you must be their master; they should not enslave you; So this mastery is here called soḍhum śaknoti; the one who can master rāgaḥ dveṣaḥ. If a person is able to do that; able to achieve that; before death; Krishna says स युक्तः sa yuktaḥ; that person is an organised person; that person is a master of himself. So before you try to manage your company; or your organisation, before you try to manage your family; first lesson is learn to manage yourselves; and when I cannot manage myself; where is the question of managing others. And when I say self-management, my own body-mind-complex. And a person who has done that he is called yuktaḥ; integrated person; sane person; who is not psychologically handicapped; one who is emotionally sound. So he is a sane person; only a sane person can understand vēdānta.

Emotional sanity is the pre-requisite for vēdāntic knowledge; and sa yuktaḥ; he is an integrated person and स एव नरः sa ēva naraḥ; according to Krishna he alone deserves the name human. The one who goes by the impulse cannot be called even a human being, because he does not have self-controlled. When a dog feels like barking; it barks; it is not going to see whether a Gītā class is going nearby; it does not have control over itself; and that is why it is a dog; and if the dog is like that, nobody will complain; but if I bark, talk like barking and later I say I did not know why I said that: I regret, I should not have told and apologise and again the next day repeats the same thing; Krishna says he does not deserve the name human being; he is not nara; there is a doubt, whether naraḥ vā: in Sanskrit; if you repeat it it becomes वानरः vānaraḥ; he is a vānaraḥ; he is not a human being; vānaraḥ; monkey; therefore sa naraḥ; not only स सुखी sa sukhi; only that person can lead a happy life; he alone can progress inwardly. The other people are given to moods; given to emotional catastrophes, and when that itself they are not able to handle, where is vēdānta; where is jñāna yōga; it is all far away;

Therefore learn self-management; and self-management is rāgaḥ dveṣaḥ management. So thus, Krishna talked about the psychological preparation for self-knowledge; self-knowledge has to take place in the intellect only; knowledge is the job of intellect; but the intellect can function only when the emotions do not overwhelm the intellect. Suppose you had come to the class after a quarrel at home; somebody told do not go to the class; because they want to shop for Dipavali; then you had a quarrel and fought and then you came; you sit here; but cannot understand vēdānta; so emotional mind has to cooperate with rational intellect; therefore manage your emotions.

Continuing.

योऽन्तःसुखोऽन्तरारामः तथान्तर्ज्योतिरेव यः

स योगी ब्रह्मनिर्वाणं ब्रह्मभूतोऽधिगच्छति ॥ ५.२४॥

yō'ntaḥsukhō'ntarārāmastathā'ntarjyōtirēva yaḥ |

sa yōgī Brahmanirvāṇaṃ brahmabhūto'dhigacchati | | 5..24 | |

सः योगी saḥ yogī that yōgi यः अन्तः सुखः yaḥ antaḥ sukhaḥ whose happiness is within अन्तरारामः antarārāmaḥ whose recreation is within तथा tathā and यः अन्तर्ज्योतिः एव yaḥ antarjotiḥ eva whose vision is within ब्रह्मभूतः brahmabhūtaḥ while (living), has become Brahman अधिगच्छति adhigacchati and attains ब्रह्मनिर्वाणम् Brahmanirvāṇam oneness with Brahman (after death).

24. That yōgi whose happiness is within, and whose recreation is within, and whose vision is within has become Brahman (while living) and attains oneness with Brahman (after death.)

So in previous two verses, Krishna talked about mental preparation, especially the preparation of the emotional mind; because emotions are extremely powerful. And now from this verse onwards Krishna is going to talk about jñāna phalam. So you have to imagine a person has become emotionally sound; he is able to enjoy the possessions also. He is able to enjoy absence of things also. What do you mean by emotional soundness; when things are there, you do not complain; when things are not there also, you do not complain; and what is emotional weakness; when things are there; you complain; when things are not there; you complain. You cry for both; not only problem for yourself but for people around; you distribute sorrow freely; Therefore that emotional soundness to be without things a person develops and thereafterwards he came to self-knowledge because of the self-knowledge he got that inner strength and fulfilment; let us assume.

Then what will be the life of that person; Man or women; any person; once a person discovers that inner fulfilment; what will be the life like. Krishna says यः अन्तः सुखः याह् antaḥ sukhaḥ; so jñāni is one who has discovered fulfilment in himself; antaḥ means the inner essence. antaḥ means antarātmā; means the truth; so the one who has discovered the fullness or joy in his own true nature; what is the true nature; we saw, ātma svarupam; and therefore antara arāma; and for him, the recreation ground, the playground is not outside; all his entertainment also are inside; before that he required entertainment from VCP, VCR; in fact all the gadgets are doing what; trying to give you recreation and entertainment. And that is why holiday means you have to plan where to go or what to get because we feel empty and one bandh if it comes, video cassettes you have to hunt; 4 or 5 cassettes and Śivarāthri; Śivarāthri you are supposed to keep awake; doing Śiva dhyānam; there are special movies for Śivarāthri; holiday means I do not know how to spend; and I am not happy with myself.

What is the benefit of self-knowledge; I am happy with myself; called antaḥ sukhaḥ; अन्तःसुखोऽन्तरारामः अन्तर्ज्योतिरेव यः antaḥsukhō antarārāmaḥ antarjyōtirēva yaḥ; so the one who is aware of his pūrṇatvam all the time; jyōthiḥ means awareness or consciousness; one who is consciousness of the ātma; awareness of his inner fullness; so the one who has never self-forgetfulness; that means what: as I said before, he can have things, and he can be without things also; when he has things; he will enjoy their presence; if he is seeking loneliness; that is also another bondage; if I am attached to loneliness I would like to be alone when people come you would come angry; neither attached to loneliness nor attached to people; the one who can enjoy both; and even when he enjoys the presence of things and people, he does not lose sight of his inner freedom. Therefore, saha antarjyōtirēva yaḥ; saha yōgi; that person is called a real yōgi. So yōgi means what; jñāni; wise person; here yōga does not mean the one who can stand upside down; or one who can bend the body like a rubber ball; that is all very good; that is also yōgasana; Here yōga is that inner faculty; that wisdom; therefore yōgi means jñāni;

And what is his status; ब्रह्मभूतः Brahmabhūtaḥ; he has become one with Brahman; and he has become "one with Brahman"; not that he has become one; but he has discovered the fact that I am really none other than Brahman; Brahman means what; it is a technical word for fullness. I am full and complete; I do not need anything to be happy; I do not need anything to be secure; so that is called brahmatvam. And how long he will enjoy this; as long as he is alive; he will enjoy this. and when the prarabdha, karma is over, the body will fall.

And what will happen to him; nothing will happen to him; because he has discovered I am not the body; I am not the mind; therefore, previously he was embodied consciousness; now he is un-embodied consciousness; which is called vidēha muktiḥ; Krishna calls it ब्रह्मनिर्वाणम् brahmanirvāṇam. So Brahma nirvāṇam; unembodied consciousness; oneness with Brahman. Otherwise called vidēha mukti; thus he is free while living; he is free after death also.

Brahman

25. Sages who are free from impurities, who are self- restrained, who are interested in the welfare of all beings, and whose doubts are dispelled attain oneness with Brahman.

So in this verse also, Krishna is talking about the benefit of self-knowledge; but the beauty of this verse is Krishna talks about all these as stages in spiritual evolution. What are the stages that one goes through to attain the spiritual fulfilment; all the stations. The destination they will write in the front; and the side of the bus, they write the routes; intermediary stages that the bus passes. Similarly what are the stages that one will pass through.

The first stage is क्षीणकल्मषाः kṣīṇakalmaṣāḥ; Get rid of the mental weaknesses; kalmaṣāḥ means impurity; misconceptions; emotional hang ups is called kalmaṣāḥ and basic kalmaṣāḥ is rāgaḥ and dveṣaḥ; thinking that the presence of things will be happiness; that is one problem called rāgaḥ; and another problem is the absence of certain other things; will lead to happiness; which is called dveṣaḥ; weakness; these are the two basic problems. I am happy because this is there. It is wrong according to Vēdānta; I am happy because it is not there; both are wrong; and this rāgaḥ dveṣaḥ problem, we have to get out and that is why in our religion, there is a practice of tapas or austerity.

In austerity what do you do; whatever you use regularly; you learn to be without that; and initially we will think that without we cannot; anything; whether it is coffee or onion; people think whether some people can cook without onion and garlic and they cannot imagine of life of preparation without these two; one rāgaḥ and dveṣaḥ; onion garlic. and then first day there is no taste at all; second day there is no taste at all; and find that you can happily survive without that; tapas means you just see the fact that you can be happy without things also. That is called preparation of the mind; which is the first stage; then comes the second stage; those details we will see in the next class.

Lord Krishna has talked about jñāna yōga in this chapter, in the form of inner renunciation and now in these verses, beginning from the 24th Krishna is talking about the jñāna yōga phalam; the benefit of self-knowledge; in three verses; 24,25 and 26; and while talking about jñāna phalam, Krishna summaries the various stages of spiritual sādhanā also. Jñāna yōga is the ultimate means of liberation; but to come to jñāna yōga, a person has to go through several preliminary stages and therefore Krishna wants to talk about various stages one has to go through; We are seeing that in verse No.25, various stages are talked about, we will rearrange the words for the sake of continuity or progression.

First we will take the word सर्वभूतहिते रताः sarvabhūtahitē ratāḥ; which represents a life of values; a life of morals; an ethical life is indicated by sarvabhūtahitē ratāḥ; literally the word means being interested in the welfare of all the beings; instead of being a selfish human being, I should expand my mind, to gradually identify with other members of the planet, to such an extent that I should be able to feel the others' pain also. The mind should become so sensitive that I should be able to feel the pain of others also; and only when I begin to feel the other's pain; I will never hurt another human being. Now why am I hurting others; because when I am hurting others; I do not feel anything at all, because I am such a gross human being; I should sensitise my mind that I should be able to feel the emotions of others; the psychologists call it the capacity of empathy; it is called the fundamental quality; which is the foundation for all the later virtues of life; the entire human character is based on this one capacity and what is that capacity; I should be able to sense the feelings of other people; So when the other person is happy; I am able to identify and share the happiness; and similarly when the other person feels the pain; I should be able to appreciate that feeling and share; and this capacity of feeling others' feeling is called empathy. and that is here referred to as sarvabhūtahitē ratātvam; and initially I learn to feel the feelings of my own family members. In fact, the very purpose of marriage is to develop empathy; so first start with your wife; that itself is in the problem; Once I am able to expand my mind and sense the intense feelings of my wife or husband; my mind has expanded to நாம் இருவர் naam iruvar; from ஒருவர் oruvar to இருவர் iruvar; and thereafterwards, they encourage having children also; प्रजाच स्वध्यय प्रवचनेच prajāca svadhyaya pravacanēca; why should we have children; so that our mind will expand enough to feel the feelings of the children also; and like that I should expand,

उदार चरितानाम् तु वसुदेव कुठुभकम्
ayam nijō parō vētti gaṇanā lagu cētasām udāra caritānām tu vasudēva kuṭhubhakam

The short-sighted human being is one who is not aware of his own wife's or the husband's pain and a person of expanded mind is one, who can sense the pain of not only the family members, not only the members of the society and includes the animals and plants and such a person will be embodiment of ahimsā; and ahimsā is supposed to be the mahavṛtam for spiritual progress.

In Pathanjali's aṣṭāṅga yōga, the first value emphasised is the ahimsa; not hurting other physically or verbally or even mentally. This is where our spirituality begins. So Sankaracharya writes in his commentary; ahimsakaḥ; it is not that he does not hurt others; he is incapable of hurting others, because as even he hurts others, he can immediately feel the pain of others' and therefore he has to withdraw from such things; and thus morality or ethics is the first stage, without going through dharma, there is no possibility of mokṣaḥ; and therefore Krishna says sarvabhūtahitē ratātvam; and once I feel others' feelings; I will spend my life in helping others; niṣkāma karma is natural to a person with a sensitive mind. Only a gross-minded person will ignore the fellow human being but a sensitive minded person will certainly help other people; he may not be able to help financially, he may not be help physically; but minimum he will say sarve bhavantu sukhinaha; sarve santu nirāmayā ḥ; Oh Lord, let everyone be happy. Even to wish that intimately we require a sensitive mind and therefore sarvabhūtahitē ratātvam; pañca mahā yajña or niṣkāma karma is the first stage. And it will lead to what; kṣīṇakalmaṣāḥ; such a selfless life in which one contributes to others' also in the society; one who follows karma yōga; the one who follows pancha maha yajñā will become kṣīṇakalmaṣāḥ; free from pāpam; kalmaṣāḥ; pāpam or duritam; kṣīṇakalmaṣāḥ; free from all duritam.

And what is the definition of pāpam according to vēdānta; anything that obstructs spiritual journey is pāpam. According to Vēdānta; anything that obstructs our spiritual journey is pāpam. If I do not develop interest for spirituality; even the lack of interest is because of pāpam. The very desire for spirituality is possible only when puṇyam is there. ईश्वर अनुग्रहात् पुम्साम् अद्वैत वासन ईश्वरा अनुग्रहात् पुम्साम् advaita vāsana. If you should get the desire to listen to Gītā (understanding is a different matter), you should have īśvara anugrahā.

And after having desires also, there can be several obstacles because of the family situation; health situation or external condition; all these are different types of pāpams only and when I do niṣkāma karma; all these obstacles will go away like the darkness when the sun rises. And therefore a person will get conducive conditions for spirituality. Therefore kṣīṇakalmaṣāḥ means free from all the pāpam, obstacles.

And then what is the next stage of sādhanā; यत्तत्मानः yatātmānaḥ; once I develop interest in spirituality, which itself is because of puṇyam; I have to work for spiritual growth; because according to vēdānta; spiritual growth or liberation is not God's will, liberation depends upon our own freewill. It is not that God decides whether I should get mokṣaḥ or not; if we think God is responsible for our liberation; then the God will become a partial-God; he is giving liberation to some people; he does not give liberation to some others'; Lord will be partial; and therefore, as far as God's blessings are concerned; it is uniformly available for all; but whether I am willing to make use of God's grace is the question. And making use of God's grace is our freewill. That we are born in this culture; where this wisdom is there; God's grace is available; but whether I am tapping it is in my hands; so sunlight may be there; but whether I am making use of this solar energy or not, is in my hand.

Krishna will tell in the 9th chapter, samō'haṃ sarvabhūtēṣu na mē dvēṣyō'sti na priyaḥ (9.29); my grace is uniformly available for all; and some people are liberated and some people are not; it is not my mistake; I have made my grace available to all; some people tapped it; some people did not tap it; tapping Lord's grace is our freewill.

And this stage is called yatātmānaḥ; those people who put forth effort in the right direction; so yataḥ ātma yesham te; those people who develop the necessary discipline; they acquire the necessary qualification; which does not happen. We have to take initiative; viveka does not happen, vairagyam does not happen; श्रमाधि षट्कसंपत्ति śamādhi ṣaṭka saṃpatti does not happen; I have to ask the question; what effort I am putting forth. Our problem is what; we say everything is in his Hands; and we take to fatalistic thought; if Bhagavān wants it will happen. Without him not even an atom moves, saying this quotation, he turn fatalist and turn laziness; and most convenient quotation for laziness; everything is in his hands; Krishna says: never do that; yatātmānaḥ; you have to take initiative.

So this is acquiring the necessary qualifications and not only acquiring the qualifications, working for knowledge also. Just as qualifications do not happen; I have to make them happen by my own effort. Similarly, knowledge also does not happen. We have to take initiative and what is the initiative; Krishna said in the 4th chapter, tadviddhi praṇipātēna paripraśnēna sēvayā, seek knowledge; seek teacher, guru, seek śāstram; I have to teach them and I have to work for the knowledge and that is called yatātmānaḥ; those people who acquire discipline and knowledge;

Then what will be the next stage; once I do the required sādhanā; ऋषयः rṣayah; so these people become ṛṣī; having gone through these stages; they become ṛṣīs; the stage of purification; stage of discipline; the stage of self-enquiry; will lead to the stage of knowledge; so ṛṣayah means jñānīnaḥ; they become jñāni; the word means jñāni in this context. When you hear the word ṛṣī; immediately you think of thadi; the one who has got a long beard; ṛṣī; if beard can make you ṛṣīs; that is the easiest thing you can do; which means ladies can never become ṛṣīs. Therefore, thadis and kavis have nothing to do with ṛṣī; what makes you a ṛṣī is ऋषति आत्म तत्त्वम्; जानाति इति ऋषि ṛṣati ātma tatvam; jānāti iti ṛṣī. It is derived from the root ऋष् ṛṣ, to know; so ṛṣī means the one who knows. So if you have the knowledge; even though you are amidst the society; coated booted and suited; still you are ṛṣī; if you have knowledge. On the other hand, if a person does not have knowledge, even if he has got ochre robe, even if he has got a long beard; even if he has got knotted hair, he is only a pseudo ṛṣī; and therefore Krishna says all these people become jñānis. That is the next stage.

Then what is the next stage; छिन्नद्वैधा chinnadvaidhā; knowledge is beneficial only when it is free from all forms of doubt; doubtful knowledge is as good as ignorance. And therefore acquisition of knowledge is incomplete; if all my doubts are not cleared; and that is called conviction; niścaya jñānam; knowledge has to be converted into niścaya jñānam; how, by removing all doubts, I should ask my own intellect, am I convinced of this teaching. so you need not tell anyone. You should ask your own conscious, you should ask your own inner heart; you say aham brahmāsmi; are you agreeing; and generally what will we say: I understand but very clear but there are certain doubts; because vēdāntic knowledge is a revolutionary knowledge dealing with me, the world and God. And each one is mind boggling teaching. And it says I am infinite (would we accept that?), very difficult to accept; I should ask the question am I really immortal; just easy to say that satchidananda śivō:'haṁ śivō:'ham; to sit quiet closing the eyes; चिदानंदरूपः शिवोऽहं शिवोऽहम् cidānaṁdarūpaḥ śivō:'haṁ śivō:'ham; and in one corner of the intellect will say: who has seen this; who knows; śivō:'haṁ śivō:'ham I says. So there should not be even a iota of doubt. So am I immortal?; do I believe or accept my immortality; very difficult.

The next thing is Vēdānta says that the Lord that you worship is non-different from you; You are God. Would we accept? Extremely difficult. Then Vēdānta makes another mind boggling statement that this world that you experience is less real than yourselves; it is not as real as you; you are the ultimate reality; and the world is not as real as you; am I ready to accept. Except these three, I accept anything Swamiji, you say. Only these three are vēdānta. Therefore that conviction comes by reflection; raising questions and answering. Vēdānta allows any number of questions. Until I am convinced and this process of clearing the doubts is called mananam. Acquisition of knowledge is called śṛavanam; removal of doubt is called mananam; and when doubts are removed; I am called cinnadvaidhā; cinnadvaidhā means संशय रहिताः saṁśaya rahitāḥ; free from doubts; I am convinced. I need not convince other people. I should convince my own intellect, otherwise I will be cheating myself; therefore cinnadvaidhā, is the next stage.

And once a person cinnadvaidhā; to use the second chapter expression: sthira prajñāḥ; then what will happen? ब्रह्मनिर्वाणम् लभन्ते Brahmanirvāṇam labhantē. Such people have attained oneness with Brahman. Nirvāṇam means merger; Oneness, Aikyam; Brahmani Nirvāṇam; Brahma Nirvāṇam, Nirvāṇam means eki bhavaḥ. So they attain brahma Nirvāṇam.

And what do you mean by attaining oneness with Brahman. I have told you several times; you should remember that there is no question of merging into Brahman in the physical sense of the term; because if you are going to talk about physical merger into Brahman, it will mean Brahman is elsewhere; I am elsewhere; and like the rivers merging into ocean, I have to rush and then become one; but Vēdānta defines Brahman as the all-pervading principle; therefore there is no question of physical merger.

Then what do you mean by merger into Brahman. Very carefully note: merger into Brahman is dropping the notion that I am away from Brahman. To drop the thought that I am away from Brahman; dropping the notion, dropping the misconception, which is born out of ignorance; so dropping the ignorance-caused notion of distance is called merger.

Can you see various stages; first follow values of life; then become pure; then take the initiative for spiritual growth, which involves sādhanā chatustaya sampathī; guru prāpti, attending class; it will all come. Do not give some excuse "Swamiji, Besant Nagar was very near; Adyar is a long way". If you want knowledge you should come to Kailsas also; I am testing you to see how sincere you are; and you are proving that you are sincere by coming here also. So therefore:

त्यजेत् एकम् कुलस्यार्थे ग्रामस्यार्ते कुलम् त्यजेत् ।
ग्रामं जनपदस्यार्ते आत्मार्थे प्रित्वीं त्यजेत् ॥
tyajēt ēkam kulasyārthē grāmasyārtē kulam tyajēt |
grāmaṁ janapadasyārtē ātmārthē pritvīm tyajēt ||

This is the advice; for saving one family, you can sacrifice a member. For saving one village; you can sacrifice one family. For saving the nation; you can sacrifice one village; for the sake of mokṣaḥ; you must be prepared to sacrifice everything; So therefore all these will come under initiative; and then the next stage is gaining knowledge and then next stage is gaining conviction and final stage is merger into Brahman. These are the stages, which will be further clarified in the next verse also. We will read:

कामक्रोधवियुक्तानां यतीनां यतचेतसाम् ।
अभितो ब्रह्मनिर्वाणं वर्तते विदितात्मनाम् ॥५.२६ ॥ kāmakrōdhaviyuktānāṁ yatīnāṁ yatacētasām |
abhitō Brahmanirvāṇaṁ vartatē viditātmanām | | 5.26 | |

अभितः abhitaḥ both (here and hereafter), यतिनाम् yatinām for the self restrained ones कामक्रोधवियुक्तानाम् kāmakrodhaviyuktānām who are free from desire and anger यतचेतसाम् yatacetasām whose minds are restrained विदितात्मनाम् viditmānam and who have known the Atma.

26. Oneness with Brahman takes place both (here and hereafter) for the self-restrained ones who are free from desire and anger, whose minds are restrained, and who have known the Atma.

So the same idea of the previous verse is repeated here again, just for the sake of clarity. Here also various stages of spiritual growth are pointed out, the first stage is कामक्रोधवियुक्तानां kāmakrōdhaviyuktānām; kāmaḥ means desire for acquisition and krodhaḥ means anger caused by the obstacle in acquiring things; or anger caused by the loss of things acquired. So kāma will invariably lead to krodhaḥ; we analysed

And this management of kāma and krodhaḥ is possible when I know this basic principle of vēdānta; and what is that basic principle?; my happiness does not depend upon what I have but it depends upon what I am. So always focus on what I am, not on what I have. So if this is understood, our worry for yōga and kṣema will come down; otherwise kāma will lead to more and more preservation that I will have no time for spirituality. Life will be spent on yōga and kṣēma; yōga means acquisition; kṣēma means preservation; in this only our stress and strain, because something or the other will not be working. By the time you set up everything and everything at home is working, your brain has stopped working. You are unfit for vedantic study; 70 years. So therefore we can take care of things to some extent; but we cannot dedicate our life for yōga kṣēma and therefore one should know how to manage kāma krōdhaḥ; that is the first stage; which is called the acquisition of vairāgyam.

And the next stage is यत्चेतसाम् yatacētasām. yatacētasām; those who have integrated their mind; those who have organised their mind; yataṁ cētāha antakaranam yēṣām te; ya cētāsāha tēṣām; mind is the instrument, with which we have to do the spiritual journey and unless my mind is focussed enough I will not be able to pursue spirituality; therefore focusing capacity; otherwise called śamādhī ṣaṭka saṁpatti; so that all my organs cooperate with me for my spiritual journey; we will be seeing in the Kathōpaniṣad class; wherein Yama dharmaraja will compare our life itself into a journey; body is compared to a car and the sense organs are compared to the wheels and the mind is compared to the steering; and intellect is compared to the driver. Only if the car, the wheels, the steering, the driver; they are all healthy; then alone I can reach destination. Similarly body must be fit; sense organs must be fit; emotional mind should be fit; intellect must be fit; and they should be available for my use and that is called here yata cētatvam. An organised personality; an integrated personality. śamādhī ṣaṭka saṁpatti is the next stage.

Then यतीनां yatīnām; so the next stage becoming a yatī; the literal meaning of the word yatī is sanyāsi. So one should become a sanyāsi. so do not look at me; Swamiji what are you saying; we all should become sanyāsi; No way; If you ask us to give up everything; the first thing I will give up is your class; So therefore, sanyāsa stands for what: in the olden days, sanyāsa āśrama is exclusively prescribed for concentrated pursuit of scriptural study. Brahmacharya āśrama and sanyāsa āśrama also have no duties at all. The āśrama dharma was so designed, a brahmachāri has no duty; sanyāsi also has no duty; for what purpose, so that they can fully commit themselves for scriptural study. And therefore committed study of scriptures is the duty of a sanyāsi. And if a person follows the spirituality in a committed manner, then all such people are sanyāsis only. If my priority in life is spiritual growth; I am sanyāsi; it does not matter, I go to office, I earn money; I will be doing all these things; but if my top priority is mokṣaḥ and jñānam; I can call myself to be a sanyāsi and therefore yatī means spirituality is priority. All other things are subsidiary; that is the next stage.

Then what is the final stage. विदित्मानः viditātmanāḥ; if a person pursues spiritual knowledge with such a commitment; which is nothing but systematic and consistent study of the vēdānta for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent ācāryaḥ. Always remember this definition; jñāna yōga means and systematic and consistent study of vēdānta for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent ācāryaḥ is jñāna yōga; and whoever does that; he is a sanyāsi. You are all sanyāsiis. And this systematic study will lead to what; clear knowledge, and that jñāni is called viditātma; viditātma means jñāni. viditāḥ atma ena saha; viditātma; bhahu vrihi samāsa. All those people become jñānis as a result of the sādhanās.

And because of this knowledge, what happens; ब्रह्मनिर्वाणं वर्तते Brahmanirvāṇam vartatē. So they all have oneness with Brahman; as a result of this knowledge; merger into Brahman; I have explained the word Brahma nirvāṇam; in the previous verse itself merger into Brahman; as I said, merger is not a physical event; it is an intellectual event; it is a cognitive event; and what is the cognition; what is the knowledge; there is no distance between me and Brahman; In fact, aham Brahma asmi; and this merger or oneness is अभितः abhitaḥ; abhitaḥ means both ways; what do you mean by both ways; in this context, both ways means this oneness is there; before death also; and this oneness continues after death also; so maranat purvam api; maranaat anatharapam api, the oneness before death is called jīvan mukti; the continued oneness after death is called vidēha mukti; and the general example that is given in the śāstrā is the pot-space merging into total space. So imagine there is pot; there is space within the pot as well as outside the pot; when I gain knowledge of space, I know that pot space that is the space within the pot, is all the time one with the total space, because pot space can never be divided or separated from total space. So thus potspace is one with total space, even when the pot is there; and pot space will be one with the total space; after the destruction of the pot also. It does not make any difference in space; the presence of pot does not create a division in space; and absence of pot does not bring the space together also; it was one indivisible whole before also; later also. Similarly I am one indivisible consciousness; in the presence of body also, I am one indivisible all pervading consciousness; after the fall of the body also; I am one indivisible all pervading consciousness. When the body is there; it is called jīvan mukti; when the body has fallen, it is called vidēha mukthi; jñāna will give both; this is the jñāna phalam;

Continuing.

स्पर्शान्कृत्वा बहिर्बाह्यान् चक्षुश्चैवान्तरे भ्रुवोः ।
प्राणापानौ समौ कृत्वा नासाभ्यन्तरचारिणौ ॥ ५.२७ ॥
sparsān kṛtvā bahirbāhyāṃścakṣuścaivāntarē bhruvōḥ |
prāṇāpānau samau kṛtvā nāsābhyantaracāriṇau | | 5.27 | |

27. Having kept outside the external sense-objects and (having fixed) the sight between the eye brows one should regulate the inhalation and exhalation moving inside the nostrils.

With the previous verse, Krishna has completed the topic of jñāna phalam and the benefit of jñānam, jīvan mukti and vidēha mukthi. And in fact, with the previous verse, that is 26th verse, the fifth chapter is over. Because Krishna wanted to talk about jñāna yōga, he has talked about jñānam; he has talked about the benefit of jñānam also; therefore fifth chapter is over; Om tat sat must have come.

But still Krishna introduces one more topic at the end and concludes and that is the topic of meditation. And Krishna wants to briefly introduce this topic and create interest in Arjuna's mind, so that he will come for the next chapter also. So in three verses, He talks about meditation and its results; and Krishna will elaborate the topic of meditation in the next chapter which is going to be titled Dhyana yōga itself. More about meditation, we will be discussing, in the next chapter, but since Krishna discussing briefly, I will just mention a little bit about it; meditation is going to be prescribed for the assimilation of the Gītā teaching. For the assimilation for the digestion for the internalisation of the Gītā teaching; not only it should be there in my superficial mind; this knowledge should go into my sub-conscious mind; even to my unconscious mind; and why do we say so; because most of our reactions in our life, come from our inner mind alone; when we get angry; when we get depressed; so we violently react; it is not a thoughtful action; it is not a deliberate action; it is not a conscious action; in fact, very rarely we do conscious action. Most of our actions are mechanical action; and after reacting to the situation, thereafter we will think; everything is ulta. Why did I talk like this; why did I do like this. If I have not consciously react; How did the reaction come out of me. Why I used such a terrible words against my own father or mother or brother; Why I behaved like that; when I do not use my conscious mind, what is making me active is my own subconscious mind or inner mind and the problem is the Gītā teaching that I get remains in the conscious mind alone; and therefore in our day to day life, what happens; since we do not use conscious mind most of the time; and Gītā is where, only in the conscious mind; and in our sub-conscious mind; our old samsāri; the old samsāri is sitting, the ignorant, the doubtful, that samsāri continues to be inside; and therefore I continue to misbehave as before. And therefore the knowledge at the conscious level has to be penetrated into, pushed into, my inner personality, that even when unconsciously I do anything that also is backed by Gītā teaching.

And how will it happen; you have to do something to mix the knowledge in your entire personality; like mixing the sugar in coffee. You know, so you just tasted coffee and you find that coffee is not sweet or any drink for that matter. You scold the wife; because she is the poor one available for all scolding; therefore you do not put sugar at all; you do not take care of me properly. From olden days itself you are like that; so half-an-hour scolding, and she says I have already added sugar; and he says I drank and there is no sugar at all; then what is the problem; the sugar is down, it is not mixed with coffee. Therefore what is required; not addition of more sugar; already sugar is there; but the added sugar must mix with every droplet of coffee; adaha sugar, madhyataha sugar; uttarataha sugar; dakshinataha cha; adscha urdhvam cha prasrda cha. sugar evam coffee mayam varishtam! Similarly, unfortunately, the knowledge that I receive remains in one corner; therefore for our day to day life, this knowledge is not accessible; so how to make it accessible; Krishna is going to talk about meditation, as a means of assimilation.

And Krishna briefly talks about the initial steps to be taken for meditation; and then He will briefly talk about the process of meditation; and then He will briefly mention about the result of meditation; everything in dots and dashes; elaboration in the next chapter.

So in this slōkā, some of the steps of meditation are talked about. What are they: You have to assume some of the steps which will be explained in the next chapter, a person is seated in a comfortable posture; and his body is relaxed, all these things are understood; then what should he do; look at the second line; प्राणापानौ समौ कृत्वा prāṇāpānau samau kṛtvā; he should make the inhalation and exhalation even; samau means even and relaxed; because the condition of the mind, the condition of the breathing are interconnected. That is why when we have violent emotions, we have breathing also is disturbed; which means by managing or regulating the breathing; we can regulate our mind also. And therefore before any pooja or japa, regulation of breathing is kept as an integral part; प्राणायामा, suklām baradharam; Om Bhuhu, the vādyār will say; and stop; why the priest stops after Om Bhuhu, because you are supposed to do; He cannot do प्राणायामा for your sake; therefore you are supposed to say Om Bhuhu, Om Bhuva, etc. and do the प्राणायामा; why प्राणायामा; so that the mind gets quietened; So prana apanau samau kṛtvā; make your inhalation and exhalation, which are नासाभ्यन्तरचारिणौ nāsābhyantaracāriṇau; it should move in your nostrils; make them even; then what about the sense organs, चक्षुश्चैवान्तरे भ्रुवो caṅśuścaivāntarē bhruvōḥ; withdraw all the sense organs and most powerful sense organs is the eye; therefore may be bring the eyes or the vision between the eyebrows; so bringing the vision between the eye-brows, means not looking outward. More details Krishna himself will give in the next chapter. I am giving only the outline; therefore withdrawing the sense organs, especially the eye; then बाह्यान् स्पर्शन् बहिः कृत्वा bāhyān sparśān bahir kṛtvā; remove all the sense objects from your mind; remove all the sense objects from your mind; do not think of any external object and object includes your relationship also; what will happen to my wife or children or husband or father or mother; drop all of them. So renounce all of them, become a mental sanyāsi; Cut of all mental relationship and have relationship only with God alone. So this is called pushing; displacing the worldly thoughts by entertaining the meditation thought; these are all the initial preparation; and some more are there.

विगतेच्छाभयक्रोधः यः सदा मुक्त एव सः ॥ ५.२८ ॥

yatēndriyamanōbuddhirmunirmōkṣaparāyaṇaḥ |

vigatēcchābhayakrōdhō yaḥ sadā mukta ēva saḥ || 5.28 ||

यतेन्द्रियमनोबुद्धिः yatendriyamanobuddhiḥ Having restrained the sense-organs, mind and intellect, विगतेच्छाभयक्रोधः vigatecchabhayakrodhaḥ freed from desire, fear, and anger, मोक्षपरायणः mokṣaparāyaṇaḥ and with liberation as the supreme goal सः यः मुनिः saḥ yaḥ muniḥ one who meditates मुक्तः एव सदा muktaḥ eva sadā (becomes) liberated for ever. (nidhidyaṣana Dhyana kartha-Vedantic meditator)

28. Having restrained the sense organs, mind, and intellect, freed from desire, fear and anger, and with liberation as the supreme goal, one who meditates (becomes) liberated for ever.

भोक्तारं यज्ञतपसां सर्वलोकमहेश्वरम् ।

सुहृदं सर्वभूतानां ज्ञात्वा मां शान्तिमृच्छति ॥ ५.२९ ॥

bhōktāraṃ yajñatapasāṃ sarvalōkāmahēśvaram |

suhṛdaṃ sarvabhūtānāṃ jñātvā māṃ śāntimṛcchati || 5.29 ||

29. Knowing Me, who is the receiver of rituals and austerities, who is the supreme Lord of all worlds, (and) who is a well-wisher of all beings, one attains peace.

So यतेन्द्रियमनोबुद्धिः yatēndriyamanōbuddhiḥ. One should withdraw all the sense organs from the external world; indriya means senses; manaha means mind; buddhihi means intellect are these at yatam means withdrawn from the external world so that all these are available for the job of meditation at hand; and विगतेच्छाभयक्रोधः vigatēcchābhayakrōdha; get rid of all the emotional disturbances. Icchā means attached or desire; bhayam means fear; krōdha means anger; as long as they are there, you will sit and only burn within; and therefore get rid of all these inner emotions from your mind and your mind is turned towards only one thing; मुनिर्मोक्षपरायणः भवेत् munirmōkṣaparāyaṇaḥ bhavēt. So munihi, the meditator should only focus on mokṣaḥ as revealed in the scriptures; as one's own nature; and if a person remains in the teaching; सदा सः मुक्त एव भवति sadā saḥ mukta ēva bhavathi; then this teaching will be assimilated; that whatever is his lifetime, in the background, this Gītā teaching will be available.

and what is the object of meditation; Krishna says भोक्तारं यजतपसां सर्वलोकमहेश्वरम् । सुहृदं सर्वभूतानां मां bhōktāraṃ yajñatapasāṃ sarvalōkamahēśvaram | suhṛdaṃ sarvabhūtānāṃ mām; you meditate upon me; upon the Lord.

what type of lord; yajñatapasāṃ bhōktāraṃ; who is the receiver of all the poojas; who is the object of worship; yajñā and tapas; sarvalōkamahēśvaram; who is the ultimate Lord of the entire creation; and where is he situated; suhṛdaṃ sarvabhūtānāṃ mām; who is located in the hridayam of all the beings; do not think Lord is elsewhere seated; sarvabhūtānāṃ suhṛdaṃ. Sankaracharya says; hridayesayam; On that Lord, ज्ञात्वा jñātva; so thinking, meditating upon me, शान्तिमृच्छति śāntimṛcchati; you will attain peace of mind; you will attain both jīvan mukti and vidēha mukti; this is the nutshell. Each word will be elaborated in the next chapter.

Om

Today I will give you a summary of the 5th chapter, which we have just completed. Krishna had given the entire Gītā teaching in the 2nd, third, and fourth chapters of the Gītā and in the fifth chapter Lord Krishna is summarising the teaching that he had given in the previous three chapters, and therefore, even though this chapter is a small chapter, it is an important chapter, which gives the essence of the entire Gītā teaching, and in fact, the entire vedic teaching itself. And this chapter can be broadly classified into four portions, the first part dealing with two types of lifestyles; In Sanskrit, we call it niṣṭhā dvayam; and then the next topic that we find is sādhanā dvayam; two types of spiritual disciplines, which every seeker has necessarily go through; and then the third topic is the benefit of following these two sādhanās; sādhanā phalam; this is the third topic; and the fourth and final topic is introduction to meditation as a preparation or as a foundation for the next chapter.

These are the four main topics in the 5th chapter. Now we will briefly see each one of these four topics.

The first one is niṣṭhā dvayam; two types of lifestyles; and those types of lifestyles are grihastha āśrama, the life of a householder; and sanyāsa āśrama, the life of a sanyāsi, a renunciate, a monk. In one āśrama a person possesses everything and he is part of the society; in the other one, the person does not possess anything; and he is not part of the society. Grihastha āśrama is called pravṛtti mārga; sanyāsa āśrama is called nivṛtti mārga; one involves an active lifestyle, the other involves a withdrawn secluded lifestyle; and Krishna is emphasising only these two āśramas because the other two āśramas are only preparation for these two āśramas. Brahmacharya āśrama is a preparation for grihastha āśrama and vānaprastha āśrama is a preparation for sanyāsa āśrama; therefore we do not deal with brahmacharya and vanaprastha; we focus only on grihastha and sanyāsa āśrama. And these two āśramas alone Krishna calls two types of niṣṭhā. Krishna had talked about this in the third chapter also. lōkē'smin dvidvidhā niṣṭhā purā prōktā mayā'nagha (3.3); these two forms of lifestyle are given out in the vēdās themselves and in this Arjuna is confused regarding sanyāsa āśrama; and Arjuna's main confusion is whether sanyāsa āśrama is compulsory for liberation. Whether sanyāsa āśrama is compulsory for liberation and therefore Arjuna raises a question in the beginning of the chapter and Krishna clarifies Arjuna's confusion. And what is Krishna's answer? Krishna says sanyāsa āśrama is not compulsory for liberation; as far as the āśrama is concerned, as far as the lifestyle is concerned, a person can choose anyone of these two lifestyles;

साङ्ख्ययोगौ पृथग्बालाः प्रवदन्ति न पण्डिताः । एकमप्यास्थितः सम्यगुभयोर्विन्दते फलम् ॥ ५.४ ॥
sāṅkhyayōgau pṛthagbālāḥ pravadanti na paṇḍitāḥ|
ēkamapyāsthitaḥ samyagubhayōrvindatē phalam || 5.4 ||

a person can take to anyone of the āśramas and attain liberation. And therefore there is choice with regard to āśramas. Therefore, after brahmacharya āśrama; after the lifestyle of study, a person has a choice to decide whether I want to become a monk or whether I want to get married and live a spiritual life. And as far as advantages and disadvantages are concerned, as I pointed out before, both āśramas have got advantages and disadvantages; in grihastha āśrama the advantage is money and people are there; which will give at least a seeming sense of security; Whether it will really give or not is debatable, at least it will give a sense of security, because people and possessions are there. Which security a sanyāsi does not have; because he cannot have a possession and he cannot have a relation also. That is why Swamiji says; he shaves his head so that you cannot catch him by the hair; uncatchable; in the other āśrams, kudimi is there; you can catch; brahmacharya, grihastha etc. has the tuft; by which you can hold the person; Sanyāsi you cannot hold; so thus in grihastha āśrama security is there; sanyāsa āśrama security is not there; but the disadvantage in grihastha āśrama is what; because there are possessions and relationships, there is a responsibility; which can be a big burden, people say. Swamiji all my children are not yet married; not yet settled; they are not settled; therefore my mind is unsettled. So responsibility is the minus point of grihastha āśrama; which responsibility this sanyāsi does not have at all. So therefore in one āśrama, security is plus point, responsibility is minus point; in the other āśrama, lack of security is minus point, and the absence of responsibility, is the plus point; Tell me which āśrama is better. The other bank is greener! A grihastha feels sanyāsi is better off; and often sanyāsi feels perhaps I should not have become a sanyāsi.

And therefore both āśramas have plus and minus point, therefore, there is choice. and once we have to choose, there is conflict; wherever choice is involved, conflict comes and generally we do not want to choose; because choosing is again taking responsibility. Including dress we do not want to choose. We all ask others and ask their opinion. So Arjuna also wonders which āśrama is better for him and therefore Krishna gives an advice to Arjuna and Arjuna type of people and what is that advice, grihastha āśrama is better for majority of people.

A person can face even psychological problems if human relationship is not there; In fact, human relationship play a very important role in maintaining mental sanity; and when a person does not have any such relationship, a person can ~ one psychiatrist said ~ that I get lot of sanyāsis as patients; can happen if he does not know how to handle the mind; and therefore Krishna said both āśramas are OK for majority of people, grihastha āśrama is better. But that does not mean that all the people should take to grihastha āśrama; those who are prepared and ready, they can take to sanyāsa āśrama. So this is the topic from verse No.1 to verse No.6; niṣṭhā dvayam; āśrama dvayam; where there is a choice.

And then the next topic is sādhanā dvayam; two types of spiritual discipline and what are those two disciplines; karma yōga sādhanā and jñāna yōga sādhanā and Krishna wants to emphasise that as far as sādhanās are concerned, there is no choice at all. This is a very important point to remember; karma yōga and jñāna yōga are not given as optional means of liberation. So there is a very big misconception prevalent all over; that there are several paths to liberation; karma yōga a person can take independently, jñāna yōga another person can take; bhakthi yōga third person; rāja yōga a fourth person; and now people are adding to the list; kundalini yōga; nāda yōga; liberation in music; music method; this method and that method; a person can have all those views but you should remember Vēdā does not support this view. Bhagavat Gītā also does not support this view. There is no choice with regard to sādhanā. Then what is the conclusion; everybody requires karma yōga; everybody requires jñāna yōga also; because what one contributes, the other does not contribute.

And if both karma yōga and jñāna yōga are required; should they be followed simultaneously or one after the other. According to Krishna, they should be gradual; one after the other; there is a gradation; in Sanskrit we call it क्रम समुच्चया krama samuccayā; krama samuccayā means they should be combined one after the other; chronologically.

And if they should be one after the other, what should be order; can I start with jñāna yōga and end with karma yōga; karma yōga is the first stage; jñāna yōga is the next and final stage. And why do we put in this order; but karma yōga gives the preparation for jñāna yōga; and jñāna yōga gives liberation. This is the vaidika mārgāḥ; follow karma yōga; prepare yourselves for jñāna yōga; follow jñāna yōga and thus be liberated;

And of course it does not mean that a karma yōgi should not scriptures at all; we should not say that karma yōgi should not attend gita upaniṣad classes; that is not the idea; in the first stage, karma yōga has prominence; jñāna yōga is subdued the study of scriptures; whereas in the later stage; jñāna yōga becomes dominant, It is only a dominance-difference; it is not a water-tight compartment. Therefore Krishna summaries karma yōga sādhanā from verse No.7 to verse No.12; what is karma yōga.

And Krishna has dealt with this topic elaborately in the third chapter and this Krishna summarises in these verses; and what is the essence of karma yōga we saw; proper action plus proper attitude is karma yōga; proper action plus proper attitude is karma yōga;

And what do you mean by proper action; so we grade the action based on the spiritual progress that it can give; an actions are graded based on their capacity to give the spiritual progress and what is the gradation; selfless actions come under top grade, where the beneficiaries are more. niṣkāma karmāṇi; otherwise called sātāvika karmāṇi are the top action, which will contribute to the maximum purity or spiritual progress;

the next grade is what; sakāma karmāṇi, or rājasa karmāṇi; which are selfish actions, where the beneficiaries are minimum, maximum will be Me and my family; not more than that; such actions are called rājasa karmāṇi; or sakāma karmāṇi; or madhyama karmāṇi; they will produce only limited spiritual progress;

then what is the third grade of action; tāmasa karmāṇi; or Niṣidha karmāṇi; or harmful actions; in which I get lot of benefit, but the society is injured or harmed by my action; and such karmas are called adama karmāṇi; not only they do not give spiritual progress, they pull a person down spiritually;

And therefore a karma yōgi should give importance to sātāvika karmāṇi maximum; next is rājasa karmāṇi; and tāmasa karmas should be nil, if possible; that should be the proportion. Satva must be maximum; rajas middle and tamas should be minimum or zero; that is called proper action.

and then what is the second part of karma yōga; proper attitude and what is the proper attitude; I do all the actions as a worship to the Lord;

लिप्यते न स पापेन पद्मपत्रमिवाम्भसा ॥ ५.१० ॥
brahmaṇyādhāya karmāṇi saṅgaṃ tyaktvā karōti yaḥ |
lipyatē na sa pāpēna padmapatramivāmbhasā || 5.10 ||

A very important slōkā in this chapter, often quoted by Śankarācārya; that is dedicate all the actions to the Lord; whether it is sātāvika karma, whether it is a rājasa karma; or even if it is tāmasa karma; it should be avoided; but even if it is unavoidable, do it as dedication to the Lord. That is why Indian thieves, I do not know in other countries; Indian thieves are also devotees of God. Bhaghavane I should steal well today; and I should not get caught by the police; and I will give you a percentage of that in your hundial; so that kind of karma it is. tāmasa karma; but even that is done, I tell you, when they do that gradually, certainly the mind will change because association with Lord is capable of transforming the mind; and therefore Sankaracharya tells elsewhere in the 18th chapter; even Niṣidha karmas, if you are forced to do, do it as an offering to the Lord; Bhagavān will create a situation, you will not have to do Niṣidha karma later; therefore what is the proper attitude; dedication to the Lord;

And not only that the next important thing is whatever be the consequence of the karma. Sātvika, rājasa, tāmasa karmaṇam phalam; whatever be the consequence; accept it as the prasāda of the Lord; the will of the Lord; gracefully accept without resistance, because every experience that we have in life is the result of our own action. This is the most important we should remember; every experience in my life is the result of my own actions; and suppose we have got intense suffering and when we look into our lives; we have not done any intense papa karma; this is where we get a doubt; I have not done very big pāpa karmas, why should I suffer from such a disease or such a tragedy we always doubt, remember our experiences are not only the result of actions of the present janma; we should remember, we reap the results of our pūrva janma karmāṇi also;

and do we know what all pāpams we do in purva karma; but Bhagavān knows; he has got a master computer; which does not have Y2K problem. So Bhagavān can never fail; so whatever I get I deserve; therefore my only prayer; never ask why me; you should not ask; when you ask me why Me, you are indirectly charging Bhagavān with injustice. There is no question of Why Me at all; we should only ask the Lord; Oh Lord! I am aware that what I am going through is the result of my own actions; give me the strength to go through this and learn valid lessons from this experience; and this attitude is called padmapatra iva ambasa attitude.

So thus dedication with regard to karmas; and prasada buddhi or acceptance with regard to karma phala is proper attitude. Thus proper action plus proper attitude will make a person a karma yōgi.

And what will happen as a result of karma yōga; the result is the mind becomes spiritually oriented; Materialistic tendencies will weaken; spiritual tendencies will be strengthened; interest in Gita will increase; interest in the sastra will increase; instead of a casual approach, it will become whole-hearted and sincere approach. And therefore, everyone has to go through purifying action; even a sanyāsi has to go through purifying action; the purifying actions of a sanyāsi will be different from the purifying actions of a householder; the actions will differ; but the aim is what; the mind should become purer and purer. This is the topic from verse No.7 to 12. and Krishna traces the stages of progress also-

सर्वभूतात्मभूतात्मा कुर्वन्नपि न लिप्यते ॥५.७॥
yōgayuktō viśuddhātmā vijitātmā jitēndriyaḥ ।
sarvabhūtātmabhūtātmā kurvannapi na lipyatē ॥5.7॥

Stage of progress also Krishna talks about; we saw the details before.

Then having talked about karma yōga sādhanā; Krishna talks about jñāna yōga sādhanā, which is the next stage of sādhanā which is given from verse No.13 to 21. which is also compulsory for all; there is no way of getting out of jñāna yōga. because many people say jñāna yōga is a dry path; and therefore we should go for wet path; What is the wet path; wet path is bhakthi yōga; why bhakthi yōga is wet path; because you shed tears; thus these are all the misconceptions regarding the teaching; there is no question of avoiding jñāna yōga; saying that it is dry path; there is no question of jñāna yōga being a dry path. We will elaborately discuss this from the seventh chapter onwards. I will discuss what is bhakti yōga; we will discuss this later. So for every body, whether one is grihastha or whether one is sanyāsi; jñāna yōga is required.

Then the next question is what is jñāna yōga; jñāna yōga is vēdānta vicāraḥ; vēdānta sṛavaṇa manana nidhidyāsanam. In English, what is the definition of jñāna yōga; Systematic and consistent study of spiritual scriptures for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent ācārya or guru; you should remember this well; every word is important; systematic; systematic means you should not say that I listened to the 17th chapter in 1955, and 1962 I heard the 11th chapter somewhere else; you cannot say that; that is stray study. What I mean is build-up study which is called a systematic study; and there should be consistency also; and this why we say that it is better to listen to one guru for sometime until a person gets a comprehensive idea because, not because the other gurus are inferior but every guru has got his own method of communication. Even the words used. Anyway I do not want to emphasise here but this much should be emphasised, systematic and consistent study of the spiritual scriptures; by spiritual scriptures I mean vedantic scriptures is not the scriptures on dharma sastras. There are puranas which deal with values of life; where self-knowledge is not involved; Rāmāyanam we will call vēdānta; Rāmāyanam comes under dharma śāstram. Adyātma Rāmāyanam may come under vēdānta. But the other Rāmāyaṇam cannot come under vēdānta because there is no reference to ātma in any of those or to ātma jñānam. That is why I am using the expression; spiritual scriptures under the guidance of competent ācārya;

And what will this study lead to: this study will lead to the recognition of ātma, the real nature of every individual; so this study will lead to the recognition of ātma, which is the real nature, the essential nature, the core nature; the higher nature of the individual, which is called ātma; and what will be the nature of this discovery; that also Krishna hints at; we have seen that elaborately in the 2nd chapter, there we saw the details; ātma is of the nature of consciousness; Chaitanya svarūpaḥ ātma; and then what is the nature of consciousness; so we have seen a few important features do you remember.

Consciousness is not a part of the body; not a property of the body; or a product of the body. Then what is consciousness; consciousness is an independent entity; which pervades and enlivens the body; and the consciousness is not limited by the boundaries of the body. In short, it is all pervading; and not only that; consciousness survives or continues to exist even after the fall of the body; and therefore the consciousness is only one which pervades all the bodies of the creation; which means bodies are many, but the pervading consciousness is one. So thus sarvagataḥ; nityaḥ; ēkaḥ; it is only one consciousness.

And then Krishna said, consciousness being one and all pervading like space; it is free from all the actions.

नवद्वारे पुरे देही नैव कुर्वन्न कारयन् ॥ ५.१३॥
navadvārē purē dēhī naiva kurvanna kārayan||5.13||

न कर्तृत्वं न कर्माणि लोकस्य सृजति प्रभुः ।॥ ५.१४॥
na kartṛtvaṃ na karmāṇi lōkasya sṛjati prabhuḥ ||5.14||

Consciousness does not do any action; even though in its presence all actions take place; like what; in the presence of space, all actions take place, but space itself does not do any action. ākāśa or another example I gave you; what is the example prakāśa or the light; imagine there is one light pervading this area; actions take place in this area; the light only pervades and illumines but light itself does not do any action; good or bad. Therefore consciousness is akartā; and what is the consequence of that; since consciousness does not do any action; there is no question of reaping the result of action; and therefore it is free from puṇyam, pāpam, sanchita karma, āgami karma; prārabdha karma, nothing is there for consciousness;

na karma phala samyōgam svabhavasthu pravarthate
nadate kasyachit pāpam; na chaiva sukrutam vibhuhu;

I do not have puṇyam; I do not have pāpam; that is, consciousness the ātma is free from puṇya pāpam.

And the first stage of jñāna yōga is what; identifying this consciousness; like I gave the example here itself there are two things you should understand; that is the first step. Otherwise when I ask you what is here; you will only say there is a hand; I ask you 100 times you will say only hand only hand is there; then I have to tell you that this hand itself is seen because of some other principle which is pervading the hand; if I say that one light will burn inside; then only you will note that here that hand alone but light alone is pervading.

So if you are seeing only the hand initially, you have to be drawn to the light also; I have to say that there are two things and thereafterwards I have to talk about the nature of light; that light is an independent entity; light pervades and illumines the hand; light is beyond the periphery of the hand; light continues even when I remove the hand; I have to recognise the light. Exactly like light; consciousness pervades the body and it is distinct from the body; this is the teaching of the upaniṣad. And this recognition is the first stage.

It is only the first stage; totally three stages are there; Krishna talks about only two stages here. Third stage we will see later; so what is the second stage; the second stage is learning to identify with the consciousness as myself.

At present we have learnt to identify with the body; and this learning is so intense and so ingrained in our mind; that the moment we use the word I, we remember what: I am a male, I am a female, I am so many years old; I am the child of so and so. In fact, you remember all the bio-data associated with the body alone. So therefore we have to do a lot of unlearning. And the new process is learning to identify with the consciousness and instead of saying I-am-the-body; I have to learn to say that I-am-the-consciousness-pervading-the-body; this body is subject to arrival and departure; this body belongs to the material world; this body is a temporary gift from the Lord; I can use it for sometime, as a medium of transaction; but I cannot hold on to it permanently. So thus I have to learn to say that I am the consciousness, in the body; Not I am the body. This is shifting the I.

And Krishna says what is the advantage of shifting this I. Krishna says if I know I am the consciousness different from my body; I will look upon you also as what? Consciousness different from your body; because my perspective of you will be exactly the same as how I look at myself. I told you in the class itself; if I going to give importance to my physical personality; how I look; then naturally whomever I meet; I will only see how his physical personality. As I look upon myself; so I look upon people also. If I am ātma different from my body, you all are also ātma different from your body; so I am ātma; you are ātma; therefore what is the difference between us; there is no difference at all.

शुनि चैव श्वपाके च पण्डिताः समदर्शिनः ॥५.१८॥
vidyāvinayasampannē brāhmaṇē gavi hastini |
śuni caiva śvapākē ca paṇḍitāḥ samadarśinaḥ||5.18||

So the unity of vision, the oneness of vision is only possible through spiritual wisdom; without spiritual wisdom, it is impossible to talk about oneness and even if we talk about oneness; it will be only a lip service. On one side we will all say we are Indians, etc. but when we come this side, we will fight and kill others. We can never have a true transformation without getting this wisdom.

And not only I see oneness everywhere, the fear of mortality is gone; as long as I am the body; there will be fear of mortality; if I am the consciousness, immortal consciousness, functioning through this mortal body; I will accept the mortality of the body, because it is natural to the body; body is mortal is not a problem; the problem is not body is mortal; our problem is what; 'I am mortal' is the problem. So mortality happening everywhere; will never create problem. Daily you read the newspaper column; what happens; we are all jīvanmuktas; we are all liberated people. Let mortality be anywhere else; I have no problem; When I am mortal; that is the problem; this vēdānta changes that notion; I say I am immortal; the body which is different from is and ever will be mortal; there is no method of immortalising the body; so this is called freedom from limitation or samsāra,

So with this, Krishna concludes the topic of jñāna yōga ~ verse No.13. to 21. the karma yōga is the first stage; jñāna yōga is the second stage; jñāna yōga leads to the wisdom; I am full and I am immortal; Aham pūrṇaḥ;

Then from verse No.22 to 26, Krishna talks about a particular spiritual value and also Krishna talks about the benefit of this knowledge. Many spiritual values are prescribed in the śāstras. Krishna highlights one value; and that is vairāgyam; What do you mean by vairāgyam; understanding the limitations of the dependence on external factors, for our happiness. Dependence on external factors for our happiness is a big problem. Why, because external factors are not under my control; the weather is not under my control; the country, the government, the weather and the ruling is not under control; why? our family members certainly not under our control; our children, one need not ask; what about your servant maid; you call them servant; but the secret truth is that you are her servant; because they say, whenever you want a servant; she interviews you; what are all there in your house; Mixie, washing machine, vacuum cleaner; then TV, and all the channels are there. If all these are there, I will come. Now tell me who is interviewing whom. As long as I am depending on external factors for my happiness; sarvam paraśam duḥkham; sarvam ātmavaśam sukham; Dependence is sorrow. Dependence is sorrow; especially psychological dependence. Physical dependence we cannot avoid; we need food; we need clothing; we need shelter; we cannot avoid; but psychological dependence on people, on things, and on situations; this is called samsāra. First we should know that the problem is with us; and problem is not with the world. As Dayananda beautifully says: You are the problem; and You are the solution; and what is the problem with me; that I depend on those unpredictable factors, is my mistake; and therefore what is the correction required; go from dependence to independence.

स्थिरबुद्धिरसंमूढः ब्रह्मविद् ब्रह्मणि स्थितः ॥५.२०॥

na prahr̥ṣyēt priyaṃ prāpya nōdvijēt prāpya cāpriyam|

sthirabuddhirasammūḍhō brahmaavid-brahmaṇi sthitaḥ||5.20||

So drop the dependence on external factors; and learn to depend on yourselves for your śānti; for your tripti; for your pūrṇatvam; for your security; for everything, learn to depend on yourselves; yourselves means which self; not the inferior self; learn to depend upon your own higher self; which Krishna said in the third chapter,

यस्त्वात्मरतिरेव स्यादात्मतृप्तश्च मानवः ।

आत्मन्येव च संतुष्टस्तस्य कार्यं न विद्यते ॥३.१७॥

yastvātmaratirēva syādātmatṛptaśca mānavaḥ|

ātmanyēva ca santuṣṭastasya kāryaṃ na vidyatē||3.17||

Things and people are around wonderful; they are not around, equally wonderful; if I have such a mental condition; then and then alone, I am free; and this attitude is called vairāgyam; gradually dropping external dependences; especially psychological.

And having stressed vairāgyam, Krishna talks about the benefit of knowledge, in the form of jīvan mukti; and vidēha mukti; Jīvan mukti means inner freedom; here and now; inner freedom, inner independence, here and now; why I say inner freedom; outer freedom is not possible; because externally, I am bound by the rules of the world; claiming that I am jīvan mukta, I cannot drive the car in any way that I like. Keep left, everyone is driving; the jīvan mukta; that is a different thing; but we are not supposed to do that; so even a jñāni will have to follow traffic rules; so therefore externally I am bound by the laws but internally, I have got freedom from all types of dependences; and the details we have to get from the second chapter of the Gītā; stita prajñā lakṣaṇāni;

.....vītarāgabhayakrōdhaḥ sthitadhīrṃnirucyatē||2.56||

So this is jīvan mukthi; and how long he will live like that; until the prārabdhah karma is over, the physical body will continue. jñāni does not say that I will continue until my prārabdhaḥ is over; jñāni will not say that why: because jñāni identifies with what; ātma; therefore jñāni never says I have prārabdhaḥ; the worldly people will say jñāni continues; so therefore jñāni's body is governed by prārabdha and therefore as long as that karma is there; body survives; when the karma is gone; body is gone; and thereafter he is one with brahman; without any individuality; which is called vidēha mukthi; and Krishna calls it brahma nirvāṇam;

labhantē brahmanirvāṇam, ṛṣayaḥ kṣīṇakalmaṣāḥ | 5.25

So thus vairāgyam and jīvan mukti and vidēha mukti were talked from 22 to 26th and with this the main purpose of the fifth chapter is over.

And in the last three verses; 27 to 29, Krishna introduces the topic of meditation; which Krishna wants to elaborate in the 6th chapter. And therefore the last three verses are beeja slōkās; they are seed verses for the tree of 6th chapter to come; and this chapter is called sanyāsa yōgaḥ; or karma sanyāsa yōgaḥ; because Krishna clarifies what is sanyāsa for Arjuna; and what is the clarification; outer sanyāsa is not important; inner sanyāsa is real sanyāsa; external renunciation is not compulsory; inner renunciation is the real renunciation.

Om

Having completed the fifth chapter, now we will enter into the sixth chapter of the Gītā which is titled dhyāna yōgaḥ or ātma samyama yōgaḥ; and both the words dhyānam and ātma samyamaḥ, mean the same, viz., meditation. Thus the sixth chapter is going to elaborately and comprehensively deal with an important spiritual sādhanā, viz., dhyānam or meditation.

Before going into the text proper we will first have some basic ideas regarding meditation; as given in the upaniṣads; because we should remember that the Bhagavat Gītā is based upon the upaniṣads alone; it is not an independent text; so we should very clearly understand what is the role of meditation in spiritual sādhanā. And before knowing what is the role or purpose of meditation; we should first clearly know what the meditation is not meant for; because there are so many ideas and misconceptions regarding the role of meditation; and therefore first we will see what it is not meant for.

First of all we should know that meditation is not a means of liberation. We do not prescribe meditation for the sake of mōkṣa. Why; because according to the upaniṣadic teaching; liberation is not a goal to be accomplished at all; liberation is our own intrinsic nature; it is a siddha vastu; it is not a sādhyam. And since mōkṣa is already accomplished fact, it is only a matter for owning up or knowing and therefore the upaniṣads clearly say that knowledge alone is the means of liberation.

In fact, even knowledge also does not accomplish liberation for us; knowledge reveals the fact that liberation is an already accomplished truth. And that is why, in all the upaniṣads, it is clearly said: तमेवम् विद्वान् अमृत इह भवति tamēvam vidvān amṛta iha bhavati; ज्ञानात् एव तु कैवल्यम् jñānāt ēva tu kaivalyam; liberation is through knowledge. Nowhere it is said liberation is through meditation; therefore the first point to be noted is meditation is not prescribed as a means of liberation.

Then the next clarification we should have is that meditation is not prescribed for knowledge also. Meditation is not prescribed for knowledge also, because meditation is not considered as a means of knowledge. Meditation is not considered a means of knowledge.

In the scriptures; we discuss different means of knowledge; and in that discussion; we have enumerated six means of knowledge; known as षट् प्रमाणानि ṣaṭ pramāṇāni; I do not want to discuss the six means of knowledge here; that we will do or we are doing in the upaniṣad classes; here it is enough if you note this much that the tradition accepts six means of knowledge: pratyakṣa, anumāna, upamāna, arthāpatti, aupalabdhi; and śāstram; and among the six means of knowledge, meditation is not enumerated as one means and therefore meditation is not a pramāṇam. Meditation is not a means of knowledge and therefore we should note meditation is not prescribed for knowledge also; either material or spiritual.

So what is the first point I said; meditation is not prescribed for liberation;

No.2 meditation is not prescribed for knowledge also.

Then the third thing that we have to note is for a v̄edāntic seeker; or a spiritual seeker, meditation is not prescribed even for any extra ordinary experience or mystic experience.

Meditation is not even prescribed for the purpose of any extra ordinary mystic experience also; what is the reason; the reason is all the experiences, ordinary or extra ordinary, ordinary or mystic, they deal with only finite realm. Any experience being bound by time, can deal with only a finite or limited field bound by time, because all the experiences, ordinary or extra ordinary are time-bound and therefore, they deal with only the objective universe. They only deal with objective universe; ordinary experiences deal with ordinary objective universe; extra-ordinary experiences deal with an extra-ordinary objective universe. Mystic experiences will deal with mystic-objective universe, because all the experiences belong to the objective world alone; the experiencer-subject can never become an object-of-experience. The experiencer-subject can never become an object-of either ordinary or extra ordinary experience.

Very careful: we do not question the possibility of mystic experiences. We are not questioning the possibility of extra-ordinary experiences; what we say is there are mystic experiences; there are extra-ordinary experiences; but what we say is all the mystic and extra ordinary experiences belong to an objective field; it can never deal with the very subject himself. And since all the experiences deal with objective field, they are all objective knowledge alone; they cannot come under self-knowledge; they cannot come under self-knowledge; they cannot come under spiritual knowledge; they will come under material knowledge; objective knowledge only.

And since they deal with only objective knowledge; they are incapable of giving liberation. And therefore a seeker of liberation should not be after extra ordinary experiences; a seeker of liberation should not be and cannot be after extra ordinary experiences; He cannot run after mysterious and mystic experiences, because as long as he is after such experiences, he will continue to be in the objective world; he will continue to be within finite world; he will continue to be within anātma; he will continue to be a samsāri;

And therefore the third point to be noted is for a spiritual seeker, meditation is not prescribed for mystic experiences also. And if at all such experiences come, Gaudapādācārya tells in his Māndukya upaniṣad, even if such extra ordinary experiences come, reject them as objects and therefore anātma; nothing to do with the Self at all; न आस्वदये रसम् तत्र; निसङ्ग प्रज्जय भवेत् na āsvadayē rasam tatra; nisaṅga prajñāya bhavēt.

Gauppādācārya, Śankarācārya's grand-guru; you know what is grand-guru; like grand father, guru's guru; you may get and if it comes also, ask the question; is this an object or is this a subject? And the very fact that the experience arrived and you had the experience and the experience departed indicate that it belongs to what; the objective field; the experiencer does not arrive; does not depart also.

And therefore the Self is not an object of mystic experience but self is the subject behind all the ordinary and mystic experiences; therefore a seeker should be interested in what; more on the Self and not such experiences. And therefore, the third point to be noted is meditation is not prescribed for mystic experiences.

So remember three points; meditation is not meant for liberation; meditation is not meant for knowledge; meditation is not meant for mystic experiences also.

So once we have fixed this foundation, the next question is if meditation is not meant for anyone of these, I thought any of these is the purpose, whatever I thought of you have negated now; So meditation is not meant for any of them; then for what purpose is meditation prescribed in the śāstrā; what is the role of meditation.

We say meditation has got two roles; meditation has two roles; the first role of meditation is the preparation of the mind for spiritual knowledge; you can call it cultivation of mind; you can call it refinement of mind; you can call it integration of mind; you can call it organisation of mind; call whatever you like; jñāna yōgyatha prapthihi; Just as before sowing the seed, the land has to be prepared; if tilling the land is required; if fertilizer has to be added; if watering is required; whatever is to be done; you do all those things; all are to be done before sowing the seed; and therefore we will call it preparatory meditation.

We do not say meditation alone prepares the mind; there are several exercises which prepare the mind, among several exercises meditation is also one of the important exercises, which will tune the mind. And preparatory meditation is called in Sanskrit, upāsanam; preparatory meditation is called upāsana dhyānam. The word dhyānam is a general word, and upāsana dhyānam means meditation practiced as a preparation for knowledge.

And preparatory meditation should come before knowledge or after knowledge; as the very word preparatory says, you wash your hands and plates before eating or after eating; you wash your hands, you wash your plates, you wash your mouth all before you eat food; upāsana dhyānam;

And after preparatory meditation what are we supposed to do; we have to gain spiritual knowledge; we have to gain spiritual knowledge; not through preparatory knowledge but after preparatory knowledge, we have to work for spiritual knowledge.

And what should I do; should I meditate; I have already said in the introduction meditation will not give knowledge; and therefore when I want knowledge, I have to go after the means of knowledge; which we call in Sanskrit; pramāṇam; and we have seen meditation is not a pramāṇam; therefore there is some other pramāṇam; which I think I have discussed before, when I want to see my eyes, I have a peculiar problem; what is that problem; with these eyes; I can see everything in the creation except one thing. What is that? eyes unfortunately cannot see themselves; the seer cannot be seen; what a tragedy; everybody says you have wonderful eyes; let us assume; beautiful eyes; so therefore I am tempted; but I do not have any method; therefore what do I do; howevermuch I operate my eyes; I cannot get and suppose I use telescope, microscope, whatever scope I use, it will not help there is only one method; what is that; use a mirror; and with the help of the mirror I can see the eyes.

Similarly when I have to see myself; when the knower has to be known; when the experiencer has to be known; my independent attempts will not help me; I may sit in meditation for 24,000 years; nothing will happen; it is like using the eyes; 12 years I have used; shall I use another 12 years; you may use another 12,000 years, your eyes; your eyes cannot see; better introduce a mirror. Similarly when I want self-knowledge; I have to use an appropriate mirror that is the scriptural pramāṇam; which is called śāstrā pramāṇam; which is called śabdaḥ pramāṇam; which is called upadesa pramāṇam; scriptural teachings will serve as a mirror. That is called śabdaḥ pramāṇam. If I use the mirror appropriately, not only mirror is required, the mirror should be appropriately used; then śāstrā pramāṇam will give me knowledge; and how should I use the mirror, what is the operation of śāstrā pramāṇam; that alone we discussed in the 4th chapter,

tadviddhi pranipadena; pari prasnena sevaya; upadekshyanthi te jñānam; jñānina tatvadharsina. ॥4- 34॥

You have to go through two fold exercises; known as śravaṇam and mananam. Śāstrā śravaṇam and mananam is called the exercise called jñāna yōga; called vēdānta vicāra; called adhyātma yōga; called brahma jijñāsa; These are different words; and what is the definition of śravaṇam? The definition of śravaṇam is systematic and consistent study of the scriptures for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent ācārya. Systematic and consistent study of scriptures dealing with the Self; not any other scriptures, scriptures dealing with the self; for a length of time, not listening for a half a day; one day, etc. but for a length of time; under the guidance of a competent ācārya is called śravaṇam; and when this is done; appropriately śravaṇam produces self-knowledge. You have to operate this and see for yourselves. See the mirror and you can see your eyes; Suppose you have got doubt; what should I do. I should use the mirror and see for myself; whether I can see my eyes. Similarly use the vēdānta śravaṇam and see for yourselves whether self knowledge arises or not; it will arise.

So śravaṇam produces knowledge and when as even I listen to the scriptures, certainly I will receive the knowledge also; but parallelly; doubts also arise in the mind; not only it produces knowledge; but parallelly it produces doubt. Is it true; because vēdāntic teaching is so different from what we know; that it is unbelievable. because whatever I am seeking in life; Vēdānta says I already am. I am seeking fullness; vēdānta says you are full; I am seeking peace; Vēdānta says you are peace; I am seeking security; Vēdānta says that you are secure; I am seeking the truth; that is the greatest thing; I am seeking the truth; Vēdānta says you are the truth; in fact you alone are the truth; that is it; the seer is the truth; the seen is untruth.

Anyway I do not want to go into that; that is the teaching; and therefore naturally the mind puts umpteen questions; how can I be secure; how can I be truth. So umpteen questions comes; and the instruction is do not ask the question immediately; comprehensively listen to the teaching and receive all the important features of the teaching; receive all the important features of the teaching and until you complete that, keep your doubts aside; You can write down; Swamiji makes this statement, I do not accept. You can up to maximum; if you feel bad; you can put a comma and say, with due respects to Swamiji; Respect does not mean that you should accept whatever I say; you can respectfully disagree with me; and the teacher will encourage; teacher will say sabāsh; because teacher is at least sure that he is listening; because to disagree you should listen.

Listening is the most difficult task in the world and I get the knowledge through listening but the knowledge is weakened by parallel doubts; the fundamental doubt being, why I should accept the scriptures; basic doubt; from that onwards you can imagine all possible questions under the sun. And this knowledge is called saṁśaya sahita jñānam. Knowledge, but mixed with doubt. It is like pepper and kalkundu; and a doubtful knowledge is not knowledge; doubtful knowledge is for all practical purposes ignorance only.

Suppose a wire is hanging here; a cable and you want to touch that wire; you ask me: is there power?; is that wire live wire?; I said no; it is not a live wire; you can touch; then when the other person he is about to touch, I say, 99% I am sure; but 1% there is a possibility. Will you touch?; you will get immediate liberation; Swami Chinmayananda says: spiriticution; like electrocution. Even if 1% doubt is there; that 99% knowledge possibility is useless; not even 1%. 0.0001% is there; it is not knowledge;

Therefore the spiritual sādhanā continues the second stage of spiritual sādhanā is in the removal of doubt, in the first stage, I am gathering the teaching. And whatever doubts come, I keep aside; in the second stage of sādhanā is exclusively meant to remove all possible doubt, which is called saṁśaya nivṛtti; otherwise called mananam; and when I go through this mananam; I ask questions to myself and then with the data, the teaching that I have received, I myself try to answer my questions. In fact, generally I will be able to do that; that is why they say:

पादं शिष्य स्वमेदय ।
पादं स ब्रह्मचारिस्च पादं काल क्रमेण च ॥ ācāryāt padam adattē
pādām śiṣya svamēdaya |
pādām sa brahmacārisca
pādām kāla kramēṇa ca ||

The teacher cannot say everything; you learn one fourth from the teacher and the other one fourth you have to churn yourselves; reflect on the teaching; and you will find the teaching is capable of removing the doubts; only you have to rearrange the teaching; then that answer is there; present it differently; and if you are not able to solve by yourselves; you can ask the co-students; pādām sa brahmacārisca; because what perspective you do not have; the other student may have; therefore in the discussions, it will go away; it will go away; not knowledge; doubt will go away. OK: doubt will go away; and if that also does not solve, guru is there; and we have got so many books in Vēdānta; which raises all the possible questions belonging to the past, belonging to the present; even future possible questions are envisaged in our scriptures and answered. What will you ask tomorrow, I am saying it now; We have got 1000s of books answering all possible questions.

And this process of mananam will convert the knowledge into conviction; which is called drida jñānam; which is called nis-samśaya jñānam; which has to be gained, not through meditation; but only through śravaṇam, mananam. You have to use your intellect; because knowledge is the job of the intellect. Knowledge is the job of the intellect; that is why the upaniṣads very clearly say: manasi vēda āptavyam; Through the intellect alone you have to gain the knowledge; Body cannot get knowledge; Ātma the Self cannot get any knowledge; knowledge has to take place only in one locus and that locus is the intellect alone; who says; the upaniṣads point out; manasai vedam aptavyam; Kathōpaniṣad; in mundakōpaniṣad; Yeṣonurātma cētasa vedi tavya; this ātma has to be known through the cētasa; cētas means intellect. And again elsewhere in Kathōpaniṣad;

Agryayā sūkṣmayā buddhyā dr̥śyatē; only with the help of the intellect, any knowledge has to be gained; including the spiritual knowledge; and intellect knows only one language; and what is that; reasoning; therefore you have to reason it out; remove all doubts; and convert it into a conviction and what is the conviction; I am the truth of this creation. I am the substratum of this creation; I have no doubt about that: whether the other people have doubt or not; I do not care; but for my knowledge to bless me, I should be convinced.

Otherwise it will be like the story Swami Chinmayananda tells that a person had a feeling that he is a worm; puzhu; somehow he had a psychological fixation that I am worm; whatever it might be; and therefore he had to be treated in a mental hospital and therapist has to bring and he has to bring a mirror in front and take a worm also; and ask him to see who you are; are you like this worm; now it is very clear; I am not a worm, Now he was thinking that I am a worm; he was always afraid of birds; because worm means bird will eat up. and therefore he had a mortal fear of birds; and therefore the doctor had to temporarily put him in a place where the birds are not there; therefore keeping the birds aside; he had to be taught; you are not a worm; you are a human being; you are not a worm; you are a humanbeing; śravaṇam all those things he did; Then the doctor asked: are you sure; yes. I am very sure; who are you; I am a human being not a worm; and then the doctor was very happy, he said; now you are discharged you can go back, and he came out and saw the first bird; and the moment he saw the bird, again he rushed into the hospital and said Doctor Doctor there is a bird outside; the doctor said why are you afraid of the bird; do you know that you are human being, not a bird; then he said; Doctor I know I am human being; but you have not treated the bird. Does the bird know I am human being. That is the problem. My conviction is independent of others' agreeing with me or not; it is others' problem and therefore until that conviction comes; let the whole world say I am a mortal creature; I know that

mayyēva sakalaṁ jātaṁ mayi sarvaṁ pratiṣṭitam |

mayi sarvaṁ layaṁ yāti tadbrahmādvayamasmyaham || 1.19 || Kaivalyya

I am that Brahman from which the whole world arises; and in whom the whole world rests and to whom the whole world resolves; that Brahman I am. This is called self-knowledge; how do you get it; śravaṇam; and mananam; what do you get; drida jñānam; nis-saṁśaya jñānam.

And people ask is'nt it intellectual knowledge; We will say it is intellectual knowledge; and every knowledge and intellectual; as Dayananda Swami beautifully says: there is no nasal knowledge; knowledge is always in the intellect alone;

So we now go through preparatory meditation in the beginning which is called upāsana dhyānam; and thereafter one has to switch over to śravaṇam and mananam; through śravaṇam and mananam, we will get clear knowledge; and this clear knowledge is capable of giving liberation; This clear knowledge is capable of giving liberation; which is a total transformation of my life; So this knowledge is capable of giving liberation; or jīvan mukthi which is a total transformation of life.

And what do you mean by liberation; it was explained in the second chapter, third, fourth, etc. freedom from rāgaḥ, dveṣaḥ; kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ, mātsaryaḥ; freedom from all internal problems; irrespective of external situations, the mind is free from problems; and this transformation can be called jīvan mukthiḥ; or it can be called saintliness; a person becomes a sainthood.

And how can you define saintliness in simple word; saintliness can be defined in several ways; Gītā is full of such definition; but I will put in simplest form; a saintly person is one who is incapable of getting hurt by external situations; and who is incapable of hurting other people. Neither he is hurt or disturbed by the ups and downs of the creation or the life; and nor he hurts or disturbs anyone. Krishna tells in the 12th chapter, yasmānñōdvijatē lōkō lōkānñōdvijatē ca yaḥ; he does not hurt others; and he is not hurt by others; You can call it śānti; you can call it samatvam; you can call it compassion; you can call it love; any number of words you can give; this jīvan mukthi is the benefit of this knowledge;

But here there is a problem; this knowledge has to be converted into; has to produce the result of jīvan mukthi; but often we find that even when this knowledge is there; we are not free from mental problems. In the normal course, this conviction should give me liberation but often we find that in spite of the conviction; my mind does not enjoy the benefit of knowledge. I seem to continue to be as bitter as before; as jealous as before; as frustrated as before; as afraid as before; as samsāri as before.

In short; so now we have to find out; why the knowledge does not produce the result; because the scriptures say jñānam has to produce the result; but in spite of the thorough understanding; doubtless knowledge; I do not find a transformation in my personality; I seem to have the information; but I do not have the transformation. So I have to find out what is the obstacle; It is like what; water is there in the water tank; water is in the water tank and the tap is open; the tap is open; therefore in the natural course, by sheer gravitation; the water should flow through the tap; but I find water is not flowing; I check up the tap; tap is open; I check up the tank, tank is full; now if the tank is full and if the tap is open; and the water does not flow; what is the problem; the problem is not lack of water; but the problem is there is some obstacle in the tap, which does not allow the water to flow down; and if there is some obstacle, what I am supposed to do; not go on adding more and more water; what is the use of adding; water is already there; only remove the obstacle, whatever be it.

Similarly, once we again the knowledge very clearly; the intellectual knowledge itself; is more than enough, it is capable of producing the necessary transformation; if the transformation does not take place, there are some obstacles, and therefore our aim should be removing the obstacle; pay attention to the mind; pay attention to your psychological personality; do not look for a new experience, that is not the solution. Looking for a new experience is not the solution; the solution is looking at your own mind; and the mind has got certain problems, which we call habitual notions; habitual notions, we had certain ideas about ourselves; and they are strongly ingrained in the mind; which we call viparīta bhāvanā. And we have gathered many viparīta bhāvanās from childhood itself and they are all there in our deep inner mind; in the sub-conscious mind; unconscious mind; we have got certain problems; different individuals have got different problems. So if I have been a child with other brothers and sisters; and if one of the brothers was very intelligent and getting rank, good mark and all, and I have been getting only 35 marks in every subject, just pass, then the family members always praising the other brothers; they need not criticise me; but just telling that the eldest son is very good; etc. so you just praise one of the children; the other child is going to feel I am neglected; I am not loved; I am not loved; if this idea that I am rejected is formed deep in the mind; this will continue later also; and Vēdānta knowledge will be in one corner; and the sense of rejection in another corner and bitterness, frustration and anger etc. Like that we have got several habitual problems; either in the form of anger; or jealousy or frustration; and these habitual notions called viparīta bhāvanā do not allow the transformation of the knowledge into liberation;

And therefore what is required is remove these viparīta bhāvanās; remove this habitual notions; and this process is called nidhidhyāsana dhyānam. It is the second type of meditation. The first type of meditation was called upāsana dhyānam; which comes before śravaṇam mananam; then we have to get into the second type of exercise; which is called nidhidhyāsanam; in which alone, the transformation of the personality has to take place; and nidhidhyāsanam consists of two exercises;

the first exercise is an alert living; all my transactions are in keeping with vēdāntic teaching; they are not opposed; Vēdānta friendly living; Now we have got eco-friendly everything; even pencil; they will eco-friendly pencil; the pencil has been made in such way; the ecology is not disturbed. Like that; vēdānta friendly living means all my transactions are not against the vēdāntic teaching; whenever I tend to postpone peace of mind; that is vēdānta unfriendly; because vēdānta tells peace is not something far away in time and space for you to go and acquire; peace is your own nature. In fact, if peace is not here, it is never in any place. So thus any thought or any transaction is against the teaching; I change that way of living; that is called alert living; and the second part of nidhidhyāsanam is meditation; in which I exclusively spend some time for revising my opinion about myself. Self-opinion-revision meditation; self-opinion-revision meditation; Until I come to vēdānta; what is my opinion; everything wrong; I am miserable; I am mortal; I am useless; even if I do not think, I am useless; family members remind me constantly that; the society and everything around the society only makes me feel small.

So I have such a low self-esteem; that is samsāra; I revise my opinion; and when the opinion is I am mortal; I meditate: na jāyatē mriyatē vā kadācit; who says I am mortal; I am the consciousness blessing the mortal body; but I the consciousness am immortal. Similarly when I feel I need the world to be happy and complete; I meditate on the fact, I do not need the world; and the other hand, the world depends on me. So thus for every unhealthy self-opinion, I neutralise with the opposite. This is called ātma dhyānam; self-meditation. It should go deep into my sub-conscious that even in dream; I should see myself as a wonderful free, beautiful healthy being. This is meditation No.2. The details of which we will see in the next class.

Dhyana Yōga – The Yōga of Meditation

OR

ATMASAMYAMAMA YŌGA

|| ṣaṣṭhō'dhyāyaḥ - ātmasamyama yōgaḥ ||

श्रीमद्भगवद्गीता - षष्ठोऽध्यायः | आत्मसंयमयोगः

In the last class, I was talking about the role of meditation for a vēdāntic seeker. We should remember that the role of meditation that we are talking about is purely from the standpoint of a seeker of liberation. Our scriptures do discuss meditation from the standpoint of attaining miraculous powers. Varieties of extra-ordinary powers are talked about; both in the puranas as well as in the yōga śāstrā and a vēdāntic seeker is not at all interested in extra-ordinary powers. From the standpoint of a spiritual seeker, even miraculous powers come under bondage or samsāra; because they are also subject to limitation, they are also subject to comparison and even they can lead to jealousy and other problems. And therefore in the yōga śāstrās all miraculous powers are considered to be obstacle to spiritual progress. And therefore a vēdāntic seeker is not at all interested in practising meditation as a means of extra ordinary powers. We are purely interested in gaining self-knowledge, and the consequent benefit of liberation; and fortunately liberation does not require any extra ordinary powers.

We have got jñānis without powers, and we have got people with powers who are pucca ajñānis. In fact, in our pūrānās, most of the rākṣasās had extra ordinary powers and in fact they abused the powers for the material benefit and therefore that particular chapter we should completely ignore. We are interested in purification of mind; gaining knowledge and assimilating knowledge. And from that angle, when we discuss I said meditation has twofold roles, the first is before the study of scriptures; and the other is after the study of the scriptures. Meditation before the study is called upāsana; meditation after the study is called nidhidhyāsanam. The study process itself is called śravaṇa mananam or jñāna yōgaḥ.

And therefore the entire spiritual journey can be presented in three stages; upāsana, jñāna yōgaḥ; nidhidhyāsanam. One has to go through upāsana for preparing the mind; and in the last class, I talked about upāsana as saguna īśvara dhyānam; more about upāsana I will talk about later. Upāsana is preparation of the mind; jñāna yōgyatha prāp̥thi; sādāna catuṣṭāya prāp̥thi or in simple language, purification or integration; and this upāsana should be followed by jñāna yōga; which is consistent and systematic study of the scriptures for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent ācārya and this study alone gives self-knowledge; because scriptures serve as a mirror to give us the knowledge; And if one does not gain knowledge by the study of scriptures; there is no other method of gaining knowledge through any other method. If by using the mirror I cannot see my face, what should I do; suppose a throw away the mirror and do something else; do śiraśāsanam for one hour. If by using the mirror I do not see my face, I have no other alternative except using the mirror again properly; perhaps there is some dust in the mirror; wipe it and use again; or I might not have proper spectacles; therefore take care of your eyes; but there is only method of seeing your face and that is using the mirror and therefore scriptural study is the means of self-knowledge; the upaniṣad clearly says vēdānta vijñānana sunishcārthaḥ; sanyāsa yōgāt yataya śuddha satvāḥ; this I call jñāna yōga.

Therefore upāsana, jñāna yōga; nidhidhyāsanam; upāsana prepares the mind; jñāna yōga gives knowledge; then nidhidhyāsanam; that is the meditation after jñānam is meant for the assimilation of jñānam.

I would like to add a few more ideas with regard to the assimilation, because here also several doubts can come. After gaining knowledge by the study of scriptures, a person contemplates on the knowledge received from the teacher. That I am not the body; I am not the mind; I am not the senses; but I am the awareness which is aware of all of them; this jñānam he gathers from śravaṇa mananam and meditation after knowledge is for what purpose. We should not think that meditation is for converting knowledge into Brahman experience. This is one of the general misconception; meditation after scriptural study is for the experience of Brahman; this is how it is understood; but if you study scriptures properly you will understand that we do not practice meditation for Brahman experience. Because scriptures point out that Brahman is the only thing which is all the time experienced by me as consciousness. If there is one thing in life; for whose experience you need not put forth any effort, that fortunately happens to be brahman experience; we saw in Kenōpaniṣad: प्रतिबोधविदितं मतम् pratibōdhaviditaṁ matam; just as I need not put forth any special effort to experience the light in the hall; I need not put forth any special effort to experience consciousness, because consciousness is the only thing, which is evident all the time. In fact every thing else becomes evident; only because of the self-evident consciousness. To look at a person there, I have to turn the phase. To look at a person there, I have to turn the phase; but to experience the light; I need not turn my face, wherever I turn, I experience every person; because of what; the experience of light. In fact, every word you are hearing now, it is only because of what; you are consciousness of every word of mine; because of consciousness and how are you conscious of consciousness; Do you require another consciousness to be conscious of consciousness; No; consciousness happens to be self-evident and ever evident; and that consciousness is Brahman, and therefore scriptures point out that you need not work for Brahma anubhava; therefore meditation after scriptural study is not for experiencing Brahman; but meditation after scriptural study is for experiencing the jñāna phalaṁ . Experiencing the benefit of knowledge completely; the benefit of knowledge being śāntiḥ; triptiḥ; abhayam; peace, fullness, contentment, fearlessness; security; these are all the experience of what; not Brahman; experience of jñāna phalaṁ; for jñāna phala anubhava; we have to dwell upon the knowledge; which we call assimilation or jñāna niṣṭā; or jīvan mukthiḥ; and how this meditation is to be practised; Krishna himself is going to tell in this chapter, I want to give only the bird's eye-view of the chapter.

So thus upāsana, meditation No.1, to purify the mind; Study of scriptures to attain knowledge and then meditation No.2 to experience not Brahman; to experience the benefit of knowledge, which is nothing but peace and fullness. The first meditation is called upāsanam; the second meditation is called nidhidhyāsanam; and the 6th chapter of the Gita is focusing on nidhidhyāsanam, which I translate as vēdāntic meditation. The 6th chapter is nidhidhyāsana yōgaḥ; vēdāntic meditation.

Now the entire 6th chapter can be divided into five main topics; the entire sixth chapter can be classified or categorised into five main topics; they are

No.1; general preparations for meditation; sāmānya sādhanāni; otherwise called bahiraṅga sadanani; general preparations for meditation; by which we mean those preparations or those disciplines which are to be observed throughout our transaction; it is not a discipline to be practiced. Just before meditation, but they are the disciplines to be observed throughout our day-to-day transactions; I will call it sāmānya sādhanāni; or bahiraṅga sādhanāni; general discipline; what is the significance of general disciplines; I will tell you later; we will note this much here;

Then the second topic discussed is specific disciplines or preparations; viśēṣa sādhanāni; which are to be observed just before meditation; not throughout the day. but only before we have actual meditation; They are called viśēṣa sādhanāni; or antaraṅga sādhanāni; or in English, specific preparation.

Then the third topic that we find in this chapter is dhyāna svarūpam; the process of meditation; what is meditation; Is it concentrating on something; or is it remaining thoughtless; still and silent; is it destruction of the mind; or is it going away from the mind; transcending the mind; in fact, as many people are there; so many definitions are also there; So we should know what is meditation. In Sanskrit, we call it, dhyāna svarūpam; the nature of meditation; this is topic three;

Then the fourth topic is the benefit of meditation, dhyāna phalaṁ; or we going to get miraculous powers like levitation or flying; in fact some of you may like also; seeing the road condition; and the flyovers and over-bridges perhaps you may wonder whether it is worth trying; whether you can fly to the class; or reading other people's thoughts; predicting the thoughts; what is expected of v̄edāntic meditation; dhyana phalaṁ; with regard to v̄edāntic meditation; not upāsana.

And then the fifth topic is the obstacles and their remedies during meditation; obstacles of meditation; And how to handle those obstacles; In Sanskrit, dhyāna pratibhanda parihārau; pratibhandaḥ means obstacles; parihārau means remedy; obstacles like sleep; whenever you sit in meditation; you may not get sleep in any other place, but one place and one exercise which guarantees sleep is meditation; In fact, it can be used as a cure for insomnia. Like that sleep or distraction of mind; many obstacles are discussed in the śāstrā. Krishna also mentions one obstacle and also tells us how to deal with that; so this is the fifth topic.

Thus five topics are there; general preparations; specific preparations; meditation process; benefit of meditation; and finally obstacles and their remedy. These are five main topics. There is a sixth topic also, but it is not directly connected with meditation and therefore I am ignoring; we have only to note these five.

Of these five; Krishna starts with general preparation; I will tell you the significance of general preparation; why Krishna insists upon general preparation. We have got only one mind to do our day-to-day transaction; and also to practice meditation; It is not that we have got two mind; when you go out for transaction, you insert mind No.1; and you go through all kinds of experiences, anger, frustration, disappointments, irritation and all those things you have; and what do you do, before sitting in mediation; that frustrated, disappointed, angry irritated mind you take and keep in the bureau and then take fresh mind; like in cricket, they change the ball after every seventy overs; so after day you take a fresh mind and insert; so that you have got a beautiful mind; to enjoy meditation; unfortunately that is not the fact; the mind which has gone through day-do-day transaction, the same mind is sitting in meditation; and the day-to-day transaction has given a strong imprint; the quarrel with your boss; or auto rickshaw driver; whatever it is; and they are strongly there; and you sit in mediation, you have got the realisation of auto rickshaw driver; he comes in front; so when you have got violent emotional upheavals; violent emotional disturbances, during your day-to-day life, those disturbances will influence adversely your meditation; However sincere you are; it would not work; today itself you can try; go home and sit in meditation; whatever be the transaction, which has created an emotional impact, may be happy or unhappy experiences; like a person who has played the final of the Wimbledon; and that day, both the winner and loser will not sleep; the winner will not sleep, because he is extremely happy; the loser will not sleep, because he is extremely unhappy, disappointed; any emotional upheaval is going to influence your meditation

And therefore Krishna tells you should learn the art of keeping the mind in balance; which we call as samatvam; and by balance we do not mean emotionless mind; we do not mean emotionless mind; because if you are totally free from emotion; there is no difference between you and the wall; and that is why the parents also ask; if you sit without emotions; why are you not sitting like a stone; do you not hear what I am saying; we are not talking about the emotionless mind; we do have emotions, but a mind which does not have violent emotions; we can have emotions which will not carried forward; during meditation; or even during class; when you come, you had varieties of experiences and suppose you enter the class; and then you are able to forget the transaction, then you have'nt had too much violent emotions; otherwise you will be sitting in the class; but you will be remembering the husband, wife or child, or something; and therefore the first general preparation is what: learning the art of keeping a balanced mind; in the relative sense of the term; in Sanskrit, we call it samatvam. I am not carried away by sorrowful situations also; I am not carried away by happy situations also; I enjoy but when I do the next job; my mind is available for the next job; that is called mental mastery; so this samatvam is a pre-condition for successful meditation.

This samatvam is one of the pre-conditions, not the only one; Krishna is going to talk about a few more other pre-conditions; but pre-condition that Krishna stresses is samatvam; and now the question is how can I maintain the balance of mind; how to get samatvam; and if you ask such a question to Lord Krishna, he will be disappointed; Lord Krishna will be disappointed because Krishna has talked about samatvam in the 2nd and third chapter.

सिद्ध्यसिद्ध्योः समो भूत्वा समत्वं योग उच्यते ॥२- ४८॥ yōgasthaḥ kuru karmāṇi saṅgaṁ tyaktvā dhanañjaya । siddhyasiddhyoḥ samo bhūtvā samatvaṁ yōga ucyate ॥2- 48॥

Krishna has presented karma yōga way of life as a means of samatvam; karma yōga is samatvam; and therefore in the first three verses; Krishna talks about karma yōga as the art of living; to enjoy a balanced mind; so that when you come to meditation;

you can forget all your emotions, problems; office problems; all of them, you can keep aside; and your mind is available for the task at hand; and what is karma yōga; Krishna has talked about before; but still Krishna condenses karma yōga in these three verses; with that the sixth chapter begins; karma yōga as a means for dhyāna yōga; karma yōga as a means for dhyana yōga; as the first general preparation.

And we have to note here one point; I have classified the chapter into these five topics; Krishna does not make this clear division; because Krishna has come with preparation; and he never expected Arjuna to ask for this class; So therefore it might have been given just like that; and therefore the verses are strewn all over; therefore it is our job to do the postman job; what is the postman job; he has got a bunch of letters; Andhra, Karnataka; we have to take each verse and put in the appropriate topic. This verse general preparation, this verse, specific preparation; this verse, the process of meditation; this is our job; but do not worry; I will do this job for you; you do not have the problem;

With this background; we will enter into the text proper.

|ṣaṣṭhō'dhyāyaḥ - ātmasaṁyama yōgaḥ||

श्रीमद्भगवद्गीता - षष्ठोऽध्यायः | आत्मसंयमयोगः

अनाश्रितः कर्मफलं कार्यं कर्म करोति यः।

स संन्यासी च योगी च न निरग्निर्न चाक्रियः ॥ ६.१ ॥

śrībhagavānuvāca

anāśritaḥ karmaphalaṁ kāryaṁ karma karōti yaḥ |

sa sannyāsī ca yōgī ca na niragnirna cākriyaḥ || 6. 1 ||

श्रीभगवान् उवाच śrībhagavān uvāca The Lord said सः यः करोति saḥ yaḥ karōti he who performs कर्म कार्यम् karm kāryam the action to be done, अनाश्रितः without expecting anāśritaḥ कर्मफलम् karmaphalaṁ the result of action संन्यासी sannyāsī is a sannyāsī च न निरग्निः ca na niragniḥ and not a renouncer of rituals च योगी ca yōgī moreover he is a Yōgi च न अक्रियः ca na akriyaḥ and not a renouncer of activities.

1. The Lord said --- he who performs the action to be done without expecting the result of action, is a real sanyāsi, and not a renouncer of rituals. Moreover, he is a Yōgi and not a renouncer of activities.

So chapter begins with Lord Krishna's voluntary teaching of meditation; and He starts with general preparation, and therefore this verse comes under bahiraṅga or samanya sādhanām; which is karma yōga as a method of keeping the mind in equipoise. And what is karma yōga. We have seen but here Krishna sums up the same; karma yōgi is one who considers spiritual growth as the priority in life. Material accomplishments he may value; but the value is subservient to spiritual growth. If he has to choose between spiritual growth and material benefit; he will vote for spiritual growth alone; even if it involves some material loss; giving up some material advantages; he will say, I do not mind giving up those benefits; Such a person is called karma yōgi; one for whom dharma and mokṣaḥ are priority; arta and kāma, he does not criticize, but it is not top priority. He values wealth; he values entertainment in life; certainly there are required; but they are not primary; I have given you the example before; when you take curd rice; and pickle, which one you are using for which purpose. Generally, exceptions there may be; generally we want to take curd rice and since it is bland, you want something karam; therefore you may use a little bit of avakkai; you may use a little; that is for the benefit of using the rice. Similarly money also we do require; entertainments also are OK; but that is not the main thing; I should be spending more time, more energy, more planning, etc. must be in the field of spiritual growth; and such a person is called karma yōgi.

And therefore Krishna says, अनाश्रितः कर्मफलं anāśritaḥ karmaphalaṁ; karma phalaṁ means material benefits of the action; karma phalaṁ; material benefits; arta kāma advantage. may be name or fame or promotion or extra salary or extra perks; so many things they say; this all you will get in one side; certainly we do not belittle them; they are OK; we do need; but at what cost; that is the question; What do I sacrifice for the sake getting all of them; If the sacrifice is my spirituality itself; better I sacrifice those benefits and vote for spirituality. Such a person is here called yōgi. Therefore karmaphalaṁ anāśritaḥ, he does not rely upon; he does not focus on material benefit;

And then what type of actions he undertakes; कार्यं कर्म करोति यः kāryam karma karōti yah; kāryam karma means, those actions which are prescribed by the scriptures, specially meant for inner growth. Scriptures do prescribe two types of activities; one set of activity is purely for enjoyment; eat well; drink well; all those things, scriptures do talk about; arta kāma pradhāna activities by which you can enjoy life thoroughly. And scriptures do talk about those activities which will primarily contribute to your inner growth; citta suddhi; and those karmas we saw in the third chapter as pancha mahā yajñāḥ; I do not want to get into those details; care of third chapter, we have to remember. Generally speaking, activities in which the beneficiaries are more and more; the arta kāma pradhāna activities, money entertainment oriented activities will personally benefit me and the number of beneficiaries outside is zero; whereas in pancha mahā yajñās, not only I benefit; in the process the society also benefits. Such welfare selfless beautiful activities are prescribed by which I also benefit; the society also grows; they are not destructive and here they are called kāryam karma; otherwise called nitya naimithika karma; otherwise called vihitam karma; otherwise called niṣkāma karma; otherwise called pancha maha yajñāḥ; activities designed for inner growth; selfless activities.

And a karma yōgi does those activities; and even in those welfare activities, a person can desire whether I will get Bharatha Ratna; Padma shree, Padma bhushan; material benefit; we can see; even that he does not see; he does purely for the sake of inner growth; which is invisible; material benefit is concrete and visible; whereas spiritual benefit is subtle and invisible; and that is why, we always sacrifice these karmas, Sandya vandanam; already dropped on the first day; in fact whatever you sacrifice easily, they are spiritual karmas; whatever you keep all the time is materialist karma; because the subtle benefits are not tangible; they will ask Gītā class you are attending; what benefit you get; will your salary increase; again they want some tangible benefit and whatever benefit you get is purely intangible; it is a change of your perspective; how you look at the world; how you look at God; how you look at yourselves; there is a subtle benefit; it is guaranteed; you can see for yourselves.

Therefore karma yōgi performs pancha mahā yajñāḥ; focusing upon inner growth; and Krishna says such a karma yōgi is a sanyāsi; he is as good as a monk; he is as good as a renunciate, even though he has not renounced the family, even though he has not put on ochre robes, he can be considered to be a sanyāsi; why he can be considered as a sanyāsi; because he has renounced the concern for material benefit. And therefore only there is any anxiety; but what will come maximum failure in life; what will come maximum; is failure; and for a karma yōgi, failure does not matter because, whether you succeed or fail; inner growth is guaranteed; in fact, in failure inner growth is more; and that is why in the second chapter, Krishna said for a karma yōgi there is never a failure because he is growing inwardly, whatever be the external outcome of the action; and therefore there is no anxiety; he will say whatever is going to come; I am willing to accept it. Accept it as what: Īśvara prasāda. God's will; which Krishna said in the second chapter:

tatō yuddhāya yujyasva naivarṁ pāpamavāpsyasi (2.38); comfort and discomfort; success and failure; gain and loss, each experience is a lesson; is a field for learning; and therefore he is as good as a sanyāsi; स योगी च sa yōgi ca; he is as good as a meditator also.

A karma yōgi can be termed a meditator; even though he is not a meditator in the literal sense of the term, because he does not sit in a particular place, he does not have the posture; he does not close the eyes; but still a karma yōgi is as good as a meditator; why the reason Sankaracharya and other commentators write; after-all meditation is what?; mind dwelling upon one field is meditation; mind dwelling on one particular field is meditation; a karma yōgi is a meditator because he is not agitated about his past experience; he is anxious about the future; his mind is fully available for the present task. Which is not available for the other persons because while he is doing one thing, already his mind is thinking of what will happen; what will happen; therefore even 5% mind is not available as far as karma yōgi is concerned; he plans, before planning, he thinks for the future and once he has planned and started implementation; thereafter what is going to be the result; he does not bother; and therefore he has got a fully focused mind; and a fully focused mind is a mind in meditation; so a karma yōgi is practising open eye meditation; it is called meditation because God is involved in karma yōga; because whatever action he performs he is offering to the Lord; all these you should remember; in the third chapter we saw;

मयि सर्वाणि कर्माणि संन्यस्याध्यात्मचेतसा |
निराशीर्निर्ममो भूत्वा युध्यस्व विगतज्वरः ||३- ३०||
mayi sarvāṇi karmāṇi samnyasyādhyātmacetasā |

nirāśīrnirmamo bhūtvā yudhyasva vigatajvaraḥ ||3- 30|| and again in the 5th chapter also

ब्रह्मण्याधाय कर्माणि सङ्गं त्यक्त्वा करोति यः ।

लिप्यते न स पापेन पद्मपत्रमिवाम्भसा ||५- १०||

brahmanyādhāya karmāṇi saṅgaṁ tyaktvā karoti yaḥ |
lipyate na sa pāpena padmapatramivāmbhasā ||5- 10||

he is thinking of the Lord, because every action is offered to the Lord; therefore Lord is focus, focusing of the mind is there; then what is it; it is nothing but a open eye mediation; and therefore Krishna says sa yōgī;

So thus a karma yōgi is a renunciate; he is a meditator in the real sense of the term; Not only that Krishna goes one step further and says न निरग्नि na niragnir; suppose there is a sanyāsi; who has renounced everything; no wife; no children; no bank balance; nothing; and he has put on ochre robe also; and he has come out of the house; and he is sitting in meditation and he thinks of how many disciples I will get and look around, does any disciple come; when will I start my own ashram; when I will have my foreign trip; something like that; these are the qualifications of a sanyāsi now; he should have an āśrama; he should be travelling; many people have got those ideas; and suppose if I am going to think of those things I am an external sanyāsi; but I am not a true sanyāsi; therefore Krishna says na niragnihī; niragnihī, external sanyāsi; sanyāsa āśrami is called niragnihī; agnihī means rituals; in this context, agnihī means rituals; because all vēdic rituals involve agni; agni has got several meanings; one meaning is ritual; literal meaning is fire; and since fire is used in rituals; agni means vēdic ritual; niragnihī means one who has given up all the vēdic rituals; one who has broken the sacred thread, which is a symbol of external sanyāsa; called āśrama sanyāsa; and here Krishna says niragnihī, an āśrama sanyāsi is na; na means he is not a real sanyāsi, if he is going to think of all other things; On the other hand, a karma yōgi is a grihastha; a householder, but he is a sanyāsi; because his mind is focussed; and similarly न च अक्रियः na ca akriyaḥ; akriyaḥ means an external meditator; imagine there is a person who sits in a place with proper posture; keeping the body straight; and keeping the eyes closed and he has got a mala also. I think Kabirdas says; tongue rolls chanting the nama; and the fingers rolls and the mind rolls all over the world; so from the worldly angle he is a meditator; but since his mind is not focussed, Krishna tells that quite person akriyaḥ means what, quietly sitting person is not real meditator; why because he only sitting quietly but his mind is running all over; like you practice one minute silence in meetings; so in any meeting including parliamentary session; so and so has died; therefore let us observe one minute silence; and pray for the departed soul; whatever it is; and you watch your mind and during that one minute you will think of every blessed thing except that departed soul; So therefore Krishna silently sitting person is not true meditator but a householder who is active in life; is a meditator if he is a karma yōgi with focus. So na niragnir na ca ākriyaḥ; paranthu, karma yōgi eva.

Continuing.

यं संन्यासमिति प्राहुः योगं तं विद्धि पाण्डव ।

न ह्यसंन्यस्तसङ्कल्पः योगी भवति कश्चन ॥६.२॥

yaṁ saṁnyāsamiti prāhuḥ yōgam taṁ viddhi pāṇḍava |

na hyasaṁnyastasaṅkalpaḥ yōgī bhavati kaścana || 6.2 ||

पाण्डव pāṇḍava Oh! Arjuna यं प्राहुः yaṁ prāhuḥ that which (they) call इति संन्यासम् iti saṁnyāsam as renunciation तं योगम् taṁ yōgam is that Karma yōga alone विद्धि viddhi understand हि hi for, न कश्चन na kaścana nobody भवति योगी bhavati yōgī becomes a karma yōgi असंन्यस्तसङ्कल्पः asaṁnyastasaṅkalpaḥ without renouncing fancies

2. Oh Arjuna! That which (they) call renunciation is that Karma Yōga alone, understand. For, nobody becomes a Karma Yōgi with out renouncing fancies.

In the previous verse, Krishna had mentioned that karma yōgi is the real sanyāsi; not the ochre robed person. In this verse, Krishna justifies that statement. He asked the question, what is renunciation; the real renunciation. Krishna wants to say that external renunciation can never be considered a real renunciation; because self-knowledge is not connected with the external body but self-knowledge is connected with the mind or intellect. So by making a few external changes if the mind continues to be the same thing; what is the use? That is why you find that so many people are sanyāsis but they do not find have advantage at all; equal number of worries; equal problems; equal headache; in fact, they begin to regret taking sanyāsa; and the tragedy is sanyāsa is one way traffic; like the flyover traffic; a grihastha can become a sanyāsi; a sanyāsi cannot go back; so many people regret;

And therefore Krishna says the main sanyāsa required is sanyāsa of the concerns of mind; sanyāsa of those things which disturb the mind; and one of the main things that disturb the mind is concern about the future; what will happen to me tomorrow; this is one of the major concerns; and after marriage; the concern is double; because not only I think, what will I do in future; what will wife do in future; and there also thinking is wife dies what will I do; and if I die; what will wife do; that is another planning and then what will the children do; after either of us die; so most of the time our problem is saṅkalpaḥ; saṅkalpaḥ means planning, scheming, worrying about the future only; and Krishna says as long as person has not tackled that; a person cannot come to self-knowledge; because quality time is not available for the mind; even in the class itself; if you are worried about whether you will get an appropriate transport for going back home; as long as I keep up the timing you will be happy; the moment I delay you begin to worry; whether I will get the bus, auto, etc. and indirectly start looking at the clock; next next next; it will go; and therefore Krishna says a sanyāsi cannot get self-knowledge, if he is worried about the future; a grihastha also cannot get self-knowledge; if he is worried about the future; worry of the future is the obstacle; renunciation of that worry is real renunciation; renunciation of that worry is real renunciation.

And a karma yōgi has done exactly that; and therefore karma yōgi fits in with the definition of what; saṅkalpaḥ sanyāsi is real sanyāsi; saṅkalpaḥ means what; worry about future; concern; and you should always remember, worrying about future is different from planning. I have repeatedly said; but since there can be confusion, I am reminding; we are not against planning; planning is a deliberate action; which you can do at a fixed time; worrying is never a deliberate action, it is a mechanical reaction which happens at any time; can you worry at a fixed time; Swamiji I have fixed daily between 6.50 and 7.10 a.m. I have kept as worry routine; and you are all happy and 6.50 you should start; and you start crying. and 7.10 again smile; so there is a difference between planning and worrying; we are not against planning, it is a deliberate action but worry is an obstacles; planning makes you efficient in the present; worrying makes you inefficient in the present; and the one who has give up worrying is called a sanyāsi; whatever be the robe that he is wearing.

More in the next class.

Om

I had pointed out in the last class that in the 6th chapter of the Gītā, Bhagavān deals with five important topics with regard to the dhyānam or meditation; and those five topics are bahiraṅga sādhanā or general disciplines to be observed throughout one's transactions, so that one can practice meditation successfully; This is bahiraṅga sādhanām;

then He deals with antaraṅga sādhanās or specific disciplines to be observed; just before the starting of the meditation;

then the third topic is dhyāna svarūpam, the actual process of meditation, and then the fourth topic is dhyāna phalaṃ, the benefit of meditation; and finally, the fifth topic is dhyāna pratibhanda parihārau; obstacles to meditation, and their remedy.

Of these five topics, Krishna begins the chapter with the first topic; namely, bahiraṅga sādhanāni, the general disciplines a meditator should observe; and I also talked about the significance of the general disciplines, the significance is this: if we do not have a discipline during our transactions; then the mind can go through violent emotional disturbances. And when the mind is disturbed during the transactions, the disturbance forms a deep impression, or saṁskāra in the mind; it creates a scar; and once a deep disturbance saṁskāra is formed in the mind; that saṁskāra will come out whenever the mind is quiet. You can study your mind regularly itself; when your mind is not preoccupied, whatever is deep in your subconscious, that alone comes out. They are like bubbles under the water; or you can imagine a rubber ball or a piece of wood; when you keep it under the water, it will remain so; when the hand is removed; that wood will surface up. Similarly, in our subconscious mind also, there are so many emotions, they are all waiting; now they do not surface because our mind is preoccupied with something. And as long as the conscious mind is involved in deliberate action, the subconscious mind will remain underneath; the moment conscious mind takes rest; some relaxation, the sub-conscious mind is waiting, just bubbles out; and when you try to practice meditation; that is the ideal time, your conscious mind withdraws from pre-occupation; then the sub-conscious impression are bound to come; and if during the day, I had disturbing emotions; they will remain as saṁskāras and during meditation, those transactions alone will come; and therefore we should find out a method, by which violent disturbances are not entertained and I do not allow my sub-conscious mind to form disturbing saṁskāra.

And how to do that; how to neutralise the possible scar in the mind; that is by training the mind to have samatvam. So as they give the example of the great philosopher, when he heard the news that he has lost all his wealth which was coming in the ship, the ship itself sank; and the news came to the philosopher businessman; and they said that you have lost everything; then the first response was; What? almost the heart was about to stop. He is a philosopher, he has trained his mind to respond to the situations properly; immediately he recovered, got his balance back and made the second statement; So What? This changing from What, to So What requires tremendous mental training; and that is samatvam; and this samatvam or tranquility is called karma yōgaḥ; and therefore Krishna talks about karma yōga as a method of maintaining the tranquility of mind; the graph of our mind; does not go too high; it does not go too low also; it is almost a balanced graph.

And to emphasise the role of karma yōga; Krishna wants to glorify the karma yōgi; and karma yōgi is none other than a grihastha, a householder; and therefore Krishna praises a householder. Therefore the 6th chapter begins with the glorification of a householder; what type of householder; karma yōgi householder; and by way of glorifying a householder; indirectly Krishna is glorifying karma yōga; and by way of glorifying karma yōga; Krishna is glorifying samatvam. So you should have the global vision. Grihastha glorification is equal to karma yōga glorification; karma yōga glorification is equal to samatvam glorification.

And how does Krishna glorify a householder, by pointing out that a householder alone is a real sanyāsi; he gives a title; Sanyāsi; so that it means that you are all real sanyāsi; and not only that; He says the regular sanyāsis, are not real sanyāsis; and by that he gives a knock on my head!; So, professional sanyāsi is not a real sanyāsi; a householder is the real sanyāsi.

Then again Krishna points out a conventional meditator is not a real meditator. Who is a conventional meditator, the one who has withdrawn from all the activities; and he is taking to a quiet place, by taking to proper posture; closing eye; keeping the body straight; he is a regular conventional meditator. Krishna says that conventional meditator is not true meditator; then who is true meditator, the karma yōgi, grihastha, is a true meditator.

So Krishna here goes to the extent of criticising the sanyāsi for the sake of glorifying a grihastha; so naturally Sankaracharya is a little bit worried; while writing a commentary; because Sankaracharya is a champion of sanyāsa; If he gets a little chance he will talk about the glory of sanyāsa. So it is very interesting to read his commentary on the Gītā; for manuṣyaḥ; Śankarācārya will write Sanyāsi; for him manushya should be a sanyāsi; such a vehement intense champion of sanyāsi is naturally disturbed when Krishna criticises a sanyāsi; and therefore Śankarācārya adds a footnote: He says do not take this criticism seriously. Krishna does not want to really criticise a sanyāsi; the purpose is he wants to glorify a grihastha; therefore temporarily he is doing a seeming criticism. This in śāstrā is called nahi nindhā nyāyaḥ; this is a methodology used in scriptures; what is the methodology; criticism of something for the purpose of glorifying something else; Criticism of something for the sake of glorifying something else; there the focus is not criticism; but the focus is on glorification; and this is called what; nahi nindhā nyāya; Applying this law; Sankaracharya says Krishna is not really criticising sanyāsi; Krishna wants to highlight karma yōga.

Having glorified a grihastha karma yōgi in the first verse, in the second verse, Krishna is justifying that glorification. Why does he call a grihastha as a real sanyāsi? There must be some reason behind it. Normally seeing, a grihastha cannot be called a sanyāsi because he has not renounced anything. He is very much at home; he has got all the possessions in tact; all the bank balances, shares, landed property, etc. etc. all those things he has; and he has got a good kudumba also; and he introduces this is grandson, grand-daughter, daughter in law, my son in law; etc. etc. and when

Therefore the question comes, what entitles a grihastha to enjoy the name of a sanyāsi. And Krishna gives the reason here; Krishna says sanyāsi means a renouncer. That is the literal meaning; the word sanyāsi does not say renouncer of what: that is not said; it does not say renouncer of wife and children; it does not say renouncer of home and job; sanyāsi means renouncer; therefore Krishna argues: a karma yōgi grihastha is a renouncer because he has renounced his concern for the future; that is the main criterion to become a karma yōgi; because one of the biggest problems or obstacle a person faces in life is the concern about the future; what will happen to me after retirement; 35 years now; that is another 30 years later; will my children take care of me; will do they śraddhaḥ after my death; so thus the human mind of capable of worrying the one who drops the worry, here the worry is called saṅkalpaḥ; constantly being obsessed with future; to such an extent; that he is not efficient in the present; and I was telling in the last class;

We have to make a difference between worrying and planning; we do not say we should not plan; what is the difference between plan and worry I told you; plan is a deliberate action; which you can do at a stipulated time; what are your plans for year 2000. OK. It is coming; to write everything in the diary, etc. whether it will happen or not is a different matter; can write up and what are you going to do in the business field, family field, health field, financial family; you do it deliberately at a stipulated time; whereas worry is not a deliberate action; but it is a reaction or obsession which happens in spite of me. Planning makes me efficient in the present; whereas worrying makes me inefficient in the present; a karma yōgi is not against planning; he is against worry.

And therefore Krishna says every karma yōgi grihastha, he might have planned but he does not worry; therefore he is called saṅkalpaḥ sanyāsi; the one who gives up worrying; and since he has renounced worry, he can be called a renouncer. That is what is said in the 2nd sloka; which I introduced in the last class; yaṁ samnyāsamiti prāhuḥ yogaṁ taṁ viddhi pāṇḍava; Hey Arjuna, by the word sanyāsa or renunciation, I do not mean the conventional renunciation; I do not mean the caturthaḥ āśrama prāptiḥ; because Krishna does not want to recommend conventional sanyāsa in the Gītā; in fact Gītā is a grihastha book; the teacher is a grihastha; who is a teacher; Krishna; Krishna is grihastha or sanyāsi; any doubt; not ordinary grihastha; 16008 wives means what; mahā...ā grihastha; and who is the student; Arjuna; he is equally great; wherever he goes marries one; therefore Arjuna is also mahā...ā grihastha and who has compiled the teaching; Vyāsācārya is also a grihastha; therefore remember throughout the Gītā, Krishna does not want to recommend conventional sanyāsa; therefore he says; Sanyāsa is nothing but karma yōgam viddhi; if you are a good karma yōgi; you will get all the benefits of a sanyāsi; that is advantageous; you will get the benefit of grihastha āśrama also and you will get the benefit of sanyāsa also;

And न ह्यसंन्यस्तसङ्कल्पः योगी भवति na hyasaṁnyastasaṅkalpaḥ yogī na bhavati; If a person has to become karma yōgi; he has to necessarily renounced saṅkalpaḥ; saṅkalpaḥ means I told you, obsession with future; and how do you define obsession with future; obsession to such an extent, that you are not able to function in the present; all my limbs are not functioning properly. A very deep concern, worry; that is what mean by worry; a person gives up saṅkalpaḥ alone is a karma yōgi; and therefore karma yōgi can be called saṅkalpaḥ sanyāsi.

yōgārūḍhasya tasyaiva śamaḥ kāraṇamucyate | | 6.3 | |

मुनेः muneḥ for a seeker आरुरुक्षोः ārurukṣoḥ – who wants to reach योगम् yōgam dhyāna yōga कर्म karma yōga उच्यते कारणम् ucyate kāraṇam is said to be the means, तस्य karma For him योगारूढस्य yōgārūḍhasya who has reached dhyāna yōga, शमः एव śamaḥ eva renunciation alone उच्यते कारणम् ucyate kāraṇam is said to be the means

3. For a seeker who wants to reach dhyānayōga, karmayōga is said to be the means. For those, who have reached dhyānayōga, renunciation is said to be the means.

Now the question is how long should one follow karma yōga? Is karma yōga is an end in itself or is it only a intermediary stage of sādhanā? We have seen it already in the previous chapter; karma yōga is not the ultimate sādhanā; karma yōga is only an intermediary sādhanā by which a person can attain jñāna yōgyatha prāptiḥ; sādhanā catuṣṭāya sampathihī; a prepared, refined, chastened, sharp mind. Karma yōga has a plus point; that it can purify the mind but we should also know the minus point or limitation of karma yōga and that limitation is what? it cannot give liberation; and therefore we should have a balanced attitude, because a person can commit a mistake; one person over-emphasises karma yōga and claims that remaining in karma yōga I will get enlightenment; this is one extreme; they do not believe in scriptural study; they do not believe jñānam. According to them, they keep on a doing karma yōga; and one day like a flash of lightening; enlightenment will come; this is one extreme, which is also a mistake. The other extreme, a person says karma yōga is utterly useless and therefore I will not take to karma yōga at all; so one person embraces karma yōga totally; another person renounces karma yōga totally; both are extremes. Krishna says; then what is the balanced attitude; use karma yōga, purify the mind, then transcend or drop karma yōga; just like entering the college; one person says I will never enter the college; his argument is after all finally I have to come out; why enter; why, in the end we have to get out, so why go in: this is the attitude. This is idiocracy. Then another person enters college and falls in love with seat, permanently I will be here; I love my professors etc. very well; even if you love professors would not love, they will ask you to get out; therefore both extremes are incorrect; enter, grow and withdraw; this is the whole life;

And therefore Krishna says that everyone should follow karma yōga in the initial stage; योगम् आरुरुक्षोः Yōgam āruruḥṣoḥ; here the word yōgaḥ; you should carefully understand because throughout the Gītā, the word yōgaḥ is used in different meanings, we should take the contextual meaning properly; so in the first line, the word yōgam means jñāna yōgam or dhyāna yōgam; to come to self enquiry; to come to self-meditation; a person has to prepare; meditation can never be the first stage of sādhanā; no scripture prescribes meditation in the beginning; if you take the bhagavad Gītā itself; meditation is not the first chapter; not the 2nd chapter, Krishna never teaches meditation; if anybody wants meditation, Krishna's advice is to study the first five chapters, attend the class, understand the five chapters properly, then and then alone you are fit for meditation. If you take Pathanjali Yōga sūtra; meditation is never prescribed in the beginning; it talks about 8 stages; aṣṭāṅga yōga; there yama niyama; āsana prāṇayama; prathyāhāra; dhāraṇa, after 6 stages, 7th stage only is dhyānam and then samādhi.

So many people want to practice only meditation. Swamiji do not talk about classes and all; I do not have time to come; tell me when you start the 6th chapter, I will give my phone number; they want to attend the 6th chapter and at the end they want to quit/ If the 6th chapter alone is enough, would not Krishna be intelligent enough to give the sixth chapter only? If Krishna chooses to teach five chapters, Krishna means that everyone should study the scriptures before thinking of any sādhanā, especially the meditation sādhanā; without the study of scriptures, the only meditation one can do is nāma japa, mentally.

If anybody asks for meditation; and they do not want to study the scriptures, you give this meditation; chant Rāma nama, Krishna nāma mentally, that is the only dhyānam; one can do without study of the scriptures and therefore Krishna says if a person should qualify to come to jñāna yōga or dhyāna yōga; one has to first practice what karma yōga. In fact in Pathanjali yōga sūtra; yama and niyama is equal to karma yōga only. I will talk about yama niyama in some other context. Yama when I say do not be afraid thinking of someone else; Yamaḥ means not yaman, lord of death; yamaḥ and niyamaḥ, do's and don'ts with regard to transactions in life; So in our regular transactions which all should be followed; they have called niyama; what all to be avoided, they are all called yamaḥ; it will boil down to karma yōga only. So therefore, Krishna tells yōgam āruruḥṣō; if a person wants to purify the mind for jñāna yōga; then what should you do; कर्म कारणमुच्यते karma kāraṇamucyatē; he should first practice karma yōga; that is why vēdā begins with karma kānda; it did not begin with upasana; it does not begin with nidhidhyāsanam; it begins with karma only.

Then Krishna says how long you should do karma yōga. Do not permanently hold on to karma yōga; once you have got the necessary preparation, you have to grow out of karma; योगारूढस्य yōgārūḍhasya, yōgarudaḥ means the one who has accomplished, the necessary preparation of mind; integration of mind; sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi; if I have accomplished; then what should you do; just as you enter the college and come out; we all entered the womb of the mother and remained there for 10 months and thereafterwards what did we do; it is so cosy and comfortable, I did not even search for food; regularly available; if you say all that, no mother is ready to keep you within herself; for more than 10 months; and even if mother likes; even if child likes, nature will not allow, the child will be thrown out; that is the law of nature; you can never stick to anything in life; enter into even relationship you have to enter, grow and grow out of that relationship. Even guru śiṣyā sambandhaḥ cannot be permanent; one has to grow out of that relationship.

And therefore Krishna says yōgārūḍhasya; sādhana catuṣṭaya saṁpannasya; शमः कारणमुच्यते śamaḥ kāraṇamucyatē; he has to withdraw from karma. And the withdrawal from karma is in two ways; one is a ritualistic traditional withdrawal, which is in the form of taking to sanyāsa āśrama; which is a formal withdrawal; because a person enters into vēdic rituals through formal methods only; when a person takes to sacred thread; it is getting the formal qualification for many of the vēdic rights or rituals; and if those rituals have served the purpose, I can quit the rituals; but quitting also should be done formally; like quitting a job. You cannot suddenly stop going to office; because I do not require to go to office; If you want to quit, there is a formality; resignation letter must be given; you should be relived; and they may ask you to continue until another person is appointed; some companies ask for 3 months notice; that is all there; similarly, I cannot get out of vēdic rituals, out of my whim and fancy, I have to formally do that; which is called sanyāsa vidhihi; where mantras are chanted and I ask the Lord; Oh; I want to get out of the vēdic ritualistic duties.

Not to do some other akrama; I want to replace those rituals by self-enquiry; I want to do more of philosophical enquiry; I formally take permission; this is one form of withdrawal; and there is another form of withdrawal in which a person does not give up the āśrama; a person does not become a monk in the literal sense of the term; but he remains in grihastha āśrama itself; and reduces the amount of activity; So if he was doing rituals for hours together; he reduces the duration; or even mundane activities he reduces, handing them over to delegating the job to someone else. That requires detachment; or else we will not leave. ஆவிஜ விட்டாலும் சாவியை விடேன் āviai viṭṭālum cāviyai viṭēṇ. Even if I give up my āvi (life), I will not forgo my cāvi (key). That power you know that important bureau cāvi are with me. there is nothing in the bureau; but still I hold on to the cāvi. cāvi is a tremendous attachment; drop those things and hand over the responsibilities to someone and gradual withdrawal; this is the second one; which is some kind of a vānaprastha āśrama; therefore either by becoming a sanyāsi; or by becoming vānaprastha;

There are all technical names; their significance is reduction of extrovertedness. Because an extroverted mind cannot be make self-enquiry; अन्तर मुख समाराध्य बहिर्मुख सुदुर्लभः antara mukha samārādhyā bahirmukha sudurlabhaḥ; not in the beginning itself; be extrovert initially to do action; then turn away from that; therefore yōgārūḍhasya tasyaiva śamaḥ kāraṇamucyatē.

And having withdrawn from the activities, how do I spend my time; time is spent in more of self-enquiry; Śravaṇa, manana, nidhidhyāsanam becomes dominant.

येदा हि नेन्द्रियार्थेषु न कर्मस्वनुषज्जते ।

सर्वसङ्कल्पसंन्यासी योगारूढस्तदोच्यते ॥६.४॥

yadā hi nēndriyārthēṣu na karmasvanuṣajjatē |

sarvasaṅkalpasannyāsi yōgārūḍhastadōcyatē | | 6.4 | |

हि यदा hi yadā indeed when अनुषज्जते anuṣajjate one is interested न इन्द्रियार्थेषु na indriyārthēṣu neither in sense objects न कर्मसु na karmasu nor in(their) pursuits तदा tadā then सर्वसङ्कल्पसंन्यासि sarvasaṅkalpasannyāsi the renouncer of all fancies उच्यते uccatē is said to be योगारूढः yōgārūḍhaḥ one who has reached dhyāna yōga.

4. Indeed, when one is interested neither in sense-objects nor in (their) pursuits, then that renouncer of all fancies is said to be one who has reached dhyānayōga.

In the previous verse, Lord Krishna said one should follow karma yōga first; which is pravṛtti; then prepare the mind and thereafterwards nivṛthi, withdrawal, so that one can spend more time in jñāna yōga; karma yōga first; then jñāna yōga; pravṛtti mārga; nivṛtti mārga.

Now the basic question; how do I know that the time has come for this switch over; that I am ready for reducing the action and ready for v̄edāntic enquiry; how to know. In the college at least there is some kind of exam; and when I get a pass mark, whether it is 30 or 35, I may write the exam a few times; does not matter, but a time comes, at least teachers out of tiredness, they pass me. Whatever it is; so let us assume, legitimately I pass; there is test to know when I have grown out; In the case of a baby also the nature takes care of. When the time is ready, there is the labour pain and the child comes out.

Now; a person who is in the karma yōga womb; when should he come out; how do we know; Can you say that everybody should be a karma yōgi for 17 years, 8 months and 23 days; something like that; Can you stipulate the time; Unfortunately, the rate of inner maturity is not uniform for all; the rate of acquiring inner maturity is not uniform for all; Some people become mature within short while; some people even after 95 years, physically 95, but

दशनविहीनं जातं तुण्डम् |
वृद्धो याति गृहीत्वा दण्डं
तदपि न मुञ्चत्याशापिण्डम् || १५ ||
aṅgaṁ galitaṁ palitaṁ muṇḍaṁ daśanavihīnaṁ jātaṁ tuṇḍam | vṛddhō yāti grhītvā daṇḍam
tadapi na muñcatyāśāpiṇḍam ||15||

Even though he has gone through several experiences but still he has not grown out of it; so how can you stipulate the time; there is no uniform time; it varies from individual to individual; so somebody asked an old man it seems: Tāttha Tāttha are you ready to marry; then the old man asked; Who will give me their daughter in marriage to me: he does not say that I do not want; the question is who will give the girl; So this is the condition.

And therefore we have to have our own method of examination; and therefore Krishna gives the litmus test; litmus test; do not imagine that you have to pour some liquid over your head see whether it turns yellow or pink; whatever it is.

Krishna says यदा हि नेन्द्रियार्थेषु न कर्मस्वनुषज्जते yadā hi nēndriyārthēṣu na karmasvanuṣajjatē. A mature mind is free from obsession with sense pleasures; or arta kāma puruṣārtaḥ; the word obsession is important; so there is sense pleasure; there is arta and kāma, śāstrā allows a person to fulfill arta kāma puruṣārtaḥ but what is highlighted here is a person's mind is constantly thinking of that only; Morning also; what should be eaten for breakfast. That is the grossest sense pleasure is tongue; By the time breakfast is over, planning for lunch; after lunch planning for dinner. All the time arta kāma, entertainment money, entertainment money; so as long the mind is obsessed with money and entertainment; Vēdānta cannot appeal to such mind; Vēdānta will appear irrelevant; What is the purpose of this. Vēdānta will appear to be a waste of time; Whereas when there is maturity; the mind is not obsessed with that; not that I will not enjoy a good food; if you like, eat nicely; the idea is one should not brood on it; suppose it was promised and not yet received; somebody promised gulab jamun and he did not bring it; constant meditation on that and they do not bring and because of that you get so wild. That is the problem. That is why I said preference is one thing; need is quite another thing; a mature mind is free with regard to slavery in the field of arta kāma puruṣārtaḥ.

Therefore Krishna says indriyārtheṣu na anuṣajjate; It is not craving after the sense pleasures; And if they do not attract me or appeal to me; very careful not hatred; hating the sense objects is as much an obstacle as craving for them; So a mature person does not hate also. Nor does he crave. Dayananda Swamiji gives a beautiful example. As a baby, I might be playing the game of marbles. Nowadays we cannot give this example. Computer games I should say; Swamiji used to say Marbles so toys; During that age, I am very very possessive; how many toys I have how many marbles I have; marble I mean not the floor marble; not that; I am talking about the playing marble; the goli, that you play with; So you are obsessed with that; you meditate on that as a baby; now what is your attitude towards goli; suppose your own grand child or child calls you; there is no friend to play with; so appa come with me for playing goli; you do not hate and say that if I see that I will get attachment, etc. therefore I will not play; you are not afraid of getting attached to the marble; you will happily play and even you will pretend that Oh My son I am getting defeated, etc. All those things; you will show interest; you do not hate; and in the middle of the game and you are winning; and some guest comes and the game is stopped half way; you the grown up, are you disturbed; crucial I was winning; somebody came and spoiled; playing is also OK for you; not playing is also OK for you; that is called transcending.

That is called vairāgyam; That is called growing out; that is called maturity; therefore indriyārtheṣu na anuṣajjate; he is not enamoured by, tempted by, the sense objects, and therefore only कर्मसु karmasu; karma means what; activities for procuring those arta kāma puruṣārtaḥ; arta kāma sādhanām. arta kāma is sādhyam; karma is sādhanām; arta kāma is end; arta kāma means arta means wealth; kāma means entertainment; these are the goals or sādhyam; and karma is sādhanām, Krishna says a mature person is neither attached arta kāma sadhyam; nor is he attached to karma sādhanām. Neither the means he is attracted to nor the end he is attracted to. If at all he is attracted to, that is dharma moksha puruṣārtaḥ. In fact, dharma puruṣārtaḥ, he has grown out, moksha puruṣārtaḥ he is.

To put in simple language; what is the sign of maturity? Detachment. Detachment is the crucial litmus test for inner growth; And such a person is called sarva saṅkalpaḥ sanyāsi, and since he is not obsessed with arta kāma; he is not obsessed with their arrival nor he is obsessed with their departure. No doubt, he knows money is required in future; he knows; he has saved some money; but he is not going to think because nowadays various treatment and their cost, we come to know from the newspapers; angio plasti, Rs.1 lakh; whatever it is; bypass surgery; Now you can imagine, if I get such a disease, what will be the expenditure; and at the time what will it cost; and what I am having now; whether it will be met from the interest that I get out of it; etc. So you can worry about all the possible diseases and wonder whether you have sufficient money; In fact to have a master check up to say nothing is there; you have to spend Rs.10,000. I do not know what is the minimum rate now. So if you are going to worry; you can worry any amount; that is why Krishna said security never depends upon external conditions; it is purely an inner state of mind. If you feel insecure, you can feel insecure with any amount of wealth. In fact, if you have more wealth, the very possession of wealth can make you more insecure. Therefore security is an inner state; and therefore Krishna said

tēṣāṃ nityābhiyuktānāṃ yōgakṣēmaṃ vahāmyaham || 9.22 ||

OK have some wealth; PF, shares, medical insurance, etc. you keep; but be very clear none of them is going to give you a total sense of security; therefore better surrender to the Lord; Lord will take care of you; and because of this attitude, what does he do; sarva saṅkalpaḥ sanyāsi; he has dropped his worry about future; he is as good as a sanyāsi.

In fact when a person takes to sanyāsa āśrama; what is his future; he has not provided anything for his future; he does not own anything; no money, no relationship; what is going to happen in old age; so what does he do; a sanyāsi's only security is Bhagavan. If a karma yōgi can develop same sense of security; he is as good as a sanyāsi; ready for vēdānta; so yōgārūḍhastadōcyatē;

उद्धरेदात्मानात्मानं नात्मानमवसादयेत् ।

आत्मैव ह्यात्मनो बन्धुः आत्मैव रिपुरात्मनः ॥६.५॥

Uddharēd ātmana"tmānaṃ na"tmānamavasādayēt |

ātmaiva hyātmanō bandhurātmaiva ripurātmanaḥ | | 6.5 | |

उद्धरेत् uddharet one should uplift आत्मानम् ātmānam oneself आत्मना ātmanā by oneself न अवसादयेत् na avasādayet one should not lower आत्मानम् ātmanam oneself हि hi for आत्मा एव ātmā eva the self, बन्धुः आत्मनः bandhuḥ ātmanaḥ is the friend of oneself; आत्मा ātmā atma एव रिपुः eva ripuḥ the self alone आत्मनः ātmanaḥ is the enemy of oneself

5. One should uplift oneself by oneself. One should not lower oneself. For, the self alone is the friend of oneself; the self alone is the enemy of oneself.

So with the previous verse, Krishna completes the topic of the first general discipline; bahiraṅga sādhanām No.1; and what is that bahiraṅga sādhanām; Enjoy equanimity of mind; enjoy balance of mind; avoid extremes reactions; avoid even worry about the future; by being a karma yōgi; in Sanskrit we call it samatvam is bahiraṅga sādhanā No.1.

Now in this verse, Krishna is introducing two more important bahiraṅga sādhanām; what are they: No.1. Self-effort; Prayathna; puruṣārtaḥ; using our freewill appropriately. And this verse is an important verse because Krishna clearly says we all have our own freewill; this is a very big debate; Is everything pre-determined; and unfortunately many people think that everything is already pre-determined; and we do not have any choice at all; and what is going to happen tomorrow; Bhagavān has written on my forehead; and therefore what is the use of doing anything; so this fatalism is never supported by our scriptures but because we talk about fate, many people misunderstand that our scriptures talk about fatalism. What is the difference between fate and fatalism. When we talk about fate, we talk about fate as one of the factors which influences the future; So this is a balanced view; what is the balanced view: Fate is one of the factors which will determine my future; fate is defined as prarabdha karma; purva karma phalam; this is a healthy attitude;

Then what is fatalism. Fatalism means fate is the only factor which determines our future; Are you able to see the difference. The healthy attitude is seeing that fate is one of the factors; but not the only factor; but fate is one of the factors. If fate is one of the factors; what is the other factor; our own free will; our own effort; is the second factor; we do not say, fate is not there; but what we assert is fate is not the only factor; so by using the freewill appropriately we will be able to either eliminate the fate or we will be able to reduce the intensity of fate; we do have a freewill;

And that is why we divide fate into three types; the powerful fate, then medium; and then manda or feeble; powerful ones we cannot stop; medium ones we can manage; feeble ones we can eliminate; all by using what: our freewill; and therefore Krishna emphasises the appropriate employment of our freewill, in this verse; the details of which we will see in the next class.

Lord Krishna in the beginning of the sixth chapter is dealing with the general disciplines to be observed by an individual throughout his transactions, so that he will enjoy a mind which is conducive to meditation; which we called samānya sādhanāni or bahiraṅga sādhanām.

The first bahiraṅga sādhanām that Krishna prescribed is maintenance of the poise of the mind; maintenance of samatvam of the mind. Even when we go through different kinds of experiences; we do not have a control over our experiences because our experiences are dependent on the external world. And I do not have a control over the external world; I do not have a control over the others' behaviour. My own family members, I do not know how they will behave tomorrow. Even a husband and wife, who have been living together for 50 years, they are themselves surprised by a particular behaviour from the spouse. So my wife behaves like that; or my husband behaves like that; there is a surprise which indicates that the external world is unpredictable and uncontrollable; And since I do not have a say over the external condition, the only thing that I can try to adjust is my own response to those conditions; which fortunately is adjustable; And that adjustment is brought about by karma yōga knob; if you use the karma yōga method; we will be able to have that poise of mind.

tatō yuddhāya yujyasva naivaṃ pāpamavāpsyasi || 2.38 ||

Krishna said that in the second chapter itself, for the first general discipline is try to have a poised mind. And by the word poised mind, we mean freedom from violent emotions; which will carry me of, I get lost in my life; which go out of my control. That getting lost, if one can avoid. Sometimes people drive the two wheelers, like motor bike or scooter, when there is some auto-rickshaw or the other, sometimes they lose the balance and but if they are good drivers; they do not fall; they are able to recover and continue. Similarly, we may lose the balance, but if we can avoid falling down permanently, that is samatvam. This emotional immunity; emotional health, the capacity to recover from emotional traumas or scar. If we have got that, we are reasonably healthy; psychologically. Psychological health is samatvam; which is brought about by karma yōga; in which the primary help or role is played by the Lord himself; So Lord is the backup. So this samatvam was talked up to the 4th verse.

Now in the 5th verse, Krishna is introducing another important exercise or discipline and that is self-effort; using the freewill appropriately. Because, in our scriptures, we accept the existence of a freewill for the human being. There is no freewill for the plant kingdom; they are programmed and conditioned; their behaviour inbuilt; there is no choice. In the case of animals also, we do not accept a freewill for them; and that is why animals do not have choice; therefore animals do not have responsibilities; therefore animals do not have either puṇyam or pāpam. The buffalo like human being, who is in the middle of road, and having a conversation in the middle of the road; and that is the biggest hurdle, and therefore according to śāstrā, the basic thing is we have a freewill.

Here itself there is a problem, because there are many people who do not want to accept a freewill at all; they are fatalistic people, destiny oriented people; according to them, everything is pre-determined; And they give the examples that we are all puppets in the hands of destiny or someone, if He pulls this side I go this side; if He pushes that side; I go that side; everything is pre-determined. and if a person is fatalistic it is extremely difficult to argue with him. To such people we will only say this much; what is that; if a person argues that everything is pre-determined; everything is destiny; we will point that Yes; It is true. Everything is destiny, which we call prārabdham.

And we will say that the destiny itself is of two types; good destiny and bad destiny; puṇya prārabdha and pāpa prārabdha and we will say that when a person has got a good destiny, his mind will think in such a way that he will accept freewill. If a person has got puṇya prārabdham; if he has a good destiny; that good destiny will influence the mind in such a way; that he will accept a freewill; And when the destiny is negative; pāpa prārabdham, the very destiny will influence the mind in such a way; that he will not accept freewill; and therefore we say those who have got puṇya destiny will accept freewill. Those who have pāpam destiny, they will not accept freewill and Lord Krishna is addressing those fortunate people; those who have got puṇyam and therefore those who accept that there is something called freewill. Because acceptance of freewill is śāstrā-oriented thinking. Acceptance of freewill is śāstrā oriented thinking; because śāstrā wants us to accept a freewill.

And therefore we have got puṇyam, our mind will think in the line of śāstrām and therefore we will accept freewill and we will find our own arguments, in support of that freewill also; And therefore Krishna is addressing those puṇyavāns who accept a freewill; then once we accept a freewill; then the next question is if there is a freewill; do you accept a destiny in addition to freewill or do you accept freewill only; because fatalistic people are those, who accept only fate or destiny; they do not accept freewill; Then what about those people who accept freewill; do they accept destiny. If you ask, he says, there also we go by śāstrām, when we have got puṇyam we go according to śāstrām and when we go according to śāstrām we accept both freewill as well as fate. We do not say freewill alone is there: No. We say that there is freewill also; and there is fate also; fate is the result of our own past actions; freewill is the course of action that we choose to take, because of our thinking or because of our buddhi.

And once we are going to accept fate and freewill as two forces, which will determine our future; then the next question is between these two forces, which one is more powerful; fate or freewill; விதியா vidhiya or மதியா madiya; in Tamil there should be some prāsam; we have to use similar words; vidhiya or madiya; both are sanskrit words; and that 'dhi' in Tamil; it is pronounced equally; but really speaking when you say vidhi, it is fourth dha ட், vidhi vidhi விதி விதி, and when you say madhi, it is first tha த்; mati மதி மதி; but I have told you, Tamil follows advaitam. No difference between த், த், த், த் ta, tha, da dha; everything is only one ti;

What will be our answer; our answer is we cannot answer. Our answer is we cannot answer, because everytime there is the fate and freewill operating, you cannot predict the result because, everytime they come together, their relative strength varies from time to time, because fate is not a uniform force; fate is a force determined by our past actions; since the actions do not have uniform intensity, the fate also cannot have uniform intensity and therefore we say fate has got three grades; prabhala prārabdham; madhyama prārabdham; durbhala prārabdham; according to the intensity of the karma phalam, which depends upon the intensity of karma; the fate also is every moment, different. Every moment I am facing fate of different grades; prabhala prārabdham; madhyama prārabdham and durbhala prārabdham; and everytime I use my freewill, in my operation of freewill also, there is an intensity; a casual approach; a serious approach. So there is a grade in the use of freewill also; and therefore the result will vary depending upon the type of fate; when it is prabhala prārabdham; then it is so powerful, that in front of that, the freewill cannot do anything; freewill is helpless; the only thing that the freewill can do is ask for inner strength to face that prabhala prārabdham, which is going to come, exactly like the cyclone prediction; What do the scientists do when the cyclone is approaching; Super cyclone, which they have found out new; earlier cyclone, now super cyclone; what can the scientists do; we do not have the power to stop the cyclone, that does not mean that we should be helpless; what can we do; we can prepare ourselves to fate; that is called intelligence; preparation; You do not stop it; so this is called prabhala prārabdham; That if it is a madhyama prārabdham; the freewill can be strong enough to manage that prārabdham; neither I stop it; nor I allow it; but I am able to reduce the impact and manage; is called reduction; management;

And then comes the third type of fate, which is weak enough, in whose case, I can put forth sufficient effort, which is called prāyaccitta karma and by prāyaccitta karma, durbhala prārabdham; can be wiped out, can be avoided, can be nullified, can be treated; can be remedied; therefore if you ask whether fate can be changed or not; my answer will depend upon the intensity of fate. I will not say it can be remedied; I will not say it cannot be remedied; I will say, it is prabhalam, no remedy; if it is durbalam, there is remedy. It is exactly like going to a doctor; I have talked about this before also; If I go to a doctor and ask him; Oh Doctor can you cure my disease; What will the doctor say; he will never say I can cure; he will never say I cannot cure; what will he say; let me diagnose and find out what type of disease it is; if it is a minor disease; appendicitis, it is a minor one, it is removed and thereafterwards, the person lives comfortably. Therefore it is a curable disease.

And suppose a person has got pressure problem; sugar problem; there is no cure; but what will he say; even though there is no remedy for diabetics; if you do exercise, if you reduce or avoid, eating sugar; and then what can you do; you do not cure it; you do not suffer it also totally; you can manage; you can live; only observe those pathyams; So they are called manageable diseases; and sometimes a person goes and the doctor says I have to take biopsy. Biopsy is a dirty word; it gives a fear; (because it is bhaya apsi!, which gives fear) and then sometimes they diagnose that it is a third degree cancer or something; and we cannot treat it and he closes everything and says you can inform all the people; and sometime they survive more than other people. That is where medicine is also not able to answer; some cases, they say he will survive; next day out; sometime they say he will not survive; all the other people die; and this person continues also. That is a different thing; so there is no uniform answer.

Similarly, our future is neither totally controlled by fate, nor it is totally controlled by freewill, it is going to be the resultant; to use the physics language; it is going to be the resultant of the fate and freewill; and therefore freewill has got a contributory role in determining our future; and since the freewill has got a contributory role, an asthika puruṣaḥ, one who follows vedic teaching; he always has an attitude that I can take charge of my life; and that is why our goals are called puruṣārtaḥ; puruṣārtaḥ means goals which are sought after by human beings; and the goals which are accomplished by human beings; We do not say goals are the gift of the Lord, which is thrown on a Christmas day; Santa Claus. We do not say that Bhagavān sits above the cloud and just looks at you and says: have this mōkṣam, etc. It is not that; mōkṣa is puruṣārtaḥ; it is to be chosen and accomplished by me.

"And Arjuna, I expect you to be the chooser of your future; and once you believe in free will and you have decided to choose your future, I am ready to help you"; because Lord can help only those who are willing to put forth the necessary effort. A guru can help only those students who believe in themselves; otherwise the students will sympathise with this Swami and will say Pavam Swami: he is trying to improve me; he does not know that I am un-improvable; if you have decided that you are un-improvable, only my cough will increase; nothing is going to happen; therefore, first you should have faith in yourselves, confidence in yourselves.

That is why Vivekananda says I define āsthika as one who believes in himself or herself. Faith in God is next stage; faith in Guru is next stage; faith in śāstrā is next stage; all the other three faiths are valid and useful only if there is faith in myself; and therefore Arjuna, take charge of your life.

And once you have decided to take charge of your life; what is the first step. The first step is this; whatever goal you want to accomplish in life; you have got the same set of instrument; whatever goal you want to accomplish, you have got the same set of instruments; they are your physical body, they are your sense organs, they are your emotional mind; and your rational intellect. They are the basic toolkit that you have. you have a body; you have a set of senses; jñanēndriyaṇi, karmēndriyāṇi, you have got a mind, which is capable of having healthy emotions and uplift to you; and a mind which is capable of having unhealthy emotions that pull you down. Mind is same; you have got a rationale intellect also; which can chose a wonderful goal and accomplish it also; and which can choose a wrong thing and destroy the life;

And this instrument kit, body-mind-senses-intellect Krishna calls Ātma in this context. In this context of 5th verse, Krishna uses the word Ātma by which Krishna means the instruments of body, senses, mind and intellect. And your success in life depends upon the condition of your instruments. If your instruments fulfill certain basic conditions, you are lucky, you can accomplish any goal; it is like having a car which is in good condition. Imagine the wheels are loose; in the car; and the steering is good; only once in a while, when you turn to the right, car will go to the right; only once in a while; Car is very good; the driver is drunk; that is all; No; So therefore, the car should be in good condition; then you can reach the destination, if the car is not in good condition, you will reach the nearest hospital.

This is beautifully talked about in the Kathōpaniṣad; wherein body is compared to the vehicle; the sense organs are compared to the horses or the wheels of the car; the mind can be compared to the steering; intellect can be compared to a driver; and Krishna says fine tune your equipment. If you go to carnatic music programme you will watch; the programme may be at 6.30. But the musicians will be there half an hour before. Each one holding on to his instrument; the vocalist is fine tuning the tampura; for us all sṛutis are same. But he finds fine differences; advaitam for us; so he makes fine adjustments; and the violinist with his instruments; Mridangam is banging dum, dum, dum, on his mridangam here and there with a stone; Why; they spend half an hour; and if it is Hindustani music you had it; they are so much particular about the sṛuti. That when they teach music; sa pa sa will take seven years. According to them, in South India, even the greatest musician's sa pa sa, they would not accept; voice culture they talk about so much.

Anyway that is aside; what I want to say is; if the music concert should be successful; the instruments must be fine tuned. If the local concert requires so much fine-tuning; what about our life which is the grandest and longest concert, which is going to give happiness to me and other members or which is going to be a cacophonous which is going to be disharmonious for myself and others.

Therefore Krishna says उद्धरेदात्मानात्मानं नात्मानमवसादयेत् uddharēdātmana''tmānaṃ na''tmānamavasādayēt. First refine your instruments; integrate your personality; and what do you mean by refinement; every organ must be healthy; never ignore your health; body; sense organs, mind, mental health is psychological sanity; I should be sane psychologically; and above all intellectual clarity with regard to what I want in life; there are several people who are still now; that they might be 57 years in life and if you ask them what do you want in life; they will say: do not know; it is groping in darkness and in fact they spend the entire life without knowing what they really require in life. And therefore every individual organ should be healthy; and not only each organ must be healthy, they should all function in coordination. So otherwise, the singer may be singing Sankarabharanam; and the violinist plays Kalyani and the mridangist is playing thani avarthanam in the middle of the music concert; how will it be; who will stay there.

So each individual may be great in his own field. Individual greatness is not enough; there should be coordination; many organisations fail even though the members are top; you know why, each one is so intelligent that he can never agree with the other; this is the best guarantee for failure. So similarly, we have to maintain the health and also coordination, which is called jñāna yōgyatha prapthihi; I will call it integration; I will call it adhikāarithvam; Therefore Krishna's first advice, make your instruments healthy and qualified and well directioned. And the beauty here is when I have to refine my equipment, to refine the equipment, what equipment I will use, very interesting; the refine the mridangam, I use my hands to adjust the tampura śṛuti, I use the hands; therefore to refine the external instruments, I use my own instruments.

Now if I have to refine my own instruments, what I will do; I cannot have another set of equipment, then there will be infinite regress problem, because to tune these equipments I will require another equipment. To tune that equipment, I will require another equipment. Therefore Krishna says you integrate the body, with the help of the body itself; You refine your mind, with the help of mind itself; You refine your intellect; with the help of intellect itself; they should integrate themselves. And therefore ātmana ātmānaṃ uddharēd; you integrate your instrument with the help of the very instruments themselves; And na ātmānam avasādayēt; never weaken your instrument because they are the only saving grace; so by unhealthy attitude; never weaken your instruments and the basic weakening attitude is what: I cannot grow in life; it cannot be done by me. One Vivekananda may accomplish it; One Śankarācārya may accomplish; one Ramaṇa Maharshi may accomplish; and you just worship them; it is called deification; you make them extra-ordinary people, so that you can continue to be lazy and adamant as before. Anybody who has achieved something make him a hero; Extra ordinary person; so that I can dub myself an ordinary person; Why can't I be extra ordinary then; no no no. they are all extra ordinary people and we are all ordinary people.

So this is called self-diffidence; never entertain self-diffidence; never bring down yourselves; never develop inferiority complex. never be too self-critical; Never be too pessimistic; be optimistic; So this is called self-confidence and self-effort; these are two important exercises which is required for all accomplishments, including spiritual accomplishment; and then Krishna supports that further in the second line, saying आत्मैव ह्यात्मनो बन्धुः ātmaiva hyātmanō bandhu; ātma means I told you, your own instruments; body, mind, senses, intellect complex. stūla sūkṣma śarīram; kārya kārana sangāthaḥ; so your own ātma is your true friend. So all the gurus in the world can only indirectly contribute; all the scriptures can only indirectly contribute; even Bhagavān can only indirectly contribute; the direct contributory is yourselves, like a running race, in which your son is involved and you are just there at the end; where the final ribbon is there; so what can do; your son is coming; there is another boy who is about to beat him; what can you do; suppose you start running; you cannot; if your son has to win the race, who has to run; your son. Therefore you can do; sabāsh, you can clap up, whip up, you can encourage, etc. You can do everything but they are all indirect contribution; running you can only do; your guru, God, scriptures, they are all clapping; What are we doing; we are sleeping; Krishna says: Get up my dear; start walking; ātmaiva hyātmanō bandhu, you are your true friend and आत्मैव रिपुरात्मनः ātmaiva ripurātmanaḥ, you alone are your enemy also; So you are your friend; you are your enemy. When you are your friend, you can make the whole world friendly to you; and when you are your enemy you will convert the whole world inimical to you. It all depends upon our approach; and therefore ātmaiva ripurātmanaḥ.

Continuing.

बन्धुरात्मात्मन्स्तस्य येनात्मैवात्मना जितः ।

अनात्मनस्तु शत्रुत्वे वर्तेतात्मैव शत्रुवत् ॥६.६॥

bandhurātmā"tmanastasya yēna"tmaiva"tmanā jitaḥ |
anātmnastu śatruṭvē vartēta"tmaiva śatruvat | | 6.6 | |

आत्मा बन्धुः ātmā bandhuḥ The self is a friend आत्मनः ātmanah of one self तस्य tasya for him येन yena by whom आत्मा जितः ātmā jitaḥ the self is mastered एव आत्मना eva ātmanā by the very self तु tu but एव आत्मा eva ātmā the very self वर्तते varṭata would remain शत्रुत्वे śatruṭve in enmity शत्रुवत् śatruvat like an enemy अनात्मनः anātmnāḥ for him who has not mastered the self.

6. The self is a friend of oneself for him by whom the self is mastered by the very Self. But, that very self would remain in enmity like an enemy for him who has not mastered the Self.

In the previous verse, Lord Krishna said I am my friend, I meaning my body-mind-sense-complex, and I am my enemy. Again meaning body-mind-sense complex. Now Krishna is explaining that further. how can I myself be my friend; and how can I myself be my enemy also. Isn't it contradictory? Because friendliness and enemy-ness, they are all opposite attributes; how can opposite attributes remain in one and the same object. Normally we find one who we claim as our friend, we do not claim him as our enemy; You say Mr. X is my friend; and Y is enemy; or Y is friend and X is enemy. You do not say one and the same person is a friend and also an enemy. that being so, how can we say I am the friend, and I am the enemy. For that Krishna gives the answer, which is the universal law.

Any instrument is both our friend and our enemy; any instrument that we use, in life, whether it is a knife; whether it is electricity or whether it is atomic energy; or whether it is our own LPG gas cylinder; OK; I will use kitchen logic itself; LPG gas cylinder or enemy. It is both friend and enemy; How can it be; any instrument is a friend to me; if I know how to handle it; how to manage it; how to operate it. A well managed instrument, which is under my control; is friend to me; that is why atomic energy is a blessing; electricity is blessing; knife is blessing. In fact, advancement in every science is a blessing. When? When we know how to use that advancement; On the other hand, the very same instrument is a deadly enemy to me; if I do not know how to use it; I can get electrocuted if I do not know how to handle. If I do not close the LPG cylinder properly, how many accidents we hear; the gas can spread and the whole place can catch fire and the persons can die. The same atomic energy which is giving electricity to us, is the very same atomic energy which killed millions in Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The car which is taking us to destination is the very same car, which is responsible for accidents and death also; and therefore, managed body-mind-complex is my friend, unmanaged body-mind-complex is my enemy. Body-mind-complex under my control is my friend; the body-mind-complex which is beyond my control becomes my own enemy. I do not what to do; whatever body wants I give; whatever sense organs want I give; whatever the emotions want I give. I consider it is my friend; but I do not know what I am getting enslaved to my own organs; and a time comes when I cannot even proceed further; nor withdraw; Like any addiction; If I continue the addiction, the addiction destroys me; if I try to withdraw from the addiction, withdrawal systems create problems for me; Who has created that condition; I have created that condition; and therefore Krishna says; बन्धुरात्मात्मन्स्तस्य येनात्मैवात्मना जितः bandhurātmā''tmanastasya yēna''tmaiva''tmanā jitaḥ; so ātma mayam; it is difficult to translate. I will put in simple English. One's own body=mind-complex is a friend, when they are under one's control; jitaḥ means mastered, controlled; and by control, we do not mean suppression. Very careful; Vēdānta never prescribes suppression; control means mastery. I do not stop them; we need not; and we should not stop the sense organs; they are not meant for stopping; control means directing them; the capacity to direct, if I have, I have got control;

Whereas anātmanaḥ tu, anātma means uncontrolled body mind complex; it is a peculiar usage; anātma here means ajitātma; the person for whom the body-mind-complex is not control; a licentious person who does not know the difference between freedom and license; who goes according to his whims and fancies; for such a person, आत्म एव शत्रुवत् वर्तेत ātma eva śatruvat vartēta; his own body mind complex becomes his own enemy. Like what; śatruvat; like an external enemy; It is like having a set of militants within one's own country; Fifth column like; when the naxalites are creating problems in Andhra; or the Mujahideens are creating problem in Kashmir valley; handling is extremely difficult; because they are within the country. Even bombing becomes very difficult; if it is a neighboring country, we can use the bomb, if necessary. Atom bomb, but when it is within one's own country, it is difficult; Similarly, when the enemy is within myself, handling is going to be difficult and therefore the real victory is self-victory; that is all the management sciences are uniformly coming to the conclusion that without self-management, you cannot manage anything; whether it is family management, company management, or national management; we can forget that if you cannot manage yourselves; your senses; your thoughts; and therefore managed instrument is friend; unmanaged instrument is enemy.

जितात्मनः प्रशान्तस्य परमात्मा समाहितः ।

शीतोष्णसुखदुःखेषु तथा मानापमानयोः ॥६.७॥

jitātmanah praśāntasya paramātmā samāhitaḥ |
śītoṣṇasukhaduḥkheṣu tathā mānāpamānayoḥ | | 6.7 | |

7. For one who has mastered himself and who is tranquil, the supreme Ātma is evident. (he is the same) in heat and cold, pleasure and pain, as well as in honour and dishonour.

Let us assume that a person has integrated himself or herself. Such a person who has attained self-management, Krishna calls jitātma; Jitāḥ means won over; controlled, managed; and what is managed; ātma, ātma here means body-mind-sense-intellect complex, so jitātma, means the one who has learnt the art of self-discipline; self-integration; self attunement; self-orchestration; self-management; and therefore only प्रशान्तस्य praśāntasya.

How do I know how I am master of myself. What is the sign. Krishna says praśāntaḥ; the more I win a victory over myself; the more my life is calmer; that is the acid test; otherwise, my mind will be turbulent and which I do not myself has any say at all; Therefore, jitātma is a praśāntaḥ puruṣaḥ and Krishna called such a person; yōgarūdhaḥ; sādhanā catuṣṭaya saṁpannāḥ; jñāna yōgyaḥ; such a person is not liberated; liberation requires what; with regard to that we do not comprise; liberation requires self-knowledge; so a person who has learnt manage himself is now ready; he has got admission for vēdāntic enquiry.

Until then, that person cannot person cannot benefit from vēdāntic enquiry, even vēdānta will not even appeal to such a person; Only when I have come to this stage, I will see vēdānta has some relevance to my life; and not only that; Krishna tells for such a prepared person; vēdānta is a walkover.

The talk of three types of mind; three types of intellect; an intellect which is like coal; an intellect which is like the plantain stem; vazhathandu buddhi; and karpooora buddhi; camphor type. Suppose you have got these three things; வாழ்த்தண்டு vāḷattanṭu, கர்பூரம் karpūram and கரி kari; suppose you light a camphor, what happens, immediately it catches fire; when you light up a piece of Kari, coal, it will catch fire; you have to very very carefully protect it and after some time, the fire will be retained; and suppose you have a vāḷattanṭu, not only it would not catch fire; but it will put out this fire also.

Similarly, the vēdāntic students are considered to be three types; manda, mandhyama, uttama; when the preparations have been ideally done; tat tvam asi; thank you, walk out, job is over; what the student was in Kenōpaniṣad; नाहं मन्ये सुवेदेति नो न वेदेति वेद च nāhaṁ manyē suvēdēti nō na vēdēti vēda ca; he said that and got up and walked off; The other students are wondering; whether teaching has started; for him it was over; and there is the madhyama; he says I understand vēdānta but in life, day-to-day life I find it difficult; it is all very nice; in vidya mandir, on Sunday evening; it is nice; outside it does not work; that is called kari buddhi; and then vazhathandu buddhi is that even the teacher begins to forget vēdānta when he starts teaching those people; I know you are all of camphor type only.

and therefore Krishna said परमात्मा समाहितः paramātmā samāhitaḥ; for such a prepared student paramātmā is very very evident; he grasps the teaching, as it is even taught; sṛavaṇa mātreṇa jñānam bhavathi; mahā vākya sṛavaṇa mātreṇa jñānam bhavathi; प्रतिबोध विधितम् मतं pratibōdha vidhitam mataṁ; it will be understood in one line; once that understanding is very clear; then what is the benefit; jīvan mukti is the benefit;

And therefore Arjuna where should you start; first develop, self-belief in free will; you have to start there; that future is in my hands; I should accept. and thereafterwards I should develop self-confidence and thereafterwards I should put forth self-effort; and first stage of self-effort is attunement of my own instruments and then everything will be taken care of; this is going to be the development; the details of which we will see in the next class.

In this 6th chapter, which is dealing with the topic of meditation, first Lord Krishna is talking about the general preparations to be followed by a meditator; these general preparations we call bahiraṅga sādhanāni; or sāmānya sādhanāni; and Lord Krishna emphasised four such disciplines:

The first bahiraṅga sādhanam is learning to maintain a balanced mind, during the day-to-day transactions. If the mind reacts violently, during day-to-day transactions, those reactions will be registered in the mind, and naturally during meditation, those registered reactions will again be replayed and only those reactions will come during the time of meditation, and therefore avoidance of violent reactions is discipline No.1; which we called samatvam; and one can maintain the samatvam by following the karma yōga principles; which Krishna mentioned in chapter 3.

Then the second bahiraṅga sādhanam or general discipline that Krishna highlighted is self-confidence. Because if a person does not have confidence in himself, then any help coming from outside will not be of any use at all. Whether it is a grace of the Lord Isvara Kripa or whether it is grace of the teacher guru kripa or whether it is grace of the scriptures śāstrā kripa, all these graces will be of some use, only if there is self-grace; and self-grace is nothing but self-confidence. I can follow the spiritual path and I will be able to progress; this faith is required; which we call ātma kripa. Therefore this is the second value is self-confidence.

Then the third discipline Krishna talked about is self-effort. If a person is fate oriented person, destiny oriented person, we cannot talk anything to that person, because he is going to resign everything to destiny. And such people will argue that if God wants me to get liberated; then I will get liberation; if God does not want me to get liberated; anyway my effort is useless. This argument is very interesting; if God has decided that I will get liberated, effort is not required, because God has decided. If God has decided that I will not get liberation, then my effort is useless. In first case, effort is not needed; in the second case, effort is useless; either way, I need not do anything; this is a fatalistic approach. Krishna does not accept this approach. Krishna says individual effort is required. In fact, individual effort alone will help in tapping the grace of the Lord, And therefore, the third value is self-effort; So poise of mind, self-confidence; self-effort, and then fourthly Krishna talked about another important discipline also; and that is self-management, or self-mastery. And what do you mean self-mastery. Every organ that is given to me is an instrument given by gifted by the Lord to me; the physical body is an instrument; the sense organs of knowledge and action are instruments; my mind is a wonderful instrument, and above all my intellect is the most powerful instrument, by using this instrument; I can accomplish anything in life: Dharmā, Artā, Kāma, Mōkṣa, all the four puruṣārtaḥs are accessible to me, if only I am willing to put these organs into proper use; which requires first the organs should be healthy in themselves; an unhealthy body, an unhealthy mind and intellect; cannot accomplish anything; on the other hand; they will be a burden for me; therefore every organ should be healthy and No.2, all the organs must function in coordination, otherwise the effort of one organ will be neutralised by the opposite effort of another organ; imagine your intellect has decided to attend the Gītā class; this is a decision on the part of the intellect; and let us hope it is right decision; and you have come here and now the mind should cooperate with me; which means you should have a relaxed mind, a non-wandering mind; which is available behind the ears to listen to my words. If the mind refuses to cooperate with you and it is wandering all over; how many people have come; what all dress they are wearing; suppose you are going to be bothered about all that; you are here, but you do not hear.

So now what is the problem; intellect has made the decision; mind refuses to cooperate. Then the decision of the intellect becomes a waste and therefore the sense organs should co-operate, the mind should co-operate, in short all the organs should function in harmony; this is self-mastery. The health and harmonious function of the organs is self-mastery; Krishna tells if these four are there; then spirituality will be successful; what are the four; equanimity, self-confidence, self-effort; and self-mastery. Self-mastery the word self means body-mind-sense-complex is called sense.

And therefore Krishna tells in the 7th verse, which we are seeing in the last class; jitātmanaḥ praśāntasya; suppose a person follows all these four principles; means what, jitātmanaḥ, he has self-mastery (here ātma means body-mind-sense complex, not sacidānanda ātma) jitātma means the one who has mastered, the one who is incharge of his life or her life. And as a consequence of that, what is the type of mind this person will enjoy; praśāntasya; a person whose mind is generally relaxed. which is free from violent turmoils at the thought level; which is free from stress; and strain and extrovertedness; Such a mind is called praśāntaḥ.

What is the advantage for him; paramātmā samāhitaḥ; for such a person, recognising the self; recognising the reality, is very very easy, because he can make use of the scriptures to his advantage and knowing the ātma is the easiest job; easier than going anywhere in the world. If you have to go to Badrinath; lot of effort is required; 10000 feet high; lot of problems are there; but if you have to know the ātma, the truth of yourselves; in fact, it is very very easy; if only you are able to go according to scriptural teaching. Why do we say it is very very easy; because the scriptures reveal ātma as none other than the consciousness which is available all the time. If it is a mysterious object, only available at a particular time, you have to work for it; if the scriptures are going to talk about something; which is available only at a particular time or state; then you have to work hard; there are many mysterious experiences talked about which requires meditation; and going to different levels of mind; and only when your mind is at that level; you can experience that particular object. They talk about experiencing different lōkas; higher world; higher beings; higher dēvathās; they are not naturally available now; the mind will have to go to a different state like samādhi, to experience the mysterious object, whereas the ātma, the truth, the scriptures reveal is not something available at a mysterious or particular state alone. The upaniṣads point out that ātma does not require going to any other state of mind. Then what is ātma is the conscious principle, which is available in all particular states of mind, whether it is waking state, dream state, sleep state or samādhi state; or people talk about turiyam, turiyāthitham, turiya āthitha āthitham, whatever be the state. Ātma is something which is available all the time; In what form it is available; it is available in the form of consciousness; and what we are asked to do is; this consciousness is available along with the thoughts in the mind; we have to only turn our attention from the thought aspect of mind; the changing thought aspect of mind, to the changeless consciousness.

Even now, as you are listening to the word, in your mind, there are two things; as you are listening to my words, in the mind, thoughts are occurring; every word is creating a thought in your mind, and you are grasping the thought; you are understanding or not understanding; you are accepting or not accepting; the thoughts are variable; but in and through the variable thoughts, there is one non-variable constant principle. Can you guess what is that constant principle. that is none other than the consciousness principle; because I am conscious of the first thought, conscious of the second thought; conscious of the third thought; the thoughts vary; but the consciousness does not. Like what: the light that is pervading the hall; The people are coming and going; but in and through the arrival and departure of the people, what is one common factor; the light because of which I am aware of the arrival of people, as well as the departure; in fact, if there is one principle, which is ever available, that is consciousness.

And therefore, we need not go to mysterious state to recognise consciousness, it is available in the most ordinary waking state. What is required is only the turning the attention from the thought to the consciousness. Like the example I give when I ask you what is here; you will all say; there is hand; and when I ask what else is there; you may say, lines are there on the hand; and what else is there; you may say, nails are there; you will tell everything except one thing, the most important thing, because of which you are seeing the hand; you know what is that; the light because of which you see the hand. and when I talk about the light, you are not experiencing a new thing. When I am talking about light, you are not experiencing a new thing, but you are turning your attention to something which is all the time experienced. So my words are not introducing a new principle; my words are only turning your attention to already evident ever evident light principle; which light is different from the hand; Similarly, Vēdānta is not revealing a new ātma; but Vēdānta is turning your attention to the already ever evident consciousness; and why should I turn your attention; because at present; my attention is in the thoughts which are occurring in the mind. Either I am worried about kāma vṛtti; krōdhaḥḥ thought, or greed thought, or this thought or that thought; instead of turning my attention to a particular thought in the mind; I am turning my attention to the consciousness because of which every thought is aware.

And therefore what is Vēdānta? Switching the attention from the changing thoughts to the changeless consciousness. And this turning the attention is possible only when the mind is relaxed mind. A calm mind and a subtle mind; a mind which is turbulent, and which is extrovert, it will be bothered about the changing worries and changing anxieties in the mind; but it cannot turn the attention to the changeless thought and therefore a lot of effort is required to enjoy a relaxed mind; a highly dynamic active result oriented ambition gripped mind wants to make use of every second and achieve this or that; that mind is not relaxed. Vēdānta requires praśanthasya. First of all he should listen to the teacher. For that itself, a relaxation is required. An extrovert mind cannot listen. Krishna tells when the mind is relaxed, paramātmā; the self which is none other than the consciousness and when does it obtain; pratibōdha vidhitam mataṁ; Kenōpaniṣad beautifully says that ātma is evident all the time; you do not have to go to a special meditation to experience the ātma. Just as I do not have to go to a special meditation to recognise the light, because the light is experienced in and through every experience, Similarly, the consciousness does not require any special state of mind, or any special meditation; it is all the time available;

Therefore Krishna says samāhitaḥ; samāhitaḥ = ever evident; and the beauty is the person who has a relaxed mind, if you ask him whether consciousness is evident, or if you ask him when is the consciousness evident, that person will ask a counter question, tell me when is the consciousness not evident. In fact, missing the ātma, requires effort. It is not possible. That is why he uses the expression; samāhitaḥ; sam means very very clearly evident.

And this recognition has to be done in two stages:

- the first stage is turning the attention from thought to consciousness; like turning the attention from hand to the light; similarly in our mind also, changing thoughts are there; changeless consciousness is there; Vēdānta is shifting the attention from the changing thought to the changeless witness; This is the first part of the sādanās;
- then there is the second and more important part; and what is that?: when I recognise consciousness or turn my attention to consciousness, my tendency will be to say that I am the body-mind-complex, and I have consciousness. This is our initial approach: who am I; I am the body-mind-complex. And what do I have; I have the Consciousness which illumines my thoughts. Now Vēdānta says that you have to train your mind and reverse the approach. Instead of saying that I am the body-mind-complex, and I have consciousness, what should I do? I have to reverse it and claim I am the consciousness principle and the body-mind-complex is an incidental instrument used by me. This is the biggest shift and most important shift. In fact meditation is meant for this particular shift alone; I have to change my orientation; because throughout when I give my bio-data, bio-data is body-mind oriented bio-data. I have to scrap that by knowing that that is not my bio-data; then what is my bio-data; स्तूल सूक्ष्म कारण शरिरात् व्यतिरिक्तः; अवस्व त्रय साक्षि; पञ्चकोश विलक्षणः; सच्चिदानन्द स्वरूपः सन्; यः तिष्ठति सा आत्मा stūla sūkṣma kāraṇa śarirāt vyatiriktaḥ; avasva traya sākṣi; pañcakōśa vilakṣaṇaḥ; saccidānanda svarūpaḥ san; yaḥ tiṣṭati sā ātmā; remember the five points I gave regarding consciousness:

- Consciousness is not a part, product or property of the body;
- Consciousness is an entity distinctive from the body, which pervades the body;
- Consciousness is not bound by the dimensions of the body;
- consciousness survives even after the body goes;

and

- the surviving consciousness cannot transact, not because it is absent, but because the medium of transaction is not there.

This is the description of consciousness and that consciousness is my nature.

And this we can easily know through our day-to-day experience also; during sleep, we exist but we do not transact. But the end of transaction is not the end of my existence. if end of transaction is the end of existence; what will happen; during sleep, I am dead; but I know during sleep I am not dead; I am very much alive; even though I do not do any transaction. Extend this to death also. After death also, I do not transact but non-transaction is not non-existence. And therefore I exist all the time; either with transaction or without transaction; transactions come and go; the transacting instruments come and go; but I, the consciousness, am eternally unaffected.

So this is called ātma jñānam. This is called discovering the real I. This is called owning the real I. And when I own up this real I, what is the benefit I will get, Krishna says samaḥ bhavathi; we have to supply; samaḥ bhavathi means this wise person is the same unaffected by what; śītōṣṇasukhaduḥkhēṣu. This wise person is unaffected by all the pairs of opposites, happening in his life; like heat and cold; favourable condition and unfavourable condition; none of them will shake him; and not only that, and तथा मानापमानयोः tathā mānāpamānayōḥ. Mānam and apamānam is a very big issue; we are very worried about our social status and respect; what will our children do; what will we do, if they do like this; like that; etc. So we are not even bothered regarding children's future; we are only bothered only about our name and fame; family name if such and such thing happens; self-respect; that is so much; that when that is affected by apamānam, there are people who even commit suicide; thus our life is constantly tormented by all these opposite experiences, and jñānam gives immunity; against all this. Therefore, शीतोष्णसुखदुःखेषु तथा मानापमानयोः mānāpamānayōḥ samaḥ bhavathi; śītōṣṇa samaḥ bhavathi; sukhaduḥkhēṣu; samaḥ bhavathi; samaḥ means what unaffected.

8. One whose mind is satisfied through Jñāna and Vijñāna, who is steady (and) who has mastered the sense organs is called a Yōgi. A yōgi is one for whom a lump of earth, stone and gold are the same.

8. One whose mind is satisfied through Jñāna and Vijñāna, who is steady (and) who has mastered the sense organs is called a Yōgi. A yōgi is one for whom a lump of earth, stone and gold are the same.

So this disciplined person goes through two stages of self-knowledge; first stage is called jñānam; and the second stage is called vijñānam. We have seen these two words in the third chapter also; jñāna vijñāna nāśanam; while talking about kāma krōdhaḥ; we saw these two words, jñānam and vijñānam.

These two words have got different meaning according to different contexts. I will give you a simpler meaning here, based on what I said before. When you say I-am-the-body; and I-have-consciousness, it is jñānam. So consciousness is taken as part-of-the-body; and we take ourselves to be the physical body. This is called jñānam. Why it is called; at least I know that there is consciousness. Earlier, I was not even aware of it; so at least I know this much, that I am the body, and I am endowed with consciousness, which is a distinct principle, which pervades and illumines the body.

And then what is vijñānam? Vijñānam is instead of saying that I-am-the-body and I-have-consciousness, I change it and say, I-am-the-consciousness-principle; and I have got this body as a temporary instrument of knowledge, like the spectacle. Spectacles have got these two glasses; when I put on I am able to see and transact with the world; when I remove the spectacle; I do not transact; but remember, but I continue to exist. In the same way, our body and mind are like the two glasses of this spectacle and when I use the body and mind, I have the waking state experience, or dream state experience; when the body and mind are relaxed and resolved, I do not have waking and dream state. Therefore I do not have any transaction; but even without transaction; I continue to exist; and therefore body and mind are more an instrument than myself. And this attitudinal change, the change of identification, is called vijñānam.

The first is like parōkṣa jñānam; the second is aparōkṣa jñānam and only when the shift takes place, jñāna vijñāna thṛptha ātma; only when I shift my I, or identification from the body to ātma, then alone my sense of limitation will go; people will ask, why should I shift my identification; I am happy to claim I am the body; why should I know the ātma; and thereafterwards struggle and drop my identification with the body; and develop a new identification with ātma; why all these headaches. Why can't I with my body itself; for that Vēdāntic answer is if you are comfortable with body identification; wish you all the best; we are not interested in changing your identification; but the problem is as long as I am identified with the body; there is the first fear of mortality; the fear of old age; the fear of disease; the fear of death; not after fifty or sixty years; but it is a constant companion; throughout the life; and not only we are afraid of our own death and old age, we are afraid of the death of the near and dear ones; in fact, samsāra is fear of death; and some people may say that I am not afraid of death; it is fear of old age; then some people may say I am not afraid of old age also, then I will say, it is fear of disease; all these are called samsāra; and if you say I am comfortable with all this fear, you do not require Vēdānta . But if you say, they are affecting me; then better handle this problem; and unfortunately no medicine, which can cure all the diseases and if at all there are medicines which cure diseases; the process will produce. Eatrojenic diseases; diseases caused when you take treatment; so you took a medicine for headache; and headache goes and stomach pain comes; and still worse; headache continues and stomach pain started; it was added; there is no medicine for all diseases. There is no medicine for old age. There is a science called gerontology. How to stop ageing process. and all the gerontologists are old now. And many of them dead also. So studying gerontology they grew old faster, I do not know; and there is no medicine which can immortalise the body.

For this three basic problem, there is no remedy. If you are ready to face this problem; wonderful; otherwise, better come to Vēdānta and discover the fact that you are something higher than this decaying body. This changing mind; you are nitya śuddha mukta svabhāva; ever free, ever eternal, ever un-decaying, ever secure, ever beautiful, ever full higher I. If you want to discover, Vēdānta says: May I help you?; in the railway station; may I help you. What is this counter for? Not to go after any person; if anybody wants help, it will be given; and what is the solution; the only solution is you have to discover the ātma which is different from the body. Then what is the benefit; Maja Maja. The life is relaxed; no fear of death. Imagine, no fear of old age; No fear of diseases. Because they belong to my incidental shell of the body; they do not belong to the real me; jñāna vijñāna thṛpthaḥ; thṛpthaḥ means contended, happy, fulfilled.

And विजितेन्द्रियः vijitēndriyaḥ, who will be able to get this knowledge; vijitēndriyaḥ; only the person who has mastered himself; mastered himself, mastered the body mind complex; that person alone will become jñāna vijñāna thṛpthaḥ ātma; ātma here means; the one whose mind is fully satisfied with this wisdom; and therefore कूटस्त kūṭasthaḥ; kūṭasthaḥ means unshaken by any event that happens in his life; this is another problem. We can never predict our future. Bhagavān has covered our eyes; I do not know what is going to happen tomorrow; why tomorrow; tonight itself; why tonight; next moment; future is unpredictable; and there are certain things which are predictable but not controllable; they predict that a cyclone is going to hit such and such coast; severe cyclonic storm form; it may hit Orissa, they are able to predict; but we do not have the resources to control the cyclone; therefore future is either unpredictable; or even if it is predictable, uncontrollable; and therefore there is constant anxiety, because any event can come as a shock; because I do not know;

And what is the best armour against these unpredictable events. Krishna says knowledge alone is the only kavacham; and a wise person is not shocked by any event possible; kūṭasthaḥ, like the rock of Gibraltar; so strong.

That is why in Indian tradition, when a boy gets the sacred thread; and when the girl gets married; both of them have to do a particular ritual; that ritual is called अस्मारोहणम् asmārohaṇam; stepping over the stone; they keep a rock or stone and the mantra is chanted; and the boy has to put his feet on the rock. Similarly, during wedding the girl has to step on the rock; and during that time, you know what is the mantra chanted; अतिष्ठा इमाम् अस्मानम् ātiṣṭā imām asmānam, Oh! boy Oh Girl! you please step on this stone; for what purpose; अस्म इव त्वाम् शिरो भवः asma iva tvām śirō bhavaḥ; May your mind be strong enough to welcome all kinds of situations in life; because the boy is leaving home to gurukula, wherein he has to face, all types of different people and in the case of girl, it is still totally different; leaves her home and goes to a new house; he does not know, in Indian culture; he does not know what the husband is; because it is arranged marriage; or at least they move and know; and they do not know who the brother-in-law is; sister-in-law is; mother-in-law is; father-in-law is. Therefore it is like entering a jungle; do not take negatively; but what I mean that unless I am strong; every experience will become traumatic experience.

Krishna says for a wise person, no experience is a traumatic or shocking experience; he is unshaken; and such a person is called, युक्त इत्युच्यते yukta ityucyatē; such a wise person is called a yōgi. Yōgi in the real sense of the term; because normally we use the word, for anyone who is an expert in yōgāsana; so if he can stand on his head; or do a few exercise, we say he is a great yōgi.

Krishna says they are all superficial yōgis; real yōgi is one who has this wisdom; and as a result of this wisdom; what type of mind, he enjoys; योगी समलोष्टाश्मकाञ्चनः yōgī samalōṣṭāśmakāñcanaḥ; samaḥ means equanimous; the same type of mind, equanimous mind towards what: towards three things; लोष्टा lōṣṭā; lōṣṭāḥ means a clod of earth; mud is called lōṣṭāḥ; which does not have any value; the valueless mud; then अश्म aśma, aśma means stones or bricks, which have got some value; because you can build a house and then the next one, kāñcanaḥ; kāñcanam means gold, which has got such value.

So towards all these things, one the least valued, and the most valued, and all the other things, the intermediary things, towards all of them, the wise man has got samatvam; he has got the same attitude; what do you mean samatvam; does it mean that he will see, all of them in the same way. if you are going to see all of them in the same way, it only means, there is some cataract in the eyes; it is not that they have got cataract in their eyes. It is not that they have got wisdom; better you go to the doctor at the earliest and clear it; therefore in perception differences are seen; but only there is a difference in understanding, which you call here as samatvam; and we can understand it as freedom from rāgaḥ and dveṣaḥ; attachment and aversion; he knows the value of every object and he uses them appropriately also, but he does not have either rāgaḥ or dveṣaḥ.

And why he does not have rāgaḥ dveṣaḥ; attachment is towards an object; which is going to improve my status; when do I get attached to some, because that object or person, gives me happiness, gives me happiness; gives me security, gives me fullness; then naturally I am attached to that. So attachment is when the object improves my status. Then hatred is towards which object; when an object is going to decrease my status, reduce my happiness; reduce my security; then I have got hatred; jñāni is free from both of them; you know why; because for a jñāni pūrṇatvam or fullness does not come from an external object; he is not fulfilled because of the presence of object; his fulfilment comes from where; not because of money, not because of house; not because of status; not because of wife, or parents or anything. I am full because of what: my nature happens to be full; And if I am already full, no object can increase my fullness; no object can decrease my fullness; āpūryamāṇamacalapraṭiṣṭham; just as the ocean is ever full; the world cannot affect my fullness;

And therefore if things come, wonderful; if things go away; equally OK. போனால் போகட்டும் pōṅāḷ pōkaṭṭum, dash dash and you can add another line as வந்தால் வரட்டும் vandaal varattum; आगते स्वगतम् कुर्यत् āgatē svagatam kuryat; whatever comes in my line, welcome; गच्छन्तम् न निवारयेत् gaccantam na nivārayet; anything is going away; our own children, when they depend on us, we are very very happy; and when they become independent, and they try to go away; then we are unhappy; then only we know that we are dependent on children's dependence on us; how peculiar you see; we are dependant on children's dependence on us; and when the children become independent, we get angry. This is called the problem of dependence; wisdom makes me independent; psychologically independent.

Om

Lord Krishna is discussing the topic of bahiraṅga sādhanā, that is the general disciplines to be observed by a person who wants his meditation to be successful. He talked about samatvam as one discipline. Equanimity, then he talked about the importance of self-confidence; ātma viśvāsa, ātma śraddhaḥ; otherwise called ātma kripa; I should have my own grace and my grace is in the form of confidence in myself. Very important. Then Krishna talked about self-effort, even though we acknowledge and appreciate the role of God's grace. Self-effort can never be replaced by God's grace. Self-effort is in addition to God's grace and therefore Krishna emphasised self-effort also, which is prayatnaḥ; and then Krishna talked about self-integration of various personalities, the physical personality, the psychological personality, the intellectual personality, an individual is a composite of all these personalities; and each personality is capable of positively or negatively influencing the other personality. For example, psychological personality can affect physical personality; what is psychosomatic diseases, they are nothing but diseases at the level of the physical personality, caused by emotional problem. Similarly, the other personalities also will influence and therefore there must be integration of all the layers; this is self-integration.

And then Krishna now says that if a person takes care of all these disciplines then the self-knowledge very very easy. jitātmanaḥ praśāntasya paramātmā samāhitaḥ; self-knowledge becomes a walk over.

And then Krishna talks about the benefit of gaining the self-knowledge, which is in the form of total change of my perspective of the world and because of the change of perspective, the world is no more capable of binding; because according to vēdānta; the world does not an intrinsic capacity to bind me; to persecute me; to torment me; the world or the people around do not have an intrinsic capacity to disturb me; I am giving the power to the world to disturb me. And how do we give the power to the world; by a unhealthy perspective, by looking at the world at an unhealthy manner; I allow the world to hook me. Therefore, the hook or key is in my hand.

And it is this change of perspective which is brought about by self-knowledge, and this change of perspective can be presented in several ways. Krishna here presents it as sarvatra sama darśanam. samalōṣṭāśmakāñcanaḥ; because there is an intrinsic samatvam in the entire creation. Just as in several ornaments, in spite of superficial differences, there is one samatvam in all the ornaments, which is nothing but; it is all gold, gold and gold; Even though ornaments are known by different names and they have different forms and functions, nama rupa karma bhēdas are there; but the essential substance is one. When my vision is focused on nama rupa karma; name, form and function, I see difference and plurality, whereas when my vision is focused on the substance behind them, I see here also gold, here also gold; here also gold. Similarly, the jñāni has learnt to see the fundamental substance of the whole creation. And therefore everywhere he sees that samam brahma or sama ātma; We have seen this idea in the 5th chapter,

nirdōṣaṃ hi samaṃ brahma tasmād-brahmaṇi tē sthitāḥ|| 5.19||

This sama darśanam, is the change of perspective. So samalōṣṭāśmakāñcanaḥ. And because of that the benefit that he enjoys is कूटस्त kūṭasta; means unshaken by the experiences in life; like the example of the stoic philosopher, that when he lost all his properties in business, first his response was what: and since he was a wise person; after two minutes he recovered and just added another word; what is that; so what; what is samsāra; so what is mokṣaḥ; it is the only difference; put so everywhere; but remember to add that so, you require tremendous inner transformation; That is what is achieved by this knowledge; kūṭastaḥ means unshaken. Up to this we saw in the last class.

9. He whose mind is the same with regard to well-wishers, friends, enemies, neutrals, meditators, hateful ones, relations, the righteous and even the unrighteous excels.

In the previous verse, Lord Krishna said that this wise man has got samatvam with regard to inanimate things; jada prapañcaḥ; because samalōṣṭāsmakāñcanaḥ; all these are inert things of the creation. In this verse Krishna says not only jñāni has samatvam with regard to the jada prapañcaḥ; acētana prapañcaḥ, he has got sama darśanam, with regard to the cētana darśanam also; the living beings also; because equanimity with regard to living beings is more difficult; and especially with regard to human living being, samatvam is extremely difficult; because we have lot of expectations from other human beings; and therefore if you move with someone, we easily tend to develop either rāgaḥ, dveṣaḥ or krōdhaḥ, something or the other, therefore here Krishna says jñāni has overcome viṣama darśanam; with regard to other human beings also; and he gives a wide range of human beings.

In the previous chapter, Krishna talked about a wide range of living beings; brāhmaṇē gavi hastini, elephant he took, dog he took, a brahmin he took, a dog eater he took, different living beings were taken; here in the sixth chapter, among human beings themselves; how many varieties are there; he gives a list; what is that variety:

सुहृद् suhṛd; those good people who are the well-wishers of everyone; so suhṛd means स्वभावेन हित आशांसि svabhāvēna hita āśāṁsi; by his or her very own nature, he is the well-wisher of everyone; therefore when anyone needs any help; his mind naturally goes to help him. So svabhāvēna, so without any condition or expectation; one who is a well-wisher is suhṛd;

then मित्रम् mitram; mitram means another good person; but he is not svabhāvēna hita āśāṁsi; but स्नेह वशेन हित आशांसि snēha vaśēna hita āśāṁsi; because the other person is known to me and therefore I will help; and if the other person is unknown; I do not want to help; therefore the second person is a conditioner helper; the first person is a unconditional helper; so mitram;

then the third one is अरि ari; so you have to split the verse properly; the word ari you will not see in the verse; but you will get it if you split it properly; suhṛt-mitra-ari-udasina; ari+udasina, aryudasina and aa is hidden in the word mitram; therefore do not search for ari and that is because of sandhi rule; so ari means an enemy. परोक्षम् अप्रियः parōkṣam apriyaḥ; so the one who is not in front of me, but who does harm; indirect harmer; the one who harms; is an enemy;

then the next type of person is उदासीनः udāsīnaḥ; udāsīnaḥ means an indifferent person; he does not good to me, he does not do, any harm to me, he does not bother about my existence at all; this indifference, the one who has got is called udāsīnaḥ; विविध मानयोर् उपक्षकाः उदासीनः vividha mānayoṛ upakṣakāḥ udāsīnaḥ; when there is a problem between two people; if I do not want to interfere at all; and I do not want to help also; either of them; then I am called udāsīnaḥ; indifferent;

then the next type of person is मध्यस्थः madhyastha; madhyastha is विविध मानयोर् हित आशांसि vividha mānayoṛ hita āśāṁsi; when there are two people having problems; this person is interested in the well-being of both of them. If I am interested in the well-being of only one, I am पक्षपाति pakṣapāti; but if I am interested in the well-being of both, I am a mediator; I am a madhyasthaḥ; like the UN coming; then there is some problem; they become madhyasthaḥ;

Then the next one is द्वेष्य dvēṣya; the one who is hateful; dvēṣyaḥ; dvesha yogyaha; a person whose behaviour is such that it will only generate hatred in my mind. Such a behaviour, the one who has got, the one provokes hatred; the one who generates hatred by his or her behaviour, is called dvēṣyaḥ; dvēṣyayogyaha; pratyakṣaṁ apriyaḥ; arihi is parokṣaṁ apriyaḥ; dvēṣyaḥ is pratyakṣaṁ apriyaha; and then there is another type of person; बन्धुः bandhuhu means a relative; the one who is related to me through my family is called bandhuhu; the one who is connected; बध्यते इति बन्धुः badhyate iti bandhu; the one who is connected by family relationship.

and finally साधुः sadhuh; sadhuh means a noble person who follows dharma, dharmica puruṣa in general; previously we had the word suhr̥d; which means who is doing some good action to others; but here the word sadhuhu means whether he is helping others' or not; there may not be an opportunity; You can do help when? when there is somebody needing help; but even when there is no help needed; a person who lives a life of values; that person is called sadhuhu; dharmica puruṣaḥ;

Then पापेषु pāpēṣu; the one who leads a life of adharma; so unrighteous person; adharmica puruṣa.

These are the types of people that we have; in fact, if you search, we will have more varieties; what is jñāni's attitude; towards all of them, समबुद्धिर्विशिष्यते samabuddhirviśiṣyatē; the jñāni has got sama buddhihi; he has got the equanimity.

Now this can put some questions in our mind; how can I see all the people equally, when one person is a criminal; and another person is a saint; how can I look at both of them equally; does it mean that I should do namaskāra to the criminal also; therefore what does it mean; the sama buddhi must be understood very well; I have discussed this in the fifth chapter itself; vidyāvinayasampannē, I have explained; but being important I would like to remind that again.

This samatvam can be looked from two angles;

one is the philosophical angle; philosophical angle means jñāni looks at the true nature of everyone, which is the ātma svarūpam; All the differences in character belongs to the anātma alone; the body mind complex alone; but behind the body-mind-complex, everyone has got one reality which is God. God or Ātma is uniformly present in everyone and therefore everyone is innately good only. There is no criminal in the world. According to vēdānta; there is no criminal in the world; because everyone is noble, everyone is saintly; saintliness is the nature of everyone; nobility is the nature of everyone; we have got only crimes which are only incidental impurity on the saintly person; no one is innately criminal; everyone is innately lovable; beautiful person; but upon that person, there is some incidental impurity, which impurity can be removed; on the removal of impurity, even the worst criminal is a lovable person.

Śankarācārya gives an example in Vivekachoodamni; the example of a piece of sandal wood; sandal wood is innately fragrant. It has got only fragrance as its nature; but when the sandal wood is kept wet for some time and it is not used at all; because of the wetness, a coating of moss is formed over the sandalwood and that coating is so foul smelling; that it overpowers the innate fragrance of the sandalwood; and if I am going to superficially look at the sandalwood and say that it is foul-smelling and I throw away, I am committing a mistake. What is required is a little bit rubbing. When the superficial coating goes away, it exudes fragrance again. There is a beautiful vāsana.

And therefore, we all have got unhealthy behaviour, caused by ignorance and error. Ignorance is also removable; error is also removable; because of the superficial quoting of ajñāna and adhyāsa; we are now foul-smelling; rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ, kāma krodhaḥ, lobhaḥ, mohaḥ, madaḥ mātsaryaḥ; in fact, every criminal has got this coating; and in fact, everyone has got crime in a milder form or an intense form; and jñāni is one who has recognised this fact, and therefore his philosophy is simple; everybody is lovable; this is the basic. Nobody deserves hatred in the creation; advēṣṭā sarvabhūtānām; therefore, as far as a person is concerned, that person deserves what, love and upon that person, there is a temporary encrustation of what: misbehaviour or crime and as far as the wrong action is concerned, even that does not deserve hatred; action requires appropriate treatment; person requires love; wrong behaviour requires what; appropriate treatment; person also does not deserve hatred; wrong action also does not deserve hatred; person requires love; wrong action requires the appropriate treatment.

The appropriate treatment may be sāma dāna bhēda or even danḍaḥ. Even when the punishment is given, punishment is not backed by hatred; punishment is painful treatment, just as the doctor's treatment is sometimes painful.

And therefore a jñāni's vision is what; samatvam; and what is samatvam; everybody is beautiful ātma; satyam, Śivam, sundaram ātma; and that does not mean he will treat the criminal and saint equally, when he faces the criminal; you remove the crime; whatever is the step to be taken; he will take; if it is advising, he will do; if it is threatening, he will do; if it is imprisonment, that also he will recommend, but there is no iota of hatred; exactly like a mother treating the child appropriately, whatever be the treatment given to different children, there is one uniform attitude; one child requires punishment perhaps, another child does not require punishment; but there is no uniformity; what is that; love, love, love. So this is the samatvam from philosophical angle.

Then the samatvam can be understood from another angle also; that is samatvam is freedom from rāgaḥ and dveṣaḥ; neither attachment, nor hatred; and why he does not want attachment or hatred; both attachment and hatred are forms of dependence alone. When I say I am attached to this clock, or watch, what does it mean; I am dependant on the presence of the watch for my peace and happiness. So attachment is nothing but depending upon the presence of an object. When I am attached to X, I want the X to be around me. What is hatred; hatred is another form of dependence; dependence on what; dependence upon the absence of that object; so when I say I hate something; what do I expect; I want that person to get lost. I want the absence of that person; therefore dependant on what, the absence of that person to be comfortable; and attachment means I want the presence of that person to be comfortable; therefore both attachment and hatred are dependence upon the presence and absence of things and beings; and jñāni is samaḥ means, he does not have both attachment and hatred; that means he does not mind the presence of things also; and he does not mind the absence of things also; and therefore, sādhuṣvapi ca pāpēṣu samabuddhirviśiṣyatē.

yōgī yuñjīta satatamātmānaṃ rahasi sthitaḥ |

ēkākī yatacittātmā nirāśīraparigrahaḥ | | 6.10 | |

स्थितः एकाकि sthitaḥ ekākī remaining alone रहसि rahasi in solitude यतचित्तात्मा yatacittātmā with a restrained mind and body, निराशीः nirāśīḥ without any desire अपरिग्रहः aparigrahaḥ and without any possession योगी yogī a yogi सततं युञ्जीत satataṃ yuñjīta should constantly engage आत्मानम् ātmānam the mind (in meditation)

10. Remaining alone in solitude with a restrained mind and body, without any desire, and without any possession, a Yogi should constantly engage (in meditation).

So with the 9th verse, Krishna temporarily concludes the topic of bahiraṅga sādhanam, the general disciplines to be observed; and he also emphasised the bahiraṅga sādhanam; by saying that if a person follows these disciplines, then self-knowledge is easier, and by that he will change the very perspective of the world. and enjoy equanimity; And therefore Arjuna, if you want self-knowledge; and change of perspective, you have to start with what: these bahiraṅga sādhanāni; first bahiraṅga sādhanam being karma yoga itself.

And this bahiraṅga sādhanā topic is not totally over; Krishna will again bring some more general discipline; in the later portion of the 6th chapter; for the time being, he has stopped the bahiraṅga sādhanā topic; and now he is entering antaraṅga sādhanam topic; from verse No.10 up to verse No.15.

10 to 15 antaraṅga sādhanāni. And what do you mean antaraṅga sādhanam; specific disciplines to be observed, just before meditation; while bahiraṅga sādhanā is to be observed throughout all our transactions; antaraṅga sādhanā need not be observed throughout the day, just before the meditation; these specific disciplines are to be observed. And in this antaraṅga sādhanā, Krishna discusses eight stages or eight steps, and if we observe these steps, then the meditation will be very very effective; without these steps meditation will not effective; we will be sitting for sometime; but everything other than meditation will take place. And the meditator will not get peace of mind, the other people will get peace of mind, because this person is quiet; anyway it is useful.

What are those 8 stages: here also does not systematically develop, the ideas are jumbled up ideas; therefore we have to sort out to see properly;

The first point to be observed is देशः dēśah; the place of meditation. The place of meditation; and Krishna suggests let the place a secluded place, where the disturbances are not there; to the extent possible; wherever you go, there will be either loudspeakers or dogs, something or the other will be there, but to the extent possible; try to get far, far from the maddening cloud. Therefore seclusion is point No.1.

Then Krishna says try to be alone; this joint meditation is not if you are not careful, it may end up in wonderful gossip. Like children plan joint study. Not all children; some children; and they do everything other than study. There is a possibility, if they are able to do together joint meditation has got its own benefit; both advantages and disadvantages are there; In group meditation one disadvantage, if you doze off, others will see. If you are alone you can afford to do that;

So therefore, alone you meditate. Krishna says; एकाकी ekāki; let it be secluded place; be alone, then let the place be spiritually and physically clean. Physical cleanliness, you can appreciate; because otherwise insects will be there; mosquitoes will be there and other things will be there; and spiritual purity, we mean that the place should contribute to spiritual thinking. It should be associated with spirituality. So that by the law of association, like you go an āśrama or temple or your own pooja room, by the law of association, you think of the Lord or spirituality. Suppose you go to the dining hall; alright, even if it is very very clean, the moment you go, the thought will be vada dhyanam; meditation on idlis and dosais only; that will only come.

Sankaracharya also adds a place which is naturally spiritually or artificially made spiritual; like sacred rivers, etc. Gaṅga theeram; if you cannot go to Gaṅga, we have only coovam theeram; you cannot go there and meditate; then Śankarācārya says that you artificially create an atmosphere, by having the pictures of mahātmas; pictures of Gods, or writing of mahātmas, you light up a lamp, so when you have those things, then you think of spirituality and therefore point no.1: a place which is spiritually clean, physically clean, secluded and without any other people; that is you alone; this is dēśa niyama, stage No.1.

Then the 2nd one Krishna does not talk about, which we have to supply is: कालः kālah; the time of meditation. Generally, in the tradition, they say early morning is ideal for meditation, because the advantage is that yesterday's worries have been diluted by sleep; if not gone; at all it has become diluted; that is why, sleep is a very big gift of the Lord; however sorrowful a person may be, good sleep will certainly reduce the impact of that; therefore early morning, because of the sleep, yesterday's worries have been diluted; today's worries have not yet started; that is why better you do not read the newspaper before; if you read the newspaper gone; meditation you will get only those things; therefore, yesterday's worry gone; today worries have been started; that junction is early morning; and therefore that time is considered to be sātvika kālah; brahma muhurtaḥ; and therefore that is satvik time, where the mind is neither rājasic or tāmasic. The mind is not tāmasic because I have slept well; and the mind is not rājasic because I have not started the day to day activity; because even the mind's state is determined by the Sun; even the scientists they do talk about the body's metabolism being connected to the sun-rise and sun-set; as the sun becomes more and more powerful; the body also become more and more rājasic and it is required; otherwise we will be sleeping only; along with the sun our activity should increase. As the sun sets, we find that we also loose our dynamism; So early morning, neither rājasic or tāmasic; it is sātvika kāla, this is the general rule; but we should remember that it is not a compulsory rule; because from individual to individual, the conveniences vary and therefore we say any time in which you are relaxed and not sleepy; that is ideal for meditation; whether it is two p.m. in the afternoon or whether it 12 midnight; we do not care, what is important is mind is neither too much wandering nor the mind is drowsy. That alert non-extrovert mind is called sātvik mind; whenever you have such a mind; meditate. Suppose somebody says, mind is never like that; so then you fix up a time; and then make the mind sātvic by practice; taking other routine into account, you fix up a time and then the make the mind sātvic by sheer practice; that is kāla niyamaḥ;

And what about the duration; not only time is important, even duration; with regard to duration also, we are not very insistent; because quantity is not important; quality is important. So therefore if you try to do too much meditation, you will find you may be sitting for three years, you will find that in 60% you might have unknowingly dozed and another 30-40% you might have worried about all other things; Therefore, why go on lengthening. Therefore, even 15-20 minutes more than enough. That is kāla niyama.

Then the third step Krishna talks about is āsanam. Where should you be seated; which means you should be seated; that is the first thing; you cannot stand and do; you cannot ask that; OK; so therefore you do not get balance, if you doze off, you will break your head by falling down; therefore for the safety of your head, better you sit down. And sit down also we do not insist; if your knees cannot bend; those issues they never discussed in those days; chairs were not there perhaps. Therefore if you can sit down, it is well and good; if you cannot sit down; sit anywhere you are comfortable; because we are concentrating on this aspect; our main aim is what is mind does; and therefore sit down; if possible.

And when you are sitting down; Krishna says have an āsanam; and Krishna talks about the āsanam; consisting of three layers; one is the deer skin; another is the dharbhā grass; and another is a piece of cloth; the details we will see when the verse comes; he also talks about the preparation of the āsana.

And Krishna says that every meditator must have his own or her own āsanās; not for sharing; the principle behind this prescription is that the āsanam should be neither too soft nor too hard; If it is too soft; your back will bend; if it is too hard, it will pain and you will be meditating on the pain; So therefore let it neither too soft nor too hard; let it be neither too high nor too low; which is too high; you may fall down; it is too low, insects may come; So this is the āsana prescription; so nowadays you get very thick clothes; special āsanās are there; no difficulty at all; you need not go in search of deer skin, So dēśa, kāla, āsana.

No.4, the posture of the body; śarīra stitiḥ. Krishna says you should sit steadily which means you should have a maximum base area. If the legs are kept as much a part as possible, you have got a wide base area; when you have got a wide base area, the posture is more steady; So keeping a wide base.

And then Krishna says keep the body, neck and head straight, and then let it be relaxed; not tense; so this is the posture.

Then the fifth item that Krishna talks about is, prāṇa sāmīyam; prāṇa sāmīyam means even breathing; the breathing should be relaxed and even; smooth and even; because breathing and our thoughts are interconnected; शाक्योर् द्वयि शक्ति मूलकाः śākayor dvayi śakti mūlakāḥ; because the thoughts are connected to the jñāna śakti; and then the breathing prāṇa is connected to kriya śakti; and but both of them are connected to the basic māya śakti; and therefore both are inter-connected; simple example, like the four legs of a table or a desk. If you want to pull the desk; all the four legs will come; I did not hold all the four. No, you just hold leg of the desk and pull; what about the other three, it will come, because they are connected to one plank; So therefore, if the breathing is disturbed; thoughts are disturbed; if the breathing is smooth and slow and even; the mind also is even; that is why when we are extremely disturbed; the breathing also is disturbed; and therefore, prāṇa sāmīyam; this step Krishna does not mention in the 6th chapter, but he has mentioned in the fifth chapter itself;

sparśān kṛtvā bahirbāhyāṃścaḥścaivāntarē bhruvōḥ |

nāsābhyantaracāriṇau prāṇa apāna samau kritva; Prāṇa apāna, means inhalation and exhalation must be rhythmic; this is prāṇa sāmīyam; this is the fifth stage.

then the sixth step is indriya nigrahaḥ; sensory restraint; because sense organs are capable of influencing the mind, because every sense organ is a gateway through which alone, the world enters your mind; it is a very good door; śabdhaḥ sparśaḥ rūpa rasa gandhaḥ; all the five enter; that is why when you sit in meditation and somebody is making masala dosai; whether you like it or not; it goes; so today in our home masala dosai has been made; then you have got to do the dosai dhyānam; therefore what to do with sense organs; Krishna says may you deliberately withdraw the sense organs; by turning the mind away and then Krishna specifically treats the sense organ of eye, because the eyes are the most powerful sense organ.

And dealing with the eyes, is a little bit difficult also; because if the eyes are open whether you like or not, whatever is in front of the eyes will enter; you see an ant; and from the ant you will be reminded of the sweet; then you will wonder about so many things; if eyes are open distraction; I can't close the eyes. Gone, as it is we tend to sleep, if the eyes are closed, by the law of association, we may tend to sleep. and therefore Krishna says let the eyes be half-closed; As though looking at the tip of your nose; as though you are looking at the tip of your nose; partially closed; so this is the indriya nigrahaḥ; six steps; so dēśa; kāla, āsana; śarīra sthithi; prāṇa samyam, indriya nigrahaḥ;

then the seventh step is manō nigrahaḥ; as we go further, it becomes tougher also; the mind has to be withdrawn from mundane fields; it should be taken away from all the worldly roles you play in life; the thoughts connected with you as husband; as wife; as father; as employer, as neighbour, as a business person, so you have got several personalities; and along with each personality there is a set up anxieties, worries and therefore I should shed, I should die to all those roles of life; That is why in some books they say; become mentally a sanyāsi. Tell yourselves that you are not father for 15 minutes; later you pick up your worries; for 15 minutes I am not father, not husband, be a sanyāsi or if at all you are particular about relationship, relate to either God or to your Guru, because these are the two relationships which has no problem. With God, no problem, with guru I hope no problem; if there is problem, renounce guru also, during meditation. In Kaivalya upaniṣad it is said: Gurum praṇamya, you invoke the guru; because when guru is invoked, the teaching is reminded; by the Law of association, because it is in the context of spiritual teaching, I am related to guru; not that I have got a rudrakṣa business contract or anything; it is field of self-knowledge and therefore if at all you want relationship, meditate as a śiṣya or meditate as a bhaktha; or meditate as a sanyasi. śiṣya role, bhaktha role, or sanyāsi. Any other role headache; Head will roll; so this is called the withdraw of the mind; and you can make use of your devotion to the Lord for that; surrender to the Lord, if you have worried about your children, tell yourselves, Lord is there; take care of them; ananyāścintayantō māṃ yē janāḥ paryupāsatē| tēṣāṃ nityābhilyuktānāṃ yōgakṣēmaṃ vahāmyaham; 15 minutes you hand over your responsibilities to God; this is manō nigrahaḥ; the details Krishna will say later.

Then the 8th step and the last is: buddhi niścayaḥ; buddhi niścayaḥ means conviction regarding the necessity and the utility of meditation; I should be convinced of meditation; that it will help me; in absorbing the teaching; without conviction if I sit, I will be restless; I have so much thing to do; time is going; and therefore it will become a mechanical routine; like people doing pooja, sandhya vandhanam, etc. kada kada ...and finish; kadanai tholaikal; they will not be wholehearted; therefore what will you do; sitting in mediation; you will also plan.

after going to office, I have to do this, that, and meditation will be a planning session; therefore I should be convinced of the role of meditation; therefore śāstric study becomes important and if you study you will know, you will understand that how śāstrā is important; nidhidhyāsana is also important; this is called buddhi niścayaḥ; so with this conviction, you sit in mediation; withdraw the sense organs; withdraw the mind; now you are fully available for the actual meditation; these 8 steps are not meditation; OK; these 8 steps are specific preparation; that is why called it antaraṅga sādhanāni;

The details we will see in the next class.

asmad ācārya paryantām vandē guru paramparām

Om

In the nine verses, of the 6th chapter, Lord Krishna dealt with some important general disciplines, bahiraṅga sādhanā, to be observed by a person, who wants to practice, meditation. And in this list of sādhanās, Krishna included equanimity of mind, self-confidence, self-effort, and self-integration. All these are important, if a person wants to be successful in meditation. And these disciplines are to be observed not at a particular time but throughout the daily transactions.

Having talked about these bahiraṅga sādhanās, in these nine verses, now Krishna has entered the topic of antaraṅga sādhanāni; the specific disciplines to be observed, just before the practice of meditation and this topic is from verse No.10 up to verse No.15; which I introduced in the last class. And I pointed out that Krishna is prescribing eight fold steps to be observed just before mediation; and those 8 steps are dēśa ~ choosing the right place; kālaḥ ~ choosing the right time; āsanam ~ choosing the appropriate seat over which one has to sit and meditate; śarīra stitiḥ ~ the posture of the body at the time of mediation; prāṇa sāmīyam ~ evenness of the breathing process or rhythmic breathing ~ then indriya nigrahaḥ ~ the withdrawal of sense organs; from the external world, then mano nigrahaḥ; dēśa, kālaḥ, āsana, śarīra stitiḥ; prāṇa sāmīyam, indriya nigrahaḥ, then manō nigrahaḥ ~ seventh stage; withdrawal of the mind from worldly feel; or worldly roles that I play; and then finally and most importantly, buddhi niścayaḥ ~ intellectual conviction regarding the role of meditation in spiritual sādhanā. These are the 8 factors that Krishna is talking about; but Krishna does not systematic arrange them; all these 8 topics are mixed together and some of the topics are even repeated. With this background, we will study the verses.

In the 10th verse, Krishna begins the discussion: योगी सततम् युञ्जीत yōgī satatam yuñjīta; a meditator should regularly practice mediation. So it is not in fits and starts; just like the regular physical exercise; they insist that regularity is important; if you do for a few days now and now in the month of June you do a few days, and then in November you do a few days, it will not give you full benefit; for any physical exercise to be beneficial; regularity is important; Krishna applies the same principle with regard to dhyānam also; therefore he uses the word, satatam; regularly; satatam ātmānaṁ; ātma means the mind; one should apply the mind in meditation.

And in which place, रहसि स्थितः rahasi sthitaḥ; in a secluded place, which I enumerated as the first place; dēśa; Krishna uses the word rahasi sthitaḥ; rahasi means a secluded place ~ not accessible to others.

And how many people should do mediation together; Krishna says एकाकी ēkākī. Do not have another person, because the other person may distract you. And therefore ēkākī san rahasi sthitaḥ.

And Krishna does not talk about the appropriate time; that we have to supply, sātvika kālē yuñjīta;

And what should be condition of the mind and body; यतचित्तात्मा yatacittātmā; cittam means mind, ātma in this context means physical body; cittam means mind and ātma in this context means body; one should keep the body and mind controlled; under one's own control; so yatham means discipline.

and that is why in the Pathanjali's yōga śāstrā, they do not prescribe meditation in the beginning; meditation is prescribed only in the later stages. He talks about 8 stages; yama, niyama; āsana, praṇāyāma; prathyāhara, dhāraṇa, dhyāna, samādhi; You can find Krishna talking about all of them.

Yama and niyama is conduct-regulation; without character, the mind cannot be quiet; a characterless mind will be a disturbed mind; and therefore yama and niyama talk about the regulation of one's conduct or behaviour.

And then āsana is keeping the body fit; because you can forget your body, only when the body is fit; when you wear the shoe, and the shoe fits your feet; perfectly, you do not even feel that you are wearing the shoe; but if the shoes are not fitting; then one corner of the mind is always turned towards that; because there is discomfort; therefore, the law is when the shoe fits, you forget the shoes. When your body is fit, you can forget the body. Therefore āsanās are prescribed in the aṣṭāṅga yōga so that your body is pliable, healthy and fit; so that when you sit for 45 minutes or 20 minutes; why even five minutes; it can sit in one posture without sig-sagging. So therefore āsana is for physical fitness and that is indicated here ~ yatha citta ātma; May you keep your body by practising yōga āsana.

Yōga āsana is a wonderful system. Now only they are recognising all over the world; and in many medical institutions, yōga is also made an integral part; not only āsana, even prāṇāyāma; thus āsana and prāṇāyāma help me in keeping the body fit and under my control; yatha cittātma.

निराशीः nirāśīḥ; āśīḥ means desire; āśīḥ, desires; nirāśīḥ means without desires; which means without binding desires; legitimate non-binding desires, śāstrā allows; like a parent, being interested in the growth and well-being of the children is very legitimate; but it should be maintained non-binding.

What do you mean by non-binding; those desires, do not create anxiety in your mind; and how to get rid of the anxiety; there is only one way, that is sharanā gathi; Oh Lord, you take care of my children; I will do what I should what I should and what I can; but ultimately my children's future is not totally under my control; there is the society; there is the TV; there is the MTV; so many things are there; so many extraneous influences and the child itself has got its prārabdaḥ; and therefore I am only one of the contributors; I am not the controller of the future of my family members; and therefore I contribute my best and leave the rest to the Lord.

If I do that; my desires are non-binding desires; non-binding desires are non-poisonous desires. A poisonous desire is a disturbing desire; and therefore Krishna says, at least during the time of mediation, surrender all your desires at the feet of the Lord, so that you have got a calm mind.

And then अपरिग्रहः aparigrahaḥ; parigrahaḥ means possession; and aparigrahaḥ means non-possession; śāstrā always emphasise a simple living; high thinking, generally goes with simple living.

Why do we say simple living is required for high thinking; if it is a luxurious living, then there are so many possessions with me and then naturally the mind is bothered about their maintenance, because yōga is always followed by kṣēma. In fact, all our worries are only for these two things; yōga means accomplishment; kṣēma means maintenance; so either I am worried about getting things, or I am worried about maintaining things, reduce both of them; reduction of yōga is called nirāśiḥ; reduction of kṣēma is aparigrahaḥ; lead a simple life.

In fact, Śankarācārya defines aparigrahaḥ as sanyāsa. For him he analyses any word to Sanyāsa; so reduce your possession means renounce the world; but even if one renounces the world and become a sanyāsi; then also there are minimum possession; dress is there; pāduka is there; rudrakṣa mālā is there; now very costly than even gold; so therefore, even if we have some possession, with regard to those possession, do not have ownership. Always tell in your mind that these belong to the Lord. I am only possessor for worldly purposes, for legal purposes, but really speaking, I am only a trustee, the Lord has given them for my temporary use, and the Lord will take them back. And if I do not have that, ownership, ownership flat; where there is ownership, you are flat; that is called ownership flat; anyway, you can have flats or apartments; now flats are replaced by apartments; from British English, we are gradually shifting to American English.

So therefore whatever you possess, at least at the time of meditation you tell, none of them belongs to me. Even your relationship; children, grand children, you practice telling, they are children of God. I am only given an opportunity to be with them; in fact to learn the art of loving. Unless I have an opportunity; how will I learn; therefore Lord wants to train me in the art of loving; therefore they are the children of God; temporarily given but they do not belong to me; as somebody nicely said; children are not of you; but they have come to the world through you; the appropriate preposition is not "of"; if you put 'of' ~ relationship, belongingship; and once you put "of" you will be off. Therefore aparigrahaḥ; reduce possessions and with regard to the minimum possessions also give up the sense of ownership. Have the idea of trusteeship.

So aparigrahaḥ; these are all the conditions; these are all not meditation; these are all preparation; preparation is so much big that there is a doubt whether one will come to meditation.

नात्युच्छ्रितं नातिनीचं चैलाजिनकुशोत्तरम् ॥६.११॥

śucau dēśē pratiṣṭhāpya sthiramāsanam ātmanaḥ |

nātyucchritam nātinīcam cailājīnakuśōttaram | | 6.11 | |

शुचौ देशे śucau deśe in a clean spot, स्थिरं प्रतिष्ठाप्य sthiram pratiṣṭhāya one should firmly fix, आत्मनः आसनम् ātmanaḥ āsanam one's own seat चैलाजिनकुशोत्तरम् cailājīnakuśōttaram which consists of a cloth, a skin, and kusa-grass, one over the other न अत्युच्छ्रितम् na atyucchritam and which is neither too high न अतिनीचम् na aninīcam – nor too low

11. In a clean spot, one should firmly fix one's own seat which consists of a cloth, a skin and kusa-grass, one over the other, and which is neither too high nor too low.

शुचौ देशे प्रतिष्ठाप्य śucau dēśē pratiṣṭhāpya: Krishna gives another condition with regard to the place of meditation. I told you that Krishna has not systematically arranged; therefore in the previous slōkā, he gave one idea; regarding desa and in this slōkā, he is giving another job. It is our job to collect all these ideas and put together; in the previous slōkā, what was the idea given; rahasi sthitaḥ; the place should be secluded. In this verse, Krishna says śucau dēśē; and that secluded place should be clean physically and also clean spiritually; and spiritual cleanliness means the place should trigger, the place should invoke only religious or spiritual thoughts in your mind; so choose either a naturally sacred place; or choose an artificially sacred place; any place can be made artificially sacred by lighting a lamp, lighting an agarbathi, if you do not have āsma problem (agarbathi can disturb), keep the photos of mahātmās or dēvatās; keep the writings of great people, they are all making the place spiritually pure; ennobling places; that is called śuchi dēśaḥ; and then Krishna comes to the third factor; āsanam.

So the next step is fixing up the āsanam; what should be the type of āsanam; चैलाजिनकुशोत्तरम् cailājīnakuśōttaram; so three layers of āsanam; the first layer is kuśa grass; or darba grass; which is considered to be sacred grass; so which is a type of long grass which can be dried up and nowadays even they are making āsanams out of it; neatly stiched; and according to the tradition; we believe that kuśa grass can give concentration; because kuśa grass has got a sharp edge symbolising the sharpness, convergence; that is why we have an idiom in sanskrit; kuśagra buddhi; kuśa agra buddhi; the intellect which is sharp like the tip of kuśa grass; and mythologically also, they say it can induce concentration and therefore they had the kuśa grass and over the kuśa grass; ajinam, ajinam means deer skin; deer skin also they considered a sacred thing. In fact, when a vēdic student takes the sacred thread, he has to take the ajinam also; ajina dhāranam; and therefore there is a special mantra to take the ajinam; he was using as a dress also; he was also using as a āsanam also; and when he takes the ajinam; they chant a mantra; that this deer skin should protect me from negative forces.

प्राणापान भयं बलं आपरन्ति

iyam duruktāt paribaddamānā carmaṁ varutam punāti na agāt;

prāṇāpānābhayaṁ balaṁ āparanti ... 23.34.

So there is certain mantras, for danda dhāranam; mounji dhāranam; mounji dhāranam, etc. therefore it is considered a sacred thing. Therefore a layer of kuśa and a layer of ajinam.

And over that, there is a third layer; what is that; cailam; cailam means a piece of cloth; a piece of cloth, otherwise on the deer skin, there will be hair; and the sharp hair can prick and then your mediation will be disturbed; therefore over the deer skin it is spread; these put together is the āsanam; so cailam, ajina, kuśa uttaram. Śankarācārya carefully says, the order is also important; first kuśa; then ajinam; then cailam; do not reverse it; if you reverse it; on the top will be kuśa grass; that will prick you; therefore do not reverse, the order must be maintained.

Now reading this. you might get confused Swamiji, now where to go for deer skin; or we supposed to hunt and kill a deer; therefore we should remember, we need not literally follow these instructions; we have only to take the spirit behind it. The idea is there should be an āsanam; which is neither too hard; nor too soft; that is the only idea; we need not all these things. If they are there, wonderful; otherwise also wonderful.

And where should this āsanam be fixed. नात्युच्छ्रितं नातिनीचं nātyucchritaṁ nātinīcam; it should not be too high; it should not be too low; if it is too high, one may fall; and break the head; if it is too low, insects may come. And such an āsanam; ātmanaḥ āsanam. Krishna says your own āsanam; here ātmanaḥ does not mean satcidānanda ātma; satcidānanda ātma does not have any āsanam; it is all pervading; so here, ātmanaḥ is reflexive pronoun; one's own āsanam one should use, which means every meditator should have his own or her own private exclusive āsanam. Just as they say in tradition, chappals cannot be exchanged. They have the śāstrā vidhi. Similarly here also; āsanam; what should you do; स्थिरम् प्रतिष्ठाप्य sthiram pratiṣṭhāpya; may you fix that āsanam, firmly.

Why firmly, because if you use the plank, wooden palakai, in those days they used to use; now also the plank is used; and you will find that it will be all plain in the beginning; but after sometime, the palakai will shake; it will not be even; and suppose you sit on that āsana; like the sea-saw you will be moving like that; Krishna says do not choose such āsana; it should be sthiram; steady.

So thus, three items we have seen; dēśa; kālaḥ, we supplied and āsanam. Further:

तत्रैकाग्रं मनः कृत्वा यत्तचित्तेन्द्रियक्रियः ।

उपविश्यासने युञ्ज्याद् योगमात्मविशुद्धये ॥ ६.१२ ॥

tatraikāgraṁ manaḥ kṛtvā yatacittēndriyakriyāḥ |

upaviśya"sanē yuñjyād yōgamātmaviśuddhayē || 6.12 ||

उपविश्य तत्र upaviśya tatra seated there आसने āsane on the seat यत्तचित्तेन्द्रियक्रियः yatacittēndriyakriyāḥ having restrained the activities of the mind and sense organs कृत्वा मनः kṛtvā manaḥ having made the mind एकाग्रम् ekāgram one pointed, युञ्ज्याद् योगम् yuñjyād yōgam one should practise dhyana yōgam आत्मविशुद्धये ātmaviśuddhayē for mental purification

12. Seated there on the seat, having restrained the activities of the mind and sense organs, and having made the mind one-pointed, one should practice dhyana yōga for mental purification.

तत्र आसने उपविश्य tatra āsanē upaviśya; tatra in the first line, āsanē upaviśya in the second line, after fixing the āsanam; one should be seated on the āsanam; tatra āsanē upaviśya;

यतचित्तेन्द्रियक्रियः yatacittēndriyakriyāḥ; one should withdraw from all the activities; cittam means the mind; indriyam means the sense organs, both the jñānēndriyams, the sense organs of knowledge and karmēndriyāṇi, the organs of action; kriyāḥ means their functions; yatha means they are all restrained; one should deliberately consciously restrain the mind and sense organs; you give an auto suggestion to your own mind; now I have an appointment with myself. In our busy schedule, we keep appointment with so many people, and during one appointment, when somebody else comes, what do you do, wait outside. So we are very strict and particular; similarly, here also, tell your mind this is the time for myself; I have time for everything in life; but I am not taking the interest of myself; and therefore I withdraw from all other activities.

And having withdrawn the mind from the world; what should I do; stilling the mind is not the aim; having withdrawn from other objects, I have to direct my mind towards the chosen object of meditation. Like building a dam; so I stop the river water from being wasted; by flowing into the ocean; so when I build a dam; the water is conserved and that stored water is channelised for irrigation purposes; otherwise the water will go waste. Similarly, the mind has got tremendous energy; which we are wasting through unnecessary worries; in meditation I stop the wasteful flow of mental energy; and then that stored mental energy or thought I direct towards a chosen thing.

Therefore Krishna says एकाग्रम् ekāgram; by converging the mind; so meditation is like a lens; when the sun rays are travelling parallelly, they do not have that much energy; but you use a lens and all the beams of the sunlight are converged on a point, then the energy is so much; that that energy can burn an object. What an ordinary sunlight cannot do, the converged sunlight can. In fact, one of the methods of lighting the fire; in the vēdic sacrifice is by using lense; one method is arani mathanam; another method is using lens. Similarly, here also, through meditation, I converge; Therefore मनः एकाग्रम् कृत्वा manaḥ ekāgram kṛtvā; yuñjyād; one should practice meditation; योगं युञ्ज्याद् yōgam yuñjyād; yōgam means dhyānam.

And what is the purpose of meditation; आमात्मविशुद्धये ātmaviśuddhayē; ātmaviśuddhayē; here the word ātma means mind; viśuddhi means purification; ātma viśuddhi means purification of mind.

So from this it is very clear; that Krishna does not prescribe meditation for knowledge; he does not say practice meditation to get self-realisation; Krishna does not prescribe meditation for realisation; but according to us, self-knowledge has to come only through the study of scriptures; vēdānta śāstra vicārēṇa jnānōtpatti. As I said in the introduction itself; meditation cannot, does not and will not produce any new knowledge.

Then it is meant for what: removing the impurities of the mind; the impurity being two-fold; malam and vikṣepaḥ; malam means unhealthy ways of thinking; rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ; kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ, mātsaryaḥ etc. are called malam; uncultured thought; unrefined; indecent thought, is called malam.

and vikṣepaḥ is the second impurity; which is extrovertedness of the mind; restlessness of the mind; therefore, for removing the malam; and for removing the vikṣepaḥ, mala vikṣepa rūpa aśuddi nivṛttyartam dhyānābhyasaḥ;

And after purifying the mind, one has to necessary study the scriptures for knowledge,

Then the next question comes; suppose a person practices meditation; after the study of scriptures; when what is the purpose; because in my introduction I said meditation can be either before scriptural study or after. If it is before, it is called by a technical name, upāsanam; if it is after scriptural study, it is called nidhidhyāsanam.

the purpose of upāsanam is what; mala vikṣepa nivṛtṭiḥ; now after vēdāntic study; after receiving the knowledge aham brahmāsmi; suppose a person practices meditation; then what is the purpose; he says then also it is for purification only;

purification from what; from which impurity; we say, even after vēdāntic knowledge; we have got the habitual vāsana of body identification, which is called dēha vāsana; dēha abhimāna vāsana; otherwise called viparītha bhāvana; otherwise called viparyaya. And as long as those habits are there, knowledge cannot help me. It is like you shift one of your books or anything; we often rearrange things in our house; almariah we shift from here to there; we take some book from here to there; you just shift; after shifting, you will find that you again go back to the old place. Why is it because of ignorance; it is not ignorance, you have rearranged the place; if somebody else had done, at least you are ignorant, I can say; but even after deliberating changing; next day I go to the same place; that is called habit; and similarly, that body identification is a entrenched habit; therefore in meditation, I have to train my mind; I am not this body; and the removal of this dēha vāsana is called ātma viśuddhayē.

So thus, whether it is before study of scriptures, or after the study of scriptures, meditation is for purification only; not for realisation;

Continuing;

समं कायशिरोग्रीवं धारयन्नचलं स्थिरः ।

सम्प्रेक्ष्य नासिकाग्रं स्वं दिश्चानवलोकयन् ॥ ६.१३ ॥

samaṁ kāyaśirōgrīvaṁ dhārayannacalaṁ sthiraḥ |

sampreḥṣya nāsikāgraṁ svaṁ diśāścānavalōkayan || 6.13 ||

स्थिरः sthiraḥ (remaining) firm धारयन् dhārayan holding कायशिरोग्रीवम् kāyaśirogrīvam – the trunk, head, and neck समम् samam erect अचलम् acalam and steady च अनवलोकयन् ca anavalokayan and not looking दिशः diśaḥ around सम्प्रेक्ष्य sampreḥṣya one should look at स्वं नासिकाग्रम् svaṁ nāsikāgram the tip of one's nose (as it were)

13. (remaining) firm, holding the trunk, head, and neck erect and steady, and not looking around, one should look at the tip of one's own nose (as it were.)

Krishna comes to further details. Here He talks about the posture. I said in the last class; that sitting down is the ideal posture for meditation; sitting down on the ground, with folded legs; and making the maximum base area of the leg. That is keeping the knees as apart as possible; so that there is a wide base area; which will give you steadiness and balance; and as I said, this is ideal. By saying this is ideal; what I mean is it is not compulsory, because there are many people who cannot sit down. Either because there is no habit; or because there are knee joint pains, arthrities; so many things; all these problems are there; therefore if you are not able to sit down; sit anywhere; even if it is easy chair; are even if you lie flat; we do not mind, but meditate and do not end up snoring; that is all.

So therefore, any prescription is a suggestion; no prescription is a commandment, you know why, because meditation is not actually the posture; mediation is the job that you do with your mind; like a student studying; there is one student who has got an ideal study room; because the father is a rich father; therefore he has been given special study; and special desk; special table lamp, etc. but do you think that just because all those are there; the student should study; No; because they are all extraneous things; they are not compulsory; a dull student can sit in that and need not study anything; on the other hand, there are students who do not have study room, and they will be studying; and so study is a job of the mind; all the other conditions are suggestions, not commandments. If it suits a person, one can follow; otherwise one need not follow them.

And therefore, sit in any posture; and then what should be the condition of the upper part of the body; we have sit, you should be seated with folded legs; from hip onwards, above, what should be the condition, Krishna says, समं कायशिरोग्रीवं samaṁ kāyaśirōgrīvaṁ; the upper body should be erect; kāya, kāya means the body from hip to neck, is called kāya; then grīva, means the neck, śiraḥ, means the head, these three must be in one straight line, perpendicular to the ground. It should be 90o to the ground, no acute angle, obtuse angle; only right angle; samaṁ kāyaśirōgrīvaṁ; again this comes by practice. And this straightness is prescribed because only when the body is straight; the breathing will be smooth and even; now health is connected to the appropriate posture; after long study they have found that we human beings have got a big problem; we are vertically growing and standing unlike the animals. And animals all called तिर्यक् triyak in Sanskrit; triyak means they are horizontal; and their growth is also horizontal; human beings alone; four legs became two legs; first two legs become the hands; and the monkey became slowly erect; homo erectus; so then you find. and they say we have to pay very big price for this; and the biggest price is your backbone is taking the weight; because of that invariably we get into back problem; and now they are finding that therefore appropriate posture becomes important and therefore lot of research going; a special science has come; ergonomics; you have heard ergonomics; purely studying what type of chair is suited; because 8 hours a day, 10 hours a day; he will be typing; and you will find spontelosis; occupational hazard; each one has got this problem; and therefore breathing will be proper, only when the body is erect. And therefore, keep the body erect; and you will be initially erect; starting will be; then slowly sagging; it requires some training. Even musicians should also give importance to the posture because, they say from nābhi hṛt kanda rasana; from nābhi music should come and if one is not erect; it will not come properly. Many musicians sag; if you sit straight only music will come. samam kāyaśirōgrīvam dhārayan;

Then अचलम् स्थिरः acalam sthiraḥ; it should be firm and steady; erect; so firm, and erect; so acalam sthiraḥ; so this is the āsana; that is śarīra sthithi; dēśa; kālaḥ, āsana, śarīra sthithi;

Then what should be the condition of the sense organs; so withdraw the sense organs, from the sensory field.

And how do you withdraw the sense organs; how can you withdraw the ears; maximum ears can be plugged; what will you do the nose, which smells anything around; you cannot plug the nose also; so therefore, withdrawing the sense organs means; withdrawing the mind from the sense organs; withdrawing the mind from the sense organs.

And among the sense organs, the most powerful one is the eye and therefore Krishna gives special attention; दिशचानवलोकयन् diśaścānavalōkayan; so do not see here and there; what is here, what is there; do not look here and there. These are all indications of mental restlessness; when the mind is restless, you will find looking here and there; and that is why Krishna said acalam sthiraḥ. You should keep the head sthiraḥ; and even if you have keep the sthiraḥ; eye balls can move; like in Bharatha natiyam; so therefore do not move the eye balls also; diśaścānavalōkayan; then what to do with the eyes; Krishna says: नासिकाग्रं सम्प्रेक्ष्य nāsikāgraṁ samprēkṣya; because some job has to be given like children; you have to give some job; or they will be doing some mischief; best way is to give some job to the child; nose, look at the tip of the nose; nāsikāgraṁ samprēkṣya.

Then the next doubt will be whose nose; this question should not come because in the beginning he has said; ēkākī. Otherwise every time you meditate, you will require someone to look at this nose tip. And what will that poor person do; so Krishna says; svam nāsikāgraṁ; your own nose tip. svam nāsikāgraṁ samprēkṣya. Somebody asked; what will Japanese people do; they do not have tip at all; OK; so that is why you should remember, these commandments are not strict commandment, you have to take the spirit; therefore Sankaracharya writes; you are as though looking at the tip of the nose; which means eyes are partially closed. Śankarācāryanicely writes, you are not meditating on the tip of the nose; you do not get citta śuddhi by nose tip meditation. So, therefore, partially closed eyes; so thus, indriya nigrahaḥ.

Then Krishna does not talk about breathing regulation in this context; as I said in the last class; Krishna has talked about it in the previous chapter end; that we have to bring here; In the fifth chapter towards the end, Krishna said;

sparśān kṛtvā bahirbāhyāmścaḥśuścaivāntarē bhruvōḥ |
prāṇāpānau samau kṛtvā nāsābhyantaracāriṇau || 5.27 ||

In fact another confusion also, here, if you remember the fifth chapter, you will get confusion. If you do not remember, you are lucky, because in the fifth chapter, Krishna says, look at between the eye brows; caḥśuścaivāntarē bhruvōḥ; here Krishna says look at the tip of the nose. Now tell me; where should I look; the very fact that Krishna is not consistent indicate Krishna is not very particular about where you look; whether tip of the nose or gap between the eyebrows; do not bother too much about those details; what is important; your eyes do not distract you; that is the spirit; and even if you want to close your eyes; perfectly OK; gently close your eyes; and there Krishna said; prāṇāpānau samau kṛtvā; make sure that your breathing is slow, rhythmic and even;

In fact, they say prāṇā vikṣaṇam, is a very good discipline; as different from prāṇa ayama; prāṇāyāma is regulation of breathing; prāṇā vikṣaṇam is observation of the breath; and when I observe, observe means what, I am aware of the breathing process, the very awareness of the breathing process, makes it smooth and even; so that is called prana vikṣaṇam.

So thus Krishna has talked dēśa, kāla, āsana; śarīra sthithi, indriya nigrahaḥ; and prāṇa sāmīyam; then what are left; manō nigrahaḥ and buddhi niścayaḥ; which he will talking about in the following verses; and which we will see in the next class.

Om

Lord Krishna is dealing with the antaraṅga sādhanāni, the immediate preparations to be taken care of before meditation. There we saw the role of the dēśaḥ; choosing the appropriate place; kālaḥ; choosing the appropriate time; āsanam; fixing the appropriate āsanam; in appropriate manner; and then the posture of the body; śarīra stitiḥ; and then he talked about indriya nigrahaḥ; the withdrawal of the sense organs, from the external world, paying extra attention to the eyes, samprēkṣya nāsikāgraṁ svaṁ. So the eyes should be as though looking at the tip of the nose; the idea being, or eyes are partially closed, and the eyes are fully closed; and then Krishna mentioned the prāṇa sāmyam; which was not said in the 6th chapter, but at the end of the 5th chapter He had said

स्पर्शान्कृत्वा बहिर्बाह्यान् चक्षुश्चैवान्तरे भ्रुवोः ।

sparśān kṛtvā bahirbāhyānścakṣuścaivāntarē bhruvōḥ|

prāṇāpānau samau kṛtvā nāsābhyantaracāriṇau || 5.27 ||

prāṇa and apāna meaning exhalation and inhalation; they should be even and smooth; so these are the six stages we had seen.

Krishna has to talk about manō nigrahaḥ and buddhi niścaya also; He will deal with them in the following verses; we have seen up to the 13th verse. Krishna continues with the same topic in the 14th also.

प्रशान्तात्मा विगतभिः ब्रह्मचारिव्रते स्थितः ।

मनः संयम्य मच्चित्तः युक्त आसीत् मत्परः ॥ ६.१४॥

praśāntātmā vigatabhīrabrahmacārivratē sthitaḥ |
manaḥ saṁyamya maccittō yukta āsīta matparaḥ | | 6.14 | |

स्थितः sthitaḥ remaining ब्रह्मचारिव्रते brahmacārivrate in the vow of a brahmacharya प्रशान्तात्मा praśāntātmā with a calm mind विगतभीः vigatabhīḥ without anxiety संयम्य मनः saṁyamya manaḥ and restraining the mind युक्तः आसीत् yuktaḥ āsīta the disciplined one should remain मच्चित्तः maccittaḥ with the mind (fixed) on me मत्परः matparaḥ and) with Me as the supreme (goal)

14. Remaining in the vow of Brahmacharya with a calm mind without anxiety, and restraining the mind, the disciplined one should remain with the mind (fixed) on me (and) with Me as the supreme (goal)

So what should be the condition of the mind. The mind has disturbances from two quarters; one is from our past experiences; we might have regrets, bitterness; anger irritation, etc. which can surface during meditation; because the mind is full of vāsanās or experiences; they all remain deep within; and when the mind is quiet at the time of meditation; all the problems within can surface; during day to day transactions, they do not surface; because the mind is pre-occupied. But in meditation, when we withdraw the mind from the external world, the conscious mind is free now, and therefore from the sub-conscious mind, our past experiences can come up and disturb; this is the regrets of the past.

And Krishna says we should how to handle that; never allow the past to disturb you; from the past experiences, we can learn; it is very good, in fact, we get maturity from experiences, but if I do not know how to handle my past, every experience can create a disturbance. And therefore, having learned from the past experiences, surrender all of them to the Lord. Every painful experience, every failure, every insult, all of them you surrender to the Lord, and tell the Lord that you have given those experiences for my inner growth only.

Every experience is meant for my inner growth; therefore I have no regrets; I do not have any anger towards anyone; I do not have hatred towards anyone; I surrender all my past experiences to the Lord after absorbing knowledge from them. Because past can two fold job, it can do good also; it can do bad also. Past does good to me, if I am willing to learn from the past. At the same time, past can be a burden; if these experiences trigger bitterness, inferiority complex, guilt, anger, hatred. If the past experiences generate these negative emotions; past becomes a dead weight on my shoulders. I will not be able to go forward; each experience will pull me back; So Swamiji, we are not to forget that; forget that; and we tell also; I can never forgive that person. I am ready to forgive everyone; but not this person, when I think, I am getting BP.

Remember, when you hate someone, the sufferer is not the hated one; the sufferer is the hater. Hatred is an obstacle to the hating person; hatred is never an obstacle to the hated person. Often he does not even know that you are hating; Or that person is dead and gone; Even now we have that anger. Therefore never do that. Forgive everyone; Like they have on special days, they leave all the people from the prison; mass freedom; so the release many prisoners; like that, you take all the people whoever has done any harm to you; bring all of them in front of your eyes, you tell I forgive everyone; and whatever experience I had, it is the will of God, meant for my inner growth; துன்ப புடத்தில் இட்டு தூயவானாக்கி வைத்தாய் tuṇpa puṭattil iṭṭu tūyavāṇākki vaittāy. Every pain is only for polishing; thus if I am ready to give up the past burden; I enjoy a mind, what type of mind, praśānta ātma; relievēd; it is like taking a tonne of weight from the mind; therefore, give up regrets over the past; past is over.

Now the next disturbance is not about the past; Swamiji; my worry is about the future; what will happen to my son; daughter, son-in-law, grand children; that is the worry about the future, again surrender the future to the Lord; tell the Lord, Oh! whatever I am going to face in future, is the result of my own karma; I cannot blame anyone; I am responsible for my future; and therefore I cannot escape my future; and therefore I do not resist, I welcome my future whether it is positive or negative; and when I say, my future, it includes the family members; we cannot determine our children's future; we can contribute our might, but what happens to the children, it is not totally in mind hand; and I pray to the Lord only this much; whatever be the type of future; Oh Lord, give me the strength to face that. and not only the strength to face but also to learn from those experiences. परीक्ष्य लोकान् कर्मचितान् parīkṣya lokān karmacitān; it requires a particular mind to learn from adversity. And therefore give me a sātvic mind; which will take the teaching and forget the experience, like the mythological swan, haṁsa pakṣi; which will take the milk and give up, or it is pongal season, you take the sugar cane in the mouth, and munch, take the juice and spit out. Similarly, every experience I should take inside, take the essence; that is learning and forget the experience.

And if I have got such an attitude, which attitude welcome to the future; big board is written; welcome; आगते स्वगतम् कुर्यात् āgatē svagatam kuryāt; and such a mind does not have concern regarding future; it is relaxed mind; therefore Krishna says in meditation, do not bring your future to the mind; so what should you do; विगतभीः vigatabhīḥ; bhīḥ means what; anxiety, concern, worry; vigata means what, they are all given up.

So past does not disturb me; future does not disturb me; that means what; the present is fully available for me; to utilise for meditation. Normally the present is not available; because the present is afflicted by past and future; when I handle these two, the present time is available for meditation.

Therefore Krishna says, प्रशान्तात्मा विगतभिः praśāntātmā vigatabhīḥ; then what next; ब्रह्मचारिव्रते स्थितः brahmacārivratē sthitaḥ; brahmacārivratam; or brahmacāryam; is defined in several ways in several contexts; one definition that is given that we can see for brahmacāri is brahmacāri is a student of scriptures; brahmacāri is a student of the scriptures; because the word brahma means the scriptures, the vēdās and cāri means leading a way of life; for studying the scriptures and for studying the scriptures very well, and to observe the teaching; the scriptures prescribe several disciplines; and all those disciplines together are called brahmacāryam; the disciplines to be followed by any student of scriptures for getting maximum benefit out of the study; and among many disciplines, one discipline that they followed is this: in brahmacharya āśrama, when he is a student; he does not have any relationship, except three; a vēdic brahmacāri in gurukula, he has got only three relations. No other relations.

And what are those three relations; relationship with God; which is the basic, which you cannot give up; relationship with the guru, the teacher; and finally the relationship with the śāstrām, the scriptures; he does not have any other relationship; he relates to the teacher as a student and of course, studies the scriptures and during that he invokes the grace of the Lord, सहना भवतु, सहनौ भुनक्तु, ..तेजस्विन वतीतमस्तु sahanā bhavatu, sahanau bhunaktu, ..tējasvina vatītamastu; etc. I need the grace of the Lord; so only these three basic relationship; this is generally indicated by the tuft; like the ariel; it has got connection to the three; and that is why at the time of sanyāsa āśrama; they remove the tuft, breaking even these three relationships.

न बन्धुर्न मित्रं गुरुर्नैव शिष्यः

na bandhurna na mitraṁ gurur naiva śiṣyaḥ

न शास्ता न शास्त्रं न शिष्यो न शिक्षा

न च त्वं न चाहं न चायं प्रपञ्चः ।

स्वरूपावबोधो विकल्पासहिष्णुः

तदेकोऽवशिष्टः शिवः केवलोऽहम् ॥ ७ ॥

na śāstā na śāstraṁ na śiṣyō na śikṣā

na ca tvaṁ na cāhaṁ na cāyaṁ prapañcaḥ |

svarūpāvabōdhō vikalpāsahiṣṇuḥ

tadēkō:'vaśiṣṭaḥ śivaḥ kēvalō:'ham || 7 ||

When he discovers advaitam; there is no relationship; because relationship requires minimum two. When dvaitam is not there; ēkaḥ śivaḥ kēvalō:'ham; that is the ultimate; but during the study, he keeps these three basic relationship and that is why in brahmacārya āśrama also, there is scriptural study, no worldly relationship. In sanyāsa āśrama also, scriptural study, no worldly relation;

Whenever there is study; our tradition cut the relationship. Now do not get frightened; what I am saying is: at least at the time of scriptural study, or at least at the time of meditation, I should cut all the relationship; tell yourselves, I am not a father now; I am not a mother; I am not a husband; I am not a wife; I am not a son; I am not a daughter; I am not a son-in-law, daughter; whatever relationship, especially the disturbing relationship. Cut it all; temporarily become a mental sanyasi.

In Kaivalya Upaniṣad, this advise is given; अत्याश्रमस्थः सकलेन्द्रियाणि निरुद्य भक्तया स्वगुरुं प्रणम्य atyāśramasthaḥ sakalēndriyāṇi nirudya bhaktayā svaguruṁ praṇamya; atyāśramasthaḥ; do not be a grihastha at the time of meditation; because even though the word grihastha means the one who remains in the house, generally it is the other way round, (are you understanding?) grihasthaḥ literally means, the one who remains in the house; but the fact is the one in whom the house remains; it is not that we are not sitting on the house, or inside, but the house is sitting; that is why people say, Swamiji, there is a problem when we lock also, if we do not lock also, problem. We are in Rishikesh; but we carry 31 x 7 seven; we go with all that; without buying the ticket; Everyone is carrying the house; carrying the children, grand children, all we are carrying,

And that is why Krishna said at the end of the 5th chapter, sparśān kṛtvā bahirbāhyām; send all of them out; ask them to evacuate; address Wife, get out, from where, mind, not from your house ~ she may ask better you, do not tell aloud ~ tell get out of my mind; husband, get out of my children; children get out, only temporarily; then take everything; that is called brahmacārya vṛtam; having only these three relationship; temporarily renouncing all the worldly relationships or becoming a temporary mental sanyasi; is called brahmacāri vṛtam;

And you will find that there is a tremendous relaxation, because our mind is cut into hundreds of piece, each part of mind is stuck in one relationship; one portion will be thinking of the daughter; one portion the son, one portion, all uncles, each bit of mind is stuck all over. Krishna says, bring them all; let them be available to you; therefore मनः संयम्य manaḥ saṁyamya; withdraw the mind; from all those relationship; all these roles;

Then now the mind is available for what purpose; Krishna says: मच्चित्तो maccittō; invoke this relationship which you do not invoke at all; because there is no time; and what is that relationship, maccittō, சரண கமலாலயத்தில் அரை நிமிஷம் caraṇa kamalālayattil arai niṣam; (somebody sang) at least a half-a-minute, do you keep the mind in the Lord; therefore maccittaḥ; fix the mind upon the basic relationship in life; and that is relationship with God; Because your relationship with God alone continues janma after janma; the only permanent relationship is with God; all the other relationships are temporary; in our preoccupation with temporary relationship, we are losing sight of the permanent relationship, and therefore Krishna says at least for sometime, may you invoke me, who is sṛṣṭi, stiti; laya kartā of the whole creation; and also of you. just as rivers come from the ocean and go back to the ocean; you have come from Me and your destination is Me; do not forget that; do not forget the purpose for what you have; do everything else; do not forget what you are here for; therefore, maccittaḥ means dwelling upon Me, the Lord;

युक्तः yuktaḥ, with an integrated mind, that mind which is converging; yukthaḥ means which is converging upon; convergent mind; asītha; may you sit in meditation

And what is the goal of the meditation; मत्परः matparaḥ; keeping me, not only as an object of meditation; but also as the destination of the life; therefore mumukṣu san; may you practice meditation.

युञ्जन्नेवं सदात्मानं योगी नियतमानसः ।

शान्तिं निर्वाणपरमां मत्संस्थामधिगच्छति ॥६.१५॥

yuñjannēvaṁ sadātmānaṁ yōgī niyatamānaśaḥ|

śāntim nirvāṇaparamāṁ matsaṁsthāmadhigacchati||6.15||

एवं युञ्जन् evaṁ yuñjan thus engaging आत्मानम् ātmānam the mind (in meditation), सदा sadā constantly नियतमानसः niyatamānaśaḥ with a restrained mind योगी yōgī the yogi अधिगच्छति adhigacchati attains शान्तिम् śāntim peace मत्संस्थाम् matsaṁsthām which belongs to Me, निर्वाणपरमाम् nirvāṇaparamām and which culminates in liberation

15. Thus engaging the mind (in meditation) constantly with a restrained mind, the Yogi, attains peace which belongs to ME and which culminates in liberation.

How long this should be practiced. Krishna says: this should be consistently and regularly and for a long time, this should be practiced; योगी सदात्मानं युञ्जन् yōgī sadātmānaṁ yuñjan; yogi means meditator; ātma here means the mind; not satcidananda ātma; but the mind, and yuñjan means fixing the mind, the meditator must fix the mind upon the Lord; and fixing the mind is nothing but fixing the thought; fixing the mind is nothing but fixing the thought, which means, may your thoughts be centered on the Lord; एवम् ēvam, ēvam means as described before in the previous verse; a meditator should dwell upon the Lord.

Now the question is what type of Lord; I had told you before, that in your scriptures the Lord is presented in three different ways; depending upon the level of the student; mandah, madhyama, and uttama;

at the mandah level, first stage, God is personal God, with a particular form like Rāma rūpam, Krishna rūpam, Devi rūpam, it is called ēka rūpam dhyānam;

and when a person is advanced, then the very same Lord becomes viśva rūpaḥ; anēka rūpa, which means I see the lord as the very creation itself; भू पादौ यस्य नाभिर् चन्द्र सूर्यो च नेत्रे bhū pādau yasya nābhir candra suryo ca nētrē; sun and moon are his eyes; we will be seeing the description later; and therefore the ēkarūpa dhyānam manda adhikari; for madhyama adhikari anēka rūpa dhyānam;

and once a person is still advanced and he has studied the upanishads or vēdānta for him is prescribed arūpa dhyānam; transcending both one form and many form, we come to formless Īśvara; and when one comes to formless God; the meditator-meditated-division disappears; the dvaitam will get converted to advaitam; bheda upāsanam or dhyānam gets transformed into abēda dhyānam; for ēka rūpa dhyānam also bhēdam is there; in anēka rūpa dhyānam also there is bhēda; arūpa dhyānam when you come:

dyātrū dhyāna dhyēya bhēda parēnātmani vidyatē, cidāndhaika rupatvāt dīpaytē svayamēvahi

this division is not there; so this according to the level, the way we perceive God differs.

Now the question is in the sixth chapter, Krishna is talking about which one; ēka rūpam; anēka rūpam, arūpam? The answer is Krishna is talking about arūpa dhyānam alone. He is talking about the highest form of meditation; how do you know, do not ask, Krishna himself will clarify that later. Therefore, meditate upon me, who is in the form of a very ātma itself; आत्म संस्थाम् मन क्रित्वा ātma sṁstthām mana kritvā; therefore, yogi yuñjyat.

And how should he practice the meditation; यत्मानसः yatamānasaḥ; with self-restraint; that is without distraction.

Then what will he get; because the ultimate the question is what will I get; शान्तिम् अधिगच्छति śāntim adhigacchati; so more the meditation; the more peaceful the mind will be.

And what is the source of that peace. Krishna says मत्संस्थामधिगच्छति matsamsthāmadhigacchati; the peace which is coming from the Lord;

When the peace is coming from the set up, what is the problem?. When the peace comes from the set-up, the problem is whenever set-up is reversed ~ set-up reversed becomes upset ~ so whenever set-up becomes upset, then the mind is upset; that is what we are telling; set up has turned upside down. So if your peace depends upon your relations, you are in trouble; because relations change. If your peace depends upon your job, you are in trouble; if your peace depends upon any blessed thing in the world, there is risk; but when the peace is coming from the Lord; there is no question of losing that peace; therefore matsamsthām śāntim, nityam śāntim. Kathōpaniṣad says: तमात्मस्थं येऽनुपश्यन्ति धीराः तेषां शान्तिः शाश्वती नेतरेषाम् ॥ १३॥ tamātmasthām yē:'nupaśyanti dhīrāḥ tēṣāṁ śāntiḥ śāśvatī nētarēṣām ॥ 13॥;

only those people will get permanent peace, all the other people cannot get peace of mind at all. Either peace will be a fake peace or it will be temporary peace, real peace comes from me alone; Krishna tells matsamsthām śāntim adhigacchati.

And not only it gives śāntim, which is otherwise called jīvan muktiḥ; after death also he will become one with me; निर्वाणपरमं nirvāṇaparamām; vidēha muktiḥ; nirvāṇa paramā; culminating in vidēha mukthi; so this meditator will get jīvan muktiḥ; which will culminate in vidēha mukthi; and vidēha mukthi is simply defined as freedom from punarjanma; so he will get freedom.

योगः अस्ति yōgaḥ āsti – Dhyānayōga is possible, न अत्यश्नतः तु na atyaśnataḥ tu neither for one who eats too much न च अनश्नतः na ca anaśnataḥ nor for one who does not eat एकान्तम् ekāntam at all; न च अतिस्वप्रशिलस्य na ca atisvapraśīlasya neither for one who sleeps too much न च एव जाग्रतः na ca eva jāgrataḥ nor for one who is ever awake अर्जुन arjuna Oh Arjuna

16. Dhyānayōga is possible neither for one who eats too much nor for one who does not eat at all; neither for one who sleeps too much nor for one who is ever awake, Oh! Arjuna.

With the previous slōkā, Krishna has completed for the time being, the antaraṅga sādhanāni; more antaraṅga sādhanām He will talk again later; I say buddhi niścayaḥ is antaraṅga sādhanā; that we have not seen; which will come later.

Now in the 16th and 17th verse, Krishna is again coming back to bahiraṅga sādhanāni. As I said before, it is not a prepared speech; and therefore some ideas he remembers, he includes later. He adds a few more bahiraṅga sādhanā; and what is bahiraṅga sādhanā; I hope you remember; general disciplines to be followed throughout the day. And in these two slōkāś; Krishna is emphasising moderation in everything as an important discipline; never get carried away by anything; never indulge in anything too much; never get addicted to anything; paper reading, radio (it has gone) television watching; whatever get addicted and overdo; the golden mean, madhya mārga is important for a meditator; for a spiritual seeker in general; and He talks about moderation with regard to eating; moderation with regard to activity; moderation with regard to sleep; these are the three main types of moderation that Krishna talks about in these two verses.

there is a mantra called agamarṣaṇa sūktham; which is part of Mahānārāyaṇa upaniṣad; and it is a sūktham supposed to be chanted during snānam. When we take snānam, we are supposed to wash off all our papam; not only we wash off, physical impurity; but snānam we are converting into religious ritual and washing off the pāpam also; that is why it is called agamarṣaṇa sūktham; agam means pāpam; marṣaṇam, destroying; sūktham means prayer; and there so many sins are enumerated; I did this akarṇam, yesterday, let it be washed off; do not think that the slate is clean and I can start again today.

yaścāpsu varuṇaḥ sa punātvaghamarṣaṇaḥ || 61||

It is a longer sūktham. But this particular line I chanted say ati aśnāt; yesterday one of the pāpams I did was overeating. Not only I overate at the time of breakfast, lunch, dinner, but between also; because now fridge is available; and therefore time pass; train; walk on; why it is called time pass; just go on eating; so thus, the mouth is always busy; if nothing is available, chewing gum; eating between eating, anything is never accepted; not only it is bad for health; śāstrām says it is pāpam.

And therefore, here Krishna warns do not overeat; But some people confusion is what is overeating. They do not know the difference; looks normal; in the previous days, we were sitting down and eating; and therefore when the stomach is half full, you would not be able to reach the plate; so at least you keep that norm; then you can get up. Now that the dining table has come; the gap between the food and the mouth is small, you go on eating so much. Therefore how am I to know; so the śāstrā says,

त्रितिये उतकेन तु ।

वायुर् सन्चारणार्थाय चतुर्तम् अवशेषयेत् ॥ pūrayēt aśanē ardhham
tritiyē utakēna tu |
vāyur sancāraṇārthāya
cathurtam avaśēṣayēt ||

Divide your stomach into four portions; it is a concept; divide mentally; and half of the stomach should be solid food; pūrayēt aśanē ardhham; third quarter should be for liquid; like water or butter milk; and what about the fourth quarter, just leave it; cathurtam avaśēṣayēt; leave it, so that the food can be mixed up, if it is totally full, it can mix up properly; so cathurtam avaśēṣayēt.

Now the problem is how do I know when it is half full; any measurement; like the scale in the auto rickshaw to measure the petrol; do you have some measure; what to do; when you can eat some more, stop it; that is the very simple thing; when you can eat some more; stop it. And if that is not clear; the best method is scientific method; one day you eat to your full; 12 dosas; (do not tell that it is too less!) assume you are able; that for calculation; next time you make it six; the idea is after eating; you should not feel discomfort; before eating you have got discomfort due to hunger; and after eating you have got discomfort due to overeating; it should not come; after eating the hunger discomfort should go away but eating discomfort should not come; That is called moderation; in eating; that is very very important; मित आहारः mita āhāraḥ. So Krishna says, if a person does not follow this discipline, he cannot be a spiritual person;

And then Krishna equally warns; न ऐकान्तमनश्नतः na ekāntam anaśnataḥ; do not fast too much also; which is also against nature; our system cannot take too much of fasting; that is why you find that all those people who fasted too much in their younger days, they will get into all kinds of problems; primarily ulcer; it is against śāstrā; therefore if you keep moderation itself, it is good; if at all you want to fast, it can be only once in a while; ēkadasi; is there; once in a while Śivarāthri; and whether it should be total fasting or liquid diet; or fruits only palaharam, etc. palaharam, pala vidham mana aharam palaharam; it is exactly phala aharam; sanskrit phalam; not Tamil; according to the system; we can practice any type of fasting; but overdoing this also Krishna is against; therefore ऐकान्तम् ekāntam totally too much, the one who does not eat; also cannot practice meditation; whenever he closes the eyes, idli will come in front; because too much hunger, if you close eyes, food thought will come; that is also not correct.

Then what about sleep? न चातिस्वप्नशीलस्य na cātisvapnaśīlasya; the one who sleeps too much; also cannot succeed in meditation;

And जाग्रतो नैव jāgratō naiva; and one who does not sleep at all; he wants to practice 8 hour meditation; and therefore goes to bed at 12 o'clock and then gets up to 3 o'clock, 3 hours or 2 hours, it is not enough for the sleep; if you do not give sufficient sleep to the system and meditate; what will happen; body knows how to take sleep; therefore during meditation; all deficiencies of sleep will be made up in meditation; you will have nice sleep in meditation; or else you will be sleeping in the class; class will become a nice sleeping hour. Therefore give the system its due; and it varies from individual to individual; even though normally days 7 and 7-1/2 hours is required for everyone, depending age, depending upon constitution, it varies; that sufficient amount should be given; and those who do not do that; yōgaḥ nāsthi, they cannot succeed in mediation.

yuktāhāravihārasya yuktacēṣṭasya karmasu |

yuktasvapnāvabōdhasya yōgō bhavati duḥkhahā || 6.17 ||

योगः भवति yōgaḥ bhavati Dhyana yōga becomes दुःखहा duḥkhahā the destroyer of sorrow युक्ताहारविहारस्य yuktāhāravihārasya for one who is moderate in eating and recreation, युक्तस्वप्नावबोधस्य yuktasvapnāvabodhasya who is moderate in sleeping and waking युक्तचेष्टस्य yuktacēṣṭasya (and) who is moderately engaged कर्मसु karmasu in actions.

17. Dhyana yōga becomes the destroyer of sorrow for one who is moderate in eating and recreation, who is moderate in sleeping and waking, (and) who is moderately engaged in actions.

So the same topic, moderation in everything; युक्ताहारः yuktāhāra; moderation in eating; विहारः vihārah; moderation in resting or recreation; entertainment. So a human mind requires some diversion; you cannot concentrate on something all the time; unless you are prepared for it; generally the mind after half an reading; you need something; like the children; mind requires diversion; and it is accepted in the śāstrā; but the śāstrā says that should be also in moderation; it should be like pickle; pickle is taking for curd rice; you do not curd rice for pickle. Similarly entertainment is required; music season comes; attend for music or drama; have some light reading; perfectly alright; but I should know when to stop it. Entertainment cannot be twenty-four hours a day. That is why they say, principle of TV is news, entertainment and education; but the problem is what; education channels is never used; and the entertainment channel becomes dominant; in some houses, morning they on it and leave it; and it will be running and some people will be watching, for sometime.

And therefore entertainment moderation; and युक्तचेष्टस्य कर्मसु yuktacēṣṭasya karmasu; and moderation in activity also; you can be committed to your profession wonderful; but if you are fully involved in the profession; you know workaholic and you do not have time for anything at all; no time for children; no time for husband, no time for wife; and that is why family also goes haywire. The cement that keeps the family together is time-together; togetherness is extremely important; Gītā no time; Upaniṣads you need not ask; that is again priorities confusion; so priority confusion is a big problem; and unfortunately the śāstrās are not prominent now; to remind the people and all the books and magazine, are only emphasising, work and achieve to climb the corporate ladder; and then what; fall down; so it is terrible, because nothing else is shown. Our scriptures constantly say that is not the be all and end all of life; and warning comes on and off; to get that warning, you should have some time to listen; he does not have time to listen.

And therefore Krishna says, always dedicate some time for satsaṅga, some mahātma you meet; they will remind; or study scriptures, or go to some ashram; some pilgrimage, you should be always reminded of what is the goal; what for I have come; what am I doing; tally both, on and off.

and therefore Krishna says karmasu yuktacēṣṭa; the one who is moderate in actions also.

and युक्तस्वप्नावबोधस्य yuktasvapnāvabōdhasya; and one who is moderate in sleep and waking; and dreaming also; OK; and svapna means everything and only to that moderate person; योगः भवति दुःखहा yōgaḥ bhavati duḥkhaḥā; very careful yōgaḥ duḥkhaḥā bhavati; yōga will become sorrowful; so this word has to be carefully understood; duḥkhaḥā, hā means destroyer; duḥkham hanti. Naśayati; iti duḥkhaḥā; nakaranthaha pullingaha dukhahan sabdhaha; dukhaha, dukhahanau duḥkhaḥā hanaha; dukhahanam dukhanau dukhagnau, dukhahabhyam; (that is duḥkham!!, little difficult); So duḥkhaḥā; it will become the destroyer of sorrow; that means source of peace; So meditation will become a source of peace, that is the destroyer of sorrow; only for a person of moderation; for other people, meditation will create only headache. More in the next class.

Om

In the first 17 verses of the 6th chapter, which we have completed, Lord Krishna elaborately dealt with the bahiraṅga and antaraṅga sādhanās of meditation; bahiraṅga sādhanā meaning the general preparations or disciplines to be observed throughout the life, and antaraṅga sādhanā means specific disciplines to be observed just before mediation; and both these sādhanās contribute to the success of meditation and having dealt with these two sādhanās.

Now in the following verses, Krishna talks about dhyāna svarūpam and phalam. Dhyāna svarūpam means actual process of meditation and dhyāna phalam, the culmination of the meditation process. And in dealing with this topic, the teacher here is closely following the system presented by the aṣṭāṅga yōga of Patanjali. Pathanjali is a great rishi, who has presented a beautiful system for the practice of meditation and for the integration of the personality, which is called yōga śāstrām. And this Pathanjali yōga śāstrām has got two parts, one is the practice of mediation and the other is the philosophy which is called yōga darśanam. Thus Pathanjali yōga śāstrām has two parts, one is the practical part of meditation and the other is the theoretical part of the philosophy. In this the philosophy part is not accepted by the vēdāntic tradition. The yōga darśanam, the yōga philosophy is rejected by the tradition, because it is against the vēdic teaching. Vyāsāchārya in his Brahma sūtra specifically mentions yōga philosophy is not acceptable to us. The reason is it is not in keeping with vēdic teaching. Even though philosophical part is rejected, the practical part of mediation and the preparation are acceptable to us; and therefore Vyāsāchārya; as well as Sankaracharya clearly says, we accept Pathanjali's yōga abhyasa; yōga practice we accept; but Pathanjali yōga philosophy we do not accept.

And since the yōga abhyasa, the practice of mediation is acceptable; it is heavily borrowed in our traditional works.

In our Puranas like Bhāgavatham, Vyāsācārya has borrowed from Pathanjali system of yōga practice and in the Bhagavad Gītā 6th chapter also, the author Vyāsācārya, who is the author of the Gītā, Krishna or Vyāsa, you will have doubt, Krishna taught to Arjuna but compiled by Vyāsācārya in his Mahābhāratham; and therefore Vyāsācārya, the author of the Gītā, the compiler of the Gītā, borrows the yōga method of mediation heavily in the 6th chapter of the Gītā.

And since it is heavily borrowed in our tradition, and since it is a very very useful system, I will briefly talk about the yōga system of meditation and this system is popularly known as aṣṭāṅga yōgaḥ; meditation in eight steps. Aṅga means limb or step or stages; and this is a wonderful system for integrating the whole personality, because it takes care of our physical personality, annamaya kōśa, it takes care of our praṇamaya kōśa, the energy personality and it takes care of the mental, the manōmaya kōśa, and it also takes care of vijñānamaya kōśa; is a wonderful integrating system; highly appreciated; and Sankaracharya talks about that also;

The first one is called yamaḥ; the second one is called niyamaḥ; and these two steps take care of our way of life; which can be taken as bahiraṅga sādhanā; yama and niyama deal with our way of life determines our mental makeup. Our lifestyles determines our mental makeup; if you are a highly reacting type of person, our mind is generally restless and therefore when we sit for mediation, we cannot. And therefore Pathanjali also accepts that we have to tone, discipline our general lifestyles, which is called yama and niyama; yama emphasises the things to be avoided in our day-to-day life to enjoy a calm mind.

and niyama talks about the things to be followed in our day-to-day life, in simple language, the dos and do nots. The vidhis and the niṣēda.

In fact, I recently talked about it, in my New Year talks, calling it 10 commandments of Hinduism. The 10 commandments consist of 5 dont's and 5 do's. Pathanjali talks about the 5 donot's in the yama, first stage, ahimsa, satyam, āstēyam, brahmacharyam, aparigraham; ahimsa means avoidance of injuring others; non-violence; so the first one is giving up of violence, physical, verbal or mental; why we should give up violence, because when we take to violence, the environment gets disturbed and when the environment is disturbed, it is again going to come back to myself only. We should remember, world is a mirror; you smile at the mirror, the image will smile at you; you frown, it will frown; what you do to the mirror, the mirror image will do to you; Always remember, world is a mirror; whatever you do to the world, it is going to come back to you; not in a visible manner; but in an invisible manner. Therefore, if I do violence, I will have to be the victim of violence later. Appreciating the principle it is said, give up violence; physical, verbal and even mental. So first don't.

The second one is satyam; giving up speaking untruth; anrutha varjanam; giving up falsehood; both at the thought level and more at the verbal level.

आस्तेयम् āstēyam; āstēyam means non-stealing. Never possess anything which does not legitimately belong to you. Any unfair deal is stealing. Any benefit I get through any unfair deal that benefit comes under stolen benefit; whether the other people recognise it or not; Bhagavān recognises what is stealing. If somebody deserves a particular amount as salary, and I do not give what is the deserved salary, the money I save by reducing the salary will come under stealing. If you say that you did not steal; Bhagavān will say that you did not pay proper salary, which amounts to salary. So therefore stealing did not mean, actual stealing, but any benefit I get through unfair means; therefore give up stealing is the third one.

Brahmacaryam. Brahmacaryam means giving up the inappropriate attitude towards the opposite sex. If it is a male, the male should give up all inappropriate attitude towards the female. Similarly, the female should give up all the improper, inappropriate attitude towards the male; that will come under brahmacaryam; giving up of inappropriate relationship with the opposite sex is called bramacaryam; So ahimsa, satyam, āstēyam; brahmacaryam.

Aparigrahaḥ; parigrahaḥ means possessing too much. Amassing wealth; unproportionate to wealth case. Even if I am legitimately earning, according to śāstrām, even the legitimately earned wealth, one cannot own beyond a limit; he has to share in the society; and when there is no sharing; there will be big imbalance, between the rich and the poor, which will lead to Naxalite problem;

Veerappan problem; people will rob and then they will distribute to the poor. Therefore aparigrahaḥ means non-possession; these are all the five don't.

Then comes the five do's called niyama.

They are soucham; means purity, within and without; internal and external purity is called soucham;

Santhoshaḥ means contentment with whatever I legitimately earn; never compare with the other people;

यल्लभसे निजकर्मोपात्तं वित्तं तेन विनोदय चित्तम्

yallabhasē nijakarmōpāttam vittam tēna vinōdaya cittam

Never compare. This is santhoshaḥ, contentment; soucha, santhosa;

Svādhyayaḥ; scriptural study is the next compulsory duty;

Then tapaḥ; tapaḥ means austerity; simple living; non-pompous living; non-luxurious living; simple living; austere living; observing moderation; yuktāhāravihārasya yuktacēṣṭasya karmasu, we saw before; and Īśvara pranidhānam; means surrender to the Lord.

And what do you mean by surrender to the Lord. Surrender to the Lord means surrendering to the laws of karma; Lord means the laws of karma; which keeps the universal harmony; not only physical orderliness, there is a moral order also; and according to the universal physical and moral law and order, which is Bhagavān's whatever we experience in life, is what we legitimately deserve. Every experience that I go through, right from the happiest moment, up to the most torturing situation; when we see the extreme pain in cancer and other diseases and the person does not die also and tremendous pain also, this is the worst you can imagine; from the happiest experience to the unhappiest experience everything happens according to the moral order of the Lord and surrendering to the Lord is accepting the law of karma; and what do you mean by acceptance, I do not resist any experience. I do not criticise any experience; I do not criticise the Lord for my experience; I accept whatever I receive as the will of God. We can try to improve the future; because future has not yet come; but whatever has already come, is Īśvara's will; that acceptance of Īśvara's will is acceptance of Law of karma, is acceptance of every bit of my experience.

And what do you mean by acceptance. You may ask: Swamiji whether I like it or not, I have to accept it; you need not advise me to do that, because what cannot be cured; (we will be cryingly saying this) what cannot be cured has to be endured; therefore why do you ask me to accept, because I have no other choice, it has come, what to do; if you say; by acceptance we mean not allowing the experience to create bitterness in the mind; anger in the mind; hatred in the mind; hatred towards oneself, jealousy towards another; it has affected me and not to me; so jealousy; hatred, anger, inferiority complex, these negative emotions, I do not allow to take place; Not allowing that experience to generate this negative emotions is called acceptance. Cheerful acceptance if possible; it is painful but I do not have complaints. Because what I get is what I deserve, I cannot blame anyone in the world; and if at all I pray to the Lord, the prayer is Oh Lord give me the strength to face the inevitable; this is called saraṇagathi. Praṇidānam; prapathihi; surrender; this is the fifth one; soucha, santhosha, tapas, svadhyaya; Īśvara pra ṇ idhāna; purity, contentment, austerity, scriptural study, surrender to the Lord;

And of these five niyamas, the last three niyamas put together is known as Kriya yōgaḥ; kriya yōgaḥ; which is another name for karma yōga; so tapa svadhyaya Īśvara pra ṇ idhānāni, kriya yōgaḥ; so there is one institution which is propagating kriya yōga; in America it is very popular; SRF, self-realisation fellowship; they use the word kriya yōga; kriya yōga is nothing but a thing taken from Pathanjali's yōga sūtra; and according to Pathanjali yōga sutra; what is kriya yōga; tapas plus svadhyaya plus Īśvara pra ṇ idhāna is equal to kriya yōga; which is called in the Bhagavad Gītā; as karma yōga.

So these ten commandments, five things to be avoided; and five things to be followed, make me a moral person; an ethical person; a gentle person; a cultured person; a refined person, a decent person; if I follow yama and niyama, and they come under what, the bahiraṅga sādhanā for meditation. An indecent person; an unrefined person cannot sit in meditation, because his own actions will disturb the mind. So thus yama and niyama come under bahiraṅga sādhanās according to Pathanjali; yama No.1 niyama; No. 2. yama subdivision five; niyama sub-division five. Then the third step of aṣṭāṅga yōga is āsana, training oneself to sit in a posture for a length of time; it requires a training; sitting down once upon a time, we thought it was easy because everybody was doing that; but now after the chair came we got so much used, that sitting down is very difficult; I remember one boy he is Indian settled in America and he came and had his upanayanam in our āśram and Swamiji asked me to teach sandhya vandanam; and the first step, ācamanam; ācamanam; you have to fold the legs and sit; there itself the problem started; no chair; he is not very old and all; because there is no practice; therefore, remember folding the leg is not an easy thing; you can be happy, you are doing a great feat; and thereafter in a particular posture, if I can sit for minimum 20 minutes; without changing the legs, (do not worry, I will not watch out for all these things) without changing the posture, without movement, if you can sit for 20 minutes, it is called āsana siddhi; that is the training; āsana,

Then the fourth step is called prāṇāyāmaḥ; āsana deals with annamaya kōśa; prāṇāyāma deals with prāṇāmaya kōśa; and prāṇāyāma is disciplining or regulating the breathing; which also Krishna talked about in the fifth chapter end; and therefore prāṇāyāma is regulation of breathing; jāla pakṣivat, roda sādhanām; just as a bird can be captured in a cage; and the bird which is captured in a cage cannot fly out; it is encased, similarly prāṇāyāma encages your mind; within your body itself; jala pakṣivat roda sādhanām; so the outgoing mind is brought to your body; so this is prāṇāyāma, the fourth step;

Then the fifth step is prathyāhāraḥ; which means withdrawal of the sense organs from the external world; the wandering senses are withdrawn; which Krishna talked about in the previous verses; and how one should withdraw all the sense organs and also the eyes should be withdrawn, it should be as though looking at the tip of the nose, all will come under prathyāhāraḥ; prathyāhāraḥ is a yogic terminology, corresponding to the damaḥ of vēdānta; vēdānta damaḥ word used, once upon a time, in tatva bodha class we used the words sama, damaḥ, uparama, titikṣa; dama means sense control; in vēdānta śāstrām; in yōga śāstrām; prathyāhāraḥ is sense control; both are synonymous;

So these three steps; asana, prāṇāyāma; and prathyāhāraḥ will come under antaraṅga sādhanāni; yama and niyama are bahiraṅga sādhanā; āsana prāṇāyāma prathyāhāraḥ, these three are antaraṅga sādhanām; can you see the difference:

why we are calling like that: because yama and niyama, are disciplines to be observed throughout the day; whereas asana prāṇāyāma prathyāhāraḥ are the disciplines not to be observed throughout the day; not now in the class you can watch the breath, etc. if you practice prāṇāyāma in the class, class will be out; just before meditation, then you only you practice, therefore these come under antharaṅga sādhanāni;

And thereafter comes, the last three stages, dhāraṇā; dhyānam; and samādhi; which stands for the dhyāna svarūpam; what is the nature of meditation if you ask, it consists of three stages, dhāraṇā, dhyāna samādhi, put together is called the dhyāna svarūpam;

and these three put together is given a technical name by Pathanjali, and that name is atma samyamaha; or mere samyamaha; in Pathanjali's yōga sūtram it is said; thrayam ekathra samyamaha; thrayam means three; which three, dhāraṇā, dhyāna, and samādhi; put together is called samyama, which is the actual meditation.

Thus of the 8 steps, first two are bahiraṅga sādhanā; and the next three are antaraṅga sādhanā, the last three are actual process of meditation. Now these three stages alone Krishna is talking about in the following verses; dhāraṇa, dhyāna samādhi stage or samyama stage is talked about.

Now the question is what are these three; dhāraṇā means turning the mind away from the world; and fixing on the object of meditation; literally dhāraṇā means focusing; fixing, holding, is called dhāraṇā; it is exactly like taking a picture, I just adjust my camera and make sure that the person who is to be photographed, falls within that particular square or circle, whatever it might be; many people do not know where the circle is; then I see that; that is called dhāraṇa; and the object of meditation will vary according to the level of student; before vēdānta śravaṇa, before the study of vēdānta, object of mediation is any iṣṭa devatha; in the yōga śāstrām, they talk about various chakrās also;

अज्ना चक्राब्ज निलया शुक्ल वर्णाः षडानना ॥

mūlādhāraṁbhujārūḍā pancavakrāti saṁstitā

ajnā cakrābja nilayā śukla varṇāḥ ṣaḍānanā ||

In Lalitha sahasranama, the dēvi svarūpam in each chakrā, one has to imagine the chakrā, a chakrā means a wheel like thing, a diagram and you have to imagine the chakrā and the deity and upon the deity we have to focus the mind; but that is not compulsory, it can be an external deity also; a photo, a picture or even sun or a flame of light, but the condition is, it should be related to God. Then alone it is called dhyānam.

There is no question of atheistic meditation; meditation means theistic only. If I have do not relation to God, it will not be called dhyānam; it will be only called an exercise in concentration; I can practice that; I can draw a picture and then a put a dot in front in the middle and I can learn to look at that winking the eye; it is an exercise in concentration; but we would not call it dhyānam; to name it dhyānam, what is the pre-requisite, it should be associated with God; That is why dhyānam is defined as सगुण ब्रह्म विषय मानस व्यपारः saguṇa brahma viṣaya mānasa vyapārah; a mental activity associated with God. If any mental activity is meditation; our worry would become meditation; so it should be a mental activity; and it should be associated with God.

From this it is very clear that removing the thoughts also we are not recommending; because if you remove all the thoughts, where is mental activity; there should be thought; there should be mental activity for meditation; the only difference is in our day to day life, mental activity is in the worldly field, whereas in meditation, mental activity is in spiritual field; there should be thought; without thought, you cannot call it meditation at all. So therefore, I focus the mind on the object which is called dhāraṇa.

Then the next stage is called dhyānam; dhyānam means retaining the mind, in the focused object; retaining the mind or the thought in the focused object is called dhyānam; dhāraṇā and dhyāna are very close; dhāraṇā is focusing, dhyāna is retaining, exactly like taking the picture, I have to focus and thereafterwards without shaking, I have to keep until I click. and this is called dhyānam; retaining; and naturally, when I try to retain my mind in the object I am not going to succeed in my attempt; the mind will slip off and then what should I do; Krishna will tell; again it will go; like a small baby, again it has a to be dragged; like that,

tatastatō niyamyaitadātmanyēva vaśamṅ nayēt || 6.26 ||

when the mind runs out, again I bring back; this tug-of-war, this effort to retain is called dhyānam; where will is involved, effort is involved, failure is involved; again bringing back the mind is involved, this whole process of retaining is called dhyānam; retaining where, in the object of meditation.

And the 8th stage is called samādhiḥ; samādhiḥ means natural absorption in the object of meditation; where the distractions have ended; in the dhyana stage, distraction comes and goes, there is a struggle, samādhi is the end of the struggle, when the mind dwells in the object of meditation; without disturbance. In Sanskrit we call it, विजातीय प्रत्यय अनन्थरीय सजतीय प्रत्यय प्रवाहः vijāṭīya pratyaya ananthariya sajatīya pratyaya pravāhaḥ; it only means the flow of similar thoughts unobstructed by similar thoughts; samādhi means the constant flow of similar thoughts. Similar thoughts means godly thoughts; it need not be the same thought, it has to be similar thoughts; every thought should be associated with God; if I am looking at the picture of God, first I may see the face or the eyes; next I may see the mouth of the Lord, even though the object of meditation has changed from the eyes to the mouth; both are connected to what; God alone. Similarly at one moment, I see the Lord as sarvajna, omniscient; another moment, I see the Lord as omnipotent; even though there is a difference between omniscience and omni potense, both are connected with the Lord only; thus you can change your thoughts; but all the thoughts should be connected to the Lord; thoughts can be changed; but it should have relationship to the Lord; and that is called what sajatīya pratyaya pravāhaḥ; similar thoughts, to the exclusion of dissimilar thoughts; dissimilar thoughts mean what; suppose you come to the Lord Guruvayoorappan and in his hand is the butter; you think of the price of the butter now and then you think of the government and all the price-hike, etc. that will come under vijāṭīya pratyaya; and you see the flute and some relation of yours playing the flute; what happened to him, what happened to his marriage plans which was going on for a long time etc; then the dhyānam is gone; from flute you have gone to another route; that will become what; the vijāṭīya pratyaya.

सरल चिन्तनम् विरलता परं ॥
ājya dhārayā srōtasā samam sarala chinṭanam viralata paraṅ ||

sarala cintanam viralatā param ||

ājya dhārayā; they give the example the flow of ghee from one vessel to another; when the ghee flows because it is viscous liquid, there is no gap in between; just as unbroken flow is there; Similarly, this is called what; samādhi; so all the three are almost the same.

And what is the central aim of these three; my mind has to dwell upon the Lord; And suppose a person has studied vādānta; and he has gone beyond saguna īśvara; he has gone beyond formed god; personal god; he has understood aham brahma asmi; then for him the object of meditation is not personal god; but the object of meditation is nirguṇam brahma; it is aham brahma asmi; there also thought is required; mind is required; thought flow is required; but what type of thought; aham brahmāsmi; and if you want, you can change also; but what type of change; aham śuddhōsmi; mukthōsmi; ananthōsmi; all are connected with what: ātma svarūpam; suddenly if it comes to aham husband asmi; if it comes, it is vijātiya; it should not come; you should never become a husband in meditation; later you can; ātma you become; similarly I am father asmi; am mother asmi; not allowed; aham suddha caitanyam asmi; cidānanda rūpaḥ asmi; śivōham, śivōham asmi; this is called vādāntic meditation.

In the first meditation; God is outside as an object; second meditation, God is non different from me; even though the object of meditation differs, the method is same; the flow of thought related to the object of meditation.

These are the eight steps of aṣṭāṅga yōga; and if a person follows these aṣṭa angas; where will it culminate; where will it culminate is the question.

In the Yōga śāstrām, they discuss this. Now, the eighth step we saw I called samādhi; and what is samādhi; I am observed in the object of mediation; Rāma, Krishna, etc. But since there is an effort involved, there is a will involved; in one corner of the mind, there is a division involved, where I see myself as the meditator and I see the Lord as an object of meditation; and therefore samādhi, the 8th step is called savikalpa samādhi; where the division between the subject and the object is pronounced; it is manifest; it is evident; like watching a movie; when you have entered the movie theatre, for some time you are aware that I am in a theatre; and it is a movie; and you are watching Jurassic park, whatever it might be, and you will find that as you get observed in the movie, you begin to forget the fact that you are sitting in a theatre; gradually you get transported to the environment of the picture; and I as a separate entity is forgotten, even the process of watching movie is forgotten; I have become one with the set up. That is called in Tamil; தன்மயமாவது taṇmayamāvatu; to become one with that; mingled with that; and how do I know that I have lost myself and I have got involved in the movie; how do I know; my reactions to the movie gets more pronounced; when the dinosaur is attacking; charging in front; you dug your head; or you try to run away; or when the hero and villain are fighting; you hit your neighbor; you are lost; subject-object-division has been temporarily resolved.

ध्यात्रु ध्याने परित्यज्य क्रमात् एकैक गोचरम् निवाद दिपवत् चित्तम् समधिर् अभिधियते ॥ dhyātrṛ dhyānē parityajya kramāt ēkaika gocaram
nivāda dipavat cittam samadhir abhidhiyatē ||

I have become one with the object of meditation; and this absorption wherein I forget the surrounding, I forget the fact that I am in a particular place, doing this job, everything you forget; மை மறந்து போகிறது mei maraṇtu pōkaratu; that self-forgetfulness is called nirvikalpa samādhi.

In the nivikalpaka samādhi also thoughts are there; meditator is there; but because of the absorption, both are not prominently felt.

वृत्तयस्त्य तता नीम ज्ञाता अव्यत्म गोचाराः स्मरणात् अनुमीयन्ते युद्धि तस्य समुत्तितात् ॥ vṛttayasty tatā nīma jnātā avyatma gocārāḥ
smaraṇāt anumīyantē yuddhi tasya samuttitāt ||

In Pañcadaśī, Vidyāraṇyā beautifully say, we never talk about a thoughtless state, even in Nirvikalpaka samādhi, thoughts are there; but they are not felt because I am so absorbed; that is why it is called mei maraṇtu pōkaratu.

This Nirvikalpaka samādhi is the consequence of the 8th steps; aṣṭāṅga yōga phalam; savikalpa samādhi is the 8th step; Nirvikalpaka samādhi we do not call it the 9th step, because it is the destination; therefore you do not call it a step; therefore 8 steps and one phalam; so yama, niyama, āsana, prāṇāyāma; prathyāhāra; dhāraṇā, dhyāna, savikalpaka samādhi.

These are the 8 steps and by travelling through them, what is the destination I reach, nirvikalpaka samādhi, is the culmination. which Krishna is talking about in this portion; he is concentrating here on dhāraṇā, dhyāna, samādhi.

And here the only difference is Krishna is not talking about meditation on personal God; Krishna is talking about ātma dhyānam here; meditation on my own nature; this we can apply for personal God also; but here the theme is not Krishna, Rāma or anyone, ātma samsthaṃ manaḥ kṛtvā na kiñcidapi cintayēt; which means I entertain only those thoughts, which reveal my nature; so self-revealing thoughts; there are several meditation mantras in our tradition:

न च श्रोत्रजिह्वे न च घ्राणनेत्रे .
न च व्योमभूमिः न तेजो न वायुः
चिदानंदरूपः शिवोऽहं शिवोऽहम् .. १..
manōbuddhyahamkāraccittāni nāham
na ca śrōtrajivhē na ca ghrāṇanētrē .
na ca vyōmabhūmiḥ na tējō na vāyuh
cidānaṃdarūpaḥ śivō:'ham śivō:'ham .. 1..

I am not the body, I am not the mind, not the sense organs; I am not even these thoughts, but I am the witness consciousness which is of the nature of cidānaṃdarūpaḥ; there are several contemplation verses, written by Āchāryas; if we do not how to utilise it; our ready made. We have got fast-food vēdāntic restaurant; readymade; and for this Krishna gives an example, the example of a steady flame; which is not disturbed by wind; when there is a flame in an enclosure, which is protected from the breeze; the flame there you might have watched, it remains without flickering; similarly in dhyānam; my mind continuously think I am asangaha; I am free from bondage; I am free from problems; all these things; this is the essence, which comes from verse No.18 onwards up to verse no.19; 18 and 19 deals with dhāraṇā, dhyāna, samādhi. The exact meaning we will see in the next class.

After discussing the general and specific preparations to be taken care of by a meditator, Krishna is coming to the topic of the actual process of meditation, viz., dhyāna svarūpam is talked about from verse No.18 onwards. And this actual process of meditation consists of three stages I said; viz., dhāraṇā, dhyāna and samādhi. Dhāraṇā, dhyāna and samādhi

Dhāraṇā is focusing the mind upon the object of meditation, which is nothing but entertaining a thought dealing with the object. When I focus a mind upon an object, focusing happens; only in the form of a relevant thought modification; there is no other focusing of the mind, other than entertaining that thought; focusing on a tree means, there is a thought for which tree is the object. In Sanskrit, we call it vrikṣa ākāra vṛtti; vrikṣa means tree; ākāra means of the form of vṛtti, means a thought modification. So when I entertain vrikṣa ākāra vṛtti, my mind is focused on vrikṣaḥ; Ghaṭākāra vṛtti is focusing on ghataḥ. Íśvara ākāra vṛtti is focusing on Íśvara; ātmākāra vṛtti is focusing on ātma. So wherever I want to focus the relevant ākāra vṛtti tat tat ākāra vṛtti eva tat tat viśaya dhāraṇā. And thereafter, trying to retain that flow of the same thought; vrikṣa ākāra vṛtti can stand for a moment alone, because every thought has got only a momentary life. No thought can continuously exist it has got a momentary existence; therefore in Dhyānam, what I try, after entertaining vrikṣa ākāra vṛtti, I try to have a next vṛtti also, vrikṣa ākāra vṛtti also; vrikṣa ākāra vṛtti; this is technically called sajātīya prathyaya pravahaḥ; the flow of similar thought; each thought dealing with the same object. This attempt is called dhyānam. As a result of this attempt, which involves effort, which involves initiative, which involves deliberation, if a person follows naturally after sometime, the mind gets into the grue of a similar thinking, sheerly by habit, which you can experience if you have attended akhanda nāma bhajana. In akhanda nāma bhajan, the same nāma is repeated. Either Hare Rāma, Hare Rāma, or Om Namasivāyaḥ; same nāma we are supposed to without break it is a_khanda; akhandam means இடை விடாமல் itai viṭāmal, without a break; if the mind repeats that Hare Rāma mantra for one hour, then the mind gets into that grue and that thought pattern is registered in the subconscious mind; like the children, winding the key for their toy car; they go on doing that; that spring action is created there. Similarly, that deliberately entertained thought, gets deeply registered in the subconscious mind, and that is why after the akandanāma, you go home at home you may be doing varieties of activities, but in the background, Hāre Rāma would be ringing, or Om namasivayaḥ; In fact, if a particular advertisement song is repeatedly played in TV, perhaps that would be more familiar than akanda nāma; where do we do akanda nāma; we do only TV nāma; then even though you do not like the tune of that music; when it repeatedly goes into your ears, you will find unknowingly you will be signing that blessed song, even when you are doing something else. The mind has the capacity to form vāsanās, impressions. Pañcadaśikāra Vidyananya says:

अद्रुष्टात् सकृदाभ्यस्य संसकार सच्चिवभवेत् ॥

vṛttinām anuvṛttistu prayatnāt pradhamaḍapi

adrusṭāt sa kṛdābhyasya saṁsakāra saccivabhavet ||

Samskāra means vāsanās; by the strength of that vāsanā; that particular thought continues. It is like for pedaling the cycle for sometime, and thereafter you do not cycle, but because of the momentum of the initial effort, the cycle continues to run for sometime. The same thing happens to the thought cycle also; once that vṛtti continues my willpower is not required; and any vṛtti which takes place without our effort is called sūkṣma vṛtti; any vṛtti that occurs in our mind, without deliberate effort is called sūkṣma vṛtti, the om namasivayaḥ mantra which goes in your head throughout the day is a sūkṣma vṛtti. sūkṣma vṛtti means what subtle thoughts; and when the subtle thought is taking place in your mind, you are not even aware of that, because you are not focusing your attention; and this is called absorption in a particular thought and in this absorption, these subject object effort division is not felt. Exactly as in deep sleep state. In sleep state, the subject-object division is no felt; but still there is a thought modification taking place in sleep. It is not a deliberately entertained thought; but it happens in the sleep; how do you know that such a thought took place in sleep, because after waking up, we say I slept well; and to have that experience, we should have gone through a thought modification, and that thought modification is called sūkṣma vṛtti and it is this sūkṣma vṛtti, subtle thought, which registers the experience in the dormant mind, and which alone we are alone activate in waking.

Now the same thing can happen with regard to any thought, including aham brahmāsmi vṛtti also; therefore after dhāraṇā and dhyānam; when the deliberate thought gets the momentum; after sometime, the will is not required; and therefore because of the sheer momentum, the thought continues and that thought is called sūkṣma vṛtti; in which the subject-object division is not manifest; subject-object division is there; but it is not manifest at that time; and this state of the sūkṣma vṛtti continuation; this state of the subtle thought continuation is called absorption or samādhi; and since the division is not manifest in that state; it is called nirvikalpa samādhi. Nirvikalpa samādhi is a state of divisionlessness; what division; what division; subject-object-instrument division; when we say that it is a state of divisionlessness, we do not mean the divisions are absent; but we say the divisions are in unmanifest form; and one of the vēdānta ācārya gives the example of water in which salt is dissolved; in that water, salt is there; because I myself have added the salt; but since it has become one with the water, experientially salt is not there; experientially means, visibly salt is not there; (you can feel it when taste) visibly salt is not there, but you know there is salt. In the same way, in absorption thoughts are three, but the thoughts are like the dissolved salt, they are there; and they are capable of doing their functions, but they are not dominantly experienced; Such a state is called Nirvikalpa samādhi. And Krishna wants to talk about dhāraṇa, dhyāna and samādhi in these verses.

With this background, we will see the meaning of verse No.18. विनियतं चित्तम् viniyataṃ cittam; the mind is first withdrawn from the external objects, and what do you mean by withdrawing the mind, is it that the mind has physically gone somewhere; and you are going to drag the mind physically. When I say I withdraw from that object, it only means the thought connected with that object is no more entertained; withdraw the mind from office; what that means: not that you have left the mind in the office, forgot to take it and came to the class; mind is with you only; then what do you mean by saying withdrawing the mind from office; when I say your mind is in office; it only means office akhāra vṛtti is entertained; the thought modification is relevant to the office and when I say withdraw the mind from office; I mean do not entertain office vṛtti.

So in ātma dhyānam; my mind has to withdraw from anātma; which means every thought connected with the anātma, every thought connected with the objective universe, I remove from my mind. So this thought of home, thought of wife, thought of money, thought of this, thought of that, anything connected with anātma and anātma consists of three things, the whole world is anātma; the body is anātma; your mind is also anātma; which means you should never entertain any thought connected with the world connected with the body, connected with the mind; You should not think these three. If you remove these three anātma akhara vṛtti; it is called cittam viniyataṃ; viniyataṃ means restrained; withdrawn, pulled back with help.

How does it take place; सर्वकामेभ्यो निःस्पृहः sarvakāmēbhyaḥ niḥspr̥haḥ; only by developing detachment from anātma; because your thought is always directed towards the object of attachment. If you are attached to a particular person the most, then that person hovers in your mind all the time; if it is son-attachment, son-akhara vṛtti; anywhere you go; even if you go to Badrinath; whatever it is; therefore, your thought is governed by your rāgaḥ and dveṣaḥ; and sarvakāmēbhyaḥ niḥspr̥haḥ; having detached from every object, kāmaḥ means; object of attachment; that is why meditation requires detachment. Sitting for meditation with attachment will be only sitting, but everything else except meditation will take place; therefore sarvakāmēbhyaḥ niḥspr̥haḥ san, having detached from the object, do not ask me how to get detachment; you are supposed to be experts in that; because I have already dealt with that topic before and if you have not known that, in some other context, I will explain; because this is not the place of that topic; I take for granted that you know how to detach; Krishna will be talking many times in the Gītā, how to do that; therefore sarvakāmēbhyaḥ niḥspr̥haḥ san; cittam viniyataṃ bhavathi.

And when the mind is rid of anātma akhāra vṛtti; now the mind is free; it is just like when you are holding something in your hand; you cannot hold another thing; you are keeping one book and I want to give you another big book; ~ if it is small, you can keep it also ~ but it is another big book, what will you do; you keep the earlier book down; and your hand is free; then you can take another book; similarly when the mind is pre-occupied with the objective world, how can that mind be available for ātma dhyānam; and therefore, withdraw the mind from the world and then what should you do; आमानि एव अवतिष्ठते ātmani ēva avatiṣṭati; and the mind abides in ātma; the mind dwells in ātma.

What do you mean by mind dwelling in ātma; so you should not take it in the physical sense; it is just like you know, an object is abiding or is located on the table; fine; because now this is not on the table; when it is placed on the table, you can say it is abiding, located on the table.

Now we talk about mind abiding in ātma; what do we mean; can you say mind is located somewhere; ātma is located here, you pull the mind and then fix it with the ātma using fevicol; Is it a physical job of fixing the mind upon the ātma? It is never possible because ātma being the all-pervading consciousness, mind is never away from ātma; there is no question of mind coming to ātma; because the entire creation is resting in ātma alone; because ātma is defined as space like consciousness which is all-pervading; therefore the mind can never go out of ātma; if the mind can go out of ātma; you can fix it back to ātma; so the question is if the mind cannot go out of ātma; what do you mean by mind-abiding in ātma; remember, whenever we talk about mind dwelling on something, it only means you have a thought corresponding to that object; if my mind dwells on Badrinath, it means I have thoughts related to Badrinath; therefore if the mind has to abide in ātma; what does it mean; the mind should entertain the thought modification; which thought is associated with what; ātma. So ātma nishta nāma, ātmākāra vṛttihi ēva.

And that is why I repeatedly say Vēdāntic meditation is not thoughtlessness; yogic meditation is thoughtlessness; the yōga philosophy talks about the culmination of meditation as a thoughtless state; whereas in Vēdānta; we do not accept or approve of that; it is not the thoughtless is not possible; but it is of no use; except that mind gets relaxation; whether your mind gets relaxation or not; others get relaxation, when you sit in meditation; therefore, thoughtlessness, we do not give much importance; we give importance to thought and what type of thought, thought centered on ātma; and what are they like; I am the conscious principle, by which the world is known; by which the body is known, by which the mind is known and by which even the thought this known; and not only the thought is known; even the thoughtless state is known by the awareness alone; and this awareness or consciousness which is the witness of the thoughtful mind; as well as the thoughtless mind; I am. This itself is a form of thought; OK; what is the form of thought; the witness of the thoughtful and thoughtless mind; I am; this is one form of thought I entertain; and like that several thoughts possible. These thoughts arise in consciousness; but they cannot disturb the consciousness; like my hand moving in the light; but the light is not disturbed by the hand; the light illumines the hand; but light is not disturbed; similarly, I the consciousness illumine the thought, witness the thoughts, but the thought themselves do not disturb me; this is called asaṅgātvam. So अहम् असङ्गा aham asaṅgāḥ; is one form of thought; aham sakṣi is another form of thought; and the thoughts arrive and depart, but I never arrive and depart, exactly like the people enter the hall, the light illumines; all the people vacate the hall, the empty hall is illumined by the light; people come and go; hall gets filled up and vacated; but the light illumines the full hall, as well as vacated hall; our mind is like the hall; the thoughts are like the people, and consciousness is like the light; "I" never come. no dedi nasthameka samvidesha svayamprabha. These are all what now I have been talking; and you have been listening and as even you listen your mind should have entertained relevant thought and all those thoughts are dealing with what; ātma or anātma. All the thoughts that you have been entertaining is dealing with ātma; this is called akanda akhāra vṛtti; akanda akāra vṛtti means any thought pattern connected with the consciousness sākṣi.

And entertaining this thought pattern, is called ātmani avasthānam; this is called dwelling in ātma; abiding in ātma; not thoughtlessness; but the thought pattern which is presented now, you can have infinite thought pattern; like that, aham ēkahaḥ; aham asaṅgāḥ; aham rūpa rahitaḥ; I am formless, I illumine the formed body, but myself am formless, like the light illumines the formed hand, but the light itself is formless, thus aham arūpaḥ, aham sakṣi, aham asaṅgāḥ, aham nityaḥ; aham śuddhaḥ; All these are called ātma dhyānam;

Therefore Krishna says आत्मन्येवावतिष्ठते ātmanyēvāviṣṭhatē; the mind abides in ātma, entertaining the relevant thoughts and that state is called युक्त इत्युच्यते yukta ityucyatē; and that is called yōgaḥ; and that is called samādhiḥ; and that is called absorption; And as I said in the last class; that samādhi itself is divided into two; when effort is involved it is called savikalpa samādhi; because ego is dominant; effort means individuality is pronounced; and once the effort is entertained for some time, and when it becomes effortless process, like pedaling the cycle; first two minutes, effort, and then you can see that every cyclist is in nivikalpaka samādhi; so yukta ityucyatē; yukta means absorbed.

And what is the state of mind like, an example is given in the next verse.

यथा दीपो निवातस्थः नेङ्गते सोपमा स्मृता । योगिनां यतचित्तस्य युञ्जतो योगमात्मनः ॥ ६.१९ ॥
yathā dīpō nivāstathō nēṅgatē sōpamā smṛtā |
yōginō yatacittasya yuñjatō yōgamātmanah | | 6.19 | |

सा उपमा sā upamā The following simile स्मृता smṛtā is mentioned यतचित्तस्य yatacittasya for the restrained mind योगिनः yoginah of a yogi युञ्जतः yujjatah who is practising, योगम् आत्मनः yōgam ātmanah dhyana yōga of the ātma यथा yathā it is like दीपः dīpah a lamp निवातस्थः nivāstathah in a windless spot न ईङ्गते na iṅgate (which) does not flicker

19. The following simile is mentioned for the restrained mind of a Yogi who is practising dhyana yōga of the Ātma – (it is) like a lamp in a windless spot (which) does not flicker.

What is the example? Suppose a lamp is lighted; either a candle light or any lamp not the electric light; but the flame; when the lamp is kept in the open place, the flame is on, but the flame flickers because of the disturbing breeze; and in which direction the flame will go will depend upon the breeze; sometimes in this direction; sometimes in that direction. And flickering lamp is an unprotected lamp which is disturbed by external breeze. In meditation also, our thought is like flame; and when we are entertaining that thought; even though I think of that object of meditation; I am not allowed to retain that thought; because within moments, some other thought comes; and sometimes we do not even know that we have drifted away; it goes away without our knowledge; and you have been meditating upon next year's plans. if I do that, they will do that, then what will I do; what then, how to. etc.; he will get job; she will be married; and then I can think of attending the camp; this is the dhyānam; and the beauty is I am not even aware, somebody rings the bell and then I remember, I am supposed to be meditating; so this is called the flickering mind;

because of the external influence and when the mind is protected; what happens; it is like protecting the lamp from the breeze; by providing a glass enclosure; and when such an enclosure is there to protect the flame from breeze, then the flame is how; steady flame like a one stick it stays there; In fact, it is very interesting to watch that flame;

So Krishna says that this steady flame can be taken as an example for Nirvikalpaka samādhi; the flame is corresponding to the thought, which thought, akandākāra vṛtti, ātma thought, and the steadiness of the flame indicate that my ātmākāra vṛtti is not disturbed by the anākāra vṛtti.

Now the question is: in the case of the flame, I can provide glass enclosure. Now in the case of the mind, what enclosure I will provide; suppose I provide a glass enclosure; what will happen; mind cannot be stopped by the glass case; mind being a subtle instrument, you require another type of enclosure which is called vairāgyam and bhakthi; bhakthi and vairāgyam are the enclosures.

And what do you mean by bhakthi and vairāgyam; any way I should not sidetracked; even though it is not in this verse and Krishna is going to deal with that latter; I will just give a clue; Krishna discusses this later. abhyāsēna tu kauntēya vairāgyēṇa ca gṛhyatē (6.35).

All our worries are because we cannot face the future; all our worries are because we cannot face the future and two types of future, the actual future and the imaginary future; in fact imaginary future threatens more than the actual; suppose I fall sick; now I am fat and well; what will happen if I fall sick and my son is in America; thus the worry of future is the cause of disturbance; therefore surrender to the Lord.

And the then second disturbance is attachment; if I do not worry about myself; I worry about my family members; what will happen to them; and how can I help them; so whenever such thought comes, you tell yourselves they will be better off, without me; OK; I think that I am going to improve their lot; often they are not interested in our health; and in the name of interest, you only create more problem; remember, they will be taken care of by God; more about that we will see later.

Thus by bhakthi-vairāgya enclosure, we have to protect the mind. Therefore Krishna says: निवातस्थः दीपः यथा nivāsthaḥ dīpaḥ yathā; a lamp kept in a protected place, secure place, remains unflickering; न ईङ्गते na iṅgate; remains without a flicker; सा उपमा स्मृता sa upama smṛtā; this flickerless flame is the example; is the illustration; is the model; is the example; for what; यतचित्तस्य yatacittasya, example for the restrained mind; well-directed mind, well-disciplined mind;

And what is that disciplined mind doing; ātmanaḥ yōgam युञ्जतः yuñjataḥ; which is practising ātma dhyānam; yōgam means dhyānam; ātmanaha dhyānam; ātma dhyānam; yuñjataḥ means practising; which is an adjective to the mind; so unflickering flame is an example for the restrained-mind; which mind is engaged in ātma dhyānam; and this is called samādhi; so yuñjataḥ yōgam ātmanaḥ.

Thus dhyāna svarūpam was talked about in these two verses and now in the following verses 20 to 23, Krishna talks about the culmination of dhyānam; which he called Nirvikalpaka samādhi; that is going to be defined in the following ślōkās; seven definitions or features are to be given for nirvikalpaka samādhi; which is the consequence of aṣṭāṅga yōgaḥ;

And remember this Nirvikalpaka samādhi is possible in any field; there is no mystery involved in it; there is no mysticism involved in it; because Nirvikalpaka samādhi or absorption is a natural faculty we all have; in fact, we had this in full measure when we were babies. Have you seen the babies; when they see the ant or cockroach and the baby wants to catch that, you try to distract baby in any way, nothing will happen; even if you show the hand in between also; no flicker; no iṅgate; the child has got only that; and it is a faculty we lost in the name of growing; and even now rarely that happens; generally it happens when we worry; that is called worry-samādhi; absorbed in worry; even after coming to the class; How do you know Swamiji you ask: you are looking at the carpet itself and sitting, without listening to the lecture; that is how you know that the student has lost the class; starring at an object, they are gone; today's class is gone, I understand whether they understand it or not; generally it happens, in worry; to read an absorbing book. That means it takes your attention; and when you are watching the one day match; and at the last ball and one run and the last wicket; and India playing against Pakistan; then you know sitting at the edge of the table and you are glued to TV and anybody calls you, you get wild; you know what is it; Nirvikalpaka samādhi.

What I want to say do not attach any mysticism or mystery to that, it is a faculty which we have and which can be directed in any field; in Vēdāntic meditation, we are using that to dwell upon my own nature; that I am not the body, not the mind, I am their witness; and this nirvikalpaka samādhī is going to be given seven definitions in the following verses; those definitions we will in the next class.

अस्मद् आचार्य पर्यन्ताम् वन्दे गुरु परम्पराम्
sadāśiva samārambhāṁ śaṅkarācāryamadhyamām
asmad ācārya paryantām vandē guru paramparām

Om

Lord Krishna has been talking about the v̄dāntic meditation; closely following the stages of meditation given in the aṣṭāṅga yōga of Patanjali; and now he is discussing the actual process of meditation and its culmination. And as I said in the last class, the culmination of meditation is mental absorption in the object of meditation; and mental absorption is defined as the flow of the same thought; or similar thought. The flow of similar thought is called vijātiya pratyaya pravāhaḥ; sajātiya means similar, prathyaya means thought, pravāhaḥ means flow. In v̄dāntic meditation, the flow of thought should be dealing with the very nature of ātma; and ātma has got different features as we saw in the previous chapters, you can change the thought from one feature of ātma to another feature of ātma; but you should not change from ātma to any other object. We have got a boundary and what is the boundary; various features of the ātma alone should be mediated upon. That is ātma chaitanya svarūpaḥ; ātma nityaḥ; ātma ēkaḥ; ātma sarvagathaḥ. These different features of ātma, Krishna has already discussed in the second chapter, in the 4th chapter, and in the 5th chapter; especially in the 2nd chapter, from verse No.12 to 25 Krishna has already discussed and I have to bring to my mind what I have heard from my guru.

And that is why we should remember v̄dāntic meditation is impossible without studying v̄dānta under a guru. A non-v̄dāntic student cannot practice ātma dhyānam. A non-v̄dāntic student cannot practice ātma dhyānam; he should have studied v̄dānta under the guidance of a guru for at least some length of time; and that is why Krishna himself is introducing v̄dāntic meditation after five chapters of teaching. Suppose a person is a non-v̄dāntic student; he can practice other forms of meditation. Like mental pūja to the Lord; mental chanting of various prayers; they are called upāsana dhyānam, I will talk about this at the end of this chapter and we will practice some meditations also; we will have guided meditation sessions after completing this class. So a non-vēdāntic student cannot practice other different forms of meditation; but ātma dhyānam can be practiced by only a vēdāntic student and a vēdāntic student has learned the different features of ātma from the guru; and guru has pointed out how ātma is the nature of consciousness; nitya, satyaḥ; sarvagataḥ; asaṅgāḥ; ēkaḥ, akartā; nirvikaraḥ; abōktā; all these he has heard and he is supposed to have understood. And if he has not understood, he should not practice ātma dhyānam, he should again listen to the guru, until he is able to grasp the different features of ātma and during mediation, his aim is whatever he has grasped from the teacher that he has to relive; it is like going to Badrinath; you enjoyed the Himalayan vision beautifully; you come back to Madras and during summer, when it is too hot; you imagine the snow peaks of Badrinath. At least let there be coolness in the mind in madras when it is 41 degrees. Now you can relive Badrinath; you can recollect that experience only if you have visited Badrinath.

And therefore meditation is not thinking of a new thing, but meditation is recollecting whatever we have collected earlier. Therefore this vēdāntic student mentally goes back to the class; vēdānta sṛvaṇam; and what all he has heard, he has to bring to the mind; and he has to see that I am the witness of my thoughts; and I am the nature of changeless consciousness and I am not affected by the type of thoughts; these are all different features and when my mind continually dwells on that, it is called sajātīya pratyaya pravāhaḥ. And without distracted by vijātīya prathyayaḥ; vijātīya prathyaya means a dissimilar thought. And this sajātīya prathyaya pravaḥ; this flow of thought alone, gradually becomes stronger and stronger; and more and more effortless; so there is a gradation in my involvement in that thought. Just as when you think of your future programme; then you just think of that; and sometimes you totally get absorbed in that thought; the same thing we are going to employ in vēdāntic field; and since this commitment or involvement gradually observes me, the yōga śāstric puts in three grades.

In the class also when you come, first few minutes you are not in the class; seeing this side and seeing whoever has come and whoever has not come and whether your friend has come; that is called collecting the mind; it is a beautiful expression; collecting the mind, which is scattered in the bus-stop. one portion is in the bus stop; one portion in the flyover; some portion in the office; and some portion in the inauguration of the other flyover; you will have to forcibly bring all that scattered thoughts and by the time you collect all that, for some people it takes twenty minutes; So this collection of the mind leads to gradual absorption and therefore it is presented in the dhāraṇā stage; where there is attempt; dhyāna stage is success is coming and samadhi stage, when I am fully absorbed and there also I said savikalpa samādhi, I am absorbed deliberately, and then Nirvikalpaka samādhi, I am absorbed spontaneously in which my will power is not required.

When will is required; there is savikalpa; when the will is not required; it is nirvikalpa. And this nirvikalpaka samādhi is supposed to be the culmination of the aṣṭāṅga yōgaḥ; and therefore the 8 stages are called aṅga; and the nirvikalpaka samādhi is called aṅgi; the 9th one is aṅgi, the destination; the eight ones are the aṅgās, the stepping stones; and Krishna wants to define that samādhi in these verses beginning from 20 to 23, 7 definitions of samādhi or culmination or yōga phalam; aṣṭāṅga yōga phalam. So what are those we will see; verse No.20.

यत्र चैवात्मनात्मानम् पश्यन्नात्मनि तुष्यति ॥ ६.२० ॥

yatrōparamatē cittam niruddham yōgasevayā |

yatra caiva'tmanātmānam paśyannātmani tuṣyati | | 6.20 | |

यत्र yatra (one should know that to be samadhi) wherein चित्तम् cittam the mind, निरुद्धम् nirūddham restrained योगसेवया yōgasevayā by the practice of meditation उपरमते uparamatē quietens च यत्र एव ca yatra eva and wherein पश्यन् paśyan one perceives आत्मानम् ātmānam the Ātma आत्मना ātmanā with the (pure) mind तुष्यति tuṣyati and rejoices आत्मनि ātmani in the Ātma

20. (One should know that to be Samadhi) wherein the mind, restrained by the practice of meditation, quietens and wherein one perceives the Ātma with the (pure) mind and rejoices in the Ātma.

So in this verse, two definitions are given. What is the first definition; citta uparamaṇam; total tranquility of mind; total relaxation of mind can be defined as samādhi. That is why the very word samādhi is given different Sanskrit derivations; and one derivation given is samā dheehi yasmin saha; samādhi; samā means equanimous; tranquil, like a waveless lake. Imagine a lake when there is no breeze outside; the lake is without even a ripple; Kalidāsa in one of his literature when he wants to talk about a calm lake, he compares it to the mind of a jñani. Normally we compare the other way round; because in those days jñānis were plenty; and available for comparison. Now jñānis are not there; and therefore you have to use other comparison. mānasa sarovar; that is supposed to be calm vast, blue and beautiful and cool lake; like what; like the mind of a jñani. Therefore what is the first definition; sama dhee, dhee mind; sama means tranquil; that state in which the mind is tranquil; this is one derivation; there is another derivation; I will tell that; remember this derivation in this context;

And how is the mind tranquillised; not by using tranquillisers; that is not the method; and by this special exercise; what is the exercise; चित्तम् निरुद्धं cittaṁ niruddhaṁ; the mind is withdrawn from the entire anātma prapañca; withdrawn from the world; withdrawn from relationship; withdrawn from all the worldly roles; like husband status; wife status; father status; mother status; each role I play has a set of problems; set of joys is also there; I am not questioning it; do not say Swamiji, only problems you are telling; but in meditation, problems only come.

Therefore every role has got set of attendant problems; therefore, the role has to role away. That is why it is called role. So do not be anyone of them. So this is called withdrawing.

न बंधुर्न मित्रं गुरुर्नैव शिष्यः

na mē mṛtyuśaṅkā na mē jātibhēdaḥ

pitā naiva mē naiva mātā na janma .

na baṁdhurna mitraṁ gururnaiva śiṣyaḥ

cidānaṁdarūpaḥ śivō:'haṁ śivō:'ham .. 5..

No bandhur; no mitraṁ; no father; no mother; temporarily; do not get frightened; during meditation, you come out of that; that is called nirōdaḥ; withdrawing; withholding; and niruddhaṁ cittaṁ;

How do you do that; yōga sēvaya; by practising the aṣṭāṅga yōga method; because aṣṭāṅga yōga is specially designed for this purpose. Just like they talk about the chair; specially designed chair for your back; everything they talk about special design; aṣṭāṅga yōga is specially designed; therefore योगसेवया yōgasēvayā; seva means what; do not think of eating; here sēva means abhyasa practice; by the practice of the other five aṅgās; yama, niyama, yōga sēva means, yama, niyama, āsana, praṇāyāma, prathyāhāra sevaya;

and these five stages are called antharaṅga, bahiraṅga sādhanānis, by practicing that, cittam niruddham, the restrained mind becomes what; उपरमते uparamate; remains calm; it is in deep silence. it enjoys inner silence. And this tranquility born out of mental restraint is the first definition. In Sanskrit, we will use the word, chitta uparamaṇam. uparamaṇam, abidance, tranquility; cittam means mind. Then what is the second definition of samādhi; look at the second line अत्मानम् पश्यन् ātmānam paśyan.

Now silencing the mind is not our aim; if you only silence the mind; you will get temporary tranquility; you will not get vēdāntic tranquility. Remember we are talking about vēdāntic meditation; practising silence will not become vēdāntic meditation; and therefore what is more important is having silenced the mind, in the silent mind, we have to bring the vēdāntic teaching. In the silent mind; we have to bring the vēdāntic teaching.

न च श्रोत्रजिह्वे न च घ्राणनेत्रे .
न च व्योमभूमिः न तेजो न वायुः
चिदानंदरूपः शिवोऽहं शिवोऽहम् .. १..

manōbuddhyahamkāracittāni nāham
na ca śrōtrajivhē na ca ghrāṇanētrē .
na ca vyōmabhūmiḥ na tējō na vāyuh
cidānamdarūpaḥ śivō:'ham śivō:'ham .. 1..

You have to know the meaning of this and tell or else it will be simple parayanam. I have to see the meaning of this mantra; because this mantra says aham sivaḥ asmi; maṅgala svarūpaḥ asmi; pūrṇa svarūpaḥ asmi; ānanda svarūpaḥ asmi; which means that the mind is not a passive mind, the mind has got what thought, what type of thought, vēdāntic thoughts are to be entertained; which is called sajātiya prathyaya pravāhaḥ.

And this alone Krishna says, ātmanam paśyan; one should see the ātma; one should see the ātma; as revealed by the guru, during the sṛvaṇam; during the sṛvaṇam of vēdānta; one should see the ātma; one should see the ātma; how as revealed by the guru and śāstra, at the time of sṛvaṇam. That is why I am repeatedly emphasising without vēdānta sṛvaṇam; vēdānta dhyānam is not possible; without vēdānta sṛvaṇam; vēdānta dhyānam is not possible; suppose a person says I want to meditate on ātma; then I ask him what is ātma; he says I do not know; how can you meditate on something which you do not know; without knowing the ātma if you meditate; it will be imagination, you will dwell upon varieties of your whimsical imagination; it will not called vēdāntic meditation; vēdāntic meditation presupposes vēdāntic study; and therefore ātmanam paśyan; seeing the ātma;

Where does he see the ātma; ātmani; in his mind he has to see the ātma; which means he has to recollect the teaching. If during sṛvaṇam, the video cassette recorder is functioning, VCR; during dhyānam what is functioning, VCP. Suppose without recording anything, you play; what will come; you play; nothing will come; silence only will come; therefore VCP can function only if VCR has been utilised; Now when you are listening what is functioning; hopefully; VCR. You are recording, registering and when you go home and bring the teaching, to your mind, what are you practising; vēdāntic meditation; you can do that; with open or closed eyes; I do not care how you do it; but you bring out. Like the cow chewing the cud.

And therefore ātmanam; so the ātmanam, means the ātma; ātmani means the mind; ātmanam refers to Self and ātmani refers to the mind; and ātmana; (ātmanamaya; do not get confused) there is a third word आत्मना ātmanā, means with the help of the mind itself; because thought is involved; without vēdāntic thoughts, there is no vēdāntic meditation. Therefore with the help of the mind, one should see the ātma in the mind itself.

And Ātma is in the mind, in what form; resides in the mind as the witness of your thoughts; therefore sākṣi caitanya rūpeṇa antakaraṇe ātmanam, antakaraṇeṇa paśyati. So what is the second definition of samādhi; ātma darśanam.

And what is the advantage of this; by recollecting the sṛvaṇam; what benefit I get; if you ask; suppose you have got a clock; during the day time the clock is ticking; certainly ticking; but do you notice that ticking sound; you do not; why, because there are so many other sounds overwhelming the ticking sound; and when you go to bed, or when you sit in meditation; and you have closed your room, and all the other sounds are gone; what happens, the tickling of the clock, appears to be more prominent. Now can I say, the ticking of clock has become prominent. No; because the ticking is of the same intensity. It is not that in the night the ticking sound is more and during day time is ticking sound is less; ticking sound is uniform during day and night; but during the day time that sound is overpowered by disturbance, but during the night, the sound is prominently felt. Similarly, in nidhidhyāsanam, the advantage is I have removed all the other noises from the mind. the noises generated by the father I; each worry is a mental noise; remember each worry is a mental noise; having removed all the worries, when I bring the teaching, the teaching has got more impact. In a silent mind, the teaching has got greater impact; and therefore it becomes a stronger and stronger. To give another example; if it is a Pournami day; by 5.30 or 6 itself full moon will be visible in the sky. but if you have to see the full moon you have to pay attention; you have to look at the sky and you have to look for the full moon; because it is not very bright; and the moon becomes brighter and brighter and brighter and on a full moon day, during midnight, you get up and go outside, you need not look for the full moon, in fact, you get the full impact of the full moon. Now can I say the moon has become brighter during the night; really speaking; the brightness of the moon remains the remain; but in the evening; the brightness is overpowered by the daylight; and as the daylight recedes the obstacles recedes; then the moon light becomes powerful and powerful;

Similarly, during sṛvaṇam itself; knowledge does take place; every student gets the teaching, during sṛvaṇam itself. In nidhidhyāsanam; he brings the same teaching in a silent mind; in a withdrawn mind, then the teaching becomes more and more powerful; jñānam becomes jñāna niṣṭa; It is strongly registered; and therefore ātmani, ātmānam, ātmana paśyati; therefore the second definition can be called ātma darśanam; what is the first definition; citta upamaṇam; second definition is ātma darśanam.

And because of this ātma darśanam, what is the benefit that I enjoy; thusyati; one feels the joy of pūrṇatvam; one feels one owns up the joy of pūrnatvam when I am invoking my worldly personality, I am always apūrṇaha; as the father I always feel that I have not done everything I ought to have done; till the second son becomes alright; I will not have nimmathi; some children will always be doing some mischief; he has got some complaint or the other, the only complaintless personality is my ātma svarupam; and when I invoke my ātma svarūpam; I am invoking my pūrnatvam; and when I invoke my pūrṇatvam; aham ātman ēva ātmana thustha; so therefore, ātma darśanam is the second definition; or ātmadarśane janya thuṣṭi also can be taken.

सुखमात्यन्तिकं यत्तद् बुद्धिग्राह्यमतीन्द्रियम् । वेत्ति यत्र न चैवायं स्थितश्चलति तत्त्वतः ॥२१॥

sukhamātyantikam yattad-buddhigrāhyamatīndriyam |
vētti yatra na caivāyaṁ sthitaścalati tattvataḥ | | 21 | |

यत्र वेत्ति yatra vetti (One should know that to be samadhi) wherein one appreciates तद् आत्यन्तिकं सुखम् tad ātyantikam sukham that limitless ananda यद् अतीन्द्रियम् yad atindriyam which is beyond sense-organs बुद्धिग्राह्यम् buddhigrāhyam and which is grasped by the intellect च एव स्थितः ca eva sthitaḥ and remaining (in which) अयं न चलति ayam na calati one does not slip तत्त्वतः tattvataḥ from (his) true nature

21. (one should know that to be Samadhi) wherein one appreciates that limitless ananda which is beyond sense organs and which is grasped by the intellect, and remaining (in which) one does not slip from (his) true nature.

In this verse, two more definitions are given; of the total 7 definitions, two are over; the next two comes in this slōkā; so that is the third definition; ātyantikam sukham; the highest ānanda, one owns up; the highest ānanda; ātyantikam means limiless; sukham means ānanda, ānanda means fulfilment, which is totally different from the experiential sense pleasures; all the experiential sense pleasures are finite; in terms of time, in terms of place, in terms of quality; qualitatively they are finite; and spacially and timewise. The evident finitude, is timewise finitude; every experiential pleasure is time bound. That is why people always say that day I had greatest joy; and they use the past tense; indicating what; then it was when I say, now it is not there; I had ecstatic bliss; I was blissed out; blissed and that he was out; later bliss was also out; any experiential pleasure is time bound, any sense pleasure is also time bound; and not only bound by time, and also limited by quality; it can be always be improved; if it is music you say that that day he sang very well but it was never equal to that kutcheri that day; that day was an inspired mood; therefore it was out of world; and thereafter I have been trying to capture that mood; I have never been able. Qualitatively gradation will be there in experiential pleasure; whereas this ānanda; is totally different ananda; it does not come under experiential pleasure at all. It is an ātyantikam sukham; the limitless ānanda, which is different from experiential pleasure. If it is an ānanda obtaining in samādhi only; then only it will be limited pleasure; suppose if a person says I get the highest pleasure in samādhi; it will be limited or limitless; in samādhi; out of samādhi problem; that is why somebody wrote; in samādhi, I had the greatest bliss; having enjoyed the bliss; when I came out, I felt that the whole life is a pain and it was like hundreds scorpions stinging my body; who wants that samādhi; if later I am going to suffer scorpion stings; who wants that:

So we are not talking about experiential pleasure, but what is it; Krishna says; बुद्धिग्राह्यम् buddhigrāhyam; it is an ānanda born of knowledge, buddhi means what; knowledge or intellect; it is an ānanda, born of wisdom; born of knowledge; what knowledge; I am pūrṇaḥ; I was pūrṇaḥ; and I will ever be pūrṇaḥ; during the meditation, I am pūrṇaḥ; then when I get, apūrṇaḥ; then trouble; after coming out also pūrṇamadaḥ pūrṇamidaḥ pūrṇātpūrṇamudacyate pūrṇasya pūrṇamādāya pūrṇamevāvaśiṣyate: Do not get up and go; so pūrṇam alone; so therefore ānanda born of knowledge is permanent; because knowledge can never be displaced by time; knowledge can never be displaced by any worldly experience; you have got the knowledge 2+2 is equal to four; so when you are happy or when you are unhappy. When you are happy, 2+2 is equal to four and when you are unhappy 2+2 is equal to 4 only. So any experience cannot displace knowledge; therefore if my ānanda comes from wisdom; that knowledge can never be shaken; and it is that pūrṇatvam; fulfilment; sense of fulfilment born of wisdom is called ātyantikam sukham; so which is buddhi grahyam; and therefore only अतिन्द्रियम् atindriyam; atindriyam means what it is beyond sense pleasures; because sense pleasures are invariably finite.

and therefore the third definition of samādhi is what; ātyantika sukham; owned up; वेत्ति vētti; in the second line, the verb vethi is there; that verb has to be connected to the first line; that is why Krishna does not use the word, experiences pleasures.

Krishna uses the word, he knows the pleasure, indicating the ānanda is in the form of knowledge or wisdom.

Then comes the fourth definition in the second line, यत्र अयं स्थितः न तत्त्वतः चलति yatra āyaṁ sthitaḥ na tattvataḥ calati. Remaining in this; in this absorption; or abiding in this ātma; one does not deviate into anātma; because he has trained to abide in the ātma; like a person who learns cycling; you might have learned during your younger days; in the football when the game is not going on; in the empty football ground you learn; there is nothing to distract you; and the one who helps you learn cycling is behind you catching; therefore he also gives the rules and regulations; how to hold the handle bar and how look straight and how to sit straight; samam karya siro greevam; and then you observe all the rules and comfortably fall; you fall holding on to the cycle, body and neck you fall; with the all the attention you fall. This you have to practice for some days; and you become then what happens you become cycle niṣṭā; once you have become cycle niṣṭa; you take the beach road, when there is no traffic; and then gradually you go to the other street; and then you reach a stage when you can go through govindappan naicken street; that terrible street in North Madras; there you get accidents even walking and you can find people driving and with hand in handle bar and holding some many things in the hand and talking to the friend; parallel driving it is called; they go; and then let be auto-rickshaw, baby, cycle rickshaw; let the heaven come down; they will not fall; this is called niṣṭa; a person who practices this, he will never get out of this knowledge, even during intense transactions in life; in the worst crisis and any time. This is called tatva niṣṭa. Therefore tattvataḥ; tattva here means what ātma; tattvam means ātma; calati means devitate; na calati; one does not deviate from his higher nature. In fact, thereafter, the life becomes a drama; just as a person plays a different roles in a drama; he does not forget what he is in his green room; and suppose he is identified with the drama; what to do; we have to take him to the green room and tell him that you are not the beggar; you are only the playing the role of the beggar; at the end of the drama, you are going to get more money also. So he has to go to green room often to remind him that I am none of these roles; going to green room is called nidhidhyāsanam. And how long he has to go; until he can play the role without losing or forgetting his real nature. In the fifth chapter, we saw it; paśyañśṛṅvansprṣāñjighrannaśnaṅgacchansvapanśvasan; whatever be the transaction, he does not lose sight of his centre of gravity. And yatra sthitaḥ san, remaining in which samādhi, one does not thereafter deviate from the true nature; and if during transactions, one does not deviate; it is called sahaja samādhi. When I deliberate practice that, it is samādhi; when effortlessly I am in that; like that cyclist; cyclist is in what; sahaja samādhi. OK. Every cyclist who is driving on the road without even paying attention to his cycle, he is in sahaja samādhi with regard to what: the centre of gravity of cycle. Here jnani is in the centre of gravity of himself; therefore the fourth definition is what tattva niṣṭā; or stitaprajña; to remind you of the second chapter.

यस्मिंस्थितो न दुःखेन गुरुणापि विचाल्यते ॥२२॥

yaṁ labdhvā cāparaṁ lābhaṁ manyatē nādhikaṁ tataḥ |

yasmin sthitō na duḥkhēna guruṇā'pi vicālyatē | | 22 | |

लब्ध्वा यं च labdhvā yaṁ ca (one should know that to be samadhi) attaining which न मन्यते na manyate one does not consider अपरं लाभम् aparaṁ lābham any other attainment अधिकं ततः adhikaṁ tataḥ to be superior to that स्थितः यस्मिन् न विचाल्यते sthitaḥ yasmin (and), remaining in which न विचाल्यते na vichalyate –one is not shaken अपि गुरुणा दुःखेन api guruṇā duḥkhena even by great calamity

22. (One should know that to be Samadhi) attaining which one does not consider any other attainment to be superior to that and remaining in which one is not shaken even by great calamity.

In this Krishna gives two more definitions. When a person owns up this poornatvam of the ātma; I am pūrṇaḥ; I do not lack anything in life; I do not need anything in life to be complete; குறை ஒன்றும் இல்லை; நிறைவு நன்னா இருக்கு; குறை இல்லை; so நிறை இருக்கு; kurai ondrum illai; niravu nanna irukku; so kurai illai, nirai irukku. When I own up that pūrṇatvam; thereafter I do not miss anything in life; and since I do not miss anything in life; whatever I enjoy because of my pūṇyam, they all will become a luxury in life. I do not need any one of them; when I do not need and I have got that; that is it called luxury; what is the definition of luxury; luxury is that which you enjoy when you have; and which you do not miss when you do not have; Isn't it.

Luxury is that which you thoroughly enjoy when available; and you do not miss when it is not available.

And what is need; opposite of luxury is what: need; what is need; need is that which you do not recognise when it is there; and which you very badly miss when it is not there. When you do not have a car at all; and you are used to auto, bus, all transport; and one day somebody gives a lift; you thoroughly enjoy; who will enjoy; you know next day Natarāja service only; walking or bus or whatever it may be but you do not miss the car, you are used to whatever that transport is; and one day it comes it is luxury; somehow you regularly come; from your grandfathers' time itself you are used to it; now you never look the car as luxury at all; it is such a necessity when it is around, you do not feel you are having a car; and when it is not there; you very very badly miss it; this is the difference between luxury and need; luxury is that whose presence you enjoy; whose absence, you do not miss; need is that whose presence you do not recognise, whose absence you very badly feel.

For a jñāni, every thing in life is luxury; every blessed thing in life is luxury; therefore when they are around, he will thoroughly enjoy and when they are not; he is not going to miss it.

Dayanand swami talks about the sanyāsis in Rishikesh; Sanyāsis in Rishikesh live on bhikṣa only and there are a few institutions established by devotees, who regularly give bhikṣa to these sanyāsis; and since they regularly give bhikṣa; it will be only two items; roti and dal; that is the bhikṣa; only in the night you say dal and roti and you only reverse it; that is it; and there are used to that; that is sanyāsa āsrama is; they are used to that; and when there is a tourist season, devotees go to the āsrama, and they say we want to give a special bhikṣa; once in a lifetime or once a year; 10,000 or 20000 rupees and they call all the sanyāsis and give them gulabjamun, puri and this and that; and they will really eat well also. Puri and not all counted; chappathis in inches; chapphthis if you keep on above the other; they will eat well; and they know tomorrow I have to go back to roti bhikṣa. That is called independence.

So thus Krishna says यं लब्ध्वा yaṁ labdhvā having owned up this pūrṇatvam; अपरं लाभम् aparaṁ lābham; all the other aims in life; all other accomplishments in life; become what; ना अधिकं मन्यते nā adhikaṁ manyatē; they are not very great gains; they are avoidable; they are not needed gains; one can go without those gains also. Therefore any other gain is insignificant. OK. All other gains becomes insignificant, in front of this accomplishment; and therefore what is the fifth definition; āthyantika lābhaḥ; it is the highest gain in front of which all the other gains are insignificant. Too small.

And then comes the sixth definition; यस्मिन् स्थितः yasmin sthitaḥ; remaining in this ātma niṣṭa, in this center of gravity; nature of oneself; न विचाल्यते na vicālyate; one is not shocked by; shaken by; even the गुरुणा दुःखेन guruṇā duḥkhēna; even the worst tragedy in life; a stage remaining in which one is not shaken by even the worst tragedy; nothing is capable of shaking; even if he asks What?: hearing some unfavourable news; if he has asked: What, next moment he says: So What. Even what may be terrible news; later he asks so what; because he knows all other things in life are subject to arrival and departure.

Therefore guruṇāpi even the worst sorry; the heaviest sorrow. guru duḥkhaṁ heavy sorrow; not the sorrow caused by the guru. So here guru is not a noun, it is an adjective; even by the heaviest sorrow; and therefore ātyanthika duḥkhēna nivṛitti; total freedom from sorrow.

More in the next class.

ॐ

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

अस्मद् आचार्य पर्यन्ताम् वन्दे गुरु परम्पराम्

sadāśiva samārambhāṁ śaṅkarācāryamadhyamām
asmad ācārya paryantām vandē guru paramparām

Om

Lord Krishna has been talking about vēdāntic meditation as a means of assimilating the self knowledge; we should remember that Krishna does not prescribe meditation for acquiring self-knowledge, because according to us meditation cannot give self-knowledge. Śankarācārya in his brahmasūtra bāṣyam clearly points out that self-knowledge has to take place from the guru upadēśa or the systematic vēdāntic teaching given by the guru. And if self-knowledge does not take place while listening, there is no chance of gaining self-knowledge in any other way. If śravaṇam does not give knowledge, one has to do the śravaṇam again. If second time listening also does not work, one has to listen again. If that also does not work, again. Entire one hour I can repeat that. And if throughout life this does not take place, next life continue. Sankaracharya says vēdānta vākyādēva ātmajñānam udāti.

And therefore meditation is not prescribed for gaining knowledge, meditation is prescribed for internalising, assimilating the knowledge which has been already gained. And the reason is, assimilated knowledge alone will nourish you. Just as when you eat food, what nourishes your body is not the amount that you eat, what nourishes your body is the amount that you digest; digested food nourishes the body; not eaten food; there are people who have problems in their absorbing power; whatever they eat through one hole goes through the other hole; and therefore the body will suffer from malnutrition in spite of eating. Similarly, what we listen is not going to bless; what is going to bless is what we assimilate.

Swami Chinmayānanda says; you have gone through 10 upaniṣads. Wonderful; How through upaniṣads have gone through you. OK. That is more important. You have gone through many upanishads; that does not bless; but how many upaniṣads have gone through you; in fact, one upaniṣad is assimilated; that is more than enough.

And therefore vēdāntic meditation is purely for assimilation of this knowledge; and the assimilation is accomplished by dwelling upon the teaching that I have received. In fact sṛvaṇam replayed is nidhidhyāsanam. Sṛvaṇam replayed mentally is nidhidhyāsanam; and that nidhidhyāsanam or vēdāntic meditation Krishna is talking about and in this he has talking about the stages of dhāraṇa, dhyāna and samādhi. First withdraw my mind from worldly personality. And bring the mind to vēdāntic teaching; that bringing the mind to the teaching is dhāraṇa; and then trying to dwell upon the teaching continuously is dhyānam; and when I am absorbed in the teaching which talks about my higher nature and I am so absorbed that I forget all my relative personality. I and the father or mother, brother or sister, husband or wife, all those personalities should become insignificant and incidental personality. And aham brahmāsmi; aham ātma asmi must be my primary personality. Now what is happening, my world personality is dominant, and I the brahman is dominant for one hour a week. Sunday between 6 and 7 aham brahmāsmi; and at all other times it is aham mahāsamsāri asmi.

It should be reversed, as some Western author, Wayne Dyer, beautifully says; you are not a human being with a spiritual experience; but you are a spiritual being with a incidental human experience. Do not look for a spiritual experience; when you are looking for a spiritual experience, you are what; you are human being seeking a spiritual experience. That is the worst that can happen.

On the other hand, through teaching, what we have to assimilate is: I do not seek spiritual experience, I want to own up the fact that I am spiritual being, all the time; human experience is something which comes and goes.

So the primary should become secondary and the secondary should become primary and dwelling upon the teaching; for this purpose is called dhāraṇa, dhyāna samādhi; whose culmination is in total absorption; Absorption in what? I am satchidanda svarūpaḥ asmi; and this absorption alone is called nirvikalpaka samādhi; which is yōga phalam. Aṣṭāṅga yōgasya phalam is this absorption or nirvikalpaka samādhi and Krishna is defining the nirvikalpaka samādhi by giving seven different features.

He gives seven definitions for nirvikalpaka samādhi, from different angles; which topic started from verse No.20;

And the first definition that we saw was citta upamaṇam; nirvikalpaka samādhi is a state of absorption, in which the mind is totally relaxed, tranquil, at home, at peace, at poise. In fact, we called it citta upamaṇam. Citta means mind, and upamaṇam means quietude.

And when you use the word citta upamaṇam, we do not mean a thoughtless state, but we mean that there are no disturbing thoughts; We are not talking about thoughtless state; the mind thinks of my higher nature; and enjoys or owns up the higher nature; that there is no disturbance in the mind; You should not think that thought is a disturbance. For example, one hour you are listening to the class; in your mind, thoughts take place or not; if you say, No, I will be troubled; one hour I talk and nothing happens in your mind, it means what; what will happen to me; since I have learned vādānta and therefore saved; you are having the thought, because as even I use words, the words are entering your mind, and they are generating thought and they are becoming knowledge for you; knowledge is also a thought; but it is not a disturbance. If knowledge thought is a disturbance you will have to say, one hour Swamiji disturbed us. I hope you wont. It is not disturbance and therefore, thought does not mean disturbance; you can have thoughts with a quiet mind; in fact, in the class, thoughts are taking place and you are enjoyed and relaxing. and therefore nidhidhyāsanam is a quiet mind with vādāntic thought; it is not a quiet thoughtless mind, but a quiet mind with vādāntic thoughts; In fact, it is a quiet mind, because of vādāntic thoughts; and this quietude is definition No.1.

That the second definition we saw was ātma darśanam. So a state in which one is invoking in his mind his own knowledge that he has received; I am not the body, I am not the senses, I am not the mind, I am the consciousness principle, different from the body; pervading and illumining the body. This owning up of my nature, is ātma darśanam. This was the second definition.

Then the third definition was in verse No.21; ātyantikam sukhaṃ; it is highest happiness, in which I own up the fact that my very nature is happiness. It is not an experiential happiness; experiential happiness is finite, because it is time bound; On the other hand, it is a happiness born out of the knowledge that I do not miss anything in life; I do not lack anything in life; I do not have any imperfection; this very understanding gives me a sense of fulfilment; that knowledge born fulfilment is called ātyantikam sukam, third definition;

Then the fourth definition was tattva niṣṭhā, by which we mean that it is a state in which a person abides in his true nature; that he will not slip out of his svarūpam; even during transaction. So this is called not losing the centre of gravity; I gave you an example, when a cyclist moves; an experienced cyclist moves, whatever gymnastics he does, especially you see in a circus, he does all kinds of gymnastics but he does not get out of the centre of gravity; and in life the centre of gravity is aham satchandānandasvarūpaḥ; that is called tattva niṣṭhā; sahaja samādhi; that is the fourth definition.

The fifth definition we saw was atyantika labhaḥ; it is the greatest accomplishment in life; in fact latest accomplishment in life, coming back to myself; going in search of peace all over; discovering the fact that peace and fullness is my very nature. and that is why mōkṣa is called in Tamil; as veedu. whatever we do, we want to come back to where? we want to come back home where you are at home. It has come. Similarly, a person discovers his svarūpam he has got sense that I have come back to where I have to come; so this is called atyantika lābha; highest gain in life;

Then the sixth definition is ātyantika duḥkha nivritiḥ; that gaining which a person does not know how to grieve in life; there is no more sorrow in life; even the worst crisis does not shake him; because he is very clearly aware that the whole anātma consists of body-mind and the world and at the level of anātma, unpredictable fluctuations will take place anytime. At the physical level any kind of change, the worst being death itself; he is aware that it is a probability; Similarly at the mental level, similarly at the world level; since he has appreciated the ānātma as it is; and since he is mental prepared for any kind of vikāra at ānātma level; nothing comes as a shock for him; and even if there is a passing question of what? it is soon converted to: so what? Even the greatest, even the worst tragedy may create a passing reaction, what; next moment he recovers himself; this is the sixth definition; atyantika duḥkha nivritiḥ; total freedom from sorrow.

Up to this we saw. Now Krishna is going to give the 7th and final definition of yōga phalam.

तं विद्याद् दुःखसंयोग - वियोगं योगसंज्ञितम् ।
स निश्चयेन योक्तव्यः योगोऽनिर्विण्णचेतसा ॥ ६.२३ ॥
taṃ vidyād-duḥkhasaṃyōgaviyogaṃ yōgasamjñitam |
sa niścayēna yōktavyō yōgō'nirviṇṇacētasā || 6.23 ||

विद्यात् तम् vidhyāt tam one should know that (state), दुःखसंयोगवियोगम् duḥkhasaṃyōgaviyōgam which is dissociation from association with sorrow योगसंज्ञितम् yōgasamjñitam to be known as Samādhi योगः सः yōgaḥ saḥ Dhyānayōga leading to that, योक्तव्यः yoktavyaḥ should be practised निश्चयेन niścayena with firmness अनिर्विण्णचेतसा anirviṇṇacētasā with undepressed heart

23. One should know that (state) which is dissociation from association with sorrow to be known as Samādhi. Dhyāna yōga leading to that should, be practised with firmness and with tireless mind.

So the 7th definition is a technical definition which definition is given to avoid a confusion. A confusion can come out of the third definition which Krishna has given before; the third definition was atyantika sukhaṃ; and a person may think that this knowledge and practice of samādhi is going to bring about highest happiness in life; and if we are going to think that the greatest happiness to going to come as a result of dhyānam; we are committing a big mistake because anything that comes in time, will definitely be lost in time. jātasya hi dhruvō mṛtyurdhruvaṃ janma mṛtasya ca. Any happiness, whether it is sense pleasure or whether it is pleasure born out of meditation, if the pleasure is generated during meditation, then it will last as long as meditational conditions are there; and when I am out of meditation, that samādi ānanda will also go; And that is why vēdānta says: never seek mystic pleasures; even mystic pleasure vēdānta is not going to emphasise because even mystic pleasure since it arrives at a time, will be subject to loss. That is why those people who claim that I had the greatest bliss in nirvikalpaka samādhi, they themselves say that when they came out it was intense pain because that ānanda went away; and they described that intense pain is like thousand scorpions stinging together; now if samādhi sukhaṃ is going to lead to scorpion prick, who will want it.

Therefore even mystic bliss if it arrives, it is subject to time, and therefore Krishna wants to say that, infinite ānanda should be that which never arrives. If it should be infinite ananda; it should never arrive at a place, or time or in particular condition; infinite ānanda is possible only if it is already here and now. Infinite by definition is that which is here and now.

Then how to get infinite ānanda? After finishing everything you are asking this question? If you get it, you will lose it; and therefore in vēdānta, when we say infinite ānanda prāp̥thi, it only means you remove the superimposed sorrow upon our svarūpam; it is not getting a new thing; but it is removing the obstacles to own up our nature; it is exactly like a doctor giving you health by treatment; this example is given by ācārya; when a doctor treats you, he never gives you health; no doctor gives you health; no doctor need you give you health; health is natural; whereas disease is a incidental thing which we have acquired; which is unnatural; which is an intruder; and when I get back my health; health, I have not accomplished; doctor has removed what: whatever be the obstacle to natural health; that obstacle, that intruder has been removed by medicine, when the intruder toxin is removed, I have not got back health; I have come back to what; my natural state; That is why in Sanskrit, health is defined as being natural; svasthaḥ; svasthaḥ means what remaining in one's own nature; and health is defined as svāstyam. Similarly ānanda is our nature. and when are enjoying ānanda; we have not acquired anything; we are only in our natural state; sorrow is something which we have acquired by our wrong thinking and misconception; and by vēdānta we are only removing the sorrow microbes; or sorrow bacteria through the antibiotics called ātma jñānam. So ātma jñānam dose, weekly once weekly twice, if you take, sorrow goes away, ānanda you do not get, but own up. And therefore Krishna says दुःखसंयोग वियोगं duḥkha saṃyōga viyōgaṃ; samādhi is remaining in the natural state of pūrṇatvam; by negating the unnatural sorrow; every sorrow you analyse, you will find it is unnatural; because either it belongs to body or it belongs to the mind, or it belongs to the world. None of them is your true nature; therefore every sorrow you take and hand over to anātma; either to the world or body or mind. Then what is my svarūpam; cidānaṃdarūpaḥ śivō:'haṃ śivō:'ham.

And therefore what is samādhihi; duḥkha saṃyōga viyōgaṃ; dissociation from association with sorrow; do you understand; dissociation from association with sorrow. We have associated ourselves with sorrow, because of our ignorance, and that wrong association we give up, we do not develop a new association with happiness because we need not associate with happiness, why, because happiness happens to be our svarūpam.

Therefore what is the seventh definition. Duḥkha samyōga viyōgaḥ; disassociation from association with unnatural sorrow; and this is called योगसंज्ञितम् yōgasamjñitam; this is called yōgaḥ; nirvikalpaka samādhiḥ. So with this, the seventh definition is also over.

Now Krishna is giving an advice to all vēdāntic students; स निश्चयेन योक्तव्यम् sa niścayēna yōktavyam; one should practice this yōga by going through bahiraṅga sādhanā. I hope you have not forgotten by going through antaraṅga sādhanā, by going through dhāraṇa, and dhyānam, one has to practice this.

Because otherwise the study will be what; mere verbal gymnastics; it will not bring about any transformation; Information of Gītā is not what we want; but transformation of personality is what we want; if I do not transform myself, what is the use of the knowing one more text; Gītā is finished, upaniṣad finished; brahma sūtra will also be finished soon; and everybody in the family complains this person is terrible; therefore what is the use. Therefore I have to transform and therefore sa niścayēna yōktavyam; means with perseverance; because it requires time, and we have got a lot of commitment and therefore the first thing that we sacrifice is what; vēdānta.

So what is vēdānta; easy definition: that which is sacrificed first. Any other job we will not leave; but the first casualty is this.

And therefore we have to value this meditation and practice yōgaha and how अनिर्विण्णचेतसा anirviṇṇacetasā, which is undepressed, which does not develop any pessimism, without any self-diffidence. Because only when you sit in meditation; all the sub-conscious problems will surface; during our regular activities, our worries will not come because we are busy with our activities; therefore our worries will remain in the subconscious; when you sit in meditation and remove all the other thoughts, the sub-conscious worries, which are all sitting; waiting for an opportunity, they all will come; son will come and stand in front; mentally; and daughter and then somebody who has died before; all these will come; and therefore for many days if you sit for meditation, but we do everything other than meditation; and therefore it can create frustration.

And therefore Krishna says: never get frustrated; allot the time, for dwelling on the teaching. Even if you are not successful, it does not matter, allot the time; work on it; ābhyāsa is required. Therefore with a undepressed mind; with an unfrustrated mind; with an optimistic mind; with an enthusiastic mind; may you practice this meditation.

Continuing.

सङ्कल्पप्रभवान्कामान् त्यक्त्वा सर्वानशेषतः ।

मनसैवेन्द्रियग्रामं विनियम्य समन्ततः ॥ ६.२४ ॥

saṅkalpaprabhavān kāmāṁstyaktvā sarvānaśeṣataḥ |

manasaivēndriyagrāmaṁ viniyama samantataḥ || 6.24 ||

अशेषतः त्यक्त्वा aśeṣataḥ tyaktvā having completely given up सर्वान् कामान् sarvān kāmān all desires सङ्कल्पप्रभवान् saṅkalpaprabhavān born out of fancies विनियम्य viniyama one should restrain, इन्द्रियग्रामम् indriyagrāmam the group of sense organs समन्ततः samantataḥ from all directions मनसा एव manasā eva by the mind

24. Having completely given up all desires born out of fancies, one should restrain the group of sense organs from all directions by the mind.

Krishna talked about dhyāna phalam in these verses, beginning from the 20th verse; up to 23rd; Krishna is not totally satisfied and therefore once again he goes back and talks about dhyāna svarūpam. What exactly is the practice of meditation; what should be we be doing at the time of meditation. That repeats, He has talked about before in the form of dhāraṇa, and dhyāna and samādhi; the same topic he repeats for reinforcement. So what are we supposed to do during meditation; first turn the mind away from the worldly thoughts; external world family members, and above your business conditions; and about the physical body; turn the mind away from all those; both regarding past and future. Therefore he says; kāmān sarvān tyaktvān; here kāma means your future plans and expectations; we are expert planners; next moment, next moment, rarely we live in the present. As somebody said, a person constantly lives in absentia; he is not there; because today I am living in tomorrow mentally; that means today I am not even aware; and doing what; preparing for tomorrow; and tomorrow what do I do; prepare for tomorrow; day after tomorrow; prepare for the day after; and then suddenly Yamadharma rāja comes; then you say I have been preparing all along; I have never lived; he says: you can talk about it all in the next janma; come here now; life-long you prepare; when do you live and therefore enough of future planning; for 20 minutes drop your future plans. Whatever let it happen; let the sky fall; nothing will happen; nothing is going to happen; therefore kāmān tyaktvā; drop all your மனகோட்கை; மனோரதம் maṅakōṭṭai; maṅōratam; wishful thinking; wool gathering; stop all of them; at least for 20 minutes; and how to do that; Swamiji I would love to; but I am not able to do that; सङ्कल्पप्रभवान् saṅkalpaprabhavān; any thought is not powerful in the beginning; any thought; is not powerful in the beginning; any thought arises in the mind only feebly; like a ripple in a lake. How is a wave formed; a full-fledged is never formed suddenly; you just go to the beach and watch, you will find that constantly because of the wind, the waver becomes bigger and bigger and without the support of the wind the ripples cannot become a wave; similarly all your future plans also, initially rises in the form of a feeble thought; then what do we do; then we keep on fanning; so this fellow is not even married; he thinks of what type of wife, where to buy the house, what to name the when born; even marriage is not over; too much projects and therefore in the beginning itself; tell I do not want to encourage that now; Krishna said this in the 2nd chapter.

सङ्गात्सञ्जायते कामः कामात्क्रोधोऽभिजायते ||२- ६२||

dhyāyato viṣayānpuṃsaḥ saṅgasteṣūpajāyate |

saṅgātsañjāyate kāmaḥ kāmātkrodho:'bhijāyate || 2- 62 ||

And similarly anger is also a thought built-up. Jealousy is also a thought build up. One thought cannot be anger; one thought cannot be jealousy; one thought cannot be depression. You repeatedly think and then alone it ends up in depression. Here what do you do; Krishna says; at the seed level itself; divert your mind.

However, bleak our future may appear, never get depressed; never allow that thought to arise; saṅkalpan prabhavān; adjective to kāmā; prabhavān; born out of saṅkalpa, saṅkalpa means our cooperation; every negative thought, we have encouraged; first negative thought happens; but continuation of that is with our signature alone. Krishna says do not put your signature. once you do that the mind is not available for healthy feeling; and saravan saṅkalpa prabhavān kāmān tyaktva; give up, and इन्द्रियग्रामं विनियम्य indriyagrāmaṁ viniyamya; withdraw the sense organs which are the gateways through which the external world enters your mind and disturbs, close the gate so that external world does not enter your mind; and therefore, manasa eva, with the help of your mind itself; indriya grāmaṁ, indriya grāmaṁ, the group of sense organs; grāmaṁ means not village; in this place, literally grāma any group is called grāma; village is called a grāma because there is a cluster of houses are there; families are there; therefore it is called grāmaṁ; therefore you can use the word grāma as a suffix to any word; indriya grāma; cluster of sense organs; viniyamya; having withdrawn from the external world; समन्ततः samantataḥ, completely, totally.

Then what should we do; Krishna reminds:

शनैः शनैरुपरमेद् बुद्ध् या धृतिगृहितया ।
आत्मसंस्थं मनः कृत्वा न किञ्चिदपि चिन्तयेत् ॥ ६.२५ ॥
śanaiḥ śanairuparamēd-buddhyā dhṛtigr̥hitayā |
ātmasaṁsthaṁ manaḥ kṛtvā na kiñcidapi cintayēt || 6.25 ||

उपरमेत् uparamet one should withdraw (the mind), शनैः शनैः śanaiḥ śanaiḥ gradually बुद्ध्या buddhyā by the intellect धृतिगृहितया dhṛtigr̥hitayā which is endowed with कृत्वा मनः kṛtvā manaḥ having made the mind, आत्मसंस्थम् ātmasaṁstham abide in the Ātma न चिन्तयेत् na cintayet one should not think of किञ्चिद् अपि kiñcid api anything else

25. One should withdraw (the mind) gradually by the intellect, which is endowed with will. Having made the mind abide in the Ātma, one should not think of anything else.

So here Krishna says withdrawal must be done gradually. One cannot suddenly go to Ātma; because Ātma is the subtlest nature of mind; and therefore the mind cannot suddenly turn from the grossest world to the subtlest Ātma; Just as you want to go from ground floor to first floor, you are not thrivikrama avathāra to keep the leg on the first floor; therefore you require so many intermediary stages. It is called Arundathi darśana nyāya; or shāka chandra nyāya; making the mind gradually subtler and subtler; therefore what do you do; first you turn away the mind from the grossest external world by reminding yourselves that nothing in the world belongs to me. Everything in the world is given for my use. Just like, you have got computer room, internet room; etc. and you pay for an hour and use it and get the benefit and come away; anywhere you go use it and come away; similarly the whole world along with the wife and children and grand children and possessions and money, everything is given temporarily for your inner growth; and therefore I do not want to claim anything; the moment you drop, claiming things, mind is withdrawn; Mind dwells upon a object, with which we have total abhimāna, either aham abhimāna, or mama abhimāna; I am yours; you are mine; is all very nice; but nothing is yours, nothing is mine; everything belongs to only one; you know that one; Lord alone; We are fundamentally related to Lord or Paramātma; that is the only permanent one; permanent tie that we have, the moment I put that in my mind, attachment is dropped, and there is a relaxation. Even without they will be well-off; in fact, without me, they will be better off. That is fact, secret fact; so the lizard things it seems moving upside down on the ceiling, the lizard things that I am supporting the ceiling. If lizard claims that what will we say; you smile; this is the same thing; without me the family would not run; without me society would not run; without me they will suffer; is not all true; nobody is indispensable; and even if you cry for someone, you will cry for one day, one week, one month, one year; and thereafterwards, you do not even remember.

And therefore withdraw from the external world; then come to the body; then you claim OK; they are not mine; but body is mine; what do you have to do; you have to dismiss the body as anātma; that is also made of matter only; therefore you withdraw from world to annamaya kōśa; annamaya kōśa to praṇamaya; praṇamaya to manōmaya; manōmaya to vijñānamaya; vijñānamaya to ānandamaya. Do not ask what are these pañca kōśa; I assume that you remember that you have attended the introductory classes; in short, in simple language, from body to mind, from mind to consciousness. Body is gross; mind is subtle, mind is gross, consciousness is subtle. Suddenly you cannot come to consciousness, turn your attention to the body; then come to your mind, in the mind when you watch you will see only thoughts, you will be bothered by the thoughts alone; then from that the next jump is the subtlest jump; I am not the thoughts or the mind; I am aware of the thoughts and the mind; before the thoughts arrive, I am; during the presence of thoughts, I am, the thoughts subside thereafter also I am; therefore I am not even the thoughts, I am the witness consciousness;

This is the subtlest final jump; and therefore Krishna says you have to do it, very gradually without jerk; therefore शनैः शनैः śanaiḥ śanai; pancha kōsa viveka dvāra; மொள்ள மொள்ள molḷa molḷa; means annamaya to praṇamaya; praṇamaya to manōmaya, etc. படி படியாக paṭi paṭiyāka; with buddhi, with an intellect.

What type of intellect, धृतिगृहितया dhṛtigṛhītayā; which has got the will power to sustain the journey. Otherwise when you come to body you may suddenly get lost in the body; some back pain or something; then you think of the back pain and about the doctor; doctor said something; what happened to the doctor and you from something to something; and therefore you should be extremely alert; not to be carried away at any level; from stūla śarīram, the body, I should be able to come to the mind; and in the mind I should not be lost in thoughts; I should be able to own up myself as the witness consciousness of the thoughts;

And then what should I do; then, then, once you come to ātma; the journey is over. आत्मसंस्थं मनः कृत्वा ātmasaṁsthaṁ manaḥ kṛtvā; once the mind has come to ātma; let the mind dwell on the ātma; by seeing the different features of ātma; the features I talked about before, I am the consciousness different from the body is one type of meditation, I am the consciousness pervading the body is another type, I am the consciousness which goes beyond the body is another type; I am the formless consciousness is another type; I am uncontaminated consciousness is another form; just nirguna; niṣkaḷa, nitya, niranjana, nirākara, nirvikalpa, so many words are there; which I should have learnt from the scriptures; that is why I said this meditation is impossible without attending the classes; otherwise Nirguna, you will not know the meaning; therefore in the class, from a guru, you should have heard these words, and you should have understood the meaning of nirguna, nitya, niranjana, asaṅgā; satya, suddha, nirvikāra; Then you take anyone word and dwell upon that; aham asaṅgā caitanyosmi; therefore manaḥ ātmasaṁsthaṁ kṛtvā.

Now the question is how do you do that; the exact word used by Krishna is mind should remain in ātma; this is advice; mind should remain in ātma; I have discussed this before; but being very important, I am reiterating the same point; what do you mean by mind remaining in ātma; does it mean that mind is sitting somewhere; and you go on pulling like this clip. clip is away; desk is away; and therefore if the clip has to remain on the desk; a process of action is involved; I have to bring the clip down and place on the desk; that is clip remains on the desk; similarly, can you say ātma is sitting here; mind is on the ceiling, and you have to bring the mind, and you have to make the mind seated on the ātma; that is not possible because, ātma the chaitanyam is where: ātma being all-pervading, mind is never away from the ātma; in fact, nothing is away from the ātma; just as nothing is away from space; nothing can be away from space; therefore mind is already in ātma; therefore why should I place the mind on ātma; so you should understand placing the mind upon ātma is entertaining thoughts which are cantered on ātma; placing the mind on ātma is nothing but entertaining thoughts which are centred on ātma; when you are thinking of Badrinath; I will say that your mind is in Badrinath; if I say your mind is in your house, what does it mean; not that your mind has gone; your thoughts are about your house; therefore mind remaining in an object means, the thoughts of the mind are about that object; if the mind has to dwell on ātma; it means you should have thoughts; which are centred on ātma; like what; aham ātma svarūpaḥ asmi; which is a deliberate thought entertained; and I am the witness of all the thoughts, including aham brahmāsmi thought; and even when the thoughts are changing, I the consciousness do not change; these are all deliberate thoughts centred on myself; and therefore Krishna says; manaḥ ātmasaṁsthaṁ kṛtvā; let your thoughts be ātma centred thoughts; technically it is called akandakāra vṛittihi; ātma centred thoughts are called akandakāra vṛittihi; may you entertain such thoughts only; न किञ्चिदपि चिन्तयेत् na kiñcidapi cintayēt; do not think of anything else. Do not think of anything else; to put in technical language, vijātiya pratyaya ananthariya sajatiya pratyaya pravāhaḥ; the flow of ātma thoughts to the exclusion of anātma thoughts; is called dhyānam.

In fact, for one hour when you listen to this class; your mind is dealing with what; this ātma svarūpam; therefore actually your concentrated listening itself is a form of meditation; do not think that you have to keep the body straight; then alone is meditation; you have to close your eyes, then alone is meditation; one hour your attentive listen to the class, your mind does not go elsewhere; your other personalities are not invoked; you are doing what; śravaṇam is a form of meditation only and meditation is re-living the śravaṇam only.

More we will see in the next class.

शनैः शनैरुपरमेद् बुद्ध्वा धृतिगृहितया ।

आत्मसंस्थं मनः कृत्वा न किञ्चिदपि चिन्तयेत् ॥ ६.२५ ॥

śanaiḥ śanairuparamēd-buddhyā dhṛtigrhīṭayā |

ātmasaṁsthaṁ manaḥ kṛtvā na kiñcidapi cintayēt || 6.25 ||

Upamēd. One should gradually withdraw the mind, from anātma, all the objects, because in this meditation, we want to dwell upon the very subject itself. So here the meditation is on the meditator; here the meditation is on the meditator himself; I want to dwell upon my own nature. Since it is a subjective meditation; all the objective thoughts should be gradually eliminated.

The objects are divided into three:

the first object is external world; because it is an object of my experience;

the second object is my physical body itself; which is also an object of my experience;

the third object is my own mind; which is also an object of my experience.

So world is object of experience, body is object of experience, even mind is an object of experience. And in meditation; what do I do, initially my attention is on the world; then I shift my attention to the body, then I shift my attention to the mind and then I shift my attention to what?; the very observer of the mind, that is I- the-awareness, the witness-consciousness principle. And it takes time; you can come to the body perhaps it is easier, even when it comes to the body, now and then, it will go to the first son, second daughter, third daughter-in-law; again you have to bring to the body, again it will run outside.

And then you come to the mind; then varieties of emotions distracts you; so your depressions; your fears; your anger, your hatred; your jealousy, your anxiety, they are all what; things in the mind; that is why people ask Swamiji, the moment I sit in meditation, all kinds of worries come. So they are all lying there; which I have been ignoring my turning the attention to the external world. It is only escapism. So when I sit in mediation, those things come; there I have to carefully handle; all the emotions are also part of the mind, which I am not; all the emotions also are part of the mind, which I am not. There are many emotions which are under my control and there are many emotions. which are not under my control. So therefore emotions will come. In vēdāntic meditation, I do not try to control my emotions. In Vēdāntic mediation, I try to objectify my emotions. I try to stand aloof from my emotions and try to see that they also do not belong to me.

So body has got its nature; mind has got its nature; and I am different from both of them.

And some people get some pleasant experience, Swamiji; it is very nice. That pleasant experience also belongs to the mind, because when the mind quietened, that experience came; when the mind was turbulent; that experience was not there; when the mind is quite that experience came, therefore that experience also belongs to the mind alone; therefore, I should tell myself even this pleasant experience belongs to anātma; I should not get lost in this experience.

In Mandūkya kārika, Gaudapādācārya says enjoying the pleasantness in meditation is also an obstacle; and he calls that obstacle as rasasvāda; rasam means pleasant; in our area, when something is very nice, we say ரசமாபிடுக்கு 'rasamāyirukku'; I do not know whether they say it here; āsvādaḥ means enjoying; even enjoying the pleasant feeling of meditation is an obstacle because the pleasantness also belongs to the quiet mind. We are talking about what; not the pleasant condition; we are talking about the witness of the pleasant condition, which was there, before meditation, which witness is there; after meditation. I want to own up the witness-ātma. I do not want to enjoy pleasant experience in mediation; here the meditation is for owning up the knowledge; not for any special experience. Vēdāntic meditation is only for owning up this knowledge; not for any special experience and even if special experience comes, I should tell that I have nothing to do with this experience, this is also āyāram, gayārām. Who wants; it is as much a sensory pleasure, as the ice-cream is. Ice cream is pleasant if you like at the time of eating; ice cream also ends. Similarly in meditation you feel pleasant; meditation also ends; who wants that experience; it is another bondage.

On the other hand, meditation becomes worthwhile, if I own up the teaching in meditation and what is that teaching, I am the witness of the mind and all its ordinary and extra ordinary experiences; I am the witness of the mind and all ordinary and extra ordinary experiences; none of them belongs to me.

Therefore Krishna says; śanaiḥ śanair uparamēd; one should withdraw; with the help of what: buddhya; with the help of the intellect, which has the backing of this teaching. That is why vēdāntic meditation is possible only by a student of the Gītā upaniṣad; an non-student can never practice meditation; that is why, if anyone asks me Swamiji teach me meditation; I generally say, five types of meditations are there; I told you in the introduction; of this any one of them of the four you can practice, but if the fifth if you have a practice, you have necessarily to become a student of vēdānta.

Why, Krishna adds; buddhya; vēdāntic meditation is practice with the help of the intellect which has the teaching behind it.

What teaching; I am neither the mind, nor the experiences of the mind.

And not only the intellect is required; धृतिगृहितया dhṛtigṛhīṭayā; an intellect which is supported by will power; supported by will power; if the will power is not there; I will get attached to the pleasant experiences; They are all temptations. All the pleasant experiences are temptations; they come under anāṭma. Why they come under anāṭma; because they are subject to arrival and departure; all pleasant things; various; what about unpleasant; therefore dhṛti gṛhīṭayā; backed by will power, one should withdraw from anāṭma.

And what should you do; आत्मसंस्थं मनः कृत्वा ātmasaṁsthaṁ manaḥ kṛtvā; having withdrawn from all other things, the mind should abide in the āṭma; manaḥ ātmasaṁsthaṁ kṛtvā; the mind should rest on the āṭma; abide on the āṭma.

So here also the question comes how does the mind abide on ātma; I have already discussed, but you should remember here also, when I say that the clip is resting on the desk, you know that now the clip is not resting; through a process you can bring down and now the clip is resting. Now can you say that the mind is also now not resting on the ātma; and by meditation I have to drag the mind; keep it on the ātma; put fevicol or cello tape or something; is it a physical process? You should know that, there is no such event happening because, everything in the creation rests already on ātma only; ātma being all pervading consciousness; nobody need bring the mind; nobody need bring the mind and keep on the ātma; because like space, ātma is everywhere; you can keep the clip on the desk; suppose I ask you to keep the clip on the space; what should you do; what will be your answer; clip is already in space; if it is out of space, you have to bring.

Therefore the question comes what is meant by the mind resting on anything; mind rests on anything by entertaining a thought centered on that thing; mind resting on the Lord is nothing but mind entertaining the thought of the Lord; mind resting on Himalayas is nothing but the mind entertaining the thought of Himalayas; that being so, the mind resting on ātma is nothing but the mind entertaining the thoughts centred on the Self.

And what are the thoughts centered on the self; aham caitanya svarūpaḥ asmi; I am of the nature of consciousness; I pervade the body and mind; as consciousness; I enliven the body and mind; as consciousness; the body and mind are only medium for my experience; and this medium can arrive and depart. Without these media, I wont experience the world, but even without them, I, the consciousness continues to exist. In waking body medium is available; I experience you; in sleep the body and senses are not functioning; I do not experience you.

So the experience comes and goes; the experiencer I the consciousness am eternally present. So I am eternal consciousness, I am all pervading consciousness; I am undivided consciousness; I am untainted consciousness.

These are all what; mind abiding in myself. This is called akandara vrithi; all thoughts centered on ātma is called akhanda akāra vṛitti; akhanda akāra vṛitti, because there is no subject-object division; who is the thinker; I am the thinker; who is the thought-about; I myself.

So therefore ātmasaṁsthaṁ manaḥ kṛtvā, means what: entertain the thoughts centered on your nature.

And then what else I should do; न किञ्चिदपि चिन्तयेत् na kiñcidapi cintayēṭ; do not disturb that thought; do not distract yourselves by entertaining any other thought; na kiñcidapi cintayēṭ. Do not think of anything else; anything else means anything other than the ātma; you do not say, here the confusion comes; na kindiapi cindayet; many people mistake as total thoughtlessness; we do not approve of total thoughtlessness, we say do not entertain any thought other than the self-thought; the self-thought is a must in meditation; otherwise it is called blind samādhi; blind samādhi means, absolute thoughtless, in Sanskrit it is called anta samādhi; jada samādhi; ajñāna samādhi, you do not get any benefit, you will get a deep relaxation;

And whether you get the benefit or not, the other people will get the benefit; when the others meditate; because you can be less troubled. So therefore that meditation does not give any spiritual benefit; total thoughtlessness does not give any spiritual benefit; it will give some psychological benefit; it will give some physical benefit; you may be rejuvenated; the meditation becomes spiritual only when the thought centered on the spirit, ātma is there. Therefore ātmasaṁsthaṁ manaḥ kṛtvā; na kiñcidapi cintayēṭ.

the control of oneself, नियम्य niyamya by restraining ततः ततः tataḥ tataḥ
from those (objects), यतः ततः yataḥ tataḥ due to which निश्चरति niścarati (mind) goes out.

26. One should bring back this fickle unsteady mind under the control of oneself by restraining from those (objects) due to which (the mind) goes out.

That is why we say that while studying the scriptures, when the teacher is talking about ātma svarūpam; the nature of the self; if the student is going along with the teacher; and the student also entertains the same thought as the teacher, the teacher says You are consciousness, what should the student think; student should not say, 'you are consciousness', the student should convert the second person into the first person; that much person-shipping is necessary. The student also understands the significance of the teaching, I am a conscious being, and the teacher is revealing the fact, that as the conscious being, I am ever free.

And if the student follows that: remember the very śravaṇam is meditation; not that you should sit in an āsanam and keep the body straight, if the body straight, half closed eyes, they are all supportive systems; but what makes the meditation is ātmakara vṛittihi; therefore the śravaṇam itself is dhyānam; if it is an active śravaṇam; in which the student closely goes behind and that is why one of the great ācāryas Sureshvarācārya, a direct disciple of Śankarācārya says; even if one does not separately sit in meditation, repeated śravaṇam; repeated listening to the teaching; itself is a form of meditation only. Therefore we should not have the thinking that meditation should be āsana, straight, etc. You should not think, they are all incidentals, meditation means the mind dwelling upon the teaching consistently.

And here in this slōkā, Krishna says when the mind is dwelling on the teaching; the distractions are bound to come. Arjuna himself will complain later, Hey Krishna my mind is worse than a monkey:

तस्याहं निग्रहं मन्ये वायोरिव सुदुष्करम् ॥६.३४॥
cañcalaṃ hi manaḥ kṛṣṇa pramāthi balavad-dṛḍham |
tasyāhaṃ nigrahaṃ manyē vāyōriva suduṣkaram || 6.34 ||

my mind is ati cañcalaṃ; and I do not think I will be able to restrain the mind, and Krishna says do not feel bad, if your mind is restless, because everybody mind is restless; you are not alone. Then at least some samādhānam; so everyone has this problem. This is a universal problem, that is why it is incorporated in the Gītā itself;

So Krishna says चञ्चलम् मनः निश्चरति cañcalam manaḥ niścarati. The fickle restless extrovert mind will go out; niścarati means like the child it will run away; the mother keeps on her lap, like a spring it will get up and run. So cañcalam manaḥ; the restless fickle, volatile mind niścarati; it goes out, yataḥ yataḥ, because of various sense objects distracting the mind; because of one sense object or the other. It may be to hear the horn of the car; and suddenly you remember your car which has been given for service and never given back; And from that you will think of the new car that you wanted to buy; and then you think of whether to buy Indica or Maruti, which car you want; then you go on and on; you are supposed to be doing ātma dhyānam; ending up in car dhyānam; बेकार होगय; becar hōgaya.

So Krishna says it is natural; do not feel guilty; it is very very natural. Therefore yataḥ yataḥ means because of any external factor, mind will stray away. And external factor need not be inanimate, it can be a person also; suddenly you remember, your husband, wife or father or mother, or children, any blessed thing, living or non-living, or the pet dog. For some people that is loved more than the family members. Anything; in fact, in Bhāgavatha; Jada Bharatha gets distracted by a deer, can you imagine; he has so much determination, that he gave up his kingdom, or the entire family he gave up and one deer became very dear; that is why it is called dear; then he started you bringing up the deer and all the time bhāgavatham it is beautifully described; all the times he thinks of that; wherever he goes he thinks that deer what it will be doing; and at the time of death also, it is deer dhyānam; and in the next janma, he becomes a deer; it can be anything.

When the mind is distracted what should one do; ततः ततः नियम्य tataḥ tataḥ niyamya; withdraw the mind from those respective objective; so withdraw the mind from those respective objects by telling yourselves that nothing belongs to me; for me to get obsessed with them; obsession comes because of ownership; obsession comes because of ownership. And therefore never own anything; even though for worldly purposes, you may own a house or car, I do not tell to sell it; you do not come and stand before me saying because of me you sold everything; where can I give you accommodation; I do not want to sell your house and car; let ownership be a functional ownership but in the innermost heart let it be remembered, nothing belongs to me; everything is a temporary gift from the Lord; Lord has blessed me with certain things and using those things I have to grow, I should not get stuck; I should not fall in love with a particular school and permanently remain there; If you do that; which teacher will be happy; the student says he loves me very much; so permanently sit there; loving the teacher is one thing; and remaining in the class permanently is another thing; love the teacher but get out; teacher himself wants; other students will come; And therefore all the time remember this: ownership the cause of obsession; obsession is the cause of distraction; and distraction is the obstacle.

And therefore, tataḥ tataḥ niyamyā; you can tell; Oh Lord everything is yours; Oh Lord everything is yours; tan man dhan, sab kuch thēra, it should not be merely verbal; it should come from the innermost heart; which should include my own physical body; what to talk of wife or child or husband, my own physical body, I do not want to own; my own mind I do not want to own; not I do not want; I do not own; so niyamyā.

Then what should you do; ātmani ēva vaśam nayēt; again bring the mind back to the ātma; akanadākāra vṛitti abhyāsam kuru. So ātmani vaśam nayēt; bring the mind to the field of ātma.

उत्तमं सुखम् uttamaṃ sukham Supreme ananda उपैति upaiti comes हि एनं योगिनम् hi enaṃ yoginam indeed to this yogi अकल्मषम् akalmaṣam who is free from impurities शान्तरजसम् śāntarajasam whose aGītātions have subsided प्रशान्तमनसम् praśāntamanasam whose mind is totally tranquil ब्रह्मभूतम् brahmabhutam (and) who has become Brahman.

27. Supreme Ananda comes to this Yogi, who is free from impurities, whose aGītātions have subsided, whose mind is totally tranquil (and) who has become Brahman.

What will be result of this practice? So dhyana phalam Krishna mentions in these verses. प्रशान्तमनसम् ह्येनं उत्तमं सुखम् उपैति praśāntamanasam hi enaṃ uttamaṃ sukham upaiti; the benefit of this mediation is the highest peace will come to that person; uttam sukam means the greatest peace; the peace that passeth all understanding; a peace which is not determined by external conditions. Any other type of peace that I enjoy is because I add; as long as I add because, that peace is conditional-peace. Conditional-peace is not peace; anything conditional is not real; this is one vēdāntic lesson that you should always remember; anything conditional is fake. If you say I am secure because there is money; Vēdānta calls it conditional security; because it is 'because of' money and conditional security is not real security because anytime it can go; and what can go away is not peace. Similarly conditional happiness; conditional fulfilment. The benefit of vēdāntic meditation is unconditional peace. So here uttamaṃ means unconditional; nirapekṣa; and I am peaceful. Why if somebody asks, jñāni's answer will be because that is my very nature. If you ask fire why are you hot, what will fire say; that is my nature; if you ask water why are hot; it will say that because I am in contact with fire and it will not last long also.

But fire is hot unconditionally; therefore permanently. Similarly, I am peaceful unconditionally; therefore I am permanently peaceful; peacefully rich; peacefully poor; peacefully with house; peacefully without house; peacefully with people, peacefully without people; peacefully young, peacefully old; peacefully black haired; peacefully white haired also; or any other colour. So this is uttamaṃ sukham upaiti; this is the phalam, the details of which we will see in the next class.

Om

In this sixth chapter of the Gītā, Lord Krishna is elaborately discussing the topic of Nidhidhyāsanam, otherwise known as Vēdāntic meditation; and we should remember that this Nidhidhyāsanam is relevant and meaningful only after the study of Vēdānta, which is called sṛavaṇam and mananam. The actual self-knowledge has to take place only at the time of sṛavaṇam. The systematic study alone has to produce the knowledge in the mind. Just as when I look into the mirror, if the mirror is clean, and placed in front of me properly, I can get a real picture of my face in the mirror; if my eyes are not defective. In the same way, a guru presents the Vēdāntic teaching, which is like the mirror kept in front of the student; the verbal mirror. And if this teaching is properly presented, and the listener has got a defect-free mind, this very teaching can and will generate the knowledge in the mind and therefore we should remember knowledge is only through sṛavaṇam. Vēdāntic meditation is not meant for the rise of knowledge. Vēdāntic meditation is not meant for the rise of knowledge, the knowledge has to arise through the teaching;

And then this has to be followed by my mananam; which has to remove any trace of doubt with regard to the teaching; any trace of doubt with regard to the fundamentals aspect of Vēdānta; Brahma satyam; jagat mithya, jīvō brahmaiva na paraḥ; Brahman is the substratum of the world; and the world is dependent on Brahman, and Brahman the substratum is none other than myself. With regard to these fundamentals teachings of the Vēdānta, I should not have any trace of doubt, and removal of doubt is possible only through the method of reasoning; because doubt belongs to the intellect; and intellect knows only the language of reasoning.

So thus śravaṇam and mananam should do the job of producing knowledge; so nisaṁsaya jñānam, conviction regarding Vēdāntic teaching has to take place only through śravaṇam and mananam.

And if this conviction has taken place through śravaṇam and mananam; what is the role of nidhidhyāsanam; or Vēdāntic meditation; I have said before: Vēdāntic meditation is meant for enjoying the benefit of knowledge; Nathu jñāna sidhyartham, paranthu jñāna phala sidhyartham. Because our problem is we seem to know and understand the teaching; but the promised benefit does not seem to be in me, because the scriptures present that a jñāni is free from various emotional problems:

duḥkhēṣvanudvignamanāḥ sukhēṣu vigataspr̥haḥ |
vītarāgabhayakrōdhaḥ sthitadhīrmunirucyatē || 2.56 ||

jñāni's state of mind is talked about in the scriptures. When I look at myself from the stand point of those descriptions I feel, that between me and jñāni, it is somewhere.

Therefore we doubt our knowledge. Krishna wants to say that there is no defect in knowledge; what we lack is not knowledge; but we lack is the benefit of knowledge; and the benefit of knowledge is śānti, freedom from anxiety; sense of fulfilment; freedom from jealousy, hatred, adveṣṭā sarvabhūtanam, etc. and therefore the role of nidhidhyāsanam is removing the block between jñānam and jñāna phalam;

And what is the block between knowledge and the benefit of mana śānti? The block is our habitual ways of thinking; our habitual ways of looking at ourselves. We are habituated to look at ourselves as a physical person; or as an emotional person, or as an intellectual person; whereas Vēdānta has taught us that physical body is not ourselves. Therefore the physical identification, emotional identification, etc. are our habitual way of looking at ourselves.

And not only we are habituated to look at ourselves in a particular samsāric fashion, because of that our way of looking at the life's events; loss of job, loss of money, separation from a person; even the way we respond to the life's events is habitual; So thus the way we look at ourselves; the way we look at the world and the way we look at God, we have got a habit.

So our problem is not of ignorance; our problem is our habitual ways of responding; Dayananda swami beautifully tells: that when in India, when Swamiji is taken to someplace, he just enters the car; and in India the driving is right hand driving; and therefore, naturally, generally he sits in the front side; therefore he goes to the left-side of the car, and opens the door and sits; because the steering is on the right side. And when goes to America; Swamiji goes here and there; and automatically when Swamiji goes and open the left front door, there the steering is there; Oh I am in America; and this steering on the left side therefore I am supposed to go to the right.

Now is this behaviour born of ignorance or habit; It is not ignorance; everyone of us knows that here it is LHS; there it is RHS. Therefore our whole behaviour is in a particular orientation and this is developed not in one year or two years or even in one janma, but it is in anādi avidyā vāsanaya; (we say in Avani avittam) anādi avidyā vāsanaya; vāsana means habitual response. And therefore nidhidhyāsanam is to invoke my Vēdāntic personality, and learn to re-look into myself; in the light of Vēdānta, learn to relook into your family situation; in the light of Vēdānta if you have a complaint about your son or daughter or son-in-law or daughter-in-law or husband or wife, you have to re-look into that family problem; and we should learn to rename it, I will no more call it a problem.

So naming it is getting hooked; and that is why they are changing even the names because, verbalisation, vocalisation, indicates our ways of thinking; and that is why when they want to give the news for deaf people, they will say you should not call deaf, hearing impaired. What does it mean, deaf only. Why change the word, because word represents our thinking. A change of the very language will bring about a change in our ways of thinking. Therefore I look at the family member, whom I have been calling problem problem problem; and I learn to say that it is not a problem. In the light of Vēdānta; it is not a problem; it is a situation; caused by various factors including prārabdha; Similarly look at the office situation; look at any situation, including Government; and I should see re-see through the goggles of Vēdānta and I should say as I say in Transactional Analysis; I am Ok, you are Ok. Either we say you are not OK; I am OK; or you are OK; but I am not; otherwise we tell both are not OK. What is wisdom; everyone is OK:

So this relooking in the light of Vēdāntic teaching and seeing that there is no problem at all; there are various situations to be faced and acted upon; with success or without success, but that also cannot be called a problem; even the word success and failure is a word we have invented; only karma phalam is there; imagine two people are together running a business and one person expected five percent profit; another person expected fifteen percent profit and the profit was 10%. And now the first person is going to say that it is wonderful; I expected 5% and got more; like children getting marks; 92% one is very happy; because I was expecting only 85%; and another is so disappointed, why I expected 99% and I got 83%. The result remaining the same, one calls it success; one calls it failure; one is depressed another is elated; therefore most of our responses are born out of tagging; which is born out of thinking; which is born out of our knowledge or ignorance;

So Vēdānta is a painful, time-consuming re-assessment of our situations in life; and in that reassessment, I should be able to say I am happy, not because of situations, but in spite of situations. I told you about one Swami; who lost his eyes because of diabetics; and eyes are considered to be most important organ; people consider it as a shock and tragedy. You meet that Swamiji; he is so bubbling, and he consoles those people who have eyes; and he says my Guruvayoorappan thinks that it is enough seeing this rubbish; I have got my Lord in my heart and I can all the time; otherwise people have to bother in meditation; how to handle the eyes; whether to see the nose or the eyebrows; I do not have the problem; because which distracts and he bubbles; and some doctor said that there is a possibility of recovering the eyes and are you interested; he said no and I do not want.

So situations remaining the same, you can make any situation light; this is called abhibhavaḥ; abhibhavaḥ means you do not solve the problem; you dissolve the problem. I will give you an example. When you look at the sky during the day time, there the stars are there in the sky or not? Is the stars are coming in the night or is it in the day time also. Any doubt? The stars are there all the time; but during the day-time, the stars are not absent; but they are as though absent, their light is overpowered by the light of the Sun. In this I have not removed the stars, but the star's light is overpowered; abibhūtam. In the same way, Vēdānta gives a new vision and new fulfilment in the light of the fulfilment which is like the sun, my problems do not go away; but all these problems get what; overshadowed by the new perception of myself. So if there is physical sickness, it will continue. The members of the family are not going to change, because you study Gītā. They will continue be as cantankerous and problematic as before; but your site changes; like the astrologer says; you have got the śani problem for 6 months; then what will happen after that; you will get used to that; so when you get to it; then you do not feel its presence.

Similarly, Vēdānta does abhibhava of the ego's problems; they become insignificant; they become too small in front of the pūrṇatvam that I have discovered; and this abhibhava is the job in meditation. I look at every problem of mind and see it as, as insignificant to the extent that it is as good as non-existent like what, the stars during day-time; they are as good as absent.

And that is said as the nidhidhyāsanam; and once I change my perspective, the so-called problems are no more problems and therefore the anxiety that those problems came, that anxiety is not there; my future continues to be unpredictable; In fact, everybody's future is unpredictable; whose future is predictable; who is sure whether we will be there or not tomorrow. Do not worry, we will be there; Swamiji is talking like this; do not feel like that; the whole life is unpredictable; including jñāni's. If he is starting a big āsram, it is unpredictable; and jñāni's life is more unpredictable; because it has depend upon public.

Therefore both remaining the same; previously the unpredictability gave me an anxiety; but now the very same unpredictability does not give the anxiety. This is called jñāna phalam. So jñāni's peace of mind is not because his future has become predictable; jñāni's freedom from anxiety is not because of predictability; but in spite of unpredictability.

And this is called jīvan muktiḥ; and this jīvan mukti, you can enjoy only if you do this new exercise. What is the exercise, studying your life's situations again and again in the light of this new teaching? And that process is called nidhidhyāsanam; So nidhidhyāsanam is not a thoughtless state; nidhidhyāsanam is not looking for some mystic experiences; nidhidhyāsanam is not going to bring a new flow of ānanda, like the Kutralam season. Do not expect anything to happen; it is none of them; it is relooking at myself and the world; in the light of the teaching; which changes the perspective and response and therefore there is peace of mind.

In Bhāgavatham, they describe how Krishna looked at all the Yadavās fighting, quarreling and killing each other. And Krishna sees right in front of his eyes; the śapam coming through; you know the story how the śapam came that you are going to fight and die; and Krishna is the Lord himself; and Krishna could not stop his family members fighting and dying one by one. Soon he is also going to join the majority; he is also going to be shot; and Bhāgavatham describes Krishna's perception of that events; leaning on a tree; with his hands on the tree; he looks at the whole event with a smile; it is a choiceless situation, even for Bhagavān; What Bhagavān; Omnipotent; Omniscient Krishna choicelessly sees the event of every family member dying one by one; as they say in Tamil, அடிச்சிண்டு சாகிதுங்கொ aṭicciṅṭu cākituṅko; they fought and died;

And what was Krishna's response; a smile; not that he is happy about it; but the thing is he looks at the situation, a choiceless situation has to happen; where there is a choice, Krishna will certainly take an action; Therefore jñāni does take an action; where it has to be; jñāni does accept; where it is choiceless. So the world and the life will continue.

The change is where; not in the world; not in the people; not in the body but in the way of perception and the way of response; and this śānti Krishna talks about in the 27th verse; Krishna says uttamam sukham upaiti; this jñāni enjoys the highest ānanda, contentment, pūrnatvam; it is not an ordinary sukham born out of an external changing unpredictable factor, but it is an ananda; born out of the knowledge that I am pūrṇaḥ. When he uses the word I, you know the meaning of the word, not the physical I, not the emotional I, not even the intellectual I, the I the ātma am pūrṇa ḥ; So uttamam sukham upaiti.

What type of jñāni; not the one who has done śravaṇam, mananam alone; but the jñāni who has struggled and used the Vēdāntic knowledge to look into every aspect of this kind. It is just like, if you want to change a rāga, in carnatic music, you have to go to the svarās which go make the rāga; you cannot change the rāga, without changing the svarā; if I want to change the shape of this hall, I will have to take every brick and rearrange.

Similarly, if my life has to change; every thought in my mind has to change; my life consists of only a series of thinking; what is sorrow; it is a thought; what is jealousy; it is a thought; what is frustration; it is a thought. So how you define your life is purely joining the bundle of thoughts that you entertain every moment; right from the morning when you miss the coffee. Of course you respond by a thought; that is your life; one thought is not your life; but your life is nothing but all the thoughts put together; and if you have to change the building, the bricks have to change; if you have to change your life, your very thought process has to change, which is a time-consuming process and this jñāni has done that. So time is required; effort is required.

Therefore Krishna describes that jñāni; praśāntha manasam; the one whose mind is free from unhealthy thought processes; in the form of anxiety; fear, jealousy, etc. every unhealthy thought he has consciously and deliberately handled; managed; and therefore he is not thoughtless; but his thoughts are undisturbing thoughts; thoughts do not disturb the mind. In fact for one hour you are listening to my talk during which your mind has to entertain thoughts; even I am talking each word, I am presenting an idea to you; and that idea is generated in your mind in the form of what: thought alone.

Now is this thought a burden to you? if it is burden, you would not come here; one hour it is burdensome; No; thought is not samsāra; you need not eliminate any thought; that is why wise man is described in the 12th chapter is a man of compassion; compassion is a thought pattern; and compassion is not samsāra; love is not samsāra; generosity is not samsāra; burdening thoughts are replaced by the thoughts which are not a burden; and that is called śānta vṛittihi; they are called sātṛvika vṛittihi; sātṛvika vṛitti means they are light in your mind; they sit light in your mind; they are not a burden to you; and such a mind jñāni enjoys; aśāntasya manō bhārah; Mind is a burden for a person who does not have peace of mind; If there is no nimmathi in the mind, everything will be bhāram; if nimmathi is there; mind is light; a wonderful instrument, with which I can study, I can love people; I can help. So therefore you can have nimmathi; Nimmathi ungal choice; is it not correct? the programmes are all from Gītā, it is your choice, do not curb your mind, do not destroy your mind in the name of manō nāśam; do not destroy the mind. If you keep it alright, you will enjoy, it is a privilege; it is a blessing; gift from the Lord; that which disturbs, the unclean thoughts, remove it, and it will be fine.

Jñāni enjoys what type of mind, praśāntha manasam; śānta rajasam; and how did he enjoy or how does he enjoy such a mind; by removing rajasic vṛitti; what is rajasic vṛitti; disturbing thought; kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ, mātsaryaḥ. So neighbours child has got good marks; our child has failed, or OK with 70% and the other one has got 97%; why have jealousy; congratulate him well. It is difficult but we can do that; somebody has got better; somebody has less; these are all tāra tamyam is the law of creation; congratulate openly, admire, done well, wonderful, etc; so aśānta rajasam means disturbing, burdensome thoughts are aśāntam;

And how did he achieve that Nidhidhyāsanam; what is nidhidhyāsanam; relooking into situations in the light of Vēdāntic teaching; some intellect are very brilliant; some intellects are not so brilliant; like bodies are healthy and some bodies are not healthy; so let me enjoy what I have; rather than compare with others. and therefore śānta rajasam; and akalmaṣam; kalmaṣa means tāmasa vṛitti; are also subsided; tamasa vṛitti means mōha vṛitti.

So Vidyāraṇya Swami in Pañcadaśī says: sātvika vṛitti is called śānta vṛitti; rajasa vṛitti is called ghōra vṛitti; tāmasa vṛitti is called mūda vṛitti; mūdam means full of delusion and confusion.

They are also not there. Therefore akalmaṣam; neither tāmasam predominant mind; śānta rajasam means not rajas predominant mind, rajas and tamas are subservient to what; sātvika mind; sātvika mind is indicated by praśānta manasam; and such a jñāni who is now yōgi; yōgi means meditator; and you should remember, this relook, reorientation is to be done compulsorily; is not forgetting the problem; forgetting the problem does not solve; மறக்கடிக்கறது marakkaṭikkaṛatu; if you say that, the problem is not going anywhere; it is inside; it is like the fire which is somewhere here and you do not want to be disturbed by the fire and therefore you cover it with some newspaper; that will catch up slowly and become a conflagration; our aim is not forgetting the problem; marakkaṭikkaṛatu is not solution; you are putting in your deep conscious mind and whenever time comes, ideal time comes, you will start crying with a flood of tears; only you have to see someone who is very close to you; we people face it; they will come for seeking advice and they start crying saying Swamiji, etc. because they could not share it with anyone; that is why, we say, we are all swiss banks; all private accounts; secret accounts; we cannot speak out; it will spread; what will happen if it spreads; what will happen to my daughter's marriage. So therefore we are just hiding in our sub-consciousness; that is not the solution. But I should see it my past, my future I say, with the torchlight of Vēdānta; I should see it; and therefore what I want to say is, this Nidhidhyāsanam is compulsory; but that you should sit in Padamāsana. Samam kāyaśirōgrīvam ;keeping the neck straight, etc. the posture is not important; if you love to do that, in a comfortable posture, you do. We are interested in what: the child studying; is he studying lying in the easy chair or is he sitting samam kāyaśirōgrīvam, and sleeping;

etc. why should you bother. If he is sleeping, sitting straight, what is the use? So even if you are going to sit straight or lie down, we do not insist upon the posture.

So therefore do not think when someone says meditation, it is sitting in Padamāsana in a tight legged way, in the ground; what is important is even if you are walking in the beach and then revising your perspective; that is mediation; lying down on your bed and again restructuring your perspective; that is also meditation only. So meditation is transformation of your very thinking process is meditation.

So such a yōgi; yōgi means meditator, nidhidhyāsaka, and ब्रह्मभुतम् brahmabhūtam; who has become one with Brahman; brahmabhūtam who has become one with Brahman; means these are all fundamentals; you should not think that Brahman is sitting there; and you should do meditation and slowly dissolve and at last merge with Him. Do not think; brahmabhūtam means what; instead of identifying with anātmā; he has learned to own up the ātmā svarūpam; instead of claiming body as I, instead of claiming mind as I, he looks upon them as instruments of transactions, I am the caitanyam; behind these instruments. This shifting the first person singular is called brahmi bhavāḥ; therefore brahmabhūtam. What is the benefit of that meditation; uttamaṃ sukham upaiti.

Continuing.

युञ्जन्नेवं सदात्मानं योगी विगतकल्मषः ।

सुखेन ब्रह्मसंस्पर्शम् अत्यन्तं सुखमश्नुते ॥ ६.२८ ॥

yuñjannēvaṃ sadātmānaṃ yōgī vigatakalmaṣaḥ |

sukhēna brahmasaṃsparśamatyantaṃ sukhamaśnutē | | 6. 28 | |

एवम् evam Thus सदा युञ्जन् sadā yuñjan constantly engaging आत्मानम् ātmānam mind (in meditation) विगतकल्मषः योगी vigatamalmaṣaḥ yōgī the purified Yōgi सुखेन अश्नुते sukhena aśnute effortlessly attains, अत्यन्तं सुखम् atyantaṃ sukham limitless Ananda ब्रह्मसंस्पर्शम् brahmasaṃsparśam which belongs to brahman

28. Thus constantly engaging the mind (in meditation) the purified Yōgi effortlessly attains limitless ananda which belongs to Brahman.

So the same idea is presented in a different way; अत्यन्तं सुखमश्नुते atyantaṁ sukhamāśnutē; in the previous slōkā it was said; uttamam sukham upaiti; same idea He says here; atyantaṁ; instead of uttamam, atyantaṁ; instead of upaiti, aśnutē. So he gets infinite ānanda; śānti, contentment, pūrṇatvam; this person attains. Who? this yōgi; This śānti is not jñānam; śānti is jñāna phalam;

What did meditation do; mediation did not even produce śānti; jñānam has to automatically produce śānti; but our ways of thinking was an obstacle; and through meditation, what we did, we removed the obstacle, jñānam naturally gave śānti; like opening the tap. when I opened the tap, I am not bringing down the water; water coming down is the result of what; not my effort; what coming down is the result of bhagavān's law; What law; law of gravitation; But in the tank, jalam should be there; if jalam is there in the tank, it should come in the tap; you need not even do prārthanai to the Lord; natural; But if you say it did not come in my house tap, there is an obstruction; opening the tap is not bringing down the water; opening the tap is removal of the obstacle for the natural flow.

Similarly, jñānam means śānti; peace is there; jñānam has to flow down in the form of śānti alone; but this śānti flow if it does not come, we have closed the tap. what is this: our habitual ways thinking; so by nidhidhyāsanam, this habitual thinking we eliminate, śānti I do not produce; the natural śānti which is the consequence of jñānam; that just flows; When I say flows; do not think that it will gush down from somewhere; and it will flow through your eyes; flow is only a figurative expression; I seem to discover more and more śānti; I seem discover more and more śānti.

Previously a situation produced too much of aśānti. But now the same situation brings it little less; and any transformation is gradual; this transformation is also not an overnight process; not that you keep on meditating; and you never had an śānti; till a particular day and on a particular day night 12.37, floodgates of śānti was opened; like opening the red hill gates; Do not think like that; any transformation is gradual; this jñānam producing śānti is also a slow, gradual transformation; just as our physical change is a gradual process, not that you become this 80 kilos next day; 2-1/2 kgs and then 30, 40, 50 and now I do not how to stop this. Vēdānta is also like that; initially you have to initiate the flow and thereafterwards you will find that the Vēdānta jells and you do see that the śānti seems to gradually increase; and therefore atyantaṁ sukham aśnutē; and who attains this sukham; yōgi; yōgi means the Vēdāntic meditator; the one who gives quality time to change his ways of thinking; so he is called yōgi; and how does he does he bring out this transformation; ēvam ātmānam sadā yuñjan; it is like physiotherapy; in physiotherapy you have to repeatedly do for the hand to function; you have to do exercising and the hand will start functioning;

And similarly this is a psycho therapy like thing; it is a time consuming process; in fact more time consuming because mind is a subtler equipment; hand is outside and you can make it alright by exercising; you cannot do that to the neck; you will break it; it is a process which requires initiative.

Therefore he says evam, in this manner; as said before; ātmānam yunjan; ātma here means mind; ātma means mind; yuñjan means regulating the mind; reorienting the mind; transforming the thought process. Of course in the light of Vēdāntic knowledge gained through śravaṇam and mananam; what will happen; vigatha kalmaṣaḥ; this yōgi is gradually free from, his unhealthy habits of thinking; unhealthy habits are called viparītha bhāvana; viparyaya; so all these viparītha bhāvanas will get gradually erased; Everything like anger is a viparītha bhāvana; frustration is a viparītha bhāvana. We are so great experts that naturally we get frustrated; no effort is required, because well established; frustration-niṣṭāḥ. So therefore विगतमल्लम्बः vigata kalmaṣaḥ; kamaṣaḥ here means viparītha bhāvana, habitual negative thinking.

So Wayne Dyer of America wrote; Your erroneous zone; a beautiful book, he calls your Erroneous zones in your mind; Each one is an erroneous zone, You have to handle; And if you do that, the achievement you can have is: he wrote another book; the Sky is the limit; like that kamaṣam means what unhealthy habits of thinking; vigathaḥ means what they gradually come down; so vigata kalmaṣaḥ; ātmānam ēvam yuñjan;

When, sadā; When you find time you sit in a place and ask the question: what are the disturbing issues; you can keep graded; there are strongly disturbing issues; which has been there, perhaps years together, which requires special attention; like two types of diseases; for certain diseases OPD is enough; outpatient ward, you need not get admitted; see the doctor and eat two pills; it requires only taking pills now and then; but for certain problems, he will advise for immediate admission in the hospital; 35% or 75% block; then you have to get surgery done;

Similarly there are mild issues in which case you have to only be alert in your day to day transactions. That is also nidhidhyāsanam; but there are certain issues for which general alertness is not sufficient; you have to get admitted; means what; you have to sit and ask the questions: Oh Mind why are you disturbed by that; and look at in the light of Vēdānta; ask the question, can you change the situation; or is it choiceless; if you can change better work on changing; rather than working on worrying; And if you cannot change at all; learn to reorient mind to withstand the changeless situations; thereafter one should not talk about that situation again and again; because after knowing that it cannot be changed, what is the use of talking; I stop talking about the disturbing situation; I talk about the change required in my mind to withstand the situation; that is a worthwhile effort.

If I am talking a picture in a camera; and suppose the distance is not sufficient, some more distance is required; I can ask you to go back and suppose you cannot go behind; Kodaikanal hills; you cannot go behind; what you do; you go behind; create distance, either you go or I go; choiceless situation has come; I know situations cannot be changed; therefore start working on what; your own mind; and toughen it; and tougher it gets; lesser the impact of the choiceless situation will become; Therefore the world if you can; otherwise change your mind, stop complaining and worrying;

So therefore, this vigata kalmaṣaḥ sadā; sadā means regular alertness plus particular attention for serious worries. And if this is done, this yōgi attains what? atyantam sukham aśnutē. Is it difficult; सुखेन sukhēna, it is not a difficult thing, it is very easy; it only requires only application, initiative; anything will appear difficult in the beginning, if you do not sit down for years together, sitting down is also a project; or else even you are not even aware that you are sitting down; you do not remember, so anything is only appropriate application, then, sukhēna, anayasama, effortlessly, we grow in Vēdānta, and we see the result also.

Jeevan mukthi is an experienced result; because mana śānti is not something which is elsewhere; who will know whether my mind is śāntham or not; you alone. So śānti is something I experience here and now;

And it is Krishna's guarantee card; so sukhēna aśnutē; and this ānanda comes from where; not from external world; ब्रह्मसंस्पर्शम् brahma saṁsparśam; which is borne out of association with Brahman, my owning up of Brahman. Brahman means ātman, ātman means my higher nature; so this ananda is borne out of my owning up of my higher nature. So literally saṁsparśam contact with Brahman, if you literally take that Brahman is sitting there and you are here etc. like the electric cord connection, one plug point in Brahman and one point in your body; and the ānanda flow slowly flows, do not think like that; here saṁsparśa is only a figurative word, born out of owning up my svarūpam and that ānanda he enjoys.

Now does it mean that he should enjoy the ananda of the world; no sāstra does not bank viṣayānanda; as long as it is dhārmic; not that jñāni should not see or hear a beautiful music programme; as he is enjoying Brahmānanda and should not enjoy viṣayānanda! not like that, you have got sense organs; there are many legitimate viṣayānanda you can have perfectly alright; but the advantage is what; once I have got brahmānanda; is like having a generator inside; as long as viṣayānanda, the corporation power is there; you use it; when that is off, Oh current is gone you say, you did not worry, start your generator. Similarly when viṣayānanda is there; certainly jñāni is going to appreciate the beauty; but when it goes he is not worried because it is automatically connected to the Brahmānanda; atyantam sukham aśnutē; this is called jīvan mukti; more about which we will see in the next class.

Om

Lord Krishna is talking about the benefits of Vēdāntic meditation in these verses and Vēdāntic meditation is dwelling upon the Vēdāntic teaching, which I have received from the guru. And by dwelling upon the Vēdāntic teaching; the teaching gets thoroughly assimilated into my personality; and the indication of the assimilation of this teaching is I do not forget this teaching even at the time of worldly transactions; When the teaching is not assimilated; it will be available for me only at the time of śravaṇam; and once I put on my chappals and go home, the teaching also disappears; and my old personality comes. This is the indication of unassimilated teaching. It is not that I do not have jñānam, I have jñānam and I can clearly present the jñānam to others also, but the jñānam does not help me, during transaction, especially during crisis or problem.

And this knowledge we are not interested in because, a knowledge which does not help me in day to day life is useless knowledge; ஏட்டு சுரைக்காய் கறிக்கு உதவாது ēṭṭu curaikkāy kaṛikku utavātu; Therefore it is not enough that I receive the teaching; I should be able to assimilate also; and the only way of assimilation is spending time. Unless you are willing to spend time on this teaching; there is no way of assimilation. Just as when they construct the wall or a roof, to make the wall and well-set, they do the job of curing, that is pouring water; the more the water is poured and gets absorbed in the wall or roofing; the more well set it is; and therefore the question is am I willing to give time for Vēdānta. And giving time is nidhidhyāsanam. and the benefit of giving time is my personality gets cured personality, the teaching sinks and the indication is in and through all the transactions, I do not forget the teaching.

And what is that teaching which I do not forget. Krishna reminds us of the teaching; the three layers of teaching; which I had mentioned before:

The first stage of teaching is I am not the body mind complex; but I am the consciousness inhering the body, mind complex. I am the ātma, not the anātma; I am the dēhi; not the dēha; I am the spirit; not the matter; and the second stage of teaching is I, the consciousness, which inheres this body, not only inheres this body, but the very same consciousness is inherent in all the bodies; Therefore I the consciousness is in every body; First lesson is I the consciousness am different from the body and pervading the body; the second level of teaching is not only I pervade this body; but I pervade, I inhere every body,

And the third and final level of teaching is in fact, I am not in everybody, in fact, I am not in everybody; on the other hand, all the bodies are in Me; the space like consciousness; When I say I am in every body, it is called antaryāmitvyam; when I say everybody is in me, it means sarva ādhāratvam; thus ātma is sarva antaryāmi; then later stage is ātma is sarva ādhāraḥ or adhiṣṭānam; It is like understanding this space I have told you before. First I talk about the space which is other than the wall, which is confined within this room. I say space is that which is available within this room, in which all the people are accommodated. And then I tell the space is not only in this room; space is in every room. And finally I say in fact space is not in the hall, on the other hand, all the halls are within the one all-pervading space. When you say space is within the room; it is called antaryāmitvyam; when you say all the rooms are in one-all pervading space, it is called sarvādhāratvam.

These three levels; ātma is different form body, dēha vilakṣaṇa; ātma is dēha antaryāmi; ātma is sarvadēha ādhāraḥ. This vision not only I should assimilate; I should never forget this even when the worst tragedy strikes my life; if I have to remember this, during difficult moments, it is possible only under one condition, I have to remember it when there are no problems. Is'nt it. If you invest money in the bank, when you are comfortable, then you can take that money during crisis. What you invest alone, what you can draw. If during the crisis, you want to draw from this knowledge, when you do not have crisis you have to invest in the form of nidhidhyāsanam; in the heart you have to keep on telling. Then it becomes saturated with this knowledge; Then during the crisis you need not deliberately drop, this knowledge will come; and therefore nidhidhyāsanam is giving solid time for Vēdānta; The more you can give, the more you are investing; the more you are investing, the more you can draw. It is a very simple economic law. And this yōgi has done that and therefore Krishna says,

ईक्षते योगयुक्तात्मा सर्वत्र समदर्शनः ॥ ६.२९ ॥

sarvabhūtaṣṭhamātmānaṃ sarvabhūtāni ca"tmani |

īkṣatē yōgayuktātmā sarvatra samadarśanaḥ || 6.29 ||

योगयुक्तात्मा yōgayuktātmā one whose mind is disciplined through meditation

ईक्षते īkṣate perceives आत्मानम् ātmānam the Ātma सर्वभूतस्थम्

sarvabhutasttham in all beings च सर्वभूतानि ca sarvabhūtāni and all beings

आत्मनि ātmani in the Ātma समदर्शनः samadarśanaḥ he has the same vision

सर्वत्र sarvatra everywhere

29. One whose mind is disciplined through meditation perceives the Ātma in all beings and all beings in Ātma. He has the same vision everywhere.

योगयुक्तात्मा yōgayuktātmā; is the name of this jñāni; ātma means the mind; jñāni whose mind is yuktaḥ; yuktaḥ means disciplined or saturated with this knowledge. So with whatever field of knowledge the mind is saturated with, the mind will naturally think of that. If you are a musician dedicated to music, wherever you go, your mind will musically think; even when the baby cries, you will interpret in terms of music; sa ma pa da ni sa, it is crying, you will say that even in crying in svara. Why, you have dedicated your life. And if you are a scientist, as Newton was sitting under a tree and an apple falls, what will we do; immediately swallow; because we are established in food niṣṭā; therefore apple fell. We do not ask why it fell; only a scientist who is interested in the laws of the universe, even in the fall of the apple, he tries to think of an universal law. If you are an engineer, you will study that aspect; if you are a Vēdāntin, only think Vēdāntic ally.

And therefore yuktaḥ means saturated with the self-knowledge; because of what, yōgēna; because of the consistent practice of nidhidhyāsanam; by giving quality time to the thought of Vēdānta. Therefore yōga means nidhidhyāsanam; yuktaḥ means saturation; ātma means mind; yōga yukta ātma means the one whose mind has reached Vēdāntic saturation through Vēdāntic mediation. And such a person, सर्वत्र समदर्शनः sarvatra samadarśanaḥ; because he is used to dwelling upon ātma all the time; even when he interacts with the people, he does not lose sight of the ātma in everyone; the essential nature in everyone. And therefore sarvatra means in every human being, he sees the common feature, like the thread in and through all the beads of a mālā, the invisible thread, keeps all the mālās together, there is the inherent chaitanyam; the life principle, the consciousness principle, which is inherent in all. "He sees" (within quotes) not physically, but he appreciates.

Therefore sarvatra sama samadarśanaḥ means sarvatra ātma darśanaḥ. And it does not mean that he does not see difference; certainly he sees physically differences; certainly he sees the intellectual and emotional differences; but in and through the differences, he does not lose sight of the oneness of ātma. just as in and through all the ornaments; what do you see; sarvatra sama darśanam; even when you see bangle, when you see the chain, you know the bangle is different from the chain; chain is different from ring; but you all see the one gold inherent in all these ornaments; How do you know that; that is why you carefully preserve; because you know gold is valuable; therefore gold darśanam is sama darśanam; in and through the differences at the name and form level; so sarvatra samadarśanaḥ, yōga yuktamama, jñāna niṣṭā; he is no more jñāni; but he is jñāna niṣṭā;

And what is his vision; सर्वभूतस्थम् आत्मानम् sarvabhutasttham ātmānam; he sees the ātma as residing in every living being. Just as a person appreciates the space as present in every room, every hall, every pot, every cup, the space is within the hall. Similarly, ātma is within everyone, this is sarva antaryāmitva darśanam. And he also sees sarva bhūtani cha ātmani; the reverse vision; what is reverse vision; instead of saying space is within the hall, you begin to say, all the halls are not only halls, all the planets, all the stars, all the galaxies, they are in one space.

Similarly, ātma is not in the body; all the bodies are in the ātma; sarva bhūtani, bhūtam here means body or sariram; and sarva bhūtani all the bodies ātmani in the ātma he sees. And he is aware of this fact, what is that; ātma is imperishable and the bodies are perishable; anātma is perishable. And when he is looking for security in life; which we need; we certainly requirement entertainment; entertainment is available in anātma; ātma cannot give you any entertainment.

Therefore when you want to enjoy variety; when you want to appreciate beauty, make use of anātma; and when the anātma or the perishable things of the world are disappearing; and when you are looking for something permanent; then you cannot rely on the body part, that is the mistake we commit; jñāni never commits that mistake; he knows when security is needed; hold on to ātma; when ānanda is needed; hold on to ātma; when limitlessness is needed; hold on to ātma; and anything else other thing that you want, change the channel; anātma; only two channel; anātma and ātma channel. So you should know how to shift the channel; depending upon your need; and the greatest tragedy of human being is he expects security from insecure things, insecure people, insecure relationship, he needs security. And when he has wrong expectations; disappointment is the result. And that is why Krishna said in the 2nd chapter: nāsatō vidyatē bhāvō nābhāvō vidyatē sataḥ; ubhayōrapī dr̥ṣṭō'ntastvanayōstattvadarśibhiḥ (2.16); jñāni knows what to seek from where. If he is hungry, he will not go to ātma; ātma will not help you there; if you are hungry, you have to do bhavathi bhikṣām dēhi. But when you want permanance, but when you want immortality; do not expect that at the body level; Body is mortal; do not expect permanance in relationship level; you would be in trouble. Therefore, sarvabhūtastham ātmani paśyati; sarva bhūtānam ātmanicha paśyati; sarvatra sama darṣanaha jñāna niṣṭā. And how did he get this benefit; only by one method; giving time for Vēdānta;

यो मां पश्यति सर्वत्र सर्वं च मयि पश्यति ।

तस्याहं न प्रणश्यामि स च मे न प्रश्यति ॥ ६.३० ॥

yō māṃ paśyati sarvatra sarvaṃ ca mayi paśyati |

tasyāhaṃ na praṇaśyāmi sa ca mē na praṇaśyati || 6.30 ||

अहं न प्रणश्यामि ahaṃ na praṇaśyāmi I am not lost तस्य tasya to him यः पश्यति माम् yaḥ paśyati mām who sees Me, सर्वत्र च sarvatra ca everywhere पश्यति सर्वम् paśyati sarvam and sees everything मयि mayi in me सः च saḥ ca he also न च प्रणश्यति na ca praṇaśyati is not lost मे me to Me

30. I am not lost to him who sees Me everywhere and sees everything in Me. He also is not lost to Me.

Here in this verse, Krishna gives a small note. He is just briefly referring to a topic which he will discuss only later elaborately. And it is the topic of bhakthi. Krishna has not dealt with the topic of bhakthi in these chapters. Only from the 7th chapter, he is going to discuss the topic of bhakthi; but Krishna wants to briefly refer to that here and therefore He says that this appreciation of ātma everywhere is the greatest form of bhakthi. This appreciation of ātma everywhere, in and through everybody; and also knowing the fact that the ātma which is in every body is the ātma in this body also, and that ātma is my real nature, and therefore I am that ātma which is everywhere.

So Krishna wants to say sarvatra ātma darśanam is sarvatra īśvara darśanam; sarvatra ātma darśanam is sarvatra īśvara darśanam; and this is the highest form of bhakthi and therefore higher form of bhakthi is possible only through self-knowledge; any form of bhakthi practiced before self-knowledge is lower form of bhakthi. In lower form of bhakthi, Lord is not everywhere; Lord is confined to a place with a particular form. And Lord is subject to arrival; give darśanam to the devotee and make the devotee excited; and then the very same Lord tests the devotee by disappearing and making the devotee cry. In Bhāgavatham, the Gopika Gītām description is there, where they cry Lord left me. So the very idea that the Lord can arrive and depart indicate, I see the Lord as a finite entity, subject to arrival and departure; and such a form of bhakthi is a wonderful form of bhakthi as a stepping stone; but it is only a inferior bhakthi called aparā bhakthi; dvaita bhakthi or bhēda bhakthi. And after this apara bhakthi I have to gain self-knowledge, ātma jñānam and through that, I begin to recognise the ātma everywhere and Krishna says the all-pervading ātma is really Bhagavān.

A personal god is not real Bhagavān. It is only māya mānuṣa veṣaḥ/ Krishna himself talks about that later; He says people think I am a human being. अवजान्ति मां मूढाः; मानुषीं तनुम् आसिताम् avajānti mām mūḍhāḥ; strong word he uses; avajānti mām mūḍhāḥ; mānuṣīm tanum āsritām; they think I am a person with a particular form, not knowing परम् भावम् अजान्ताम् param bhāvam ajānatām.

And what is higher form of the Lord; ātma svarūpam is the higher form of the Lord. And therefore ātma darśanam is equal to īśvara darśanam. And therefore Krishna says yaha māṁ sarvatra paśyathi; yaḥ means what the very same jñāni of the previous verse, previous verse what did He say, he sees the ātma everywhere; and Krishna says that the jñāni sees the Lord everywhere; and if you combine these two verses, what is the idea you get, seeing ātma everywhere is seeing the Lord everywhere; and if ātma is caitanya svarūpam; God is also caitanya svarūpam; not an inert body, born to Dēvaki born on a particular day, Janmāṣṭami and going to svarga; on another day. That is not the real Krishna; if you say I love the Krishna, there is nothing wrong; Vēdānta says that is not the ultimate thing. Then what is the ultimate, यः मां सर्वत्र पश्यति yaḥ māṁ sarvatra paśyati; sarvatra means sarva śarīrēṣu. Bhagavān is there in every body as what; the very consciousness. So when you feel the sentiency of the body, you are in touch with God; you are in touch with God. All these details Krishna himself will say later; you need not close the eyes to see the Lord; in fact you are experiencing the Lord in the form of the very life principle in every living being. And not only he sees the Lord in everyone; he sees the reverse also; what is that; he sees everyone in the Lord; he sees everyone means all the bodies in God: विश्वाधारम् गगन सदृशम् viśvādihāram gavana sadṛśam; so Lord is comparable to gaganam; ākaśam. If Lord is comparable to space, what is the form of God; it cannot be Krishna form; cannot be Rāma form; it cannot be devi form; it should be formless; the real all-pervading God is formless ātma only.

Then why we do worship form? We have to worship form because to appreciate formless God, the mind has to be sensitised; the mind has to be made subtle. Until the mind is subtle; we require a formed God, and once we have prepared the mind, we should know formed God is not the ultimate; the formless God alone is the real one; and jñāni appreciates that Lord, where? everywhere: and what is the advantage of this appreciation. If you see the Lord as the very ātma in everyone, including this body, what is the advantage, the advantage is you are ever with the Lord. There is no question of Lord coming; and then showing you the hand and blessing I gave varam, etc. and there itself; तत्रैवान्तर ददौ प्रभुः tatraivāntar dadai prabhuḥ; வரம் கொடுத்தார்; போயிட்டார் varam koṭuttār; pōyittār; and आवाहयामि; and āvāhayāmi. Not only Bhagavān comes and goes; we also invite Bhagavān; asmin haridra bhimbe sumukam mahaganapathim, dhyayami, avahayami; we call him; and poor Bhagavān, he has to come when we call him, whenever we like; and after giving two small lumps of kalkandu. And then we say yatha sthanam prathistapayami; daily sandhya vandanam also; uttame shikare devi bhuhmyam parvatha murthaye; thereafter gacha devi yathasukha; gayathri invited; gayathri avahayami; savithrim avahayami; and put them inside (I am telling all these only for those who do the sandhyavandanam!), at the end of sandhyavandanam; Oh Gayathri d ēvi gaccha; please go and come tomorrow; so poor God has been made miserable, limited, finite, entity, subject to your invitation and dismissal; do you think that such a God will be the ultimate truth. Never; the all pervasive Lord can never be subject to arrival.

Therefore Krishna says; तस्य tasyā for such a jñāni devotee, for such a jñāni devotee; aham na praṇaśyami; I will never disappear; I will never go away from him; he will never miss the Lord; and that is why he cannot be threatend by any human being; he cannot be blackmailed by any human being, because Lord is within; or else what we will do; we say, if you do like this, we will leave you and go; so therefore in every relationship people threaten and blackmail because we are emotionally dependent; jñāni cannot be threatened, if anybody says, I will reject you, he will say, போனால் போகட்டும், பேஷா போடா pōṅāḷ pōkaṭṭum, pēṣā pōṭā. Why should I dependent on anyone; when I have Lord with me permanently; who will never reject me and who cannot reject me.

That is why they said: I think Birbal or somebody told Akbar; that you are superior to God; because you can do something which God cannot do; so you are more powerful than God; you can do something, which God cannot do. So the King was very happy; see how he does that; What is that I can do and God cannot do? You can banish any one out of your kingdom; whereas cannot banish anyone out of his kingdom; why; did not you understand; So even the omnipotent God cannot reject because, where will be push you; wherever you are pushed, He is there; 'He is' within quotes; Ladies do not get wild; He or She, there is no he or she or it; it is beyond gender.

न श्री पुमान् न च नप्पुंसक एक बीजम् ॥ nā san na sanna satasanna aham na jāṇu
na srī pumān na ca nappuṁsaka ēka bījam ||

When you go to the highest form of Lord; it is beyond all these gender, number and all those things. Therefore Krishna says for that devotee, I never disappear; not only that; स च मे न प्रश्यति sa ca mē na praṇaśyati; He also does not disappear from me, He does not get away from me; we are in separable one. Whereas in all other forms of bhakti, God comes into my life and God goes away, whereas in the case of jñāni bhaktha, God and himself are inseparable. In the 7th chapter, Krishna will say, jñāni tu ātmaiva me matham. In fact, inseparable is not the word; I am He, He is I; so sa ca mē na praṇaśyati. Here the word praṇaśyati means does not disappear from me; nas adarśane; the root nas in Sanskrit means to disappear; to be away from me. So what is the benefit of nidhidhyāsanam; you become the greatest bhaktha of the Lord.

31. One who has attained (the vision of) oneness worships Me who am present in all beings. That Yōgi abides in Me, though engaged every way.

And in this level of highest Bhakti, the expression of bhakti also differs; previously I looked upon God as a person; with all the limitations and weaknesses of human beings; because I looked upon God also as a human being, hungry, thirsty, even dirty and therefore my expression of Bhakti also was in that manner; I have to take bath because I become dirty. And therefore when I look upon God also as a human being, He should be also be bathed regularly; snanam samarpayami; snanatharanam achamaneeyam samarpayami; thereafter vastram samarpayami; that too not original vasthram; vastraratham akshathan samarpayami; so God requires dress to protect Him from impurity; and abharanatham akshathan samarpayami; God also requires decorating like I; all those things; ṣodaśa upacārā depends upon my appreciation of God as a person but when I know the impersonal ultimate absolute God; I see the upacārās are really apacārās. If someone comes near you and you say: please take bath and come, if you say that what is it; it is an insult; indirectly saying that you are impure.

Sankaracharya wrote a beautiful work called parā pūja and in that parā pūja he says Oh Lord how can I offer you āsanam; In fact, you are the substratum on which the whole cosmos is resting and how can I offer a 2-1/2 or one feet palaki, it is my limited narrow mind which thinks of offering āsanam; offering pādyam; offering argyam; washing the hand, washing the feet to the Lord who is handless; and feetless;

Mundaka

And therefore in fact, the offering the regular pūja appears meaningless; and irrelevant to Him; and even inviting God is meaningless for Him, he need invite God because God has never been away from him. And therefore an jñāni's expression of devotion is appreciation of the very nature of God. Very jñānam itself is the expression of Bhakthi. Therefore he says; Yaḥ this jñāna niṣṭā, this greatest bhaktha of mine, mām bhajathi; worships me; not in the regular form of ṣodaśa upacārā pūja with ekadasa dravyam abhishekam and all; he will not do that; and how does he worship; the very perception of me everywhere is the expression of bhakthi; so ekatvam asthithaha san bhajathi; resorting to the vision of the Lord to oneness; so resorting asthithaha; resorting to the vision of what; ekatvam advitheyatvam, the infinite nature of the Lord.

And where is it located; सर्वभूतस्थितं sarvabhūtasthitam; and which Lord is present in every living being as the very life because of which they are alive; and therefore sarvabhūtasthitam; caitanya rūpam īśvaram, ekathva drishtim asthitha; remaining in advaita drisṭi, he worships me, there is no special action of devotion. And that is why when they take to this jñānam; and they take to the sanyāsa āśrama; they need not do any form of regular worship, in the four āśrama scheme, sanyāsi need not do any formal worship; if a sanyāsi has a Matha to which devotees come, for the sake of devotees, he may do pūja, but it is a compromised practice, but as far as a sanyāsi is concerned, he does not have any pūja at all; because his pūja is in the form of the very jñāna yajñā he does; the very appreciation of the Lord is His pūja.

And therefore सर्वथा वर्तमानोऽपि sarvathā vartamānō'pi; even though he does not practice any regular religion as people practice, with pūja room, pūja dravyam; he does not do with all that; and he does not perform any other rituals like sandyavandanam, agnihōtram, etc. and he appears the most irreligious person; he does not do anything; whether Bhakthi has gone; that is why people think Vēdānta means bhakthi is gone; his bhakthi has reached invisible dimensions. At home also; initially you express your love in the form of kissing, embracing also; when you are a child; and thereafter even though you do not express, in Indian culture, there is no question of regular phoning up and saying I love you I love you, etc. (you have to do that only when things are in doubt) and regular card needs to be sent; birthday, mother day card, father day card, valentine card I love you card, and it ends with valentine day! when there is true love it need not; I do not say I should not, it need not be also; jñāni's bhakti is the most highest and refined bhakthi, which is never expressed in the regular form.

And therefore, sarvathā vartamānō'pi, whatever be the lifestyle such a jñāni chooses, whatever be the āśrama that he is in; he might be in brahmacharya āśrama; or he might be in grihastha āśrama doing business; or he might be in vanaprastha āśrama, what profession you have, what type of lifestyle you have, that does not matter, you can be where you are doing your own duties, the transformation is within. External transformation is not compulsory, internal transformation is important. Saha yōgi, such a jñāni, such a jñāna niṣṭhā; मयि वर्तते mayi vartatē, he is in me; he need not go to temples to see God; because for him, God is not confined to a temple; an initial stages we require; the higher stages, the whole creation is the abode of the Lord.

That is why they tell the story also; when a jñāni was sleeping in a temple; and he was stretching his leg towards the Śivaliṅga there; all the other devotees said: it is a sacrilege; how can you stretch; your leg towards the Lord; because for that devotee, the Lord is in that direction; therefore the jñāni wanted to teach a lesson; therefore the jñāni said, you can turn my leg to a direction in which God is not there; and this person turned the leg, then he said another Śivaliṅgam appeared there; another shivaliṅgam appeared here, turned, it is symbolic form; and then he understood that there is no question of this direction or that direction; I do not say that you should also doing that right now saying Swamiji has said: that is the ripe stage of jñānam. And therefore saha yōgi mayi vartatē; he is always in me; I am always in Him; we are inseparable.

सुखं वा यदि व दुःखं स योगी परमो मतः ॥ ६.३२ ॥

ātmaupamyēna sarvatra samaṃ paśyati yō'rjuna |

sukhaṃ vā yadi vā duḥkhaṃ sa yōgī paramō mataḥ || 6.32 ||

अर्जुन arjuna Oh! Arjuna आत्मौपम्येन ātmaupamyena keeping himself as the standard सः योगी saḥ yōg ī that Yōg ī यः पश्यति yaḥ paśyati who sees सुखं वा sukhaṃ vā pleasure यदि वा दुःखम् yadi vā duḥkham and pain समम् samam alike सर्वत्र sarvatra in all मतः mataḥ is considered to be परमः paramaḥ the greatest

32. Oh Arjuna! Keeping himself as the standard, that yōg ī who sees pleasures and plain alike in all is considered to be the greatest.

So here Krishna says a jñāni's mind expands to such an extent; that he identifies with all the bodies as his own body; previously he was identified with one body only; now he knows I am the ātma, not only behind this body, I am the very ātma behind all the bodies. And therefore all the bodies becomes like my bodies, my hands, and my legs. And because of this universal identification; Krishna says a jñāni cannot hurt anyone; because hurting any living being is as though hurting himself; because of universal identification. Previously I could comfortably hurt anyone; except my own body; but now it is not possible. Therefore jñāni becomes an embodiment of compassion; an embodiment of sympathy; an embodiment of ahimsa; because if anyone feels pain, he also is capable of sensing the pain of everyone; he has that empathy by which he intensely appreciates the pain of everyone; and therefore he cannot pain anyone; he cannot cause pain to anyone; and if there is pain to anyone; then immediately and automatically, he goes to his rescue.

And therefore Krishna says आत्मौपम्येन सर्वत्र पश्यति ātmaupamyēna sarvatra paśyati; he looks at every living being, as himself; because the same ātma is in everyone; so ātmaupamyēna; taking himself as a standard he looks at every living being. Samam paśyati yaha Arjuna, he does not have any partiality or selfishness; he does not consider his body as more important than other bodies; because all the bodies he equally identifies with; therefore समं पश्यति योऽर्जुन samam paśyati yō'rjuna.

And therefore he follows this universal value; what is the universal value; what I do not want others to do to me; I should not do to others; because others are exactly like me; if I do not want to be hurt; nobody wants to be hurt; and therefore I cannot be the cause of hurt, in the case of anyone and therefore, samam paśyati yaha Arjuna; सुखं वा यदि व दुःखं sukham vā yadi vā duḥkham.

So whether it is with regard to sukham; that means what, if I am happy; if I have got something favourable; I am happy. Similarly when any human being has got something favourable, jñāni is able to be happy with others' happiness; not going to become jealous; I did not get; he got, no jealous; because he identifies with everyone; for anybody is happy, it is as though his happiness; anybody is sorrowful, it is as though his sorrow. And therefore the universal identification or a jñāni is indicated; universal love of a jñāni is indicated. So sukham vā yadi vā duḥkham, saha yōgi; and such a jñāni is परमः paramaḥ; is the greatest person in the world; he is the greatest yōgi, he is the most accomplished person.

And therefore, the benefit of knowledge is universal love. There is a general complaint, pursuit of Vēdānta is selfishness; because one is working for one's own liberation; and especially if he takes to Sanyāsa the society complains that he does not contribute to the society, he wants to go to the forest; he wants to get self knowledge, he wants to get liberated; it is selfishness people think; but Krishna says jñāni is selfish; in fact he withdraws from one family, so that he can identify with all the families of the world; he withdraws from one house, so that he can identify with all; he breaks a few finite relationships so that he can be related to the whole world; it is a withdrawal for the sake of expansion. I do not want to belong to a few people. I want to belong to the whole universe. Therefore self-knowledge is a withdrawal for expansion; self-knowledge is a withdrawal from finite; so that I can expand to identify with the whole world.

Therefore śāstra says either do not identify with anyone, or identify with everyone; what is tragedy is you identify with only a few people; naam iruvar; namakku iruvar or oruvar; 3 levels; naam irvuvar, namakku oruvar; naame kuzhandai, namaken kuzhandai. Therefore Vēdānta says; do not identify with four people; sanyasa is withdrawal from limited identification; so that I can have limitless identification. You destroy your narrow I; to replace it with universal I; jñāni cannot say I am an Indian, am a Tamilian; am an Asian; because all these are narrow minded I should identify with aham nija paro vetti gaṇanā laghucetasām; udāra caritām tu vasudeva kuḍumbakam

माता तु पार्वति देवि पिता देवो महेश्वरा भान्दवा शिव भक्तास्चा स्वदेशो भुवनत्रयम्

mātā tu pārvati devi pitā dēvo maheśvarā bhāṇdavā śiva bhaktāscā svadeśo (not India) bhuvanatrayam

I belong to the whole creation; and every living being belongs to me; this expansion, this universal love, this universal compassion is the result of jñāna niṣṭā.

With the 32nd verse of the 6th chapter, Lord Krishna completes the topic of dhyāna phalam, that is the benefit of Vēdāntic meditation. In these 32 verses of the 6th chapter, Krishna had dealt with dhyāna bahiraṅga sādhanāni, general disciplines to be observed by a meditator; then dhyāna antaraṅga sādhanāni, specific disciplines to be observed just before starting the meditation. Then Krishna talked about the dhyāna svarūpam, the actual process of meditation; consisting of dhāraṇa, dhyāna samādhi. To put in simple language, dwelling upon the Vēdāntic teaching, which has been received from the guru. And the fourth and final topic that we saw was dhyāna phalam, the benefit of practicing the meditation. And the benefit that Krishna mentioned was that knowledge received at the time of śravaṇam or learning from the teacher, the knowledge gets totally assimilated into the personality. And it gets assimilated to such a level, that it transforms my core personality and because of the transformation of my core personality, my very perceptive of life, my perspective towards the world and people, my very attitude to the varieties of experiences in life will undergo a radical change. And this healthy attitudinal change is the result of Vēdāntic meditation; and because of this transformation, the world which could disturb before loses its capacity to unsettle me. Because according to Vēdānta; whether the world should disturb me or not; is not determined by the world; but it is determined by me alone. It is I who has to decide whether I should allow the world to disturb me or not.

So the Vēdāntic project is changing the world to my what you call, likes and dislikes but making the world incapable of disturbing me; and this conversion takes place purely because of attitudinal change; and change of attitude is definitely because of change of understanding of myself and the world, and this is called jñāna niṣṭhā;

So thus through śravaṇam and mananam, one gets jñānam; through nidhidhyāsanam, one converts jñānam into jñāna niṣṭā; and Krishna said as a result of this, there is samadarśanam; and there is the highest ānanda and the devotion towards the Lord reaches its peak and the final benefit Krishna mentioned was universal compassion. These are all the benefits of nidhidhyasanam; which is otherwise called jīvanmukti; I am no more under the tyranny of the world and its people. And this inner psychological freedom is jīvanmukti phalam. So thus four topics have been completed in the first 32 verses; bahiraṅga sādhanām; and antaraṅga sādhanām; dhyāna svarūpam and dhyāna phalam.

Now we are entering the fifth topic with regard to the meditation; which is also an important topic and Krishna is going to discuss this based on a question from Arjuna and as an answer to Arjuna question, the fifth topic is going to be introduced; we will enter into that.

was imparted by You, साम्येन sāmyena as sameness (of Vision)

33. Arjuna said – Oh Krishna! Because of restlessness, I do not see the steady existence of this (yoga) which Yoga was imparted by you as sameness (of vision).

The fifth topic which we are going to deal with is from this verse 33 up to verse No.36; and the topic is the obstacles to the practice of meditation; and their remedies. The obstacles to the practice of meditation; dhyāna vighnaḥ; dhyāna pratibandhaḥ; dhyāna antharāyaḥ; antharāyaḥ means prathibandam; and parihāraḥ; and the solutions for them. And in our scriptures four types of obstacles are mentioned. And this has been discussed in Māndūkya kārika, written by Gouda pādācārya. It has got four chapters at the end of the third chapter, Gaudapādācārya deals with meditation, viz., naming it manō nigrahaḥ;

दुःख कषाय प्रभोदस्च अभ्यक्ष्य शान्तिरेव च ॥

manaso nigraha yatham abhayam sarva yōgīnām |
duḥkha kaṣāya prabhōdasca abhyakṣya śāntirēva ca ||

There he discusses meditation in 10 verses, naming it manō nigrahaḥ, disciplining the mind. Because undisciplined mind is an obstacle to the Vēdāntic study. If the mind is undisciplined, Vēdāntic study remains intellectual; and it does not benefit me in my day-to-day life. It is not the lack of knowledge, but it is the obstacle in the form of indiscipline of the mind; and therefore manō nigrahaḥ, mastery, management or discipline is prescribed, not for all, but only for certain people; and who are those certain people; those whose study Vēdānta understand Vēdānta and directly enjoy the benefit of śānti, abhayam, etc. that is a mind which is relaxed, which is free from tension, which is light, which is happy, which is secure. If I am able to enjoy the benefit, straight from the study of Vēdānta, it means I do not have the obstacle in the form of mental indiscipline. When should I infer mental indiscipline. When I study Vēdānta and Vēdānta remains in one corner and in my day-to-day life, my emotional problems continue. Thus I have a got a double personality; one side I brilliantly declare, Aham Brahmāsmi; and not only declare I can quote all the Upaniṣads left and right and in fact I can give wonderful lectures also; and even I become popular as a guru also. Suppose all these are there, but emotionally, I am frustrated, unhappy, tension, worried, that means what, there is a gap between what I know and what I am. If I have got these symptoms, my problem is what, not lack of knowledge, but my problem is lack of mental discipline and therefore Vēdānta says, you require a separate exercise for mental discipline called manō nigrahaḥ;

And therefore Vēdāntic meditation is not compulsory for all; only in the case of those people, where they find a gap between what I know and what I am. If you feel that there is no use after study of Vēdānta, the problem is elsewhere. And since this problem is also for many people, sāstra discusses manō nigrahaḥ as a discipline to be practiced after the study of Vēdānta.

Now the question comes, how come only some people have this problem; and some people do not have the problem. They listen to the scriptures; as even they listen and gain the knowledge, they enjoy the benefit of sthiraprajñā; duḥkhēṣvanudvignamanāḥ sukhēṣu vigatasprahaḥ; they do not feel the necessity of meditation; why it is so for some people. For that also, śāstrā gives the answer; before studying Vēdānta; śāstrā has prescribed certain qualifications; what is that qualification called: Do you remember? sādānā catuṣṭāya sampathī. When a student studies Vēdānta, with sādānā catuṣṭāya sampathī, with the eligibility prescribed, sṛavaṇam māthrena, sthiraprajñā and jīvan muktisca labhyate. For them nidhidhyāsanam is not necessary. It is not that śāstrā says; they themselves get the benefit; therefore they do not see the necessity. But generally, we go through the back doors, without acquiring the qualifications; we study Vēdānta and therefore for the unqualified people, Vēdāntic study should be followed by compulsory Vēdāntic meditation.

This Śankarācārya makes very clear; in his commentary of Gaudapāda kārīka and Krishna also gives this mediation, because Krishna knows Arjuna has the problem. And not only that, Arjuna himself confesses that I have this problem; I have the knowledge but I do not get the benefit that is promised. And therefore in the Māndūkya kārīka, in the name of manō nigrahaḥ, Vēdāntic meditation is prescribed, and their four obstacles are mentioned and Krishna does not deal with all the four obstacles here.

So Krishna does not deal with all of them here, I thought I will just briefly mention them; लयः विक्लेषः काषायः and रसास्वादः (layaḥ vikṣepaḥ kāṣāyaḥ and rasāsvādaḥ); these are the four obstacles which stand in between me and my meditation;

layaḥ means the dullness of the mind or sleepiness of the mind. This is one universal complaint; when we sit for meditation, Swamiji, we end up dozing. and many people guilty; you need not feel because this is a universal problem; and that is why whenever we have group mediation, we switch off the lights; so that your face is saved; So sleep is a common problem; and that is called tamas dominant.

And the second obstacle is called vikṣepaḥ; the mind is not under active, but the mind is overactive; the other extreme. So instead of sleeping, it is hyper active, therefore it travels all over the world, it thinks of everything else except Vēdānta; except for what purpose we sat, all other things happen; this is called vikṣepaḥ; wandering mind, extrovertedness of the mind; and

The third one is called kāṣāyaḥ; kāṣāyaḥ means, the mind getting into a state of stuntedness, inactivity; the mind becomes non-functional, that is neither asleep, nor does it wander; just comes to a state, that it does not function at all; it is the sthādi bhāvaḥ; it is called, another text book dealing with the topic; that is drk-dryasa viveka; there Vidyārāṇyā discusses, he calls this sthādi bhāva; manas gets sthambikkal. When you get a shocking news, what happens to the mind; the mind stops. it does not know how to react; sometimes when people get a tragic news, they do not react at all; they do not even cry. Home they brought the warrior dead, there was a poem; when the warrior's dead body is brought, his wife does not cry; not because she is jīvan muktaḥ; but so deep is the shock, that the mind does not know how to react; stunned condition; got stunned; suppose you turn behind and you see a huge elephant standing without the mahout; a wild elephant standing when you turn; you will not know for a minute what to do; whether to run or to stand there itself, etc. It is called stunned state; sthādi bhāvaḥ; kāṣāyaḥ.

Now in that poem which comes, so many people think that if a person keeps a deep grief inside the mind, without expressing the sorrow, it can kill that person, suppressed trauma or sorrow can kill a person and therefore they try to make her cry. Different people say different thing, she refuses. And then an old lady comes, brings the child and push the child to the lap of the mother. Suddenly she thinks of that man, what will I tell my son when he grows up and she starts weeping in torrents; tears comes. So in our culture also that making the person cry; the idea is in extreme emotions the mind has the capacity to fold. It is exactly like in an accident when the pain goes beyond a limit, the brain has the capacity to fold that you do not feel the pain at all; the pain mechanism is temporarily stopped; because it has reached beyond the limit; it is just like fuse wire; automatically fuse gets cut off. We have got a physical fuse wire; in extreme accidents; the body will not feel pain; the brain closes; This is not only at the physical plane, it happens at emotional level also; in extreme situations, the mind knows how to stop its functioning and therefore the pain goes inside; And when will the pain come; after some time; the pain comes when we are ready to receive; it is a God-built mechanism; when such pains are there; such traumatic experiences are there; the mind can get stunned; Sankaracharya defines it rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ-vīryam; strong likes and dislikes in potential form stuns the mind; that is why in extreme happiness also. Suppose you did not expect your son to come from America; he says he will not come and suddenly you open the door and he is standing in front; playing fun and he comes; and you say I did not know what to do; as if the hands and legs are died; not only in pain; in extreme happiness also we do not know what to do. So thus intense rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ in potential condition is called kāṣāyaḥ and when it gets activated in meditation; then the mind goes to a state of stunned condition called kāṣāyaḥ;

And then comes the last one; rasavādaḥ; this state of meditation itself gives some relaxation; and some pleasant feeling; because mind is relaxed, intellect is relaxed; body is relaxed; there is a pleasure; there is a comfort; there is a joy which is called rasaha. And this joy is not ātmananda or Brahmānanda, because this joy experienced during meditation only is a conditional joy. You enjoy it at the time of meditation; at the time of quietude and you enjoy and when you come out, the joy goes out. So therefore, a pleasure that is experienced only during meditation is not mukti or Brahmānanda; the definition of Brahmānanda is sense of completeness and fullness which is there throughout.

And therefore, when I get that pleasure I should not be enamoured by that pleasure, if I am carried away by that pleasure, it becomes an obstacle for Vēdāntic assimilation/ And therefore it is called rasa āsvādaḥ; it is something like a sensory pleasure; another form of sensory pleasure, it is an obstacle. And not only that, when a person begins to enjoy that pleasure, he or she feels that I should be sitting in meditation all the time. Then you do not feel like coming and taking up your duty; then if any duty comes, you get angry; if anybody calls you get angry; phone rings you get angry; if a friend comes you get angry; you want all the time sit cosily in meditation; therefore it becomes an addiction.

And therefore Vēdāntic meditation; not to enjoy happiness in a particular condition to be full and complete, in and through all the conditions; if withdrawal gives you pleasure, it is conditional pleasure; jñāni's ānanda is पश्यन्, सिष्वन्, स्पर्शन्, जिग्नन् paśyan sriṅvan, sparśan, jignan; therefore rasasvādaḥ, enjoying meditation pleasure is an obstacle.

Then what should you do; instead of enjoying the pleasure, you have to dwell upon the teaching; which says you are ānanda; not only during meditation, but also during an active life.

So these are four obstacles and what are the remedies.

Gaudapāda himself says: the sleep should be countered by two methods; one is removing the cause of sleep and also by practice.

So what are causes of sleep? So the sāstra discusses everything; no job for us; everything they have discussed; only we have to read; but unfortunately it is in Sanskrit.

And what is that; bahu aśana, ajīrṇa, bahu aśanam means over eating; with a full stomach you go to meditation; all the blood circulation is in the madhya pradesh therefore utara pradesh is gone; switched off; So bahu aśana.

And the next one is ajīrṇa; so if there is ajīrṇa; stomach mandam; when stomach is mandam; buddhi also becomes mandam; ajīrṇa;

Nidrā śeśaḥ; nidrā śeśaḥ means there is a backlog of sleep; that is your body requires certain amount of sleep, if you do not give the required amount of sleep; in your over enthusiasm; you get up at 2.30 a.m. and practice meditation till 6 a.m. Your body and mind wants sleep but force them to do meditation; What will they say; I will see you; you are going to go to the Gītā class; I will catch you there; and wake up; Therefore give the devil its due; like that whatever is required amount of sleep, you give; these are all removing the cause. Nidrā śeśaḥ, bahu aśana, ajīrṇādi nivāraṇa dvārēṇa. That is one thing.

The second thing is abyāsaḥ; the mind is never habituated to meditation; mind goes by the law of association; Pavlovian law; you ring a bell and give food to the dog; second day you ring and give food; third time you ring the bell, the dog begins to look for food; dog is not necessary; we are also like that; law of association; time comes, we get hungry. Similarly, what is our association; you sit quietly, you withdraw from all activities; you withdraw the sense organs also; you close your eyes; all these things you do; generally for what purpose; only during sleep you do all these things. Therefore the mind associates closing the eyes and withdrawal from the activities with the sleep alone. Therefore in meditation when you do all these things; mind thinks, Oh he is going to sleep sitting; the mind has to be trained; and the mind should know that this is the time of meditation; So by abhyāsaḥ the mind learns. This is the method of remedying the problem of sleep.

The next one is vikṣēpaḥ; how to handle a wandering mind. How to handle. For which the solution prescribed by Gaudapadācārya is abhyāsaḥ -vairagyabhyam tatsiddhi. Again abhyāsaḥ practice and vairagyam he presents, about which I will mention later which Krishna will himself deal with it. I will deal with it when Krishna himself does it and I do not want to independently deal with it.

And the third obstacle is as I said kāṣāyaḥ. When the mind has hidden complaints; suppressed sorrows; guilts, pain, anger, jealousy, which I could not express, due to various reasons. Then those things can stultify or stun the mind. Therefore when I sit in meditation, the mind can be immobilised because of suppressed emotions. And often the problem is I do not know which emotion I have suppressed and therefore the only thing we can do is what; keep quiet; and wait for the suppressed emotion to surface; only when it surfaces, we will know what is the problem? In 1953, my wife, made this statement. Now it is 2000. 1953 wife she behaved like this; that anger I am carrying even now. The mind is wonderful computer capable of storing all these experiences. So many good things have happened; all that is not stored; these negatives things are only stored in a deep way. and it will smart-suffer; And that it will suffer when there is ideal condition; When people decide to slow alone in Ashram, it can surface, because the other problems are not there.

Normally, in grihastha āśrama life, we have got present problems; therefore past problems cannot surface. So when you do not have any more present problems, you get to a quiet life in an āśrama, some of them can emerge; you should not surface, if you feel like crying, cry out; that is why many people you find, that when they go to the Bhagavān they will cry; when they go to the Swamijis, they will cry; we experience that; they cry in torrents; because of something.

So Gaudapāda says kāṣāyaḥ vijānīya; if there are suppressed emotions you let the steam out and if you want to shout, go the beach and shout. if you want to cry; cry.

Whatever you want to do; do. Do not suppress. kāṣāyaḥ vijānīya. A few meditations sessions will be crying sessions, anger sessions, jealousy sessions; so kāṣāyaḥ vijānīya.

Finally rasāsvādaḥ; rasāsvādaḥ is to be tackled by proper discrimination. That this pleasure that I enjoy in meditation is also conditional pleasure I should not become a slave of; On the other hand, I have to remind my nature; I am pūrṇaḥ not at the time of meditation; I am pūrṇaḥ all the time; I am asaṅgaḥ; all the time. So thus, vivekaḥ, discrimination is the remedy for rasāsvādaḥ problem. So these are the solutions.

Now Arjuna is talking about only one obstacle; what is that; wandering mind; Here Arjuna complains; hey Madhusūdhana; अयं योगः त्वया प्रोक्तः ayam yogaḥ tvayā proktaḥ; so this meditation of dwelling in the Vēdāntic teaching; deliberate dwelling in the Vēdāntic teaching; especially the teaching that I am the ātma, everything else is anātma; body belongs to the world; mind belongs to the world; and they are subject to the laws of creation, and laws of karma also; this ātma-anātma viveka; which I am supposed to invoke repeatedly during meditation; you have talked me; ayam yogaḥ; dhyāna yogaḥ tvayā proktaḥ; in what form; samyēna; in the form of sama ātma darśanam; dwelling upon my real nature, which is ever uniform, ever the same. That is my caitanya svarūpam; I as a witness consciousness am changeless, the body changes, the mind changes; they are all objects of my consciousness, I am the subject who is the witness of all of them; and therefore I am sama caitanyam asmi; This sama darśanam; ātma vṛttihi you have taught me.

But my problem is what; एतस्याहं स्थिराम् स्थितिं न पश्यामि ētasyāhaṁ sthirām sthitim na paśyāmi. I am able to receive the wisdom from you; I am able to receive the wisdom from you and I am able to understand also; because my intellect is reasonably good. You do not require extra ordinary intellect to receive Vēdāntic teaching; therefore Arjuna says, I am an adhikāri enough to receive this teaching; but my problem is what; it does not remain in my mind; I am not able to retain; reception is there; retention is not there.

That is why we divide the students into three types, based on reception and retention; uttama, madhyama, adama;

Uttama has got both; both means what; reception, that means he receives the teaching and retention; the teaching is available even during the worst crisis; and therefore he has the immunity; he has the withstanding capacity; shock absorber is there; he is uttama adhikari with reception, retention capacity;

The other extreme is adhama adhikāri; and what is the definition of adhama adikāri, the one who does not have both; neither reception; nor retention; in fact, there is no reception what can he retain; so therefore adhama adhikāri is not able to receive the teaching itself; it goes beyond; I do not understand anything; only if you understand, the question of whether it is retained or not arises; he did not understand at all. So this is adhama adhikāri;

Madhyama adhikāri is in-between; and majority will come under that only; what is that; reception is there; they understand; and they give the certificate to the teacher also; you are a good teacher; such a nice teacher, that we are able to receive Swamiji; but along with the chappal, our old personality comes; the ego-I overpowers aham brahmāsmi I. The small I overpowers the big-I;

And Arjuna says I also come under that category; I am madhyama adhikāri; therefore my problem is what; sthirām sthitim; retention continued presence of this knowledge, na paśyāmi; so in meditation also, I start with the thought of Vēdānta for two minutes and thereafter I have a world tour; without any paise expenditure; I have a free ride all over; and all because of what; चञ्चलत्वात् cañcalatvāt. Arjuna has deciphered his problem; he does not have perhaps laya problem, or rasa āsavāda; or anything; his problem is what; cañcalatvātvam; that is called rajoguna pradānatvam; Arjuna's problem is not tamo guna; but his problem is what; rajō gūna; rajō gūna means wandering mind; and therefore I have a problem. He expresses this problem more clearly in the next verse.

तस्याहं निग्रहं मन्ये वायोरिव सुदुष्करम् ॥ ६.३४ ॥

cañcalam hi manaḥ kṛṣṇa pramāthi balavad-dṛḍham |

tasyāham nigrahaṁ manyē vāyōriva suduṣkaram || 6.34 ||

कृष्ण kṛṣṇa Oh Krishna, मनः हि manaḥ hi the mind is indeed चञ्चलम् cañcalam fickle प्रमाथि pramāthi turbulent बलवत् balavat powerful दृढम् dṛḍham (and) firm, अहं मन्ये ahaṃ manye I consider तस्य निग्रहम् tasya nigraham it is restraint सुदुष्करम् suduṣkaram to be very difficult इव वायोः iva vāyoḥ like that of the wind.

34. Oh Krishna! The mind is indeed fickle, turbulent, powerful (and) firm. I consider its restraint to be very difficult like that of the wind.

And this mental problem of hyper activity is so intense in my age; and not only in my case, it is the general rule also. So Arjuna describes the mind here; Hey Krishna, मनः चञ्चलम् manaḥ cañcalam, the mind is highly active, fickle wandering; so cañcalam and प्रमाथि pramāthi; it is not only turbulent in itself; it makes all the other organs also turbulent. So it churns the entire personality; mathi is derived from the root matth, mathnāthi to churn. From that only matt comes; from that curd-churning matt came; nowadays if you say matt, no one understands; they might not have seen one. The bharata nātyam dancers have decided it seems that hereafter for this mudra, you should not use like this, but as if you switch on the mixi, for the taye-yasoda song; because now everyone does it in mixi; or else the audience will ask; what is this mudra you were showing;

So matt means churning rod; mind is like a churning rod; matt is inside the curd and when you are churning the whole thing become turbulent. Similarly when the mind is turbulent; it expresses at the external level also; mental fickle or turbulence expresses at the verbal level. When I am emotionally disturbed, mouth become active; either talking mouth, or eating mouth; so people eat; or talk; or do both; so therefore verbal activity increases when there is lot of disturbance. That is why you can see sometimes on the road; people will be talking and you will look for someone to whom they are talking; there will be none; you will find that they are talking alone; because the pressure is so much here in the neck; like volcano; not only it churns vācīkam the vāk indriyam; it also turns the other indriyam also; the eyes also you will find; when I do not have concentration in the mind; the eyes also wander; that is another indication; if I have got concentration, I can fix the eye on a particular person; even during conversation; you can find that some people cannot look at you and converse continuously; they will looking here and there; therefore the eyes roll; and the legs also, they walk up and down; extreme emotions; you want to think of a solution; why cant you sit down; you walk up and down; because when the mind is highly active, the body becomes active. As even we saw in the first chapter, when Arjuna was extremely disturbed, it overflowed into the indriya and body level.

Therefore pramādi means it activates all the organs, pancha jñānēndriyaṇi; pañca karmēndriyaṇi; all of them it churns; makes active; and बलवद् balavad; it is so powerful, even though intellectually you argue, mind sit quiet, by worrying future is not going to change. Suppose you are restless you have to catch a flight or train; and you are standing in the traffic signal, you just do honk, honk; or doing something; but the traffic signal would come only when it has to come. So even if the intellect tells worry is useless; worry will not change the situation; intellect tells the mind, but the mind does not obey; so mind becomes so powerful to conquer even the intellect; in normal course, mind is supposed to be as we saw in Kathōpaniṣad, mind is comparable to the reins and the intellect is comparable to the driver; normally intellect is more powerful than the mind; but you will find that if the mind is used to certain forms of thinking; mind is so powerful, that even if you console yourselves; you say; Swamiji I understand that one should not worry; but deep inside the stomach is churning like a turbulent ocean; it is saying buk buk; what to do; I tell also: you are brahman, I tell you also; you are Brahman, you are nitya mukta, buddha svabhāvaḥ; but the churning in the stomach continues; that is also happening;

So what is wrong; so therefore it is balavad; it conquers my wisdom, my intellect; and दृढम् dr̥ḍham; dr̥ḍham means what, it is so firm in its own field worrying or anxiety; So when commentator beautifully says: sahasra vāsanābi; because worrying is a vāsana; like initially when I choose to drink coffee; initially it is my intellectual decision; and therefore I decide whether to drink it or not; and if I do not give the coffee, the only the mind is obsessed; but later you find, if I take sufficiently for a few months or something, then the body itself gets used to that; thereafter you decide, I should not drink; the withdrawal symptoms are felt at the body level; why because I have created them; now even though I do not want them to happen; initially I created but now it is no more under my control. Similarly, certain ways of thinking initially we generate; there afterwards the mind knows how to go in that groove. And even though you decide to stop, mind will heckle at you and it will continue to do what it wants to do.

This is a peculiar situation or split personality; every Vēdāntin has to go through; intellect tells nothing to worry; mind just keeps worrying; and this is called orientation or vasana, and the only solution is we have to reorient the mind; and reorientation and conquering withdrawal systems is a painful affair; we have to go through; like a person who decides to stop drinking. Even though intellect has decided, he has to go through the full process; lot of problems; depression; this and that; for weeks or months or years together to remain sober they say; In fact according to Vēdānta, all of us are drunk; drunk means because of this emotional orientation; this worrying, fearing, these are all habits; and no habit can be broken suddenly; it requires lot of initiative, lot of planning, lot of time; Just as this person has to be sometime admitted into the hospital; that is called meditation; and then he has to face all of them and get out; similarly, get out of fear complex, getting out of depression. All these things will take time; this process in the śāstrā is called vāsana kśayāḥ; and until that comes, mind is firm in its own groove of reacting; remember the example I gave, to that stoic philosopher, when he was told, you have lost all the property, he asked what; that what is the vāsana reaction; and then suddenly he remembered Gītā class; OK; did he attend do not ask; he remembered the wisdom; one minute or two minutes he took; depends; then he said: so what:

That what, to so what; the time distance has to become lesser and lesser and that is directly proportional to vāsana kśayāḥ; it requires time; no other way; and therefore until then, it is dr̥ḍham; it is firm; in its own root of emotion; and because of this, Hey Krishna, तस्य निग्रहं सुदुष्करम् tasya nigrahaṁ suduṣkaram; weaning the mind from its own habitual responses, I extremely difficult; duśkaram means difficult; suduśkaram means extremely difficult like what; vayoor iva; like controlling the wind; can you stop the wind; you cannot; just as the wind cannot be stopped because it is not a concrete object to be stopped by the hand; similarly the mind is a subtle sensitive powerful instrument; you cannot just order the mind and say; stop worrying; I just smile at you and continue. Therefore Arjuna says that it is extremely difficult when I find it difficult just as they say; if I am not able to quit with my will power; I have to admit myself in the institution required; de-addiction institution. Similarly here also hey Krishna you have to help me; śiṣyastē'haṁ śādhi māṁ tvāṁ prapannam; take me out of my habitual emotional unhealthy responses; and tell me how to do that. Those details we will see in the next class.

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

अस्मद् आचार्य पर्यन्ताम् वन्दे गुरु परम्पराम्

sadāśiva samārambhāṁ śaṅkarācāryamadhyamām
asmad ācārya paryantām vandē guru paramparām

Om

Lord Krishna in the first part of this sixth chapter has comprehensively discussed the topic of meditation, consisting of four parts; the general disciplines required for successful meditation; the specific disciplines required for successful meditation; the actual process of meditation and finally the benefits of meditation; bahiraṅga sādhanā, antaraṅga sādhanā, dhyāna svarūpam and dhyāna phalam.

Now after completing this topic, now Arjuna is raising a question which is regarding the obstacles in the practice of meditation; and as I said in the last class, the scriptures do discuss the topic of obstacles; four of them; but in this context, Arjuna's specifically mentions a particular obstacle during meditation and Krishna presents the remedy; and therefore the present topic is dhyāna pratibānda parihārau; obstacle to meditation and its remedy; and the obstacle that Arjuna mentions is the wandering nature of the mind; and because of the wandering nature; one is not able to focus the mind in a particular field and meditation happens to be focusing the mind; by which I am supposed to dwell upon Vēdāntic teaching and if I should be able to dwell on the teaching; the mind should have the focus, but the does not have the focusing capacity, and therefore it wanders all over. And this nature of the mind is called vikṣepa; cañcalatvam; the waywardness of the mind.

And this Arjuna is presenting in verse No.33 and 34; and Arjuna points out that I have got sufficient mental steadiness to receive your teaching. I do not have a problem with regard to the understanding of Vēdānta; I am not that bad; I am not adhama adhikāri; I am madhyma adhikāri - intermediary - that is I am able to receive, but I am not able to retain it in the mind and as long as I do not practice this meditation, I will have jñānam, but jñāna niṣṭa would not be there and as long as jñāna niṣṭa is not there, there would not be transformation in my personality; and therefore mediation is a must for me; but I am not able to practice that; what should I do; and even if try to handle my mind, I find that it is a slimy thing; if you try to catch a fish, how it will slip away, it is such a peculiar instrument, I am not able to discipline, manage or control the mind. And therefore in desperation, Arjuna cries in front of the Lord, in the 34th verse, which we were seeing in the last class, he cries; Hey Krishna, manaḥ cañcalam, the mind is highly fluid, extrovert, wandering, way-ward, outgoing, and it does not go out as I want, it goes as it decides, it is cañcalam, highly fluid, and pramāthi; not only it is all the time turbulent, its disturbance it passes on to the sense organs and the body; so the disturbance is so violent, that it overflows into the sensory and body level; and that is why when the mind is disturbed, even our hands and legs will not keep quiet; either we will be shaking our legs or the hands will be churning; It is the sign of the inner disturbance.

This nature of the mind is called pramāthi; pramāthi means disturbing the other organs also; transferring the disturbance to the sense-organs and the body; and not only it is cañcalam and pramāthi, it is balavad; it is very strong; I thought mind is my instrument and therefore I am the master of the mind, because it is called antah-karaṇam; karaṇam means instrument, instrument must be controlled by the possessor, the master, and therefore I thought I am the master, but only when I try to discipline the mind, I come to know that I am not the master, I am a helpless servant; and therefore it is balavad; even the intellect tells do not do this, the mind says you are right; but I will do what I will do; thus it is very very strong; I am not able to convince and persuade the mind; विचारेण अभिजेतुं न शक्तुम् vicārēṇa abhijētum na śaktum.

Madhusūdhana Saraswathy defines the balavad of the mind as vicharena vicārēṇa abhijētum na śaktum, even by arguing with the mind and persuading, it is not listening; and not only it is strong, it is dṛḍham; dṛḍham means what; firm in its own particular pet field; if the mind is hovering around a particular topic, a particular person, a particular incident, I try to take the mind away from that field, do not think about that; he might have insulted you, but you can think about that after the class, etc. but so I try to tell the mind, come away from the topic, however much I pull, like the fly in the jackfruit it gets stuck, and it does not come away however much I pull and therefore its hold on external world; anātma is very very strong. So balavad means independently it is strong; dr̥ḍham means its hold on a particular field is firm.

And unless I pull the mind from the anātma, how can I channelise the mind to ātma; if you have two minds, it would be convenient; one mind will be at home, another will be in the class; mind for the class, one mind for the class, you can distribute it; but unfortunately it is not possible; if the mind is stuck in anātma; it cannot channelise towards the ātma; it can do only one job at a time; therefore an extrovert mind cannot practice ātma dhyānam;

And therefore it is dr̥ḍham; and because of these powerful qualifications of the mind; for cañcalatvaṁ; wayward, it is turbulent, and it is strong, and it is firm, because of these powerful qualifications; aham manyē, I consider suduśkaram it being extremely difficult, almost bordering to impossible; what is difficult; तस्य निग्रहं tasya nigrahaṁ; nigrahaṁ means disciplining, managing the mind, I consider to be the most difficult thing; that is why they say in the scriptures, manō jayaḥ is the biggest victory in life; You may win over every other thing, you may conquer everything else, but have you managed your own mind; that is the real success of life. And Hey Krishna I do not think that success is that easy and since I am not able to manage by myself, I would require a management consultant; what management, mind management consultant, I want. So tasya nigrahaṁ, tasya means manasaḥ nigrahaṁ suduśkaram manyē; duśkaram means difficult; suduśkaram means extremely difficult like vāyu, like controlling the wind.

Continuing.

abhyāsēna tu kauntēya vairāgyēṇa ca gṛhyatē || 6.35 ||

श्री भगवान् उवाच śrī bhagavān uvāca The Lord answered महाबाहो mahābāho Oh!

Arjuna असंशयम् asamśayam undoubtedly मनः चलम् manaḥ calam the mind is fickle दुर्निग्रहम् durnigraham and difficult to restrain कौन्तेय kaunteya Oh Arjuna! तु however गृह्यते tu gr̥hyate it can be restrained, वैराग्येण vairāgyeṇa through detachment च अभ्यासेन ca abhyāsēna– and practice

35. The Lord answered – Oh Arjuna! Undoubtedly, the mind is fickle and difficult to restrain. Oh Arjuna, However, it can be restrained through detachment and practice.

Now Krishna is presenting the remedy or the method in these verses, 37 to 39, that is vikṣepaḥ parihāraḥ; the pariharaḥ for the problem of vikṣepaḥ; the first thing that Krishna does as an intelligent teacher is to point out that it is not a unique problem of one human being; vikṣepaḥ or the extrovertedness of the mind is not a problem of a particular human being, it is a universal problem; and because it is a universal problem only, śāstra itself discusses the problem; and once we know that I am not the only one having the problem; the others also have the same problem, a big relief.

OK; I have told you the example, if there is no power in your house, what is the first job you do, you will see in your neighbour's house; if in the neighbour house also there is no power, you will feel that you have reached mōkṣa; they also are equally suffering; OK fine; the situation remaining the same, once you know that there are other people in the same boat, there is a relief; Therefore they say, first acknowledge a problem, then you know how to handle; accept the problem; then the remedy will come; God will give the solution. That is what they give also in the Alcoholic anonymous; they say you please accept that I have this problem and I am not able to get out of it; and if you accept and surrender, help will come from outer source; Whatever you call the outer source by whatever name you call, the God or power or anything; accept the problem; similarly here also, you accept the problem at least you won't have the sense of guilt; therefore Krishna consoles Arjuna; Arjuna you are not alone; suppose God forbid, suppose you go to Narakam, and you meet your friend, OK, you will feel happy, that at least a friend is here; this is the psychology.

So hey mahābāhō; hey Arjuna; Krishna is indirectly teasing Arjuna, mahābāhō means what; you are powerful enough to conquer all the external enemies but you do not have the inner strength to handle your own mind; Better you develop that inner strength; Hey mahābāhō; असंशयं asamśayaṁ; what you say is definitely true; there is no doubt about the truth of what you say; and what is your statement; मनो दुर्निग्रहम् चलम् manō durnigrahaṁ calam; mind is highly fickle, wayward and outgoing, and therefore it is durnigrahaṁ; it is not easily manageable. This is a fact, accept it; but what is the consolation; It is difficult to handle; but it is not impossible to handle; there is a very big difference. It is difficult to handle; but it is not impossible to handle; that means you can handle your mind, if you are willing to adopt proper methods; which is called upāyaḥ; manō nigrahaḥ upāyaḥ; upāyaḥ means the strategy; for what; manō nigrahaḥ, mental discipline.

And what are the upāyās or methods? There are two methods, which is said in the Pathanjali yōga sūtra also; abhyāsa vairāgyābhyām tat siddhihi; so the same thing also you find Kaunteya; abhyāsaḥ; abhyāsēna means by proper practice; I will explain it later, you first note the method; abhyāsaḥ is method No.1 and vairāgyam is method No.2. OK.

What is abhyāsaḥ? Now we should remember that mind will always dwell upon anything without distraction, in which it has got interest; this is the basic principle; the mind can dwell upon anything without distraction, if only the mind has got interest in that; if I love reading novels; you will find that I just get involved in that, I forget everything; I am absorbed, I easily attain Nirvikalpaka samādhi in that; I do not know hunger, I do not know thirst; I do not know anything.

If I love cricket match; because I do not know from hereafter whether you will love at all; because you do not know which one is fixed match and fixed catch; so if you love and this is a one day cricket and last over and six runs to win; India against Pakistan; then what happens to your concentration; you have got the fullest concentration; and that too effortless. Can anyone say I do not have concentration; nobody can complain I do not have concentration; everybody has got concentration; The question is in what? For one it is a movie, for another is game, for another one it is something else. And therefore if I develop interest in a particular field, the mind will enjoy dwelling in that, in spite of distraction. And how do you develop interest in any particular field; by knowing its value; its greatness; its superiority; how it is wonderful for me; So therefore, concentration requires interest, interest or love and love requires developing a value for that.

And how do you develop a value; only by trying to understand its superiority; and this process is called vivēka abhyāsaḥ. See the superiority of something by repeatedly reading about it; talking about it; sharing it; you develop a value for that; That is called nitya anitya vasthu vivēkaḥ; So develop healthy habits by knowing the greatness of what you call dharma; by knowing the greatness of mōkṣa, I naturally will develop an interest in dharma and mōkṣa; And this is called vivēka abhyāsaḥ; that is all about the study of scriptures; scriptural study initially talk about the superiority of God and how depending upon God is only the worthwhile thing in life; and how dependence on any other unpredictable factors in life is going to be risky; the more I understand that dependence on unpredictable fluctuating factors is unintelligent, and dependence on the predictable and infinite God is alone worthy in life. If you do not understand that, you will get a few kicks. understand; parikṣya lokān karmacitān; and later we have to understand that dependence on God ultimately is dependence on myself, because God is not anywhere outside, the Lord is non-different from me; not away from myself; therefore God dependence is self-dependence; self-dependence is independence; independence is mōkṣa. And therefore the scriptures talk about our journey from world dependence to God dependence to self-dependence; which is otherwise called independence.

What is wrong if I continue in world dependence? I should know that, there is a risk in world dependence because world is highly fluctuating, fleeting, perishable; and depending upon a fluctuating thing is a risky thing. Thus dwelling upon these facts; and any time you have faced sorrow, you try to equate, you will find that sorrow has been always because of depending upon something on which I should not have really depended; like a drowning man catching hold of straw, how meaningless it is; And thinking in these lines, what is nityam, what is anityam; what is ever secure; what is never secure; what is strong; what is weak. This nitya anitya vasthu vivēka, the śāstrām alone teaches; and with the help of the śāstrā, when I dwell on the topic; and also my lifestyle is designed in such a way that I learn the habit of more and more God dependence. Later we will see

maccittā madgataprāṇā bōdhayantaḥ parasparam |
kathayantaśca māṁ nityaṁ tuṣyanti ca ramanti ca || 10.9 ||

God dependence is a habit, which we can develop, which is a healthy habit; which we can develop and religious life is nothing but developing the healthy and good habit of God dependence. And when I get used to this healthy habit, you develop any healthy habit, it will naturally replace unhealthy habit; If you want to de-addict yourselves; form good addiction; even Gītā class addiction is a good addiction; it is an addiction but it is a healthy addiction. In śāstrā it is called subha vāsanā; develop subha vāsanā; develop healthy habits, you will find unknowingly effortlessly you grow out of, you get of, asubha vāsanāḥ, durvāsanāḥ.

And this inculcation of healthy habit is vivēka abhyāsaḥ; and because of this development of healthy habit, the natural and consequential giving up of unhealthy habit. What is unhealthy habit, depending upon the perishable is unhealthy habit; so you live amidst the perishable; because life is perishable; you live amidst the fluctuating ones, that you cannot, but do not psychologically lean, I give the example of a card board chair. Suppose there is a chair made out of cardboard; attai; and it is very nicely designed; colorful papers are stuck and very attractive; Now what should you do; you can do anything; you can keep it in your showcase, nicely decorated; you can do everything except one thing; what is that; do not sit over that; what will happen; mandai udayum; that is all; I do not say you should destroy that chair; I only say that you do not sit over the chair; then on which chair I should sit; that which can hold 98 kilos of your body; whatever be your weight; similarly, the only chair you can sit on is God; any other chair is cardboard chair; therefore, that sitting means emotional dependence;

And giving up of that emotional dependence, that weakness is called giving up of that weakness is called, vairāgyam; so sitting on a strong chair is vivēka; coming out of the weak chair is vairgāyam; if the mind gets used to that; mind is addicted to that; in meditation also, I love to dwell upon the same topic which I have developed the habit of.

And therefore Krishna says abhyāsēna; dwell upon the śāstrā; dwell upon values; dwell upon God as destination; dwell upon your own true nature, which is permanent and develop an interest in that; people say Vēdānta is a dry subject; but once you learn to love it; in fact, that is the most juicy subject in the creation; and therefore abhyāsēna means vivēkēna and vairāgyēṇa; your mind is rechannelised from world to God or anātma to ātma and in meditation also you do the same thing.

असंयतात्मना योगो दुष्प्राप इति मे मतिः ।

asaṁyatātmanā yōgō duṣprāpa iti mē matiḥ |

vaśyātmanā tu yatatā śakyō'vāptumupāyataḥ || 6.36 | |

योगः दुष्प्रापः yōgaḥ duṣprāpaḥ Dhyana yōga is difficult to be attained असंयतात्मना asaṁyatātmanā by one with unrestrained mind तु tu but शक्यः अवाप्तुम् śakyah avāptum it can be attained वश्यात्मना vaśyātmanā by the self controlled यतता yatatā, who strives, उपयतः upayataḥ through (proper) means इति iti this is मे मतिः me matiḥ My view.

36. Dhyana yōga is difficult to be attained by one with unrestrained mind. But it can be attained by the self- controlled who strives through (proper) means -- this is My view.

So the same idea Krishna is clarifying further. Vivēka and vairāgya are only the two methods by which the mind changes its interest from something perishable to something imperishable; something fake to something real. And if that mind has not practised vivēka and vairāgya; such a mind is called असंयतात्मा asaṁyatātmā mind; so ātma here means mind; asaṁyatam means not channelised; channelised from the perishable to imperishable; from the unhealthy to healthy; from artha kama pradhāna to dharma mōkṣa pradhāna. This re-directing if it is not done; such a mind is called prākṛita antakaraṇa; it always goes by external पाणिपुत्र pagittu; external pagittu, external charms, it is carried away by; so asaṁyatātmā, the one who has not redirected, rechannelised the mind, for such a person yōgaḥ duṣprāpyaḥ; the meditation is impossible because even if he sits in mediation, his value is for something cheap in the creation; therefore he will sit in pūja room, but the mind is in something unworthy; unworthy in the sense, something inferior; therefore yōgaḥ duṣprāpyaḥ, it is inaccessible; this is my conclusion.

Whereas when you have got interest for something you do not have sit in padmāsana; you do not have to close your eyes; wherever you go; your mind will be only dwelling upon that; whatever I love, the mind effortlessly dwells on that; paśyan, śriṇṇvan, spṛśan jignan; it will think of that only; similarly when I have got a value for that; the mind will naturally run towards that; so दुष्प्राप इति मे मतिः duṣprāpa iti mē matih; they give the example of a new mother; a new mother means what; a mother who has given birth to the first baby; second one she is experienced; and the young baby and then the mother may do umpteen transactions, paśyan, śriṅnvan, spṛśan jignan; whatever transactions she does, the mind is always around that baby only. Even if she is a working mother, even if she is doing something in the office, her mind will be on the child at home; Should she sit in meditation to think of the child; in fact for her the problem is to take the child out of her mind; because she loves the child; she has a value for the child; and she feels that because of the child I enjoy motherhood.

Similarly here also, that value is there; he becomes वश्यात्मा vaśyātma; vaśyātma is saṃyatātma; first line, asaṃyatātma; second line saṃyatātma, saṃyatātma means what, the one who has got vivēka and vairāgyam; the one for whom the priorities in life are very clear. So far such a person, and the यत्ता yatatā, and one who strives for dwelling upon the teaching; the one who strives to sit in mediation; give some quality time for Vēdānta; sit in mediation means what; the one who is willing to give quality time to Vēdānta; because of the recognition of its utility in life; otherwise they will ask, whether they will get promotion in office, or else will I get this or that, because Vēdānta and Gītā will not give materialistic benefit; therefore he must be sensitive enough to see the abstract benefits of Gītā and the Upaniṣad.

Therefore yatatā puruṣeṇa; by such a person of vivēkam and vairāgyam; शक्यः अवाप्तुम् उपयतः śakyaḥ avāptum upayataḥ; avāptum śakyaḥ; meditation is possible; for whom; who has disciplined the mind through these two upāyās; what are the two upāyās; vivēka vaigāyaḥ upāyathā vasyātmanah; and therefore read the scriptures, dwell upon this basic teaching of our scriptures, world dependenceto God dependenceto self-dependance. Do not get stuck in world dependance; it is a very risky. Like depending upon the corporation water; so everybody wants to have a borewell; why, you have got some other thing to fall back upon; similarly in life, you have everything, nothing wrong. Krishna does not say run away from everything; you have everything; they are all corporation water; remember, you should have a bore well, which has got permanent supply, which is dependable borewell and that is called Īśvaraḥ; and later the very same Īśvara we will introduce as ātma; and later we will introduce that ātma as your own true nature; you have to go a long distance; but you have to start somewhere.

अर्जुन उवाच arjuna uvāca Arjuna asked कृष्ण kṛṣṇa Oh! Krishna! उपेतः श्रद्धया upetaḥ śraddhayā (suppose there is) one who is endowed with faith, अयतिः ayatiḥ but whose effort is insufficient, चलितमानसः calitamānasaḥ whose mind has strayed away योगात् yōgāt from dhyana yōga अप्राप्य aprāpya having not attained योगसंसिद्धिम् yōgasamsiddhim the result of dhyana yōga कां गतिम् kām gatiṁ what goal गच्छति gacchati does he attain?

37. Arjuna asked – Oh, Krishna! (suppose there is) one who is endowed with faith, but whose effort is insufficient and whose mind has strayed away from dhyana yōga. Having not attained the result of dhyana yōga, what goal does he attain?

With the previous verse Krishna concludes his answer to Arjuna's question. Arjuna's question was how to handle the wandering mind; the problem of restlessness during meditation; vikṣēpaḥ how to handle and Krishna has given the solution. What is the solution; vivēka and vairāgyam, which means develop an interest in the object of meditation; develop interest in the object of meditation; which is possible only by reading those books which talk about the glory of those objects; and also satsaṅga; having friends who have got such values.

Because saṅga also influences; if I am moving with a person who considers money alone can give happiness, sooner or later, I will begin to say, காசேதான் கடவுளடா kasethan kadavul ada; so Krishna does not talk about satsaṅga here; but satsaṅga is also considered very important; because whatever my friend values, knowingly or unknowingly I also develop a value for that; That is why Śankarācārya said;

सत्सङ्गत्वे निस्सङ्गत्वं
निस्सङ्गत्वे निर्मोहत्वम् |
निर्मोहत्वे निश्चलतत्त्वं
निश्चलतत्त्वे जीवन्मुक्तिः ||९||
satsaṅgatvē nissāṅgatvaṁ;
nissāṅgatvē nirmōhatvam |
nirmōhatvē niścalatattvaṁ
niścalatattvē jīvanmuktiḥ ||9||

Nissāṅgatvaṁ means vairāgyam. Thus even what you call deciding the friends with whom you move; that you changes your value, because there are people who do not have regular escapism of life, still they are very happy. Because if you are used to certain regular entertainments; After sometime you will think that without them, life is nothing; anything you get addicted to after sometime, you cannot think of your life without those addictions; but when you see some people, they do not have any of those addictions and they do not miss anything in life; in fact, they are happier for that; then we begin to what you call reconsider our priorities; we can be happy and we wont miss even if we give up those things; So satsaṅga is also very important; but Krishna does not say here; vivēka and vairāgyam; this is the solution; and instead of vivēka, he uses the word, adhyāsa.

So with this dhyāna pratibanda and parihāra topic is over. In fact, with this actually the 6th chapter dealing with mediation is over. Om Sat Tat should have come; but Arjuna again comes with a question; and the most unfortunate thing is in spite of all the encouragement given by Krishna, Arjuna continues to be a pessimistic person; and therefore he begins to feel that, I do not think it is possible for me to manage my mind. Even though Krishna has given a solution; perhaps the solution may work for other people, but for me, and that too in this janma, I do not think I will get it. Even if Swamiji is optimistic; they try to make Swamiji also pessimistic; Swamiji you do not know me properly.

And this pessimism or self-diffidence is also another human weakness; that is why in the beginning of the 6th chapter, Krishna said uddharēdātmana"tmānaṁ na"tmānamavasādayēt; never look down upon yourself; never be diffident; because if I do not have self-confidence; ātma kripa is not there. Then even God cannot help; because we will argue with God also; argue with what; I cannot succeed in life; Therefore even God will become helpless, Gurus will become helpless; śāstrām will become helpless; if you have decided that I cannot accomplish this; and therefore Krishna repeatedly tells faith in oneself is important; but in spite of that; Arjuna continues to be diffident; therefore his conclusion is; in this life, I am not going to get mōkṣa; he is very sure about it.

And since in this life, I am not going to get mōkṣa; his plans are about next life; because he has decided this life is not going to work; and therefore he wonders assuming that I take next birth; which is going to be definite; because I am not going to get liberation; his worry is; all these sādhanās that I have done in this life, whatever little sādhanā; will all be wiped out; and next janma, I have to again start from Lkg or will all the sādhanās of this life will be brought forward; (because while calculating) in the next janma, I need not study from the 1st chapter of the Gītā; can I continue from the 7th chapter, as we have studied up to 6th?

So what is my lot in my next birth; Why? he is worried; he is very sure; in this birth; I am not going to get liberation; he has concluded; and therefore because of Arjuna's pessimism, he raises this question in the verses 37, 38, and 39th. Three verses Arjuna's pessimistic questions; And those people who failed in spirituality, that means who struggled in spiritual field; but did not succeed, all those people are here called yōga braṣṭaḥ; yōga braṣṭaḥ means what; failure in exam; attempted but not succeeded. The other people are not going to face because they never attempted; and of course the jīvan muktas, they do not have the problem of failures; failures come for whom; the one who has attempted; therefore all these spiritual failures we call yōga braṣṭaḥ and Arjuna's question about this yōga braṣṭaḥ; what will happen to him or her in the next janma;

That is here in the 37th verse; first he describes a yōga braṣṭaḥ; who is he; योगाच्चलितमानसहः yōgāccalitamānasaḥ; he has fallen from spirituality; which means he did not succeed in his or her spiritual sādhanā. So here yōga means what spiritual sādhanās; adhyātma yōgaḥ; ccalita mānasaḥ means what; he has fallen, நழுவுறது naḷuvaratu, that is called ccalita mānasaḥ; and why he could not succeed; अयतिः ayatiḥ; because of his insufficient effort; He put forth effort alright; but the effort was not sufficient; What is the proof; what is the proof; the effort was not sufficient; he has failed. The very fact that he has failed indicates that he has fallen; Therefore ayatiḥ means Alpa prayathnāḥ; a person of insufficient effort and why the effort was not sufficient; because of various obstacles;

Because there are many people who want to put forth lot of effort, but because of various reasons obstacles come; Swamiji I think I should do; but I am not getting time at all; attending the class itself is a great effort; where is the question of revision or kivision; therefore the obstacles can come from three sources;

- अदि दैवीक प्रधिभन्दम् adi daivika pradhibhandam; supernatural forces; grihapizhai; therefore rahu ketu shani comes and obstructs;
- or अदि बौधिक प्रधिभन्दः adi baudhika pradhibhandaḥ; ; obstacles from surroundings;
- or अध्यात्मिक प्रधिभन्दः adhyātmika pradhibhandaḥ; obstacles form oneself in the form of illhealth, etc.

Suppose I loose my hearing capacity; what to hear; so therefore, because of adhyātmika; adhi boudika; adhi daivika prathibhadaha san, saḥ ayatiḥ bhavathi; alpa prayatnaḥ bhavathi.

But even though he could not put forth sufficient effort, श्रद्धया उपेतः śraddhayā upetaḥ; that person is very sincere; it is not that he gives lame excuses; it is not the lack of interest; but in spite of sincerity; So śraddhayā upētaḥ; there is value for spiritual life; but could not follow because some obstruction one over the other; so śraddhayā upētaḥ,

And therefore yōgat ccalita mānasaḥ; yōga brashta; what will happen to him; yōga saṁsiddhiṁ aprapya; yōga saṁsiddhiṁ means mōkṣa phalam; saṁsiddhi here means the phalam, the phalam of what yōgaḥ; yōga means spiritual sādhanā; the phalam of spiritual sādhanā is what mōkṣaḥ; and this mōkṣa phalam aprāpyaya, this person could not attain mōkṣa; in spite of sincerity, because of various reasons; aprāpya yōga samsiddhim; because sometimes guru is not available; guru got; and I was thinking of starting something; but there was a transfer of job and therefore I went to another place, where nothing is available. So therefore went I had the interest, guru was not there; when guru was there, there was no interest for me; all these should combine; all these are there, but no health; that is why they say;

मनुष्यत्वं मुमुक्षुत्वं महापुरुषसंश्रयः ॥३॥ durlabhaṁ trayamēvaitaddēvānugrahaḥētukam |

manuṣyatvaṁ mumukṣutvaṁ mahāpuruṣasaṁśrayaḥ ॥3॥

To be born a human being, and to be interested in spirituality, and to have an opportunity for pursuing spirituality, requires lot of pūrva janma pūṇyam; so because of some obstacles, he could not attain the phalam; Hey Krishna; काम् गतिं गच्छति kām gatiṁ gacchati; what is the lot of that person;

So will he have a lower birth; or will he have a human birth again; what will be his next birth like; Krishna has to answer this question because we cannot know what is our next birth.

Therefore hey Krishna kām gatiṁ gacchati; question in desparation and pessimism; and he himself explains his pessimism; that also; justifies his pessimism; there are some people who argue how I will not get mōkṣa; Krishna is wanting to do all struggles to bring Arjuna to mōkṣa; but Arjuna is like that adamant horse; is not moving; So Arjuna explains or justifies his pessimism; in the next verse; which we will see in the next class.

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

Lord Krishna has comprehensively discussed all the aspects of meditation, especially Vēdāntic meditation which has to be practised, after a thorough study of Vēdāntic scriptures; and nowhere else we find such an elaborate discussion of mediation; and therefore sixth chapter is important from this particular angle. And He has even dealt with the topic of obstacles in mediation; especially the obstacle of mental distraction and also He talked about the remedy. And Krishna said that if a person should be successful in meditation, He has to develop detachment from the world; without vairāgyam or detachment, meditation will not be successful and without meditation, Vēdānta cannot be assimilated and without assimilation we would not get the full benefit called jīvan mukti and therefore we find vairāgyam or detachment is given a very important position in the scriptures. And when Krishna concluded in this manner, Arjuna looks at himself and sees whether he will be able to develop total detachment; and practice meditation and assimilate; and somehow unfortunately Arjuna is not very confident of himself and therefore He becomes very pessimistic with regard to the attainment of liberation in this janma itself. And this is not Arjuna's problem only; this is the universal problem, when a seeker comes to the spiritual field and sees the prescribed sādhanās, he becomes extremely pessimistic; I do not think we ordinary people can ever attain liberation; There are a few people, may be one Śankarā, one Rāmakrishṇa, one Ramaṇā; they are somewhere else, we are all somewhere down; all these will not work; so thus, pessimism is one of the common obstacle for every seeker; and therefore whether Arjuna had this problem or not, Arjuna identifies with the majority of humanity; and presents his problem and he presents the question in these verses, 37,38 and 39, of which we completed the 37th verse; in which Arjuna said, suppose there is a person; he has come to spirituality, he thought he has grown out of religion and therefore he dropped all the karmas, temples and all other things and then he came to jñāna mārga, relinquishing karma mārga and in jñāna mārga he had total faith but because of one obstacle or the other; may be physical obstacle, called adhyātmika pradhibandah; may be environmental prathibanda, called adi baudhika pradhibandah; may be unseen obstacles called adi daivika pradhibandam; because of some obstacle or the other, he could not pursue the path of knowledge. So ayathihi means alpa prayathnah; a person of incomplete effort; not because of lack of faith, faith is there; sincerity is there; but because of obstacle, one could not. And therefore naturally, jñāna phalam of mōkṣa he could not attain. Then at least can he attain the karma phalam of svarga. Arjuna feels that he would not get karma phalam also, because he left the karma and spend the karma time for jñāna; with the hope that he wants to get a result which is higher; I do not want svarga and came to mōkṣa; and svarga he dropped and mōkṣam also he did not get; which is called typical triṣanku.

Trishanku left the earth for the sake of attaining heaven and he was not granted visa in the svarga lōkā, in the airport itself he was turned off and therefore he came down and Viśvāmitra said do not come here and go up and Viśvāmitra pushing up, Indra pushing down; was in between.

Similarly karma phalam bhuta svarga api nāsti; jñāna phala mōkṣaḥ api nāsti; will he not become a trishanku. Therefore he asks yōga saṁsiddhim aprāpya; yōga saṁsiddhim jñāna phalam; jñāna phalam means mōkṣa; aprāpya means not getting. What will be the lot of that person; and Arjuna himself clarifies his pessimism further. A very logical pessimism; the pessimistic people have got their own logic to support why I will not be successful; why can't he find some logic to support his optimism: No; we are experts in pessimism; Arjuna does that in the following verses; we will read verse no.38.

अप्रतिष्ठो महाबाहो विमूढो ब्रह्मणः पथि ॥६.३८॥

kaccinnōbhayavibhraṣṭaśchinnābhramiva naśyati |

apraṭiṣṭhō mahābāhō, vimūḍhō brahmaṇaḥ pathi | | 6.38 | |

महाबाहो mahābāho Oh, Krishna उभयविभ्रष्टः ubhayavibhraṣṭaḥ fallen from both (yōga and karma), विमूढः vimūḍhaḥ (and) deluded पथि ब्रह्मणः pathi

brahmaṇaḥ in the pursuit of Brahman, कच्चीद् न kccīd na does not, अप्रतिष्ठः नश्यति apraṭiṣṭaḥ naśyati the support less (yōgi) perish, इव छिन्नाभ्रम् iva chinnābhram like a scattered cloud?

38. Oh Krishna! Fallen from (yōga and karma and) deluded in the pursuit of Brahman, does not the supportless (yōgi) perish like a scattered cloud?

In the previous verse Arjuna had said that this seeker of insufficient effort will not attain moksha because he could not put forth full effort; then we have to supply another idea; which is not said here and what is that: because he came to jñāna marga, he did not perform karma which would have given him svarga lōkā. So karma phalam rūpa svargaḥ api nāsti.

This idea Arjuna did not say: we have to supply; why he did not say about svarga, because svarga is the result of karma phalam; why he does not have karma phalam; because he does not have karma; why he does not have karma; because he spend all the time in jñāna mārḡa; so therefore karma phalam rūpa svargaḥ api nāsti; and therefore what is his condition; अप्रतिष्ठः apraṭiṣṭaḥ; second line; apraṭiṣṭaḥ; he does not have the support of puṇyam; which could have given him svarga; he does not have the support of jñānam; which could have given him mōkṣa; therefore apraṭiṣṭaḥ; puṇya jñāna rahitāḥ; karmanaḥ abhāvāt puṇya rahitaḥ; jñānasya abhāvāt mōkṣa rahitāḥ; these two support he does not have; therefore apraṭiṣṭaḥ.

Arjuna himself further explains the word apraṭiṣṭaḥ, in the first line, upaya vibrashtaha. So he is free from support, he is free from two fold support; ubhayam means two supports; and what are the two; karma dvāra puṇyam; and jñāna dvāra mōkṣaḥ; and from both he has fallen. विभ्रष्टः vibhraṣṭaḥ; and therefore what will be his lot; छिन्नाभ्रमिव नश्यति chinnābhramiva naśyati. So his condition can be compared to a small cloud-let megaha; which has got separated from the big huge vast cloud. When the cloud is big enough, then the wind cannot destroy the cloud; dissipate the cloud or disperse the cloud, because it is a vast cloud. Maximum what can the wind do; it can only carry the cloud from one place to other; but imagine a small portion of cloud gets separated from the big body of cloud it has become what; a weakened cloud, and when that cloud gets separated, what will the wind do, you have to watch; that days we used to see the sky; now no time; there is no time to stand and stare, so we see only the cinema stars, not the real stars. That is why you find in Vēdāntic literature, all the examples were taken from nature, because they were staying in the āśrama, nadi thīra; mountain; you find all examples are from nature. Therefore if you watch the cloudlet, you will find gradually because of the powerful wind, it gets dissipated, dispersed and after sometime it completely disappeared.

Similarly this seeker he does not have the support of the dharma, support of jñānam also; now he has become a weak individual; and that is why in those days, they did not allow a person to take to sanyāsa that easily; their worry was, at least in grihastha āśrama, the mind has got some occupation; this has to be done, that has to be done; there is something to do; you have got children to bring up, they should be settled; functions will come, festivals would come; therefore mind has got some hold in society; Imagine a person gets out of the society and he does not have the support of a guru or āśrama; what will happen; the mind does not have karma hold; the mind does not have śāstrā hold, śāstrām has been dropped; svadharma has been dropped; the mind will dwell upon what; only sensory pleasures or other immoral things. and a person can end up a mithyācāri and that person can fall; and that is why they said Sanyāsa is such an āśrama; it is highly risky because one can go out of both śāstrām also and varṇa āśrama dharma also; and therefore Arjuna says that, उभयविभ्रष्टः ubhayavibhraṣṭaḥ; like the cloudlet will he not get into destruction; chinnābhram, ābhram means mega; āpaḥ vibharthi iti ābhram; ab means jalam; ābhram means holder; ābhram; water holder; in fact your water tank can be called ābhram; cloud can also be called ābhram, because it holds the water; what is the proof; rain comes; that is the proof; Therefore ābhram is equal to meghaḥ; So like a cloudlet, will he not perish; अप्रतिष्ठः apraṭiṣṭaḥ; Hey Mahabahoo, hey Krishna, विमूढो ब्रह्मणः पथि vimūḍhō brahmaṇaḥ pathi, having fallen from the path of brahman; so brahmaṇaḥ pathi means brahma mārgaḥ; brahma marga means jñāna mārgaḥ; having fallen from jñāna mārga; and you have to supply, having fallen from karma mārga also, will he not perish; this is Arjuna's fear.

Continuing.

ētanmē saṁśayaṁ kṛṣṇa chēttumarhasyaśēṣataḥ |

tvadanyaḥ saṁśayasyāsyā chēttā na hyupapadyatē | | 6.39 | |

कृष्ण kṛṣṇa O Krishna अर्हसि छेत्तुम् arhasi chettum you should remove एतत् संशयम् etat saṁśayam this doubt मे me of mine अशेषतः aśeṣataḥ completely हि hi for न उपपद्यते na upapadyate there cannot be छेत्ता chettā a remover अस्य सम्शयस्य asya saṁśayasya of this doubt, अन्यः त्वत् anyaḥ tvat other than you

39. Oh Krishna! You should remove this doubt of mine completely. For, there cannot be a remover of this doubt other than You.

So Arjuna is desperate now; he says; Hey Krishna, I have a great fear; why I came to Vēdānta; Hey Krishna, एतत् संशयम् छेत्तुम् अर्हसि etat saṁśayam chettum arhasi; you should destroy this doubt of mine, because if I am going to be a triṣanku, at least from next week only, instead of coming to the class; at least I can try to do some pooja, even though mōkṣa may not come, at least some puṇyam may come. So now I am not doing pūja and class also I am not understanding (you are understanding!) so I do not seem to understand; suppose Arjuna type of students are there; not you, if knowledge also does not come, out of these classes, and at least I could have done some Viṣṇu sahasranama pārayaṇam or pūja japam etc. I could have done; that also is not there; this also is not there; etat saṁśayam; this triṣanktva saṁśayam, this doubt of self-destruction or spiritual fall; etat saṁśayam; etat saṁśayam for grammar students, etat saṁśayam, grammatically wrong; saṁśayam is masculine gender; etat is neuter gender, therefore etat saṁśayam, etam saṁśayam should be said. But since it is coming from Vyāsācārya's pen, we give him the benefit of doubt and say it is Arsha prayōga; for big people it is poetic license; not for us; it is allowed; etat is equal to etam. In fact in some books, they correct it and write etam itself. Etam saṁśayam Krishna and according to them this is printing mistake. Whatever it is; this doubt of mine; chettum arhasi; you have to destroy because my further attendance of class itself is dependent on your answer to my question. It is a crucial thing; so etam saṁśayam; chettum; destroy remove, arhasi and do not give a vague answer, aśeṣataḥ; completely, clearly.

And why am I asking you; because अन्यः त्वत् छेत्ता न उपपद्यते anyaḥ tvat chettā na upapadyate; there cannot be any person other than you who can destroy this doubt; there cannot be any person other than you who can destroy this doubt. Why Arjuna says so; because this person will spiritually fall or not; can be determined only in the next janma; Whether he will go to svarga; or whether he will get moksha or whether he will miss both of them and go to a lower janma; these are all questions of after-birth; and what will happen to us in the next janma; we do not know; why, even in this janma we do not know what will happen next year; or tomorrow itself. So bhagavan alone is karma phala dhata; therefore he alone is fit enough to answer this question and therefore what type of janma, such a person will get later. And therefore you should answer. So thus in these three verses Arjuna's pessimistic question has been given. Now Krishna is going to give an optimistic answer; we will read happily.

पार्थ नैवेह नामुत्र विनाशस्तस्य विद्यते ।

न हि कल्याणकृत्कश्चिद् दुर्गतिं तात गच्छति ॥६.४०॥

śrībhagavānuvāca

pārtha naivēha nāmutra vināśastasya vidyatē |

na hi kalyāṇakṛt kaścīd-durgatiṁ tāta gacchati | | 6.40 | |

40. The Lord answered – Oh Arjuna, neither here or hereafter is there destruction for him. Because, a doer of good does not attain an evil end (My) son.

So first Krishna gives consolation to Arjuna. Arjuna do not worry; we will see the result later; first I am telling you do not worry; and then he gives the answer. I will give you the gist of the answer; the idea is this: Suppose a person comes to jñāna marga, what is jñāna marga, serious study of scriptures, śravaṇa, manana, nidhidhyāsana; and certainly it is different from the regular karma of sandhyāvandanam, nāma japa, etc. you are not doing those regular religious activities now; at this moment, you are studying the Gītā or Upaniṣad as the case may be.

Now the śāstrā says, Vēdānta śravaṇam has got two fold benefits; one is called mukhya phalam; or primary benefit; and the second is called avānthara phalam; or secondary benefit; or bye-product. So when in certain industries they manufacture something; not only they get the primary benefit; but they get lot of secondary benefit like bye-product; a coconut tree you have; main benefit is coconut; but how many other benefits are there. In fact you can write a essay of three hundred page; that is why coconut is called pūrṇa phalam; so when you plant a mango tree; the primary benefit you expect is mango fruit; but there are so many bye product, you get the shade of the tree; and the temperature will be lesser; whether you have read in the newspaper; in the theosophical society area, where there are plenty of trees; they have found that the temperature is 2 or 3 degrees lesser to other parts of the Madras; because of the roots of the tree retain some water; and therefore in the surrounding area, there is some coolness. This is what benefit; avānthara phalam; bye-product; shade is avanthara phalam; and mango leaves avānthara phalam; thus we have got bye-product, in the same way, Vēdānta śravaṇam also has got a mukhya phalam and a amukhya phlam. What is the mukhya phalam; if a person has got all the qualifications, the mukya phalam will come and that is jñānam; the qualifications are there; the mukhya phalam will be: I understand Gītā;

And suppose a person does not have sufficient qualifications and therefore a person does not understand the teaching; and even then, there is a secondary phalam; that is called puṇyam. Krishna himself tells that in the 18th chapter; śṛṇuyādapi yō naraḥ; one who just allows the Gītā to pass through his ears; without knowing sanskrit Gītā pārāyaṇam is also, the very vibrations of the Gītā, if it has fallen on him; sō'pi muktaḥ śubhāllōkān prāpnuyāt puṇyakarmaṇām. Vēdānta śravaṇam produces puṇyam. So if you have done a special pūja or sahasranama parāyaṇa; what puṇya it would have given, the same amount of puṇya, a Gītā listener is going to get as a bye product. So that means what; either you will get jñānam and puṇyam or you are going to get minimum puṇyam; Jñānam if it comes mōkṣam; jñānam if it does not come; puṇyam. Puṇyam if you get, svarga is going to come; therefore what is your position now; either mōkṣa or svarga; So you can come to the next class; so for just coming here and managing to sit somehow; for one hour, the best result is mōkṣa; and the minimum is svarga; Arjuna why are you worrying?

That is what Krishna's question is: Hey Partha: विनाशस्तस्य नविद्यते vināśastasya nāvidyatē; for a jñāna mārgi, a person who has come to śāstrā śravaṇam, there is no downfall at all; इह वा अमुत्र वा iha vā amutrā vā; either in this janmā or after death; before maraṇam or after maraṇam; there is no question of spiritual fall. What is the reason; because kalyāṅkrit kaschit; such a person happens to be maṅgala kartā, he is doing a noble action, even listening to Gītā is a maṅgala karma, which Krishna called in the fourth chapter, as jñāna yajñā.

So that is why Swami Chinyamananda; when he started teaching Gītā in the public; he called jñāna yajñā; Gītā jñāna yajñāḥ; and initially when the people heard yajñā, they thought there is going to hōma kunda; vadhyar, etc. Even now there are people have this doubt; why this title is given; this is not Chinmayanda's saying; Bhagavān Krishna himself says this is jñāna yajñā.

Even though no hōma kunda is involved; even though no oblations are involved; this jñāna yajñā will give as much puṇyam as any other vaidika karma; and that puṇyam is the minimum result that one will get. But if he has got qualification, he would not require this puṇyam; because jñānam itself is going to give him mōkṣa; therefore kalyāṅkrit is equal to mangala kartā; kalyāṅnam does not mean marriage; in sanskrit language, kalyanam means mangalam; any sacred action is called kalyāṅnam; and since marriage is considered to be one of the sacred rites, marriage is also called kalyāṅnam; otherwise the word kalyāṅnam means any maṅgala karma. Therefore you can say every Saturday Sunday evening we are going to Kalyanam; nothing wrong; because this is also kalyāṅnam only. So न हि कल्याणकृत्कश्चिद् दुर्गतिं तात गच्छति na hi kalyāṅakṛt kaścid-durgatiṁ tāta gacchati; such a person will never have a downfall; and certainly he will go up whether to svarga or mōkṣa; that alone is the question; there is no question of downfall; hey tāta; tāta is like அப்பனை appanē in Tamil; in English it is difficult to translate:

शुचीनां श्रीमतां गेहे योगभ्रष्टोऽभिजायते ॥६.४१॥

prāpya puṇyakṛtām lōkānuṣitvā śāśvatīḥ samāḥ |

śucīnām śrīmatām gēhē yōgabhraṣṭō'bhijāyatē | | 6..41 | |

प्राप्य prāpya lokān having attained the worlds लोकान् पुण्यकृताम् puṇyakṛtām of righteous people उषीत्वा uṣītvā and having lived there शाश्वतिः śāśvatīḥ for many years समाः योगभ्रष्टः samāḥ yōgabhraṣṭaḥ one who has fallen from Yōga, अभिजायते abhijāyate is reborn गेहे gehe in the family शुचीनां श्रीमताम् śucinām śrīmatām of the cultured and prosperous

41. Having attained the worlds of righteous people and having lived (there) for many years, one who has fallen from Yōga is reborn in the family of the cultured and prosperous.

So in these verses, Krishna tells what happens to such a seeker after death. Before death he continues the spiritual sādhanā and therefore that is not discussed here. Krishna is discussing maraṇa ananthara gati of such a person. Such a person means, yōga braṣṭaḥ; that is he could not succeed in spirituality; he made a noble serious sincere attempt but he could not succeed. What will happen to that person after death; and as I said before; he has acquired puṇyam: because of what; the very Vēdānta sṛavaṇam; the very Gītā sṛavaṇam, the very Gītā pārayaṇam has given him puṇyam as a bye-product; as a secondary result; and as a result of that puṇyam, he will go to heaven; and therefore puṇya kritam lōkān prāpya; here puṇya krit, those people who have done great yāgās; vajapēya; sōma yāgā; which lōkāś they go; the very same lōkā this person also goes, even though he has not done, any of those rituals is very study of the Gītā is equivalent to all the yāgās and yajñās and nāma japam; and Madhusūdhana Saraswathy Swami quotes a verse and he says that one minute of Vēdānta sṛavaṇam is equal to 100 of yagas 100s of yāgās is one minutes; you are listening to 60 minutes; it is equal of 100s of yāgās; and it is equal to giving the dānam of the entire earth; not one acre or two acre; the entire earth is gifted; all those puṇyams will come by Vēdānta sṛavaṇam ; the idea is that this itself is equal to a sacred karma only. Therefore puṇyakṛtām; vaidīka karma kṛtām lōkam; svaraga gadi sama lōkān prapya; and not only he will attain those lōkāś; शाश्वतीः समाः उषीत्वा śāśvatīḥ samāḥ uṣītvā and he will remain there, reside there for many years. śāśvatīḥ samāḥ, varshani; samvastaaraha; samvastaaran; dwiteeya bahuvachan; akarantha streelinga dvitiya bahuvachanam; the word samāḥ does not mean equal; here it is akaranga sthilingaha; means samvastaran; varshaani; śāśvatīḥ; means countless number of years; ushitva; he resides and not a mere resident; those enjoyments of the svaraga loka he will get; all those pleasures having enjoyed;

Then; his primary desire was what; his desire was not enjoying svarga lōkā, he studied Gītā upaniṣad for moksha only and therefore Bhagavān gives him or her an appropriate work for continuing the spiritual sādhanā; and therefore he says yōga braṣṭa; and this yōga braṣṭa; who was a failure in his pūrva janma; that योगभ्रष्टोऽभिजायते yōgabhraṣṭō'bhijāyatē; he is reborn.

Where is he reborn; there are two possibilities; first possibility is शुचीनां श्रीमतां गेहे śucīnām śrīmatām gēhē; he will be born in the family of a prosperous and cultured parents; so śucīḥ here means culture; dharma is there; values are there; religion is there; he is a religious family; cultured family; given to noble karmas; and not only born in a cultured family; śrīmatām gēhē; in a prosperous family also;

And why Krishna says so; because only in such a family, there is a scope for further pursuit of spirituality. Suppose there is poverty; then naturally one has to struggle for the basic needs of life; where is Vēdānta; so when you know that there is slum colony, food is not there; you cannot go and talk about sādhanā chatustaya saṁpanna; mōkṣa, etc. etc. to them; they will beat you; you cannot go there; because basic human needs should be fulfilled; therefore Bhagavān will give a such a family; where basic means are provided; prosperity means basic needs are there. But suppose there is prosperity but no culture; money without culture is dangerous; because all the money will be used for another type of spirituality; another type of spirit; clubs, higher society; higher strata; they will go there; so late night sleep only; late morning waking up only; no pooja, no religion, nothing; that is in fact worse; it is better to be born poor. And therefore he will be a cultured and prosperous family which is ideal for further spiritual sādhanā; he can do more of niṣkāma karma; he can do more of service because dharma is there in the mind; money is there; when dharma and artā come together, I will use all the money for noble activities; nishkama karma will be more and all those karmas will give what; more purity and sādhanā catuṣṭaya saṁpathi. In the pūrva janma he failed because of only because of incomplete qualifications; now that all those qualifications iwll be completed in the next janma; therefore śucīnām śrīmatām gēhē yōgabhraṣṭō'bhijāyatē; this is possibility No.1.

Then there is a second possibility which is still rarer; what is that: Krishna says:

अथवा योगिनामेव कुले भवति धीमताम् ।

एतद्धि दुर्लभतरं लोके जन्म यदीदृशम् ॥ ६.४२ ॥

athavā yōgināmēva kulē bhavati dhīmatām |

ētaddhi durlabhataram lōkē janma yadīdṛśam || 6.42 ||

42. Otherwise, he is born in the family of wise sages themselves. Such a birth is very rare indeed in the world.

Athava; this is the second possibility, for a yōga braṣṭa; after the svarga loka anubhava, where will he or she will be born; योगिनाम् कुले भवति yoginām kulē bhavati; yōgi means brahma jñāninaḥ; those who are already jñānis; so in the family of jñānis; and who may not be and who will not be prosperous in the literal sense; because they lead a simple life only; and therefore Sankaracharya says; they are born in a poor family; but the family of jñānis; and when there is jñānam; poverty will not be considered a curse.

When there is jñānam; poverty will not be considered a curse; it will be considered as an ideal thing for following tapas; and you do not have to specially practice sanyāsa; because you have to have something to renounce; therefore I need not work for sanyāsa; Bhagavān has himself made me born as a sanyāsi; therefore he will take as Bhagavān decided sanyāsa; if food is not there; it is good for upavāsa practice; it will be considered a blessing; less possession less worry; he sees as freedom from worry and therefore in such families of jñānis; such a person will be born dhīmatām yōginām; dhīmatām and yōginām should be connected; dhīmatām yōginām; means wise sages; the advantage is he need not go in search of guru; father or mother is guru; how convenient it is; brighur vai varuni; pitharam upasāsāra; athihi bhagavān brahmēti; so the Brighuvalli of Taittiriya upaniṣad is in the form of dialogue between father and son; how nice it would be if it is now; now they are fighting for property and other things; then it will be a dialogue of Vēdānta; instead of fighting and quarrels; dhīmatām yōginām kulē bhavathi. But Krishna says: एतद्धि दुर्लभतरं लोके जन्म ētaddhi durlabhataram lōkē janma; such a birth as a child of a jñāni is durlabhataram. Why; why it is rare; because jñānis themselves are rare; manuṣyaṅāṁ sahasrēṣu kaścidyatati siddhayē, yatatāmapī siddhānām kaścīnmām vētti tattvataḥ (7.3); jñānis themselves are rare and to be born to a jñāni; that jñāni must be what type of jñāni; grihastha jñāni; because in sanyāsi jñānis are there; jñānis are there; among them also he should be grihastha jñāni; still rare; less; and in that family birth is rarer; etat īdrśam janma lokē tat dhurlabham; durlabhatara. In the previous slōkā; śucinām śrīmatām gēhē is durlabham; this is durlabhataram; previous one itself is difficult; this one is still more difficult; to be born prosperous cultured family; is a great blessing; there is money, you can do lot of good karma; and you have a value for service also; rare birth only.

Now what is the next question. OK; I get a conducive janma for spiritual sādhanā; then the next important question is; should I start the spiritual sādhanā from scratches, or will it be the continuity of what I have already done; 6 chapters I have learned here; whether it is from 1st or from 7th chapter; like transfer; next class of the same class. Similarly the basic question; should I start spirituality from scratches or whatever I have acquired in this janma will be brought forward; b/f; that is the question; we are so particular about time; and Krishna is going to say; that it is brought forward; that means you are born with the phalam; the spiritual result which you have acquired in this janma; which means that person is born with advanced spirituality; that person is born as a spiritually evolved person; in fact such people are called spiritual geniuses. So from this we come to know a very important thing; the spiritual genius of this janma is a yōgabhraṣṭa of previous janma; every spiritual genius of this janma; they are all yōgabhraṣṭa of previous janma.

That is why somebody nicely said; the best way of catching a bus is, giving up the previous bus; previous bus if you miss, for the next bus you are sufficiently early; if you miss the bus of this janma; you are going to be sufficiently early in the next janma; that means spirituality starts from early life itself; that is going to be said in the next slōkā.

यतते च ततो भूयः संसिद्धौ कुरुनन्दन ॥ ६.४३ ॥

tatra taṁ buddhisamyōgaṁ labhatē paurvadēhikam |

yatatē ca tatō bhūyaḥ saṁsiddhau kurunandana || 6.43 ||

कुरुनन्दन kurunandana Oh Arjuna तत्र tatra there लभते labhate he attains तं
बुद्धिसंयोगम् taṁ buddhisamyōgam association with that knowledge, पौर्वदेहिकम् paurvadehikam which belongs to the previous च यतते ca yatate and strives ततः भूयः tataḥ bhūyaḥ more संसिद्धौ saṁsiddhau for liberation

43. Oh Arjuna there, he attains association with that knowledge which belongs to the previous body and strives more for liberation.

तत्र tatra; tatra means in the new janma; either in a prosperous cultured family or poor wise person's family; whatever be the family, there, तं बुद्धिसंयोगं लभते taṁ buddhisamyōgam labhate; this jīva gets associated with the spiritual maturity which he had acquired in the previous janmā; whatever spiritual gains he had made; including qualification, whatever be the amount of vivēka; whatever be the intensity of vairāgyam; and whatever knowledge he had acquired; all of them, his mind will discover as he grows up.

And therefore buddhi saṁyōgam means associated with the knowledge and spiritual maturity of pūrva janma; पौर्वदेहिकम् paurvadēhikam; which he acquired in the previous body; Why it is so; because according to śāstrā; between two janmās; the physical body alone is different; the mind is not different. When a person dies now in this janma; he gives up only the physical body; the mind does not die; sūkṣma śarīram does not die; therefore the sūkṣma śarīram has got all the puṇyam, vivēka, vairāgyam; that mature sūkṣma śarīram travels; and it takes another body; and when the body is a baby body; the mind cannot express itself; but when the body grows to 12 years 13 years, 14 years, then the mind; which mind, spiritual mind, evolved mind, mature mind of previous janmā; which has been continuing, that blooms.

That is why we say a mother never gives birth the mind of the child; a mother gives birth to only the body of the child; every child comes with its own mind; its own vāsanās; its own inclinations; that is why to the same parents if there are four children; you will find their inclinations vary; one child shows spiritual inclination from early childhood; which spiritual inclinations even the parents do not have; in fact they discourage the child from the path of spirituality; not necessary they will say; but the child becomes so spiritual; how does the child gets the spirituality; mother might have given some background; but remember all the children are born to the same parents and the same environment is there; and you find that another child becomes a nāstika; not only no interest in śāstrā or religion; he or she becomes a nāstika; how do you explain this wide disparity in two children born to same parents; you can give only one answer; the child has come with its own vāsanās; and this vāsanā will remain dormant in early ages; because 3rd year, how can the child expresses; but when the 15 to 20; it varies from child to child; the dormant vāsanās becomes manifest; the child gets interested in spiritual books; and questions are spiritual; we call the child spiritual genius; but from śāstrā angle; the child is yōgabhraṣṭa of pūrva janmā.

Therefore paurvadēhikam buddhi saṁyōgaṁ labhatē; and how do you know a child is a spiritual genius; how to do know; will it be written on the forehead; how do you know; only from the type of inclination; and that is why you will find at any time, if you study the age of people in Vēdāntic pursuit, we have got all the ages; see in this class itself; young, middle aged, old, very very old, etc. and there are still people who are older than all of you; but still no interest in spirituality or anything; fully immersed in what. TV programme; one after the other; still there are people who never come anywhere near spirituality. So therefore age we cannot talk about because, we are talking about the age of the body; age of the mind is different from the age of the body; that is why we talk of vayōvrudhāḥ; and we talk about jñāna vrudhāḥ; jñāna vrudhāḥ; even though body is young, mind is mature; if you want to calculate the age; how to calculate; add the last year's plus; last janmā's 80 and now in 15; then 15 +80; BODY IS 15; 95; NOT EVEN 95, we have not gone to still earlier birth.

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

Om

In spite of Lord's Krishna's encouragement, Arjuna became very pessimistic with regard to his own spiritual journey; the reason is that Arjuna understood that spiritual journey involves knowledge and spiritual knowledge involves the refinement of the mind, management of the mind, or the purification of the mind. And when Arjuna looks at his own mind he feels that it is not possible at all to be the master of his own mind; because mastery of the mind is perhaps the most difficult mastery. As they say the greatest in life is the victory over one's own mind. And Krishna says is a prerequisite that it is a necessary condition for spiritual knowledge as well as the assimilation of the knowledge; and therefore Arjuna feels that if mastery of mind is a prerequisite, a necessary condition, I do not think I will be ever to accomplish that; AND therefore he feels that in this life it is out of question.

And since he has pessimistically concluded that in this life I am not going to make it; he has started thinking about the next life; like some children, if they have not written well in one particular examination, they think of the next attempt even before the result comes; and sometimes to their utter surprise, they get very good marks and Arjuna also feels like that and therefore he wants to know what will happen to such spiritual failures, which is technically referred to as yōgabhraṣṭa; and that was Arjuna's question which is the last topic of the sixth chapter and Krishna has begun his answer from verse No.40 onwards up to verse No.46; it is Krishna's answer to such a question; and Krishna points out that a person who has come to spiritual journey, there is no question of spiritual fall at all. Śaṅkarācārya in his commentary makes a very important statement, अध्यात्म संस्कारस्य नाशः नास्ति adhyātma saṁskārasya nāśaḥ nāsti. Once the spiritual teachings or thoughts put in the mind, then they can never be destroyed; they are so powerful that spiritual vāsanās, śubha vāsanās cannot be destroyed; what maximum can happen is that there can be a temporary stagnation; because of other wanderings and meanderings; there may be a temporary stagnation; and just as the glowing embers of the fire may be covered by ash; சாம்பல் பூத்த கனல்; cāmpal pūtta kaṇal; like the glowing embers of the fire, which is temporarily covered by ash; it looks as though not fire; but you do a little bit of fanning; the fire comes again. Similarly once you have put spiritual vāsanās, they can never be destroyed; and therefore there can be a temporary stagnation; and again the spiritual student will pick up the thread from the next janmā and he will easily attain mōkṣa and as I said in the previous class this spiritual failure of this janmā becomes the spiritual genius of the next janmā. It is like the advantage in tennis game; you know; after 40-all, Wimbledon final is going on; Patridge Rapter v/s Peter Sampras; good that you came here; so therefore advantage means what he has to only win one game, because already one he has got; so in this life he is already advantage he has hit; next janmā, he has to only another hit; mōkṣa final; get the cup of jīvan mukti; and even if he has failed in spirituality in this janmā; Krishna said that the very jñāna yōga gives him puṇya phalam; as a bye-product and as a result of the puṇya phalam he will enjoy the heavenly world and again come back here because bhūlōkā or manuṣya janmā alone is ideal for spiritual pursuit.

In Kathōpaniṣad there is a mantra:

yathā:':psu parīva dadṛśē tathā gandharvalōkē
chāyātapayōriva brahmalōkē || 5|| Part II. Canto III. 5

Spiritual knowledge can be clearly attained only in two lōkās; of the 14 lōkās, 12 lōkās is not attainable or will not be clear; only in two lōkās knowledge can be clearly attained; you know what are those two lōkās; manuṣya lōkā and brahma lōkā.

And naturally we will tell that we will see in Brahma lōkās; as we are experts in postponement; and why can't we try in brahma lōkā; Śankarācārya in his bāṣyam writes, no doubt brahma lōkā is an ideal place to get jñānam; but going to brahma lōkā, visa is almost impossible.

And what about getting manuṣya janmā; getting manuṣya janmā is also extremely difficult; but you need not work for manuṣya janmā, because I hope we are already manuṣyas and therefore having enjoyed the pleasures of heavenly lōkās, as a result of the bye-product puṇyam, this yōga bhraṣṭaḥ will come to manuṣya lōkā and he will get; he or she (both have to be included) will get ideal conditions for the continuation of the spiritual journey.

And how can he get continuation? continuation requires two conditions; first condition is there should be a scope for spiritual study; you cannot get anywhere on the earth; there are places beyond vēdic culture; everywhere vēdic knowledge is not available; therefore the first thing there should be an environment for scriptural study.

And more important; even if there is an ideal environment available, I should have interest; I should have an interest and therefore Krishna says this yōga bhraṣṭa will have both; first he will have a family condition and social condition which are ideal for spiritual pursuit; gurus will be available; śāstrā will be available; classes will be available; all these are required; supposed gurus are there and they are observing maunam; he may be great and he may be greatest jñāni; but he is a mouni; what can you do; so he should be a communicating guru; not only that I should have inclination; in fact often I experience this; I will be conducting classes in some colonies; and you will find that people will come from all over Chennai; sometimes even from Kanchipuram to attend the classes; but from the colony, they will not come; just they have to get down; at least they should see whether they will get chundal; why can't they try; whether chundal or kadalai will be available. No. they do not have interest; therefore in some cases, environment is there; interest is not there; in some cases, there is a deep thirst, but there is no opportunity; but for yōga bhraṣṭa; both will be there; therefore tatra taṁ buddhisamyōgaṁ labhatē; tatra indicates, in that ideal environment.

India is an idea environment, because in India we have spiritual culture; we go anywhere, there is spirituality; you go to mountains; there are temples, in caves there are temples, it is spiritually-oriented country; and here also further values for religion, sadhus, scriptures etc is required. Therefore tatra indicates environment is there;

And what is the next thing; buddhisamyōgaṁ labhatē; a spiritual inclination must be there; and this person, yōga bhraṣṭa, gets the spiritual inclination in very early life; brahmacarya āśrame ēva; while people do not get this inclinations after brahmacarya; grihashtha āśrama; even after all āśramas, many people do not get; this yōga bhraṣṭas will be spiritual geniuses, they will get inclination in early life; it is not only in the field of spirituality; any genius in any field is a bhraṣṭa in the pūrva janmā; if there is a 10 year boy or girl; becoming a musical genius, remember he has struggled in pūrva janmā.

And therefore; तम् विध्य कर्मणि समन्वारा भेदे, पूर्व प्रज्ञा च tam vidhya karmaṇi samanvārā bhēdē, pūrva prajñā ca; Brihadārṇya upaniṣad; Śārīraka brahmanam; it beautifully says when the jīva travels not only the jīva takes all the karmas; not only the jeeva takes all the upasanas; the jīva takes pūrva prajñā cha; pūrva prajñās means vāsanās; and that is here indicated by the word buddhi samyōga; buddi here indicating vāsanā samyōga; subha vāsanā; adhyātma vāsanā; while everybody is wondering how to make more and more money; this person does not seem to have too much value for all these things; he knows that they are all not important; he cannot spend 24 hours sweating and toiling only for the sake of money; cannot think of that; he looks for spiritual books, he will look for spiritual programme, ochre robe there is some attraction; kāvi is a little attraction for him; whereas for others it is allergy; and he himself cannot explain why there is this inclination; I find myself with this inclination; I do not have an explanation; the only explanation must be what; in pūrva janmā we might have done something; that must be; therefore paurvadēhikam; the vāsanās which have been acquired in the pūrva deha; pūrva janmā; acquired in the pūrva janmās; with those vāsanās he gets connected; which you may call as in the genetic mapping; now they are doing; in the mapping spiritual genes will be there; for some other people jeans are there; some people love jeans; this people have spiritual genes; and once he has got this inclination; he has got the advantage and if you could know what is tennis; even after coming to advantage, a person can lose the match, because of negligence. So there are games in which having won two sets and the third set, even having come to advantage; match point, blow out that and then people lose the match and championship; therefore even after coming to advantage, a tennis player cannot be negligent.

Similarly a spiritual genius cannot take the life for granted; if he is negligent; this life may be lost; and therefore, what should he do; he has to use the freewill to promote spirituality in which he already has an inclination; this spiritual interest cannot be taken for granted; it has to be protected and it has to be fanned and it has to be nourished; like nourishing a flame; if a lamp is lit and if it is not protected, the breeze will put it out; like that the spiritual flame, this seeker will nourish and therefore Krishna says भूयः ततः यतते bhūyaḥ tataḥ yatate. So what is the subject of the sentence; you have to comply; yōga bhraṣṭa; this yōga bhraṣṭa of previous janmā; strives more; bhūyaḥ; but the thing is since he has got the advantage of pūrva janmā the effort required is much less; it is like swimming along with the current; when the current is favourable to you; you have to only float and move very little; then you will find that a little bit swimming you have reached 50 feet; while the other people are struggling யதிர நீச்சல் yatir nīccal; the spiritual genius is நேர் நீச்சல் nēr nīccal; straight; only a little effort, he is progressing swiftly; therefore bhuyah yatate;

For what; for संसिद्धौ saṁsiddhau; for the culmination of the journey for the success of the spiritual journey; saṁsiddhau, nimitha sapthami; seventh case, nimitha sapthami, for the case of spiritual success; he strives, but the effort required is lesser only; it is like when you start pedalling the cycle, the first few feet, you have to pedal hard; then once it has got a momentum; it will move on itself; and in fact, after sometime, you need not even pedal; it will continue; saṁsiddhau hey Kurunanda; Arjuna, therefore be happy; you are in the right direction; be optimistic.

जिज्ञासुरपि योगस्य शब्दब्रह्मातिवर्तते ॥ ६.४४ ॥

pūrvābhyāsēna tēnaiva hriyatē hyavaśō'pi saḥ |

jijñāsurapi yōgasya śabdabrahmātivartatē || 6.44 ||

अपि अवशः api avaśaḥ though not willing सः हि हियते saḥ hi hriyatē he is drawn (towards yōga), तेन एव पूर्वाभ्यासेन tēna eva pūrvābhyāsena because of that very previous practice, अपि जिज्ञासुह् api jijñāsuh though a curious student योगस्य yōgasya of yōga, (initially), अतिवर्तते ativartatē he (soon) goes beyond शब्दब्रह्म śabdabrahma the karmakanda of the Vēdas

44. Though not willing, he is drawn (towards Yōga) because of that very previous practice. Though a curious student of Yōga (initially) he soon goes beyond the Karmakanda of Vēdas.

And how this spiritual inclination express itself? In the current janmā, wherever there is a field of spirituality; wherever there is anything connected with spirituality, this person is unknowingly attracted; which you can see in any spiritual lecture also; there will be elderly people and there will be youngsters also; why youngsters come and the interesting thing is the parents themselves discourage; why at this age; Gītā should not be there; you should suffer in life and a great tragedy strikes, then only you should take up Gītā; somebody should die; frustration; that is why they ask us also; what happened Swamiji; some tragedy should take place, to come to this line; so this is an unfortunate thing, it need not be a person because of pūrva vāsanā; without a tragedy, without any reason, person can be happily attracted to spirituality.

And therefore pūrva abyāsēna; because of pūrva vāsanā; तेन एव tēna eva; because of the pūrva vāsanā; ह्रियते hriyatē; means this person is drawn; sucked, attracted to anything connected with spirituality; अवशः अपि सः avaśaḥ api saḥ;; avaśaḥ means what even without his will, without his deliberate plan, unknowingly; helplessly; even if he wants to turn materialistic because of pressure outside; we will find that he cannot survive there for long. I think they say of Aurobindo or someone, his parents did not want to be in Indian culture at all; they liked the western culture; therefore he was protected away; savēd from Indian culture; and he was given western education and sent to England; and therefore materialistic atmosphere; and there he comes in contact with people who are working for the freedom of India; India Club or something; and he gets associated with those people, and he begins to feel and if I working for the freedom of my motherland, should I not know about India, what is its culture, what is history; philosophy and he gradually gets sucked into that and he comes to freedom struggle and goes to Pondicherry and becomes a yōgi; you go into any materialistic society; if the spiritual fire is there; nobody can stop; and if the spiritual fire is not there; whatever way you blow "fu, fu, fu", it will not come; that is why to such people allow them to be materialistic; nothing wrong; just ask them to be devotees; have faith in God; surrender to God; seek the guidance of God; even to enjoy materialistic pleasures; allow them;

Because spiritual maturity, as Swami Chinmayananda beautifully says: spiritual maturity is not a revolution, it is an evolution. You cannot force it on your child, just because you like Gītā you cannot force, you can only provide the conditions and they have to develop spiritual interest; and in the case of this person, he is dragged; and because of this extra current; the extra force of pūrva vāsanā ; what will happen; जिज्ञासुरपि jijñāsurapi; he starts only as a casual student; he may not be that serious; but he starts as a jijñāsu; jijñāsu means out of curiosity; perhaps as a hobby; somebody wanted to call me for bhikṣa; and later I came to know, that person's intention was what you know; he is going abroad for business; and he has come to know that when he goes abroad, there are many foreigners interested in Indian philosophy, culture and spirituality; and therefore they ask it seems; what is Hinduism; what is advaitam; it seems; and when they ask questions and if I say I do not know; I do not know, that will not be good; and therefore I have to answer; not that I am interested; but because I have to answer when I travel on business; some tips on Hinduism he wants and he does not want to come to me and learn; but wants to give to give a meal to Swamiji and get some tips.

Some people may start in that manner and if that fire is there; like a karpūram (karpūra buddhi, kari buddhi; vazhathandu buddhi; so karpūram, camphor, you show the flame, it catches fire;

Kari; coal means, you have to keep it in the flame for a long time; on the tip of the coal small dot; then fu, fu, fu you blow and it will come slowly and the third one is vazhathandu buddhi, plaintain stem buddhi; there if you keep flame, not only it will not catch fire; it will put out the available flame also.

Thus there are some powerful students who will put out the teacher's knowledge also. So in this case, yōga bhraṣṭa is camphor student; just show the fire and it will be a conflagration; jijñāsu rapi yōgasya; yōga means spirituality; शब्दब्रह्मातिवर्तते śabdabrahmātivartatē; very quickly he transcends śabdabrahma; śabdabrahma is a technical word which indicates karma kānda of the vēdās; And karma kānda of vēdās indicate finite results; because karma kānda deals with anitya phalam. And this person transcends karma kānda means what he transcends anitya phalam, he transcends anitya phalam means, he attains nitya phalam; therefore śabdabrahma ātivartatē means mōkṣam prāpnōti; He will attain nitya phala; So transcending karma kānda is coming to jñāna kāndam; coming to jñāna kāndam means coming to mōkṣa; he will attain mōkṣa very quickly.

प्रयत्नाद्यतमानस्तु योगी संशुद्धिकिल्बिषः ।

अनेकजन्मसंसिद्धः ततो याति परां गतिम् ॥६.४५॥

prayatnādyatamānastu yōgī saṁśuddhakilbiṣaḥ |

anēkajanmāsamsiddhastatō yāti parāṁ gatim | | 6.45 | |

यतमानः तु yatamānaḥ tu striving प्रयत्नात् prayatnāt diligently योगी yōgī that yōgi अनेकजन्मसंसिद्धः anekajanmāsamsiddhaḥ who is refined through many births, संशुद्धिकिल्बिषः saṁśuddhakilbiṣaḥ and who is free from impurities याति परां गतिम् yāti parāṁ gatim attains the supreme goal ततः tataḥ consequently

45. Striving diligently, that Yōgi who is refined through many births and who is free from impurities attains the supreme goal consequently.

What happens to that yōga bhraṣṭa in this janmā; yōga bhraṣṭa's present janmā's journey is talked about here; yōga bhraṣṭa of the previous janmā; and the spiritual genius of this janmā is here called yōgi. So who has got advantage; advantage yōga bhraṣṭa; and this yōgi and how does he feel this advantage; how does this spiritual genius advantage expresses itself. Krishna says संशुद्धिकिल्बिषः saṁśuddhakilbiṣaḥ; who is free all impurities; kilbiṣam means impurities malam and saṁśuddhakilbiṣaḥ freed from impurities; nirmala antakaraṇaḥ; suddha antakaraṇaḥ;

And how does mental purity express itself; how do you know mental purity; there are not; is there any purity meter; like lacto meter; saṁśuddho meter; what is the reading; 7, OK; whether some thing is like that; we have already seen in the beginning of the 6th chapter that the indication of purity is natural inclination for spirituality; indication of purity is natural inclination for spirituality. Therefore saṁśuddhakilbiṣaḥ; this person with this natural inclination; and how did he get this natural inclination; Is it because the Lord is partial; it has come in the young age itself; why it did not come to me. Is it that Lord is partial; Krishna wants to make it clear; different grades of purity is not because of God's whim and fancy; if it is determined by God, God will become partial; one he makes a spiritual genius; another musical genius and making me a idiot. That God will not be respectable God.

Therefore Krishna says that advantage he enjoys not because of Bhagavān but अनेकजन्मसंसिद्धः anēkajanmāsamsiddha, he has acquired it; just like some people saving money; like in a hundi; one rupee, two rupee, in each janmā; in spiritual hundi, he has deposited and anēkajanmāsamsiddha. So this person who has attained refinement, saṁsiddhi; refinement; maturity; clarity with regard to course of life; clarity with regard to limited goal; what is pseudo goal; what are fake things; clarity is there, that is called refinement; he cannot be hoodwinked by the pseudo pleasures of life; he looks for something really solid. So in everything fake; one cannot differentiate; therefore he cannot be hoodwinked by fake goals of dharmārta kāma, he is for only the real gold of parama puruṣārtha of mōkṣa. This is called saṁsiddhi; clarity regarding the primary goal of life; this he has attained as a result of what; aneka janmā puṇya karma; so anēka janmā saṁsiddha; saṁśuddhakilbiṣaḥ yōgi.

Now in this janmā, he requires what; only limited effort; therefore प्रयत्नाद्यतमानस्तु prayatnādyatamānastu. To put in the language of the children's examination; there are two type of children: one set of children they cover the portions daily; they refine it daily and understand and during examination; they have only to revise, browse through and they are ready. There are some other children; they want to have gala time till March, and then April-May study up to 12 a.m. of 1 a.m. and sleep in the examination hall; and therefore you sleep off in the examination hall.

Thus there are some human beings who wants to do everything in one life; it does not work; whereas the others, they have prepared gradually; and therefore for them the spiritual journey is a browsing through; no struggle; no effort; other people think that spiritual journey is क्षुरस्य धारा निशिता दुरत्यया kṣurasya dhārā niśitā duratyayā (Part I. Canto III. 14); walking on razor's edge; whereas for this person, this is the most enjoyable thing in life; in fact for this person, other things appear boring; and therefore anēka janmā saṁsiddha; prayatnādyatamāna; striving further; with the advantage of previous janmā; and striving further in this janmā; परं गतिम् याति parāṁ gatim yāti; he effortlessly reaches the destination of mōkṣa; here parāṁ gatim; jīvan mukthi; jñāna niṣṭā; ततः tataḥ; means consequently, as a result of the limited use of freewill.

In fact whatever injunctions rules the scriptures gives, they are natural to him; whatever is sruthi vidhi; injunctions of the sruthi; whatever sruthi asks him to do;

he naturally likes to do; do not he does not like to do naturally; In fact, his rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ tallies with sruthi vidhi niṣēdha; like they say in Malayalam; രോഗി കൊതിച്ചതും നെയ്യ്; വൈദ്യൻ വിധിച്ചതും നെയ്യ്; rōgi koticcatuṁ neyy; vaidyan-vidhiccatuṁ neyy; neyyai means Ghee; this rōgi, sick person, he loves ghee; and the doctor comes and he says that you have to take medicine; what is the medicine; ghee; alopahy doctor does not prescribe ghee; he will say; ghee is cholesterol; ayurvēda. Similarly for this yōga bhraṣṭa; rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ tallies with vidhi niṣēdha.

तपस्विभ्योऽधिको योगी ज्ञानिभ्योऽपि मतोऽधिकः ।

कर्मिभ्यश्चाधिको योगी तस्माद्योगी भवार्जुन ॥ ६.४६ ॥

tapasvibhyō'dhikō yōgī jñānibhyō'pi matō'dhikaḥ |

karmibhyaścādhikō yōgī tasmādyōgī bhavārjuna | | 6.46 | |

योगी अधिकः yōgī adhikaḥ Dhyana yōgi is greater तपस्विभ्यः tapasvibhyaḥ than ascetics मतः अधिकः mataḥ adhikaḥ he is considered greater अपि ज्ञानिभ्यः api jñānibhyaḥ than even the jñāna yōgis योगी अधिकः yōgī adhikaḥ Dhyana yōgi is greater कर्मिभ्यः karmibhyaḥ than Karma Yōgis also. च तस्मात् ca tasmāt Therefore भव योगी bhava yōgī become a Dhyana yōgi अर्जुन arjuna Oh Arjuna

46. Dhyana yōgi is greater than ascetics. He is considered even greater than jñānyōgis. Dhyana yōgi is greater than Karmayōgis also. Therefore become a Dhyana yōgi, Oh Arjuna.

In fact with the previous verse, Krishna's answer to Arjuna's question is over. I said up to 46th verse; it is up to 45th verse; yōga bhraṣṭa question is over. And therefore Arjuna need not be pessimistic because as I said, the minimum you are going to get for attending Gītā class; minimum you are going to get is svarga; and the maximum you are going to get is mōkṣa in this janmā or in the next janmā. Suppose somebody asks; that Swamiji suppose some pūrva sanchita karma pāpam comes; done sometime back like killing a snake; they say mostly about snake killing in the horoscope reading; nāga dōṣam; some sañcita pāpam, and it comes and intervenes.

What will happen; the śāstrā says; even if there are some sañcita pāpams; this spiritual samskāras are so powerful; that they give a stay order to sañcita pāpam. this spiritual samskāras of this janmā is so powerful; that they can keep pūrva janmā sañcita pāpam at bay; they do not destroy; to destroy one needs jñānam; therefore they keep the sañcita pāpams at bay; in the next janmā he will directly go to the spirituality; jñānam and sañcita pāpam will be destroyed; and therefore you need not even worry about sañcita pāpam; sañcita pāpa vināśāna liṅgam; tat praṇamāmi sadāśiva liṅgam. So thus, one need not be pessimistic; therefore never ask the question; when will I attain mōkṣa; or will I attain mōkṣa; stop the question; enjoy the spiritual journey, Like reading a big book; one thing you can do is enjoy every page; another thing that you can do is, the moment you get the book in hand, look at the last page: 737, who will read all this; and read no pages; worries he loses the present; why do you worry about the last page; read a page a day; similarly, do not ask the question; Swamiji will I get liberation in this birth or next birth; in the next birth; will you yourselves come as my guru; do not have these questions; enjoy the spiritual journey optimistically; question is answered with the 45th verse;

And now in these two verses, Krishna is coming back to the topic of meditation; for concluding; so in these two verses Krishna wants to glorify vēdāntic meditation; Krishna wants to glorify vēdāntic meditation and therefore he is glorifying vēdāntic meditator, so that when the meditator is glorified, the meditation is glorified. and therefore he talks about many sādakās; and he says among all the all the sādakās, the greatest one is vēdāntic meditator; because he is on the threshold of liberation; and all these sādakās he calls by the name Yōgi.

And who are the various yōgis; Krishna enumerates; तपस्विनः tapasvinaḥ; tapasvis are those seekers who are committed to upāsana; one set of yōgis or spiritual seekers; spiritual aspirants; tapasvis, upāsakas, saguṇa upāsakas; they are one group of seekers.

then jñāninaḥ, jñānis are who are committed to sṛavaṇam and mananam; so sṛavaṇa mananam kartāraḥ; so they are another set of yōgis or seekers; and then who are the third one; कर्मिभ्यः karmibhyaḥ; karmis are those who are committed to karma yōga; those who are committed to karma yōga; those who are committed to upāsana; those who are committed to sṛavaṇa, manana, and finally the fourth one is those who are committed to nidhidhyāsana; vēdāntic meditation; karma, upāsana, sṛavaṇa; mananam; nidhidhyāsanam; these five steps, in whatever step you are, you are a yōgi; karma step; upāsana step; sṛavaṇa step, mananam step, or nidhidhyāsanam step; all of them are called yōgis only; but among all these yōgis.

Krishna says those who are in the nidhidhyāsanam step, the fifth and final step; they are the greatest one, because they are closest to the destination; because they have already crossed the first four steps karma upasana, sṛavaṇa, mananam, these four they have crossed; they are in the fifth step and the next step they have to keep is in Mōkṣa; the destination; whereas the one who is at karma level; is inferior because he has to cross, upasanam, sṛavaṇam and mananam. the one who is upasana level he has to go through sṛavaṇam and mananam; and one who is sṛavaṇam he has to go through mananam and nidhidhyāsanam; and the one who is at mananam level he has to go through nidhidhyāsanam level; one who is at the nidhidhyāsanam level is the closest to the destination.

And therefore Krishna says तपस्विभ्योऽधिको योगी tapasvibhyō'dhikō yōgī; yōgi means vēdāntic meditator; nidhidhyāsanam mediator is superior to saguna upasaka; jñānibhyaha abhi yōgi adikaḥ; this vēdāntic meditator nidhidhyāsanam yōgi is superior to even jñānis; very careful; this place jñāni is sṛavaṇa manana stage; nidhidhyāsanam person has crossed sṛavaṇa and manana stage; therefore he is in a higher plane; whereas who are in sṛavaṇam and mananam are in lower level; therefore jñānibhyaha api, sṛavaṇa manana karthrvaha api, yōgi nidhidhyāsaka adikaḥ; superior; कर्मिभ्यश्चाधिको योगी karmibhyaścādhikō yōgī; again nidhidhyāsaka yōgi is superior to karmis; because karmis are in the first stage; they have cross four stages.

And therefore Arjuna, if you want mōkṣa; you have to not only do sṛavaṇam; I am guru alright; guru can help in sṛavaṇam; in fact, in sṛavaṇam; predominant role is played by the guru; the śiṣya has only to make himself or herself available; you have give your mind; the teacher can fill up; but the mind should be empty; only then you can fill; if the student comes with already full mind; nothing can work;

So he should keep aside all the notions; total confusion reading so many books; the teacher has to take more time to removing the rubbish; therefore keep all your personal, what you call prejudice; your information keep aside; come with a clean open mind; gata gata guru will fill up; and therefore; here jñāni refers to sṛavaṇa manana kartha; and Krishna says that it is not enough that you listen to me; guru may be the greatest and teaching may be best; but still nidhidhyāsanam; guru cannot do for śiṣya; your meditation I myself will do; the guru cannot say; it would not work; your assimilation; you have to do; therefore Arjuna, I can only teach you; but assimilation you have to work for; तस्माद्योगी भवार्जुन tasmādyōgī bhavārjuna; therefore nidhidhyāsaka bhava.

Therefore do not stop with mere listening; between one Sunday and another Sunday class; at least try to spend some time to recollect; to revise to think to assimilate, what you have heard; and try to find out what I know and what I am; are they closer; so self-examination let it go on; and now Krishna concludes in the 47 verse; once again glorifying the meditator.

योगिनामपि सर्वेषां मद्गतेनान्तरात्मना।

श्रद्धावान्भजते यो मां स मे युक्ततमो मतः ॥६.४७॥

yōgināmapi sarvēṣāṃ madgatēnāntarātmanā |

śraddhāvān bhajatē yō māṃ sa mē yuktatamō mataḥ | | 6.47 | |

अपि सर्वेषां योगिनाम् api sarveṣāṃ yōginām Even among the dhyanyōgis सः श्रद्धावान् saḥ śraddhāvān that faithful one यः भजते माम् yaḥ bhajate mām who meditates on Me अन्तरात्मना antarātmanā with the mind मद्गतेन madgatena absorbed in Me मतः मे mataḥ me is considered by Me युक्ततमः yuktatamaḥ the best Yōgi.

47. Even among all dhyanyōgis that faithful one who meditates upon ME with mind absorbed in Me is considered by Me as the best Yōgi.

Almost the same idea as in the previous verse. Krishna says the meditator is the greatest sādakā; because he is closest to the destination; so in the previous verse Krishna only said the meditator is the greatest; now here he answers meditator of what: because mediation can be on anything; even for murder, they use the word, pre-meditation. So what; they are meditation; therefore Krishna says; यः मद्गते आन्तरात्मना श्रद्धावान् माम् भजते yaḥ madgatē āntarātmanā śraddhāvān mām bhajatē; the one who meditates on me; the Lord; the atma; Krishna param ātmanam bhajatē; bhajatē means dhyāyathe; the one who meditates upon God; God as what; if you just go back to the 6th chapter, the previous verses; you will know that God as the very atma; not God as a person located in a place; because Krishna has said ātmasamstam mana kritva na kinchit api chintayet; one should not mediate with Krishna as a person; but as Krishna parama ātma; so यः मद्गतेन मां भजते yaḥ madgatēna mām bhajatē.

And that too how śraddhāvān; with all śraddhā; that meditation will help me in becoming jñāna ṣṭā; in becoming jīvan muktha; faith in the efficacy of meditation; matgatēna antharātmana; the mind absorbed in me; here antarātma means mind; matgatēna; absorbed; So with a mind absorbed in me; that means with total concentration; so with total concentration and commitment; the one who meditates upon me, the parama ātma; सः युक्ततमो saḥ yuktatamaḥ; he is the greatest sādaka or yōgi; among whom; सर्वेषां योगिनाम् sarveṣāṃ yoginām; among all the yōgis. Among all the yōgis; that means the one who practices karma; or upasana; or sṛavaṇam; or mananam; in all these group; this nidhidhyāsaka yōgi is yukta tamaha; superlative degree; is the greatest yōgi; yōgiest; yōgi, yōgier, yōgiest; our English; सः युक्ततमो मे मतः saḥ yuktatamō mē mataḥ; this is my teaching.

Om

Today I will give you a summary of the 6th chapter of the Gītā, the sixth chapter deals with one of the most important topics of the entire spiritual discipline, viz., meditation. And in my introduction, I talked about the role of meditation in spiritual sādhanā. I pointed out that meditation is two-fold; one is the meditation to be practised before one exposes oneself to the vādāntic teaching; which is called vādānta śravaṇam; and this meditation which is to be practised before vādānta śravaṇam is called preparatory meditation and we call it upāsana; and upāsana requires the mind for doing the vādānta śravaṇam. And therefore a person has to practice upāsana first and then prepare the mind through that and come to vādānta śravaṇam; I talked about varieties of upāsanas, which is generally defined as Saṅga Īśvara dhyānam; dwelling upon the Lord with attributes. Saṅga Īśvara dhyānam; upāsana; and after this upāsana when a person does the Vādānta śravaṇam; it will lead to self-knowledge and you should remember, self-knowledge has to take place only through guru-upadēśa. And this will definitely take place, if a person has prepared the mind through upāsana; vādānta śravaṇam is bound to give self-knowledge.

And suppose a person has not done upāsana before; naturally the mind is not fully qualified; and when such a person who is under qualified or unqualified, when a such a person listens to the Vādāntic teaching, certainly the knowledge will take place, but the knowledge will not be that powerful and the knowledge cannot be assimilated into the system; like oil in water the knowledge will stand separate from the personality; there will be a gap between what that person knows and what that person is; that actual ideal rift or difference will be there. It is not because of the defect of the teaching, but because mind has not been prepared through upāsana.

And if it is an under prepared mind and does the Vēdānta sṛavaṇam; jñānam will take place; but jñāna niṣṭā, assimilation does not take place.

And therefore what we have to do, the vēdāntic sṛavaṇam should be followed by another type of meditation; which is called Vēdāntic meditation; or nidhidhyāsanam. Nidhidhyāsanam will be compulsory for one who has not done upāsanam. If sufficient upāsana has been done; vēdānta sṛavaṇam itself is sufficient, nidhidhyāsanam is not compulsory; but for those who have avoided upāsanam; will have to follow sṛavaṇam by nidhidhyāsanam; and nidhidhyāsanam is defined as nirguṇa īśvara dhyānam; while upāsanam is defined as Saguṇa īśvara dhyānam; nidhidhyāsanam is defined as nirguṇa īśvara dhyānam; and nirguṇa īśvara dhyānam is nothing but atma dhyānam; because nirguṇa īśvara happens to be the very chaitanyam; atma svarupam; and this we can call, vēdāntic meditation and in this vēdāntic meditation; a person dwells upon the teaching received during sṛavaṇam; and this dwelling is done for a length of time; so that the knowledge enters my mind; enters my sub-conscious personality. In short, it irrigates my whole personality so that I and the knowledge have become one; and thus vēdāntic meditation does not produce knowledge but vēdāntic meditation helps in the assimilation of knowledge; it is not the cause of jñānam; but it is cause of jñāna niṣṭā.

So now if you put these three disciplines in perspective; I can give you three statements; upāsana gives jñāna yōgyathā; sṛavaṇam gives jñānam; nidhidhyāsanam gives jñāna niṣṭā. This is the essence; upāsana gives jñāna yōgyathā; sṛavaṇam, Vēdānta sṛavaṇam; not something else, Vēdānta sṛavaṇam gives jñānam; in fact, Vēdānta sṛavaṇam alone can give jñānam; and nidhidhyāsanam gives jñāna niṣṭā; and the word dhyānam is a common word used for upāsanam also and also for nidhidhyāsanam; preparatory meditation is also called dhyānam; assimilatory meditation is also called dhyānam. But if you want to make a distinction, the first one is upāsana dhyānam; the last one is nidhidhyāsanam dhyānam.

And naturally the question will be what is the topic of the sixth chapter; if you call it dhyāna yōgaḥ; is it upāsana dhyānam; or nidhidhyāsanam dhyānam; and I told you in the introduction that it is nidhidhyāsanam dhyānam; Vēdāntic meditation is the subject matter of sixth chapter; and why does Krishna introduce Vēdāntic meditation here; because Krishna feels sṛavaṇam has already been done by Arjuna in the 2nd chapter, 3rd chapter, 4th and 5th chapters; four chapters he has eaten and this chapter, is for assimilation, for दहनम् dahanam of what has been eaten in four chapters, has to be digested.

Therefore vēdāntic meditation is the subject matter of the 6th chapter and this topic has been very exhaustively dealt with in this chapter and we do not find this much analysis in any other part of the scriptures, and therefore this chapter is very important.

Now the entire chapter can be divided into 6 portions and those six portions are No.1, bahiraṅga sādhanāni; in English, general disciplines to be observed by a person throughout the day for successful meditation; in simple language, general disciplines; bahiraṅga sādhanāni; No.2 topic is antaraṅga sādhanāni; in English, it is: specific disciplines to be observed just before the practice of meditation; specific disciplines; antaraṅga sādhanāni; then the third topic is dhyāna svarupam; the actual process of meditation; what exactly is meditation; in Sanskrit, dhyāna svarūpam; and then the fourth topic is dhyāna phalam; the benefit of meditation. When I say meditation, vēdāntic meditation; nidhidhyāsanam; whenever I say dhyānam, it should be taken as nidhidhyāsanam; nidhidhyāsana bahiraṅga sādhanāni; nidhidhyāsana antaraṅga sādhanāni; nidhidhyāsana svarūpam; nidhidhyāsana phalam; phalam means the benefit for the topic; then the fifth topic is dhyāna prathibanda parihārau; the obstacles to meditation; and their remedies; prathibanda means obstacles and parihāra means remedy. This is the first topic; and in fact, the five topics alone are dealing with meditation, the sixth topic is an incidental and aside topic and that is yōga bhraṣṭa, a question which came because of Arjuna's pessimism; in spite of Krishna's encouragement; Even after Krishna's teaching; if Arjuna got this pessimism, where are we? So in spite of Krishna's encouragement, Arjuna becomes pessimistic and Krishna just consoles Arjuna; which topic is called yōga bhraṣṭa topic. These are the six topics:

Now I will give you a brief note on each topic; first one is bahiraṅga sādhanāni, which is dealt with in verses 1 to 9; and 16 and 17; verses 1 to 9 and 16 and 17; you will find bahiraṅga sādhanāni; general disciplines. In general discipline, Krishna includes karma yōga as a very important discipline for successful meditation; a karma yōgi alone can practice meditation successfully, a karmi cannot practice meditation; he can sit in meditation; but everything else other than meditation will be happening and what is the reason; Krishna says karma yōgi is one who is able to accept all the actions that he has to do in life without grumbling; one of the source of mental disturbance is doing things without loving that job; when I keep on doing things; without having a love for that; there is a split in my personality; mind does not want to do; body has to do; therefore கடன் தொலைக்கறது kaṭaṇ tolaikkaratu; which means there is a stress and strain. Whereas karma yōgi accepts all the actions with what; īśvara arpaṇa buddhi; not only karma yōgi loves whatever he has to do; because of the position in the family; in the society, in the organisation; he also accepts all the consequences of his action. Not only karma he accepts, he accepts karma phalam also; karma he accepts with īśvara arpaṇa bhavana; karma phalam he accepts with prasāda bhāvana; and because of this īśvara arpaṇa prasāda bhāvanās, karma yōgi enjoys a stress free mind. In fact, karma yōga is the best method of stress management; and such a mind which is stress-free, Krishna calls samatvam yōga uchyate; karma yōgi enjoys a mind which is free from violent reactions; not at the time of meditation; but throughout; if there is one violent reaction during the day; that trauma in the mind will create such a strong imprint that even during night, you sit in meditation that daytime argument with the auto rickshaw fellow or argument with the boss, wife or children; any violent reaction creates an imprint and it will come when you are sitting in meditation; karma yōgi avoids violent reaction. I do not say karma yōgi avoids reactions; if karma yōgi totally avoids reactions; he need not come to jñāna yōga; karma yōgi avoids violent reactions; they do not seriously disturb his mind; therefore when he sits in meditation; he can forget those incidences and concentrate on the topic of meditation. Therefore karma yōga is a must for a dhyāna yōgi; a meditator. Therefore Krishna emphasises karma yōga in the beginning of sixth chapter:

अनाश्रितः कर्मफलं कार्यं कर्म करोति यः।

स संन्यासी च योगी च न निरग्निर्न चाक्रियः ॥ ६.१ ॥

śrībhagavānuvāca

anāśritaḥ karmaphalaṃ kāryaṃ karma karōti yaḥ |

In fact Krishna tells such a karma yōgi is as good as a sanyasi; so karma yōga is bahiraṅga sādānā No.1.

Then the second bahiraṅga sādānā Krishna emphasises is self-confidence; never look down upon yourselves; We all are God's creations; and we all belong to the Lord; and that qualification is enough for us to feel great; if even I do not have any qualification; I am great because I belong to the Lord. Some people you know say that they belong to a big family; my tatha was ghanapādi; but what did you study if you ask, he will say that Gayathri is doubtful; but still he just claims my tatha is ganapādi; and therefore I feel proud that somebody in the generation has done something; so similarly, we all belong to what.

माता च पार्वतिदेवि
पिता देवो महेश्वरा
बान्धवा शिवभक्ताऽच
स्वदेशो भुवनत्रयम् ॥
mātā ca pārvatidēvi
pitā dēvō maheśvarā bāndhavā śivabhaktā:'ca
svadēśō bhuvanatrayam ||

We belong to very big family; whose head is Bhagavān; why can't we feel proud; why can't we feel proud; therefore never look down upon yourselves; you can accomplish things in life; and if you feel diffident; inject confidence by surrendering to God, seeking the grace of Lord, Īśvara kripa is there; to push you; guru kripa is there to push you; śāstrā is there; three engines are working to push you; do not lie down like the cow which does not get up at all even after beating; kondi mādu; so therefore, be confident; uddharēdātmana"tmānaṃ; so discipline No.2, bahiraṅga sādānā. This is not only for spiritual goal; but even for material goal, you require confidence; do not be fatalistic; fatalism is un-vēdāntic. We think karma theory is fatalism; this is the biggest misconception. Nowhere in the vēdās, fatalism is talked about; it always says, take charge of your life;

The third value that Krishna emphasises in bahiraṅga sādānā is self-control; when you are using any instrument, you should have control over the instrument, whether you are driving a car, are whether you are using a musical instrument, you can be successful; only when the instrument is under your control; and Krishna says Bhagavān has given the best instrument for you, in the form of the body; wonderful human body; how many things the hand can do; you can sit and write; what all things you can do with the hand; minimum you can start with beating; slapping people and thereafter so many things; infinite things; wonderful body Bhagavān has given; wonderful jñānēndriyas; wonderful karmēndriyas; wonderful antakaraṇam. So many instruments are there; they will help if you keep them under your control; do not be a slave of these instruments; then if you are a slave; they will control you; but if you are a master; you can accomplish anything; remember, the Kathōpaniṣad ratha kalpana which we saw in the upaniṣad class; therefore what is the next discipline; self-control; karma yōga; self-confidence; self-controls; self means body-mind-sense complex.

Then the fourth discipline that Krishna emphasises which is very important is moderation in everything. Never indulge in anything too much. No doubt Bhagavān has given a wonderful world for your enjoyment only; sense pleasures are allowed; śāstrā itself talks about that; but nothing should be overdone; they say in Malayalam; അധികമായാൽ അമൃതം വിഷം adhikamāyāl-amṛtuṁ viṣaṁ; corresponding Tamil translation one can make. Anything in excess is dangerous; whether it is working; whether it is resting; whether it is sleeping; or whether it is eating; or whether it is talking or whether it is not talking; be moderate in everything; if you do not know whether you have control or not; once in a while say: SAY no to that; only when you trying saying No; you will know whether you are a slave or not. Whatever you do regularly; one day you just say no and see; if there is a protest, it means gradually you are enslaved; anything and therefore the golden middle path or moderation:

युक्तस्वप्नावबोधस्य योगे भवति दुःखहा ॥ ६.१७ ॥
yuktāhārahārasya yuktacēṣṭasya karmasu |
yuktasvapnāvabōdhasya yōgō bhavati duḥkhahā || 6.17 ||

नात्यश्नतस्तु nātyaśnatastu .etc. Thus four disciplines are emphasised in bahiraṅga sādhanā; karma yōga; self-confidence; self-control and moderation; this is topic No.1. Then the next topic antaraṅga sādhanāni, specific disciplines to be observed just before meditation, which topic is discussed verse No.10 to 15. 10 to 15 antaraṅga sādhanāni. And here we saw 8 items to be taken care of; eight fold factors to be taken care of. What are they?

No.1. place of meditation; the place should be clean; the place should be secluded; the place should be invoking spiritual thoughts in you; it should be associated with spirituality; as I said in the class, if you are sitting in the dining room; even if it is very clean; the thought will be associated with what; only śappād. So therefore let the place be associated with spirituality. So this is the place factor;

No.2. time factor; choose a time when the mind is sātvic. What do you mean by sātvic; it means your mind is neither rājasic or tāmasic; rājasic means over acting; running all over the world; that is rājasic; tāmasic means what; becoming inactive; dozing. Therefore your mind should not be dozing all; not wandering also; it should be alert and available for the job that you want to give; this alert mind, non-extrovert alert mind is called sātvic mind. And whenever you enjoy that mind; choose that time; Swamiji my mind is never like that; if you find that your mind is never like that; try to create such a mind by choosing that time, like early morning or evening and you practice, you will be able to get it. So therefore right time; No.2 factor;

Third factor is proper seat for sitting on; because according to śāstrā; we should not sit on the floor; on bare ground we are not supposed to sit; we should have an appropriate āsanam, which is exclusively ours; not for sharing; not tooth paste, one paste tube is ok; I do not think; the brush will be shared; exactly like that; have your own asanam; and use it only for this meditational purpose and Krishna said, it should be neither too high nor too low. Neither too soft; nor too hard; comfortable āsanam; this is the third factor; place; time; seat;

Then the fourth factor is condition of the body; body condition. Krishna said you should sit down if possible; you have to add; you should sit down if possible, if not, sit you can comfortably and if you are sitting down; folding your legs; with maximum base area; and then keep your body; neck and head, in straight line, but not stiff; it is straight; but not stiff. This is the fourth factor; condition of the body; place time seat, body condition;

No.5 condition of the sense organ; they are very powerful; capable of dragging you; neighbours conversation; if you can hear, it will go there only. TV song, it will be drawn to; need not in your house, in neighbours house, also. Therefore, withdraw all the sense organs; let the eyes be partially closed. Krishna said it should be as though looking at the tip of the nose, or as though looking between the eyebrows; bruvor madhye caksur.

In the end of the 5th chapter, he gave the clue; and in the 6th chapter, samprēkṣya nāsikāgraṃ svam; either this end of the nose or the other end of the nose; but the idea is that you should not be concentrating on the nose. Then it will become nose meditation; mind is not behind the eyes; eyes are in the direction; but mind is not behind the eyes. So this is the 5th condition; conditions of the sense organ;

No.6. Condition of the breathing; prāṇāpānau samau kṛtvā nāsābhyantaracāriṇau; breathing should be smooth and slow; even, samau kṛtvā; it should not be disturbed breathing; because according to śāstrā; breathing and mind are interconnected; if there is a disturbed breathing; it will disturb the mind also. In fact by controlling the breathing; one can control the mind also; जाल पक्षिवत्, रोट साधनम्, वायु रोधनात् नियत मान jāla pakṣivat, rota sādhanam, vāyu rōdhanāt niyata māna; Ramaṇa Maharshi gives in his Upadēśa Sāra: vayu means praṇa; rōdhanāt means disciplines; vayu rōdhanāt means disciplining the praṇās, thorough praṇāyāma, niyathe māna; mind can be quitted; like what; jāla pakṣivat rota sādhanam.

Just as a caged mind cannot fly. Similarly praṇāyāma cage; not allow the mind to fly all over; and that is why in all our rituals; om bhuhu; they will say; you have to catch the nose; means praṇāyāma you practice. Why, praṇāyāma is part of the ritual; because when you are doing any ritual, mind should be within that field. So thus, what is the 6th factor; condition of the breathing; then the 7th factor is the condition of the mind. What should be condition of the mind; become mentally a sanyasi; do not get frightened. OK. become mentally a sanyāsi means, drop all your relationship at least for 15-20 minutes; dropping the relationship means drop all your roles; do not be a father or mother; brother or husband; mother or sister; any role has got headache; any role has headache; therefore drop all your roles; you should have only one role; either be a bhaktha; Bhagavān will not give problem; either be a bhaktha during meditation; or be a śiṣyā, I hope guru does not give problem; or be a śiṣyā; during meditation; so this is mental withdrawal from all the saṅga; this is the seventh condition;

And the 8th and final condition is the condition of the intellect buddhihi; and what is the condition; intellectually I should be convinced of the value of meditation. If I do not have conviction, I will look upon those fifteen minutes as a waste of time; because time has become most rare thing in life; no time at all; you can see even at the class; even before the end of the class; even before pūrnataḥ; people get up; so much is to be done. In fact if I am able to take one hour a week; it is a great achievement for me; to keep you bound for an hour in a week; that is a great credit; so time has become so valuable now; in fact, people write Time is money; till that and it seems in America and all; payment and is by hour; one hour Gītā class; how many hours; I should be convinced time spent in this is worthy; I should not get benefit in terms of rupee and paise; but I am getting a benefit in terms of my personality transformation for which I should know that my peace of mind, does not depend upon what I have; my peace of mind depends upon what I am. Therefore intellectual conviction is also a condition.

Therefore what are the conditions; place, time, seat; condition of body; sense organs; breathing; mind; and intellect; these are the 8 factors to be taken care of; these are not all meditations; factors to be taken care for meditation; this is topic from 10 to 15.

Then from verse 18 to 32; 18th to 32nd, Krishna talks about dhyāna svarūpam and dhyāna phalam; dhyāna svarūpam means the process of meditation; and what is the process of meditation; mind dwelling upon a chosen object is meditation; which means the mind is there in mediation; mind is functioning in mediation; and mind entertains thought in meditation; therefore never think meditation is silencing the mind. Vēdāntic meditation is not silencing the mind; it is not stopping the mind; it is not curbing the mind; it is not restraining the mind; but it is directing the mind; which means thoughts are there; but the thoughts are dealing with the subject matter that I chose. And here what is the subject-matter; whatever I have learned from the scriptures; and what have I learned. So the body is not the real I; it is an incidental what you call appendage which should be there; for a few years and will disappear; similarly sense organs, similarly the mind; they are all instruments that I handle, my higher nature is the very chaitanyam; the consciousness principle, which is aware of all of them.

And if you remember the second chapter from verse No.12 to 25; I have talked about the nature of ātma; ātma nityaḥ; satyaḥ; ēkaḥ; sarva gathaḥ; asaṅgaḥ; akartā; aboktā; all these you are supposed to remember; 2nd chapter I have elaborately dealt with. And whatever you have received; they are not for forgetting; but they are meant for reliving; the class, vēdānta śravaṇam is the recording classes; vēdāntic meditation is the replaying; what you have recorded. So during śravaṇam; VCR is functioning; video cassette recorder and during the nidhidhyāsanam; what is functioning, VCP is functioning; when you are playing if it comes blank; sometime happens; you have very carefully recorded; even cassette; nothing came; nirguṇam brahma has been recorded; aśabdāṁ, asparśam, arūpam, avyayam. So in meditation, if blank comes; it means VCR has not functioned properly; so attend the classes regularly and attentively; listen properly, retain and relive.

And in this Krishna talked about three stages; dhāraṇa is focusing the mind, on the chosen subject; dhyānam is retaining the focused condition; and then samādhi is what: absorption in that particular subject matter; focusing, retaining, and getting absorbed; if focusing and retaining will is involved; but once you are observēd, then will is not required; as I said when you read a book, initially we have to draw your mind; once you are engrossed, in English we have that beautifully word, once you are engrossed, you forget the surroundings மெ மறந்து போனார் mai maraṇtu pōṇār in Tamil. So you just get absorbed; it is not a new peculiar mystic thing. We have that absorption power; in TV programme, in novel reading; in listening to neighbour's secret; in all that we have got absolute samādhi; that samādhi; only you have to bring here; we require only shifting; we do not have to gain a new capacity; whatever capacity you have, just use that wherever necessary. Thus dharana, dhyāna, samādhi; getting absorbed in the teaching; brahma satyam jagan mithya, aham brahmaiva na paraḥ.

And Krishna gave the example also. What is the example; like the flame which is kept in a breezeless place; a protected flame does not flicker. Similarly the mind is dwelling in the teaching.

And Krishna gave seven definitions for samādhi also; from verse No.20 to 23; he gave seven definitions.

Samādhi is that stage, in which citta upamaṇam, mind subsides; mind is absorbed in itself;

Second definition is ātma darśanam; the one's mind is absorbed in the ātma darśanam; owning up one's own higher nature;

third definition is ātyantika sukham one enjoys maximum ānanda because I am seeing my own higher nature looking into the mirror; how happy we are; never get chance; therefore I am looking into my own nature; ātyantika sukham; and then tatva niṣṭhā; being established in one's own real nature; tatva is the fourth definition; ātyantika lābha; it is a stage in which one has attained highest in life; and ātyantika duḥkha Nivrittihi; it is stage in which one has withdrawn from; one is free from all the sorrows.

And then finally Krishna defined duḥkha samyōga viyōgaḥ; a stage in which a person is no more identified the gains of anātma;

The details we can refer back, beautiful seven definitions of samādhi Krishna gave; they all come under the actual process of meditation.

And then Krishna discusses dhyāna phalam. In the same portion, i.e. from 18th to 32; both topics are there; dhyāna phalam means the benefit of meditation; the benefit is transformation of the personality; the way I look at the world; the way I look at the events in life; the way I look at myself; everything is completely transformed; the world does not undergo any change, but my way of looking at it is changed. And the greatest benefit of this perspective change is sarvatra sama darśana; freedom from rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ. So neither am I attached to anything in the creation; attachment is no more my weakness nor do I hate anything intensely; raga dvesha athitvatvam or sama darśanam; sarvathra sama darśanam. I might have preferences in life. As I said; preferences are different from rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ. I would prefer to have a cup of coffee is one thing; I need a cup of coffee is quite different. If you say I prefer; it is available, welcome and good; or else, OK. either way it is OK. But when I say I need it means if that is not available; I become non-functional. So jñāna niṣṭhā might have preferences in life; but he is not a slave of any object; any situation or any person; the toughest thing is getting out of attachment towards people; that is the final detachment. So this rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ athithvatvam; or sarvathra sama darśanam is presented as the main benefit. A few more benefit Krishna mentions, but the main one is sama darśanam; and samatvam alone is called śānti; equanimity; poise; this is dhyāna phalam; which can be otherwise called jīvan mukthihi.

Thereafter from verse No.33 to 36, Krishna talks about the obstacles to meditation; even though many obstacles are discussed in the śāstrā. Here in the 6th chapter, Krishna deals with one obstacle; and that is vikṣēpaḥ; wandering nature of mind; restlessness of the mind; vikṣēpaḥ prathibandhaḥ.

And Krishna gives a two fold remedy which is vairāgyam and abhyāsa; and abhyāsa means practice. So practice of the meditation; here practice makes a man perfect; sheer abhyāsa will improve the meditation.

and the second one is vairgyam. Vairagyam means reducing the rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ slavery; rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥs are one of the very powerful enemies of the spiritual seeker; and therefore repeatedly Krishna will say learn to handle your likes and dislikes; attachment and aversion; viruppu veruppu; you have to handle; they are your no.1 internal enemies.

In fact according to śāstrā, externally there are no enemies; if anybody is able to disturb you; you have allowed that person to disturb by either having either rāgaḥ or dveṣaḥ; if I have an attachment to a person, he will disturb by going away; the attachment is there. Suppose I have got attachment to the clock; the clock can disturb me, when it goes away. If I have a hatred to the clock, this clock will disturb me how; by coming towards me; this clock or watch gets the capacity to disturb me only because I have provided it the capacity by having either rāgaḥ or dveṣaḥ. If I do not have either, this is a neutral clock and therefore, handling rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ is one method; and practice is another method; to deal with the vikṣēpaḥ; this is dhyāna pratibandha parihāra; obstacle and remedy from 33 to 36.

Then from 37 to 45 is the last topic. With the previous topic the meditation part is over; in fact sixth chapter is over; with 36th verse; this is only an appendix or aside topic; based on Arjuna's question; What was Arjuna's question; Suppose we fail in our spiritual journey and die before attaining mōkṣa or jñānam; what will happen to me in my next birth; Arjuna's worry is since I have not done enough karma, I would not get svarga also and since I have not succeeded in gaining knowledge, no mōkṣa also, will I not have a downfall spiritually. This was Arjuna's question for which Krishna gave an elaborate answer; he said: one thing let it be clear; whoever comes to spiritual line, he has got only two phalams; possibility; if he gains knowledge wonderful; he will get mōkṣa; if he does not get knowledge; because of the sheer puṇyam of listening to the scriptures; he is going to enjoy svarga phalam. Therefore minimum svarga; maximum mōkṣa; wonderful; I am telling you; minimum svarga; maximum mōkṣa; and not only that person will enjoy svarga; if he is a failure, if he is a yōga bhraṣṭa; after svarga enjoyment he will get a very conducive birth; to continue the spiritual journey; not from the beginning but from where he left in this janma; and since he has got advantage of pūrva janma vāsana, his spiritual journey will start earlier and not only it will start earlier; it will be faster and he will effortlessly attain jñānam and mōkṣa; and therefore never be pessimistic; enjoy your spiritual journey.

With this Krishna concludes the yōga bhraṣṭa topic. And then in the last two slōkās 46 and 47, Krishna concludes the 6th chapter coming back to meditation once again; because that is the main topic of the 6th chapter and Krishna says one who is practicing vēdāntic meditation is the higher yōgi; because he is nearest to moksha; karma yōgi; upāsana yōgi; sṛavaṇa yōgi; manana yōgi; nidhidhyāsana yōgi; among these five yōgis; the other four are farther from mōkṣa; whereas nidhidhyāsana yōgi is in the fifth and final step; it is next step to liberation only. And therefore Arjuna do not stop with sṛavaṇam; practice vēdāntic meditation; even if you do not practice the asana posture etc. does not matter, in some form or the other, may you dwell on the teaching. So with the glorification of vēdāntic meditation, Krishna concludes this discourse. And this chapter is called dhyāna yōgaḥ; or ātma saṃyama yōga, because the central theme is directing the mind towards vēdāntic teaching.

Thus ends the sixth chapter named Dhyana-yoga in Srimadbhagavadgita which is the essence of the Upaniṣads, which deals with Brahman-knowledge as well as the preparatory disciplines, and which is in the form of a dialogue between Lord Krishna.

JÑĀNA VIJÑĀNA YŌGA

THE YŌGA OF KNOWLEDGE AND REALIZATION

The Bhagavad Gītā consisting of 18 chapters, is broadly classified into three sections which I had mentioned before; the first section consists of the first six chapters, and the second section consists of six chapters from the seventh to 12th and the final section consists of the last six chapters from the 13th to 18th. And since each section consists of 6 chapters, in Sanskrit it is known as ṣatkam; ṣatkam means a group or part or section consisting of 6 members. Like Pañcakam consisting of five; daśakam consisting of 10; ṣatkam consists of six; that is there is a well known work by Śaṅkarācārya; it is called ṣatkam because it consists of six verses. Thus any group consists of six verses is called is ṣatkam; thus the Gītā has got ṣatka trayam; three ṣatkams; known as prathama ṣatkam, madhyama ṣatkam and carama ṣatkam; prathama means the first one; madhyama means the middle; and the carama means the final.

And if you study the subject matter of each ṣatkam; you can see certain important topics are highlighted in each ṣatkam; and if you study the prathama ṣatkam, you can find three topics highlighted. I have mentioned before, I will remind you do not worry; then the madhyama śatkam also has got three prominent topics; Similarly, the carama śatkam also has three prominent topics.

What are the three topics within the prathama śatkam; the topics are No.1 Jīva svarūpam; the nature of the individual; this was discussed almost in every chapter, in the prathama śatkam; the second chapter, the third chapter, fourth, the fifth; in all of them, the nature of the individual was discussed and pointed out that the individual is not the body; individual is not even the mind or sense organs; the essential nature of the individual is the caitanyam, which is contained within the body-mind container. Thus the body and mind are presented as the containers, the superficial cabinet and within the body mind cabinet is the real individual known as satcidānanda ātma; and this satcidānanda was brilliantly discussed in the second chapter, from verse 12 to 25; in the third chapter; pancha kōśa vivēka was done; indriyani paranyaḥ; indriyāṇi parāṅyāhurindriyēbhyaḥ paraṁ manaḥ, manasastu parā buddhiryō buddhēḥ parastu saḥ (3.42).

In the fourth chapter also, the caitanya ātma was pointed at akartā and abōktā; in the fifth chapter also navadvārē purē dēhī naiva kurvanna kārayan (5.13); consciousness is the essential nature of the individual; which does not do any action. So this satcidānanda ātma which is Jīva svarūpam was one of the topic which was there throughout the prathama śatkam; the first six chapters.

Then the second prominent topic that we found in the prathama śatkam is karma yōga, as a very important spiritual sādhanā; in fact, the first stage of spiritual sādhanā. And karma yōga was talked about in the second chapter, the well-known karmaṅyēvādhikārastē; the oft-quoted slōkā comes from the 2nd chapter; the entire third chapter, was dedicated to the discussion of karma yōga. Similarly in the fourth, in the fifth, brahmaṅyādhāya karmāṇi saṅgaṁ tyaktvā karōti yaḥ lipyatē na sa pāpēna padmapatramivāmbhasā (5.10); all beautiful karma yōga slōkā, we had in the fifth chapter also; in fact it is your home work to find what are the karma yōga slōkās in the six chapters; and what are the Jīva svarūpa topics or verses in the six chapter; all these are your home work; I am just giving you hint.

In the sixth chapter also, the very beginning was karma yōga; anāśritaḥ karmaphalaṁ kāryaṁ karma karōti yaḥ, sa sannyāsī ca yōgī ca na niragnirna cākriyaḥ (6.1) and what was the definition of karma yōga; proper action plus proper attitude is karma yōga. So thus karma yōga is the second highlighted topic in the prathama śatkam; not prathama adhyaya; careful prathama śatkam; consisting of six chapters; thus Jīva svarūpam; topic No.1; karma yōga; topic no.2.

And the third topic which was highlighted throughout the first six chapters, is the importance of the individual effort; the individual initiative, tapping the freewill; which is very very important because there is a very big misconception that karma theory of Hinduism is fatalism; many people have misunderstood the law of karma as fatalism; that our pūrva karma has already decided our life; everything is written already on the forehead; ललाट लिखिता रेखा परिमार्ज न शक्यते lalāṭa likhitā rekhā parimārjaṁ na śakyatē; many people misinterpret Hinduism as a fatalistic religion, and they go one step further and say that India is still lagging behind because of the fatalism of Hinduism; a very very unfortunate accusation. So very have to carefully note that Hinduism and law of karma does not mean fatalism; the law of karma says that the present is the result of the past; if that is true, the future is the result of the present action that you choose to do; and therefore you have to take charge of your future; you are responsible for your future; all the four destinations of life; dharma, artha, kaama, mōkṣa, all the four destinations are called puruṣaartā; which means goals chosen by human beings; not goals determined by some despotic God sitting above the clouds. No; God does not decide your future; you have to choose your goal, work and accomplish; and Krishna emphasised that by saying uddharēdātmana'tmānaṁ; you have to lift yourselves and God does not say I am going to be an irresponsible spectator; God says I am willing to assist you; but you have to take the initiative. Thus the role of freewill; the role of individual choice and effort has been highlighted throughout the prathama śatkam, even the well-known karmaṇyēvādhikāraṣṭē, indicates the freewill only; ādhikāra means what? human rights; you have to the right to choose the course of action. And if you have a right to choose the action; certainly you are contributing to the result also. By choosing the action you may not totally determine the result; but you are heavily contributing to the result; and that is why we have the well-known sayings like:

Watch your thoughts, it will become your words and actions;
Watch your words and actions; they become your habits;
watch your habits, they become your character;
watch your character, it becomes your destiny.

Therefore destiny is decided by character; which is decided by habit; which is decided by your words and actions and which are decided by your thoughts;

therefore watch your thoughts; and direct your thoughts; and by directing your thoughts in the present, you are ultimately determining your destiny.

And therefore, the third topic highlighted is: the role of individual effort; in Sanskrit it is called puruṣa prayathnaḥ; puruṣa prayathanaḥ; thus Jīva svarūpam; karma yōgaha; and puruṣa prayathnaḥ; these three topics are highlighted in the prathama ṣatkam; which we have just completed.

We have done six chapters; accepted? Last class only I did the summary, therefore we have completed the prathama ṣatkam and we are at the door step of the madhyama ṣatkam; and if you study the madhyama ṣatkam, the middle section; from the 7th to 12th chapters, here also three topics are highlighted. it is inhering; sūtrē manigana iva; like the sūtram you will find the three-stringed-strand or three-stranded-string you can find inherent in the madhyama ṣatkam.

And what are the three topics; just as Jīva svarūpam was highlighted in the prathama ṣatkam; in the madhyama ṣatkam, Īśvara svarūpam will be highlighted; the nature of God; while Jīva svarūpam is nothing but the microcosm; Īśvara svarūpam represents the macrocosm. If Jīva svarūpam is yaṣṭi, the Īśvara svarūpam is samaṣṭi. Therefore throughout the six chapters, Krishna talks about the definition of God, the nature of God, the function of God; the glory of God, all God only; whereas in the first six chapters, you do not find much of Īśvara; it is not totally absent; you can find here and there; but it is not discussed much. With this awareness you go back and read first six chapters, you will find that God is not much there at all; whereas in the 7th chapter, right from the first verse, God dominates the teaching. Therefore Īśvara svarūpam.

And while discussing Jīva svarūpam we saw the container and container aspect, the body mind complex is the container; the cabinet, but the essential Jīva is satcidānanda ātma we said. Similarly for Īśvara also we have got aspects the container superficial aspect of God, and then the essential inner nature of God; deha and dehi; śarīram and śarīrī; anātma and ātma. Just as Jīva as a mixture of anātma and ātma; Īśvara is also a mixture of both; saguṇa nirguṇa svarūpam. jada cētana svarūpam; we are going to see; I will not see everything; then there will not be anything left later; So Īśvara svarūpam is topic No.1.

Then the second topic is the sādhanā of upāsana. In the prathama śatkam, karma yōga sādhanā is highlighted; whereas in the madhyama śatkam, upāsana sādhanā is highlighted; upāsana meaning meditation on God; Īśvara dhyānam. While karma yōga is śarīra pradhāna; physical body is active in karma yōga; whereas upāsana is mana pradhāna, we are gradually going from the grosser instrument to the subtler instrument. In Karma yōga, you are heavily active serving the society, contributing through pancha maha yajñās; whereas in upāsana, you learn to withdraw and focus; So saguṇa Īśvara dhyānam; upāsana; this is the second topic; upāsana.

Then what is the third topic; highlighted in the madhyama śatkam; that topic is the grace of God; as an important item or factor in the spiritual growth of the individual; Īśvara anugraḥ; Īśvara kripaḥ. While in the prathama śatkam, the highlight was upon individual effort; in madhyama śatkam, Krishna gives a warning, do not think by your effort alone, you can accomplish everything; do not be arrogant; be confident, but do not be overconfident. So when we highlight the prayathna aspect, we say that diffidence is not correct; but at the same time, we say overconfidence is also not correct; neither under-confidence; no such word; I am just saying; neither under-confidence nor over-confidence; but confidence. Over-confidence means the idea that I can do anything; when a person has that attitude, Bhagavān at the appropriate time will give a big knock. And when failures come one after the other, this person will go from one extreme to the other, and he will say: Nothing is in my hand; everything is pre-destined. So why do you go from over-confidence to fatalism; over-confidence is not necessary; fatalism is also not required; may you have the middle path; what is that: I accomplish things with my effort backed by the grace of the Lord. This is the balanced attitude. I accomplish things through my effort, backed by, hosted by the grace of the Lord;

And that is why before every class, we start with what? dhyāna slōkā; and what is the purpose of the dhyana slōkā; even though I have put forth my effort; and I have successfully come to the class; if I study should continue unobstructed; I require the grace of the Lord also. And therefore Krishna emphasizes Īśvara anugraha. In fact right from the first verse of the 7th chapter, anugrahaḥ comes; śaraṇagathi; prapathiḥ; Īśvara kripa. So this is the third topic.

Now what are the three topics? Īśvara svarūpam, Īśvara upāsana; and Īśvara kripa; these are the three topics to be highlighted; and the chapter that we are going to enter, the seventh chapter is a beautiful and comprehensive chapter, which gives the entire teaching in a beautiful way. Even though it is a small chapter, it is a very comprehensive and powerful chapter. With this background, we will enter the seventh chapter.

asamśayaṁ samagraṁ mām yathā jñāsyasi tacchr̥ṇu | | 7.1 | |

श्री भगवान् उवाच śrī bhagavān ucāca The Lord said मदाश्रयः madāśrayaḥ taking refuge in ME युञ्जन योगम् yuñjana yōgam and practicing Yōga आसक्तमनाः āsaktamanāḥ with a mind which is totally absorbed मयि mayi in ME, यथा ज्ञास्यसि yathā jñāsyasi how you will come to know माम् mām ME समग्रम् samagram completely असंशयम् asamśayam and doubtlessly शृणु तत् śr̥ṇu tat may you listen to this पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna

1. The Lord said – taking refuge in ME and practicing Yōga with a mind which is totally absorbed in ME, how you will come to know ME completely and doubtlessly – may you listen to this, Oh, Arjuna.

The first three verses happen to be introductory verses. Lord Krishna points out here, what is the subject matter of the 7th chapter, as well as the chapters, up to the 12th. He says समग्रं मां ज्ञास्यसि samagram mām jñāsyasi; if you follow My teaching, the result will be jñānam of My nature; mām jñāsyasi; you will come to know Me. So imparting My knowledge to you; My knowledge, means what; here Krishna represents God. Therefore, so here knowing Me means knowing God. Therefore by following this and the other chapters, you will get Īśvara jñānam; and the Īśvara jñānam is also two fold; and therefore Krishna says samagram mām, you will know Me completely; because later Krishna is going to say that I have got a higher nature, as well as a lower nature; the lower nature is the visible physical nature of God; like Rāma śarīram; Krishna śarīram; which people worship as God. In fact majority of devotees when they think of God; they think only of God only in a particular form; particular body; that is why the very dhyana slōkām describe what; the physical form only. Krishna says that the visible, tangible form, known as saguṇa svarūpam is only my lower nature; because it is subject to arrival on janma aṣṭami day; through Dēvaki and it is subject to svaragārōhaṇam; after the avathāra kāryam is over; and this saguṇa svarūpam is confined to a particular place; timewise limited; spacewise limited; this is my lower nature. Krishna will call this aparā prakrithi; saguṇa svarūpam. And Arjuna I have got a higher nature also; which is invisible, intangible, eternal, all pervading nature, which is called the nirguṇa svarūpam; parā prakrithi; and only when you know both; saguṇa and nirguṇa svarūpam; finite and the infinite nature of God; your Īśvara jñānam is complete. And therefore through this chapter, I am going to give you both saguṇa jñānam; as well as nirguṇa jñānam; and therefore samagramṁ māṁ, means saguṇa nirguṇam rūpam māṁ; sopādika nirupādika rūpam māṁ. Jñāsyasi; you will come to know if you study the following six chapters. And how am I going to teach; Krishna is advertising; असंशयम् जास्यसि asamśayam jñāsyasi; I will teach you so thoroughly. I am such a good teacher; Krishna says; I am not saying; Krishna says such a good and confident teacher, that I will impart the knowledge; doubtlessly; asamśayam; jñāsyasi; asamśayam; for grammar student; it is an adverbial usage; therefore it is a avyayam; adverb qualifying jñāsyasi; asamśayam jñāsyasi; ஸந்தேஹம் இல்லாமல் அறிந்து கொள்வாய்; san̄tēham illāmal ar̄intu koḷvāy; and what are the conditions; He is going to give the condition He has said what he will do.

Now He is saying I can do my job properly, only when you fulfil certain conditions. What are they? मय्यासक्तमनाः mayaśaktamanāḥ. You should have desire to know Me; if you do not have a desire, you are going to be bored with that topic; they say the board of directors, who are they: those who are generally bored; therefore if you do not have interest, then naturally you will get bored; therefore you would not be alert; therefore you would not capture; and therefore you should have desire; and you will have desire to know only if God is your destination; because whatever is your destination; and whatever you love, you want to know more and more; and therefore Krishna presents that I or God must be the goal of that seeker; then the next question is: should God be the goal or mōkṣa be the goal; which goal should I have; all the time you have been telling, mōkṣa must be the goal; mōkṣa must be the goal. Now tell me; whether mōkṣa should be the goal or God should be the goal. Our answer is God or mōkṣa is identical; In the language of spirituality, we present the destination of mōkṣa; but the very same mōkṣa in religious language is symbolised as Bhagavān. Because what do you mean by mōkṣa; what is the ultimate goal of every person; he wants independence; he wants security; he wants ānanda; he wants peace. Therefore peace, security; fulfilment; these are the destinations of everyone. And Bhagavān says Bhagavān or Lord alone represents total security because Bhagavān is infinite; infinite alone is ever secure; Is'nt it? Anything finite is bound by time and space; anything bound by time and space is subject to fluctuations and destruction; even the stars cannot escape destruction; they might have a very long life; but you ask the astronomers; they will say that even the Sun will collapse after some time; the only saving grace is when the astronomers say sometime; their sometime will be a few billion years!; therefore we are saved. But remember, the stars explode which is known as nova; and supernova; which indicates what; anything finite is insecure; seeking security from finite thing is the most unintelligent approach; the only security is in the infinite and the infinite is called in religion Bhagavān; and the infinite is symbolised in a particular form; because infinite is abstract; and abstract infinite cannot be conceived; and therefore it is given Krishna form; Rāma form; the form is not infinite; but the form symbolises infinite; And therefore Lord means infinite; infinite means eternal security, eternal peace, eternal independence, eternal infinitude; which is called Mōkṣa; therefore remember mōkṣa and Bhagavān are synonymous;

And therefore Krishna says, if you are seeker of mōkṣa; you are seeker of Me; the Lord; and therefore mayi āsakta manāḥ; with your mind fixed upon Me as your ultimate destination; you work; fixing your mind upon me the Lord as the ultimate destination; you should work, which is called devotion or bhakthi; therefore mayi āsakta manāḥ; condition No.1. Call for full conditions;

Then what about all other destinations that we have; getting admission for children; getting them married; working for grand children; till now you worked for children; now you are working for grand children; whatever it is; they are destinations; but they are all incidental destination; but not the ultimate; how do you that; they are incidental and not ultimate; when you fulfil that particular goal; certainly you will get peace of mind; admission got; appāda; marriage will over; you will get peace of mind alright; but immediately after that, you will start with the next story; that itself shows that பயணங்கள் முடிவத்திலை payaṇaṅ! muṭivattilai; (journey never ends); so what you have fulfilled is getting down in an intermediary station; for a cup of coffee; and after the coffee you have to enter the train; therefore all other worldly accomplishments are intermediary stations; your journey will end only when you discover pūrṇatvam by accomplishing Mōkṣa or God.

And therefore, mayi āsakta manāḥ; do not lose sight of the goal; योगम् युञ्जन् yōgam yuñjan; yōga means all the required sādhanās; karma yōga is a sādhanā; upāsana yōga is a sādhanā; śravaṇam is a sādhanā; here yōga represents all the required sādhanās; depending upon my level; so all children cannot be admitted into the same class; depending upon the level of the student; he is admitted in the first standard or sixth standard; or tenth standard or graduate stage; depending upon what; which level the person is. Therefore depending upon my need, I have to take to karma, or upāsana, or śravaṇam; whatever is required; may you do; yōgam yunjan means practising the relevant sādhanā; which indicates the individual effort; Do not say Bhagavān will take care; what I have to do; I have to do; suppose I am hungry; you pray; Bhagavān may bring food; and Bhagavān may put it in your mouth; if you are so lazy; but ultimately the swallowing you have to do; it cannot be pushed down with a stick in your throat; you have to swallow.

Therefore yōgam yuñjan means put forth your effort, but at the same time, मदाश्रयः madāśrayaḥ; that is the crucial expression; madāśrayaḥ means you have to take the grace of the Lord also. Do not be arrogant; do not be overconfident; do not challenge God; one thing a devotee should know is never challenge God and therefore what do you do; madāśrayaḥ means taking refuge in God; when the train is climbing a mountain, there are two engines; one in the front to pull; another behind to push; then also the train will go, because it is an uphill task.

Similarly spiritual growth is an uphill task; we think we are going; but family members they say, no use Swamiji in spite of his coming to Gītā class; I do not see any change; you say I have improved; I do not want what you say; what the family members say. because they only are the victims; because they know better where you stand. So the spiritual growth is only by millimeter by millimeter only; and therefore you require two engines; one is puruṣaḥ prayathana engine in front; and the madāśrayaḥ; Īśvara anugraha engine behind; both should somehow help you reach the destination; for madāśrayaḥ; this is called śaraṇagathiḥ; this is called bhakthi; and these are only presented in a nutshell, each idea is going to be magnified by Krishna. These are the capsules, each word is like a time bomb; each word is going to be magnified later; so if you do all these things.

So now what are the three conditions:

No.1 keep God as your destination; which means peace of mind; which means fulfilment in life; which means permanent security; which means independence; that is God; so keep God as your goal no.1;

No.2 do what you have to do; self-effort; and

No.3 is always seek the grace of the Lord.

If you are fulfilling these three conditions; you are bound to reach the destination; and know what samagraṁ māṁ jñāsyasi; you will certainly know me and attain me; because the secret is: I am not going to tell you the secret; but I will tell; I do not want to keep it suspense; knowing itself is going to be attaining Me; that is the secret; knowing the Lord will be equivalent to attaining; bramavid āpnoti param; when you know God you know that God has never been away from me; but that is secret; we will separately tell; You will know and attain God; यथा ज्ञास्यसि तच्छृणु yathā jñāsyasi tacchṛṇu; that is going to be topic; and therefore carefully listen:

Continuing.

ज्ञानं तेऽहं सविज्ञानं इदं वक्ष्याम्यशेषतः ।

यज्ज्ञात्वा नेह भूयोऽन्यद् ज्ञातव्यमवशिष्यते ॥७.२॥

jñānaṁ tē'haṁ savijñānamidaṁ vakṣyāmyaśēṣataḥ |
yajjñātvā nēha bhūyō'nyajjñātavyamavaśiṣyatē | | 7.2 | |

अहम् अशेषतः वक्ष्यामि aham aśēṣataḥ vakṣyāmi I will completely impart ते tē to you इदं ज्ञानम् idaṁ jñānam this Jñāna, सविज्ञानम् savijñānam along with ज्ञात्वा यत् jñātvā yat gaining which knowledge न अन्यद् भूयः na anyad bhūyaḥ nothing more अवशिष्यते avaśiṣyate remains ज्ञातव्यम् jñātavyam to be known इह iha in this life

2. I shall completely impart to you this Jñāna along with Vijñāna gaining which knowledge nothing more remains to be known in this life.

Krishna continues with the introduction. Krishna said in the first verse; you are going to get Īśvara jñānam completely and I explained what is complete knowledge; complete knowledge means both the higher nirguṇa svarūpam; and the lower saguṇa svarūpam; both knowledge I am going to give you; so saguṇa Īśvara jñānam; nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam. Both I am going to give; and here saguṇa Īśvara jñānam is given a technical name; jñānam; and nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam is given another technical name; vijñānam. So vijñānam is not science here; in Tamil science is vijñānam; but here vijñānam does not mean material sciences; here vijñānam means nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam. So Krishna says अहम् ज्ञानम् वक्ष्यामि aham jñānam vakṣyāmi; I shall impart to you; saguṇa Īśvara jñānam also and सविज्ञानम् savijñānam; I shall also impart to you; nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam; and the beauty is another secret.

The beauty is when a person is at saguṇa Īśvara jñānam level; that person will see a division between God and the devotee; at saguṇa level there is a difference between God and devotee; when a person elevates himself and knows the nirguṇa svarūpam; to his utter surprise he finds the difference between God and the individual is removed; it is like looking at the wave and ocean. As long as you look at the wave and ocean; from the name and form standpoint; they are different; names are different; one is called wave; other is called ocean; forms are also different; wave has got a small wavy form; whereas ocean has got a ocean has got waste magnitude; So when you are observed in the name form level; you see the difference; and you go to the essential nature of both; wave is essentially water; ocean is essentially water; H₂O; satcidānanda; and you find that wave and water are no more distinct. Similarly saguṇa jñānam means bhēda jñānam; nirguṇa jñānam means abēda jñānam; can you understand two words; bhēda means difference between God and Jīva; and abēdānanda means what: oneness; thus jñānam is equal to bhēda jñānam.

And vijñānam is equal to abēda jñānam; jñānam is equal to dvaita jñānam; vijñānam is equal to advaita jñānam; I am going to give you both dvaitam and advaitam; how, अशेषतः aśeṣataḥ; means thoroughly, totally. Tamil, akku veru, ani veru, piricchu thandudaren; like that thoroughly analyse. Until you say; I have understood and it is enough; until you say that I will vakṣyāmi aśeṣataḥ; and what is the benefit of this knowledge; ज्ञानं तेऽहं सविज्ञानं इदं वक्ष्याम्यशेषते yajñātvā nēha bhūyō'nyajñātavyamavaśiṣyatē; having gained this knowledge, you have nothing more to know; your intellect will get total satisfaction; all your intellectual questions will resolve; a person experiences samsāra at three levels; there are gross people for whom samsāra is only at the physical level; they talk about their diseases; they talk about their old age; they talk about their death; all the time, their samsāra is at the grossest body level; and then are some other advanced people, they are not bothered about the physical condition; but they feel the emotional needs of life more; they say Swamiji I am very fine; my health is very good; my children take care of me very well; but they do not spend time with me; they do not even ask whether I am alive or not; why can't they ask me; How are you: so the need is no more physical; but the emotional deprivation; that is why they look for something; anybody comes they want to talk; so thus emotional need for love, care, compassion, enquiry, companionship, these are all emotional needs.

And as long as I depend on external factors for emotional fulfilment; I am a samsāri; first person is a grosser samsāri; because his are physical dependence; this person is an emotional samsāri; and then there is subtler and higher samsāri; his need is not physical or emotional; he is intellectual; most of the scientists come under that; they have got burning questions, regarding the creation; when did the creation come; we will wonder, what is there for me; we will feel that such questions are waste of time; or when did the first human being come; study the Skelton; going under the earth; they want to know; how did life start; what is the individual; what is consciousness; is death the end of a living being or something more; these burning philosophical questions afflict them; they have no time to talk to their wife also; as they do not feel the need; that is what I told you know; the wife was crying; do not you see tears in my eyes; cant' you recognise, you do not spend time with me at all; then this fellow is a chemistry research person; I know what it is; it is NaCl H₂O, the tears are nothing but water and little salt; if it goes in your mouth, it is salty; if you have not tried, try next time; so for him he does not see the emotional deprivation in the tears; he sees the chemical components of the tears; because his worry is intellectual; vēdānta solves this samsāra at all the three levels; it gives you emotional fulfilment; it gives you even intellectual fulfilment; you find all the fundamental questions regarding Jīva, jagat and Īśvara get resolved; चिद्यन्ते हृदय ग्रन्थि चिद्यन्ते सर्वसंशयः cidyantē hṛdaya granti cidyantē sarvasaṁśayaḥ. Therefore Arjuna this chapter is worth studying; therefore come to the next class also.

In the first three verses of the seventh chapter, Lord Krishna is introducing the subject matter of the 7th chapter as well as the following chapters up to 12th chapter and as I said in the introduction, the primary theme of all these six chapters including the 7th is Īśvara svarūpam, the nature of God, who is God or what is God; this is very elaborately discussed in these chapters.

And this knowledge of God, Krishna introduces by the name of jñānam and vijñānam, jñānam referring to the lower nature of the God and vijñānam referring to the higher nature. We will be getting the details later; lower nature represents saṅuṇa svarūpam; the nature with attributes; form; and higher nature is the formless or nirṅuṇa svarūpam; and when the Lord is seen with form, certainly there will be duality; because once form comes; divisions also come; anything that has got form is limited within space and therefore there will be plurality; And therefore saṅuṇa svarūpam will be dvaita svarūpam or bēdha svarūpam; divisions cannot be avoided and that is why Gods themselves are presented in our śāstrās as Rāma, Krishna, Vinayaka, etc. Where form comes, plurality comes. Thus saṅuṇa svarūpam means bēdha or division is involved. Therefore within the plane of dvaitam; which is presented as the lower nature of God; higher nature is without attributes; without any guṇa, which means without a form also; and once you knock off all attributes including form, naturally there cannot be any division; just as the space has no form, and in space there is no division also and when we come to formless space, we have come to advaitam or abēdha. Similarly when we come to formless God; all the divisions will dissolve; even the division between the devotee and God also will dissolve. And therefore higher nature means advaita svarūpam; lower nature means dvaita svarūpam; thus lower, saṅuṇam, dvaitam; they are all synonymous, higher, nirṅuṇam and advaitam; they are all synonymous.

And since the higher nature is without any attributes, it will be too abstract for a beginner either to conceive or worship. How can you conceive of a formless attributeless God; and how can you express your devotion to such a Lord, and therefore higher abstract Īśvara is incomprehensible for a beginner; therefore everyone has to start from lower saṅuṅa concrete Īśvara; concrete Īśvara means not made of concrete; I mean opposite of abstract, tangible ~ form is there; अधरं मधुरं, वधनं मधुरं, नयनं मधुरं adharaṁ madhuraṁ, vadhanaṁ madhuraṁ, nayanaṁ madhuraṁ; beautiful eyes, beautiful lips ~ all descriptions are there; which is tangible, which you can conceive.

And therefore the scriptures prescribe jñānam as the first stage and vijñānam as the next stage and therefore everybody should travel from saṅuṅam to nirguṅam; from dvaitam to advaitam; from concrete to abstract; from jñānam to vijñānam. And therefore Krishna said: Arjuna do not worry; I will give you both jñānam as well as vijñānam; therefore he said, jñānam deham sa vijñānam; dvaita as well as advaitam; I will reveal both; saṅuṅa as well as nirguṅa; I will reveal both; aśeṣataḥ; completely, doubtlessly, convincingly, rationally, logically, I will reveal:

yajñātvā nēha bhūyō'nyajñātavyamavaśiṣyatē || 7.2 ||

This knowledge will be so comprehensive and so complete, that all your intellectual questions regarding the world, God and yourselves will be answered;

Human intellect wants to know three basic things; that curiosity; that thirst for knowledge is there; in every human, even from our young age, we have this question; we want to know what is world; we want to know what is God; First, Is there a God; and if there is one, what is the nature of the God; So questions regarding the world; questions regarding God, and questions of course regarding myself; why I am born; நான் யென் பிறந்தேன்; nān yēn pirantēn; after birth; after everything is over; why I am born; where I am going; कस्त्वं, कोहं, कुत आयातः kastvaṁ, kohaṁ, kuta āyātaḥ; this question regarding myself are always there; and we have asked these questions to our parents; and they without knowing the answer has said Shut up, and therefore having asked enough, we have dropped those questions and not only that, other worries, the very survival is a problem now; other worries have occupied the mind and displaced these fundamental questions now.

And until these questions are answered, human curiosity will be there; this is intellectual samsāra; and Krishna says this intellectual samsāra will go, you will know what is God, what is world, what are you and also the relationship among these three. All these things I am going to give; so big advertisement; before the programme comes, trailer; something like that; Krishna is giving trailer is here; yajñātva nēha bhūyō'nyajñātavyamavaśiṣyatē. Those of the Upaniṣadic students; if you remember Mundakōpaniṣad, the question asked was कस्मिन्नु भगवो विज्ञाते सर्वमिदं विज्ञातं भवतीति kasminnu bhagavo vijñātē sarvamidaṁ vijñātaṁ bhavātīti; what is that knowing which everything else is known; that fundamental wisdom is called parā vidhya and parā vidhya is that vidhya, knowing which all your intellectual curiosity subsides and it is based on Mundaka. That Krishna writes here; eka vijñānēna sarvam vijñānam. Up to this we saw in the last class.

3. Among thousands of human beings, a rare one strives for liberation.
Even among those seekers who strive, a rare one knows ME in reality.

So in this verse, Krishna is talking about the glory of this knowledge; Īśvara jñāna praśamsa; the glory of the knowledge of God. Both in his lower and higher nature; saguṇa nirguṇa Īśvara svarūpa jñāna praśamsa. And the knowledge is glorified in our scriptures; in several ways, in this verse, Krishna says this knowledge is extremely rare; so the glory of this knowledge is its rareness; because we know, something is extremely rare, we would like to possess that and show to our neighbours and they should try to get all over and miserably fail and we feel happy. This is human psychology; you want to have something, which nobody has; this is human psychology. Krishna also uses the same thing: this knowledge is a rare one. Very few people have it; and why is this knowledge very rare; because majority or people are busy pursuing so many other things in life; the scriptures talk about four purusharthas; dharma, artha; kāma, and mōkṣa; artha meaning security or wealth; kāma meaning entertainment; dharma means puṇyam for higher loka, and mōkṣa meaning, inner freedom. Of these four purusharthas; you will find majority of people are busy running after artha, kāma or dharma; very few people are interested in mōkṣa; and even if you talk about mōkṣa; they will say we will take care of that after fulfilling dharma artha kāma; அலை ஒன்றிட்டு ஸமுத்திர ஸ்னானம் alai oṇḍu samutra sṇāṇam; when the waves subside in the ocean; they want to take part; similarly they go on postponing; rarely few people desire for mōkṣa; this is called mōkṣēca; so first very few have mōkṣēca; and even if a person develops a desire for mōkṣa; most of them do not know what is the means of attaining that mōkṣa; that inner freedom, how it comes, they do not know; and therefore they are carried away by so many things; and therefore among the desirers of mōkṣa also, very few people know the method and what is that; Īśvara jñānat eva mōkṣaḥ; majority does not know. And a few people know, I want Mōkṣa and for Mōkṣa I require Īśvara jñānam.

Now filtered; number of people wanting mōkṣa few; among them number of people, who want Īśvara jñānam still less; and among those people, who are interested in Īśvara jñānam; majority does not know how to get Īśvara jñānam. So therefore they try all kinds of things for getting knowledge; not knowing what is the method; and the only method of gaining Īśvara jñānam; which Krishna himself presented in the presented in the 4th chapter:

upadēkṣyanti tē jñānaṃ jñāninastattvadarśinaḥ||4.34||

The only means of getting Īśvara jñānam; is guru śāstrā upadēśa sṛavaṇam. So sṛavaṇam or enquiry into, or exposing oneself to the teaching of the śāstrā, by a competent ācārya; so guru śāstrā upadēśa sṛavaṇam is the only method of knowledge; and majority of people do not know, a few people know this. If there are five billion people; I do not know, it has become six I think; out of this four billion not interested in mōkṣa; of 1 billion, fifty percent, they want, but they do not know Īśvara jñānam is the means. And half of that, they know that Īśvara jñānam is the means but they do not know guru śāstrā upadēśa is the means; therefore they are all gone; after filtering; there are only very few who know that śāstrā vichāra is important.

And then Krishna says among those people, because of some puṇya, who have recognised the importance of śāstrā vicāra; there also majority do not understand what is taught. From that itself one percentage gone; after filtering all these; how many people are there; very very few people have this knowledge.

And therefore this is the rarest form of wisdom; so Krishna says मनुष्याणाम् सहस्रेषु manuṣyāṇām sahasreṣu; among thousands and millions of people, कश्चिद् kaścid only some rare people यत्ति yatati, strive in the right direction; in the right direction means what; guru śāstrā upadēśa sṛavaṇam is the right direction: exposing oneself to the scriptural teaching is called here prayathnaḥ;

and for what; सिद्धये siddhaye; siddhi means inner freedom; inner security; because according to śāstrā; ultimately insecurity is only a notion in our mind born out of ignorance; insecurity is a sense and that is why as long as we do not attack that inner sense of insecurity; whatever be the security you have outside; that will never give the sense of security, because really security does not come from outside; and especially in India; people will know this very well; one of the prime ministers was killed by Security.

So therefore insecurity is not a fact; but it is a notion in our mind; and any notion can go through knowledge alone and that freedom from insecurity gained by knowledge is called siddhihi; so this siddhi very few people try.

And सिद्धानाम् अपि siddhānām api; so here siddhānām means sādakānām; very carefully we have to note; in this context means sādakānām; among those seekers also; यत्तताम् yatatām, who are striving in the right direction; they have understood the problem is within; not the external security; not money, not house, none of them; there are all required for survival; not for security. So a few people have understood and they want to get rid of inner sense of security; but among them also, very few people succeed in discovering that inner security; and therefore yatatām api, and even among those who strive in the right direction; kaścid; a few people माम् वेत्ति mām vetti; gain my knowledge. Here My knowledge, Īśvara jñānam. So very few people know Īśvara jñānam; तत्त्वतः tatvataḥ; in reality; in totality; which should include both saḡuṇa, nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam; having glorified this knowledge; Krishna wants to enter the topic proper hereafter.

4. Earth, water, fire, air, space, the cosmic ego, the cosmic intellect, and also the unmanifest chit– this is My nature which is divided into eight-fold.

With the third verse, the introduction part is over. Now Krishna enters into the central teaching from the fourth verse up to the 12th verse, we get the main teaching of the seventh chapter. In fact, one of the most important portions of the entire Bhagavad Gītā; wherein we get Īśvara svarūpa revelation revealing the nature of God.

And you should remember all these teachings is purely based on the upaniṣadic teaching; Krishna does not add even one single idea of his own; the whole teaching is borrowed from the upaniṣad alone; that is why we should remember, there is no Krishna philosophy, there is only Upaniṣadic teaching, which is given a further revival by Lord Krishna; and therefore to understand these verses; you should keep some of the essential teachings of the upaniṣad in mind. With the upaniṣadic background you can understand these verses; and therefore I will just give you a view of the teaching as given in the upaniṣads.

All the upaniṣads define God as jagat kāraṇam, the cause of the universe; Īśvara is defined as jagat kāraṇam; the cause of the universe; and once you talk of about the cause of something; you should know that everything has got a two fold cause; any creation requires a two-fold cause. If you take this very desk itself, you require two causes; one is the raw material, out of which, the desk is made. Therefore any creation requires a raw material in Sanskrit it is called upādāna kāraṇa; material cause. And what is the second thing; raw material itself does not become a product by itself. If I bring the raw material like wood or iron; or keep there in an almirah or room, after two three days, it is not that raw material gradually assembles itself and becomes a table; if it happens wonderful. And similarly even for cooking; not that you buy all the raw materials and keep it; in the kitchen; by evening, before coming to the class, you keep everything; wheat or atta or something; and you back all chappathis have come; wonderful it will be; all ladies will be happy. Unfortunately no raw material by itself becomes the product; you require an intelligence principle which is responsible for the conversion of the raw material into appropriate effect and this second principle, the intelligent principle is called the intelligent cause of the nimitta kāraṇam.

Thus every creation involves upādāna kāraṇam and nimitha kāraṇa; anything; you take this dress; there is a nimitta kāraṇam; weaver is involved, and there is upādāna kāraṇam; cotton is involved. The hall you take; the nimitta kāraṇam, the architect or the engineer, whatever you call and upādāna kāraṇam, bricks and mortar and all those things, Now the Upaniṣads point out that the Lord is the cause of the universe; and before the creation came into being; this Lord which is the cause of the creation or who was the creation alone was existent. So before the creation evolved; there was the Lord alone; and when we say the creation, it includes even time and space, because time and space are also integral parts of the creation; therefore the whole creation along with time and space evolved later; and before its evolution, God alone was there.

And if God alone was there; what type of cause the Lord will be; problem, if you say God is the intelligent cause, your question will be what; what is the material cause; If you say God is the material cause, your question would be what is the intelligent cause and therefore the scriptures point out that since God alone was there; God happens to be both the intelligent as well as the material cause of the creation. God happens to both the intelligent and material cause of the creation. From the standpoint of the intelligent cause, we say God created the world; from the standpoint of the material cause, we say God evolved into this universe. As intelligent cause, God is the creator, and as the material cause, God Himself has evolved into this creation.

And then the next question will be how can I accept that; it looks like a cock and bull story; because normally I see intelligent cause is separate, material cause is separate; carpenter is different; wood is different; weaver is different; cotton is different; mason is different; bricks are different; cook is different; rice is different; any doubt; rice is the material cause and the cook is the intelligent cause, they are not identical. So the question will come; how can the one and same principle be both the intelligent and material cause of the creation.

The upaniṣad expects us to ask such intelligent question; very rarely we ask; we all ask only irrelevant questions like an idiot and not intelligent questions; so the Upanisads expects us to think and ask very intelligent questions; how can one entity serve as both. For that the upaniṣad answers, the general law is that the intelligent and material causes are different; but there are exceptional cases, where both happen to be one and the same; both means what; intelligent and material cause; rarely can become one; because every rule has got an exception; And what is that exception; Mundakōpaniṣad says; those who have attended the Mundakōpaniṣad, hope you remember:

यथोर्णनाभिः सृजते गृह्णते च यथा पृथिव्यामोषधयः सम्भवन्ति ।

यथा सतः पुरुषात् केशलोमानि तथाऽक्षरात् सम्भवतीह विश्वम् ॥

yathōrṇanābhiḥ sṛjatē gr̥hṇatē ca yathā pṛthivyāmōṣadhayaḥ sambhavanti |

yathā sataḥ puruṣāt keśalomāni tathā-:'kṣarāt sambhavatīha viśvam ||

What is the example; the spider is the example; any living being you take, it builds a place for stay, a residence for itself; out of external raw material. You will build a house and the raw material is from outside; birds build nest, they build raw materials from outside; but have you ever studied a spider; which spins the web; the spider's silk or web is supposed to be of a most unique creation. So much research is going into that now; because we find that it is the lightest material; and the most strongest material also; and they want to create even bullet proof vests out of that; or something similar to that; so much research; which we complain; when there is so much web around; one of the wonders of the creation, I declare; anyway that is aside.

Now when the spider wants to spin the web, where does it find the raw material; where does it find; it has got the material also within itself; and therefore we can say spider is not only the intelligent cause of the web, it is also the material cause of the web and in sanskrit, such a case is called अभिन्न निमित्त उपादान कारणम् abhinna nimitta upādāna kāraṇam; it is a technical word; abhinna nimitta upādāna kāraṇam means what; a condition in which one cause happens to be both the intelligent and material cause, and the Lord is both the intelligent and material cause of this wonderful creation.

And now the next question is what is the nature of such a God; jagat kāraṇam; and in the Upaniṣad and in keeping with that Lord Krishna also pointed out that Lord consists of two principles, two principles put together is God; which is symbolised in our religion as अर्धनारीश्वरः ardhanaṛīśvaraḥ; ardhanaṛīśvaraḥ represents the two principles of God; And these two principles are known differently by different names in the upaniṣad. Krishna names these two principles as the parā prakṛti, the higher principle, and the aparā prakṛti, the lower or inferior principle.

PP and AP; Ok for shortening; if you are writing notes; You cannot write everytime Parāprakithi and Aparāprakṛti; class would be over; then you should have your own dictionary. When I was studying; many places I had written PP and after much time, when I was seeing, I was wondering whether it is Physical body or parām brahma; for both we write parāmbrahma; like that you should not have confusion later; you may have shorthand, but note it somewhere have key; PP, parā prakṛti; AP means aparā prakṛti; and both of them put together is Īśvara;

Now we have to understand what are the features of these two principles; these two principles have got some common features as well as some uncommon features; first we will know what is the common feature; common feature is both of them are beginningless principle; they are eternal; they are never created or destroyed; just as the scientists point out matter can never be created, matter can never be destroyed; we can only transform matter. When a candle burns, nothing is lost; might have heard the saying; what does it mean; the law of conservation of energy and matter; in keeping with this principle, the Upaniṣad also points out that this PP and AP; both of them are Anādhīhi; Nityāḥ; neither created nor destroyed; this is the common feature; now we have to find out what are the uncommon features.

Many uncommon features are described in the upaniṣads; I will mention four of them for our present consideration.

The first difference between the higher and lower nature is Parā prakṛti is cētana tatvam; it is conscious principle; and according to our scriptures, consciousness can never be created or destroyed. Consciousness can never be created or destroyed; fortunately some of the scientists are coming around to agree to that; so consciousness is the nature of parā prakṛti; whereas aparā prakṛti is acētana tatvam; it is of the nature, it is jada, it is material principle; matter principle. While one is spirit, the other is matter; while one is consciousness, the other is inert; this is the first difference. And matter also is never created or destroyed. Therefore what is the what lesson we lesson; consciousness is never created or destroyed; matter is also never created or destroyed; this consciousness-matter mixture is called God.

Then the second difference parā and aparā prakṛti is consciousness in its pure form is without attributes; physical or chemical; those who are science students you will know; those who do the salt analysis; when you have to find out the physical attributes and chemical attributes; you see which group it is; first group, second group and hydrogen sulphate you pass through, whether the precipitate comes; also some of you might have studied; having studied physical and chemical properties; you say this is copper sulphate; this is calcium carbonate; so physical and chemical properties belong to matter; consciousness does not have any physical or chemical properties; in Sanskrit, nirguṇam caitanyam; whereas aparā prakṛti, the lower nature, the material nature, is saguṇa svarūpam, which has got all the properties that you know; that you find, that you discover and that is why some of the scientists have come to the conclusion that all our studies which are based on the physical and chemical properties will deal with only matter; consciousness will never be available for scientific study. We deal with matter. Consciousness is never available for study and some scientists say that it will never be available for scientific study; it will be an eternal mystery. If they are available to us, we will say that it is not a mystery; Come to upaniṣad; we have an answer. So one is nirguṇam; the other is saguṇam.

Then what is the third difference between parā and aparā prakṛti; the upaniṣads point out that this cētana, nirguṇa tatvam is free from all modifications; it never undergoes change; the consciousness principle can never undergo any change, under any condition. In fact whatever changes we are talking about are at the matter level alone; brain can change; body can change, matter can change. Therefore in Sanskrit, parā prakṛti is nirvikāra tatvam; without modifications. and aparā prakṛti is savikāra tatvam; savikāra means what subject to modifications; continuous modifications. In fact nothing is stationary in the creation. Even when you think that this wall is stationary they declare that within the atom of the wall; all the electrons protons neutrons they are violently changing and in Tao of Physics written by Fridg of Capra, to symbolise the ever changing, you know what he has chosen, he has taken our Nataraja for that; Nataraja is constantly dancing; and there is also one Tamil song; adikonde irundal alukkatha? aren't you tired? Nataraja represents eternal material dance of this creation; violent dance; not violent, continuous harmonious dance of creation; it is savikāra; this is the third difference;

So what is the first and second: cētana tatvam-acētana tatvam; nirguṇa tatvam-saguṇa tatvam; nirvikāra tatvam-savikāra tatvam;

And the fourth and final for the time being is the parā prakṛti is said to be satyam; independently existent; conscious principle, chetana tatvam is always independent; whereas the achetana tatvam; jada tatvam will have to depend upon the chetana tatvam for everything. So therefore this is said to be satyam; or svathantraḥ; and the aparā prakṛti is mithya. Parā tantraḥ; asvathantraḥ; these are the differences between aparā and parā prakṛti; these two put together is Īśvara; and this Īśvara is the cause of the creation; So can you withstand; some more I have to develop.

Now you imagine a state before evolution; you imagine the state before the evolution of the creation; when God alone was there; both the parā and aparā prakṛti features, principles were there together; and out of that God, takes place the evolution of this world.

Now the scriptures talk about this evolution very elaborately; it is called sṛṣṭi prakaraṇam; and here in the seventh chapter, here presents the evolution in two stages; just like a seed becoming a plant, which is an intermediary stage and thereafterwards the plant becomes the full fledged tree; exactly like that; this creation also evolves in two stages.

And how does it happen; this evolution which is called in modern science cosmology; it is a very big topic; and it is also a mind-boggling topic; cosmology and there are theories and theories and theories of cosmology right from the big bang theory onwards; and so many theories; and so many new theories displacing the old one and both will get Phd also. Because you cannot verify; how do you know what happened at the time of big bang; it is all speculative; therefore there is nothing to prove; so not only the scientists have done; all our Indian philosophers and our scriptures have done and here Krishna presents the evolution based on the Sāṅkya philosophy; there is one of the well known philosophy or darsanam in our tradition and one such is the sāṅkya darśanam, presented by Kapila Muni; with a slightly different from the vedic evolution. Sāṅkya differs; but even though it differs, we can utilise for our discussion;

And therefore Krishna presents and according to this, the creation comes in two levels; the first level is one parā prakṛti and one aparā prakṛti; that is the pralaya deluge stage; and the intermediary stage; what happens; this one aparā prakṛti; multiplies itself into eight-fold principle; one aparā prakṛti; multiplies itself into ameba; ameba multiplies by division; have not you heard this; like that aparā prakṛti becomes what; aṣṭadā aparā prakṛti, which is intermediary stage; and what happens to the parā prakṛti; nothing happens; why nothing happens to parā prakṛti; because we have said parā prakṛti cannot undergo any modification.

Therefore the consciousness principle remains the same, the material aspect alone multiplies into aṣṭadā; and therefore in the intermediary stage; there are how many factors; 8-fold aparā prakṛti; plus one fold parā prakṛti; totally 9; this is the intermediary stage of whom: God; you should not forget Bhagavan; this is the intermediary stage of God; and thereafterwards comes the final explosion; final magnification wherein the aṣṭadā prakṛti multiplies into the manifold universe;

akāśāt vāyuh, vayōr agnih, agrir āpaḥ, adya prithvī; prithvyām ośadayaḥ; ośadhībhyō annam; annāt puruṣaḥ

And once puruṣaḥ come, all mischiefs, all problems will start; that is called samsāra;
OK; so aparā prakṛti, the 8 fold aparā prakṛti becomes the manifold creation.
Therefore whatever material aspect you are seeing in front of you; they are all what, the aparā prakṛti aspect of God.

And then what happens to parā prakṛti; nothing happens; and where is that parā prakṛti now; where is that parā prakṛti now we are running running running Krishna says stop running; that parā prakṛti is You the observer. So the very jīva tatvam; the very observing conscious principle, you are conscious or unconscious; any doubt; very you who are the observer is parā prakṛti; and whatever is observed is aparā prakṛti; this is going to be the development; assimilate this much. We will continue in the next class.

Om

After introducing the subject matter in the first three verses, Lord Krishna has entered into the serious discussion of Īśvara svarūpam from verse No.4, which goes up to verse No.12 and Krishna defines God, as the cause of the universe; especially the material cause of the universe. Even though the Lord happens to be the intelligent cause also, but in this context, the Lord is stressing the material cause aspect, which means just as the material cause alone evolves into the effects, God alone evolves to become this creation. In short, the entire creation is a manifestation of the Lord.

And then naturally the question comes, what is the nature of such a God. And in the last class I pointed out that the Lord is a mixture of two principles known as the higher principle, the parā prakṛti; and the lower principle, the aparā prakṛti; and both of them happen to be beginningless, eternal; and they have got certain fundamental differences which we saw; the higher principle is conscious principle, the lower principle is inert principle, the higher one is nirguṇa without properties, the lower one is saṅguṇa, with properties The higher one is not subject to any change, which means it is beyond time, whereas lower one is subject to change, time is an integral part of matter; whereas consciousness is beyond time;

And finally, the higher principle is the independent principle called Satyam technically, and lower principle is dependent on the higher principle; therefore it is called mithya; thus cētana-acētana; nirguṇa-saṅguṇa; nirvikāra and savikāra sathya-mithya, this parā and aparā prakṛti put together is God; symbolically presented in our religion as ardhanaīśvaraḥ tatvam. And this mixture existed even before the evolution of the world.

And then Krishna wants to talk about how the universe evolves; emerges out of this mixture; this emergence or evolution does not take place suddenly, but it takes place, gradually in two stages. Just as a seed becomes a plant and then becomes a tree; just as an embryo becomes a baby, and then becomes an adult. Similarly, the creation has two stages; and Krishna is presenting the intermediary stage in the two verses fourth and fifth, which I was explaining in the last class; when there is an evolution from the first to 2nd stage; the parā prakṛti remains the same; because parā prakṛti, the consciousness by nature is not affected by kāla.

निर्मुक्तं नित्यमुक्तं निगमशतसहस्रेण निर्भास्यमानम् । sāndrānandāvabōdhātmakamanupamitaṁ kāladēśāvadhībhyaṁ
nirmuktaṁ nityamuktaṁ nigamaśatasahasrēṇa nirbhāsyamānam |

In Nārāyaṇīyam, in the first verse Bhattathiri defines God kāla dēśa avadhibhyāṁ nirmukthaṁ; beyond time space parā meters; and because of this reason; the parā prakṛti continues to be one changeless principle and therefore only in the visible principle also, because for division, a thing must fall within space; change is possible only when something is within time; and the division is possible only when one thing is within space; and what is beyond time and space, is unchanging and indivisible; therefore the higher principle remains undivided and unchanged; whereas the lower principle called aparā prakṛti which is the basic matter principle, which you may choose to call energy also, does not matter, that divides itself into eight fold principle. Aṣṭada aparā prakṛtiḥ.

So we have got nine principle in between; in the intermediary stage, one parā prakṛti and 8 aparā prakṛti, is the like the plant stage of the creation.

And then in the final stage what happens the eight fold aparā prakṛti further magnifies and expands to become the multifarious creation consisting of everything; the galaxies, the solar system, the planet, the continents; and ultimately even the body which is also modified matter, and even the mind comes under modified matter only.

According to scriptures mind is also matter only, the only difference being it is subtle matter; you should remind yourselves of tatva bodha; which I had taught you as an introductory text, those who have not studied, better study it; those who have studied, refresh it; there we talked about the nature of the mind,

अपञ्चीकृतपञ्चमहाभूतैः कृतं सत्कर्मजन्यं
सुखदुःखादिभोगसाधनं
पञ्चज्ञानेन्द्रियाणि पञ्चकर्मन्द्रियाणि पञ्चप्राणादयः
मनश्चैकं बुद्धिश्चैका
एवं सप्तदशकलाभिः सह यत्तिष्ठति तत्सूक्ष्मशरीरम् ।

apañcīkṛtapañcamahābhūtaiḥ kṛtaṁ satkarmajanyaṁ sukhaduḥkhādibhōgasādhanam pañcājñānēndriyāṇi pañcakarmēndriyāṇi pañcaprāṇādayaḥ manaścaikam buddhiścaikā ēvaṁ saptadaśākalābhiḥ saha yattiṣṭhati tatsūkṣmaśarīram

In short what I want to tell you is mind also is subtle matter; and therefore the mind is a product of aparā prakṛti; body is a product of aparā prakṛti and the entire visible creation is also a product of aparā prakṛti; but what we are experiencing now is the final product, but Krishna is now talking about not the final product, but he is talking about the intermediary stage.

That is described, look at the slōkā; so Krishna enumerates the eight fold aparā prakṛti which is matter principle or energy principle or inert principle consisting of what Bhūmiḥ; bhūmiḥ means the earth; āpaḥ the waters; anala means fire; vāyuḥ means air; and kam space; the pañca mahā bhūtani, the five elements.

But here also we have to note in our scriptures they talk about two types of pancha mahā bhūtāni; one type of pancha mahā bhūtāni is called stūla bhūtāni, the tangible, the concrete five elements; and these concrete elements are the final products; but before the arrival of the concrete elements, they have got an abstract form, which is sūkṣma pancha mahā bhūtāni; the subtle elements, which also we have seen in tatva bodha; therefore I do not want to go to the details; In English subtle elements and gross elements; subtle elements are intermediary products, gross elements are the final product.

In this verse Krishna is talking about what; not the final stage; therefore we have to take these five as subtle elements; therefore bhūmiḥ means sūkṣma bhūmiḥ; the invisible earth; āpahaḥ the sūkṣma jalam, the invisible water principle; similarly sūkṣma analaḥ; sūkṣma vayu and sūkṣma kam means ākāśa; the subtle space;

And not only these five subtle elements, another three more principles which are known here as manaḥ, buddhihi; and ahamkāraḥ; and these three principles are based on the sāṅkya philosophy, you can understand it as an intermediary stage of matter. So these are technical words, you should not take as this mind; this mind is a finer product; we are not talking about the individual human mind; here the word manaḥ is a technical word, buddhihi is also not a intellect, it is a technical word, even ahamkāraḥ; all these three are jargons existing in Sāṅkya philosophy. So you can understand it as three matter principles, intermediary stage. Just as we have got technical words in science; suppose they talk about inflation in economics; what is the meaning of inflation; it is totally different from inflation of a cycle tube or football; there inflation is to pump air; what is meant by freezing the accounts of cricket stars; freezing the accounts means all the account books to be kept in refrigerator? There the word freezing is a jargon occurring in that particular science; thus every science has got its own jargon; here the word manaḥ buddhihi and ahamkāraḥ are words occurring in sāṅkya philosophy; I do not want to go into the technical details; and Sankaracharya in his commentary, makes some corrections also here; instead of taking manaḥ buddhihi and ahamkāraḥ.

Sankaracharya says manaḥ should not come, it should be replaced by the word avyaktham. So thus we have got avyaktham mahat ahamkāraḥ and pañca bhūtāni; three plus five eight principles together making the intermediary stage of aparā prakṛti.

And at this stage remember, all these fourteen lōkās have not come to existence; all our physical bodies have not come to existence; these are all the subtle stage; like in big bang theory, they talk about, what was the condition of the universe; one hundredth of a second, after big bang; and then one tenth of a second after big bang; and then after one second, after one hour, and after so many hours; something like that; it is cosmology; Sāṅkyan cosmology. And these 8 put together is called aparā prakṛti.

So He says; binna aṣṭada prakṛti; this is the aparā prakṛti; divided eight fold; binna means divided; now Krishna wants to introduce parā prakṛti; the higher nature.

Because only I have introduced parā prakṛti; Krishna has not yet introduced; therefore he is going to do that in verse No.5.

जीवभूतां महाबाहो ययेदं धार्यते जगत् ॥ ७.५ ॥

aparēyamitastvanyāṃ prakṛtiṃ viddhi mē parām |

jīvabhūtāṃ mahābāhō yayēdaṃ dhāryatē jagat || 7.5 ||

इयम् iyam this (eight-fold nature), अपरा aparā is (My) lower (nature) विद्धि viddhi know, प्रकृतिम् prakṛtim (that) nature अन्याम् इतः तु anyām itaḥ tu which is distinct from this (lower nature) जीवभूताम् jīvabhūtām and which is in the form of Jiva, मे पराम् me parām to be My higher (nature), यया yayā by which इदं जगत् idaṃ jagat this universe धार्यते dhāryate is sustained महाबाहो mahābāho Oh Arjuna

5. This (eight-fold nature) is (My) lower nature, Know (that) nature which is distinct from this (lower nature) and which is in the form of Jiva to be My higher (nature) by which this Universe is sustained, Oh Arjuna.

An important and significant verse from vedantic angle; Krishna says इयम् अपरा iyam aparā; so the eight fold material principles mentioned in the previous verse is called aparā; here the word iyam indicates the 8 fold principle mentioned in the previous verse; that is the fourth verse, is called aparā prakṛti; the lower nature; because according to our scriptures, matter is also inferior; energy is also inferior; because matter and energy come under acētana tatvam; inert principle.

Whereas the scriptures consider consciousness as superior because according to the scriptures, consciousness is neither matter nor energy; many people mistake consciousness as a form of energy; no śāstrā does not look upon consciousness, as a form of energy; because energy is subject to change; mechanical energy, electrical energy, magnetic energy, all these are inter-convertible; electrical energy is converted into mechanical energy, in the fan; and it is converted into sound energy, energy is subject to modification, whereas consciousness is that principle which is not subject to modification. Therefore consciousness is neither matter, nor energy; then what is consciousness; consciousness is consciousness.

Therefore he says: may parām prakṛtim viddhi; may you know my higher nature; which is other than matter and energy; which is beyond scientific study; which is beyond our observation; which is beyond the physical and chemical laws; some of the scientists themselves have concluded that consciousness is beyond physical and chemical laws of nature. It is beyond the law; therefore that viddhi may you know; and where is that parā prakṛti located; that parā prakṛti also very much within this creation only; just as aparā prakṛti is here; parā prakṛti is also very much within this creation.

And where is it; whatever is changing, you should put into aparā prakṛti list; and you have to search and find out parā prakṛti; you have got a new project; find out parā prakṛti and a clue has been given; kon banega karodpathi! OK. I am very much up-to-date. So you have to find out, I would not give you one crore and all; now what should you do; look at the whole creation; whatever you see or come across is subject to modification, even space according to Einstein; according to the scientists, it is expanding, which means even space is changing; therefore you can rule out everything; because all of them are changing; therefore they come under what: aparā prakṛti; you are in search of what? parā prakṛti; then having ruled out the world, you come to your own body; and what do you find, the body is also going out of shape; inspite of all your effort for keeping it fine and slim, body is changing, then what about mind; you do not have ask; violently changing; therefore body is aparā prakṛti; mind is aparā prakṛti; world is aparā prakṛti; In fact, whatever I observe is aparā prakṛti. Krishna tells that there is parā prakṛti; here and now, find out it out; this fellow says I am searching all over; where to find; then Krishna reveals the answer; because they could not answer; so Krishna says whatever you experience is aparā prakṛti; then what is parā prakṛti; you, the experiencer is parā prakṛti. Because you the experiencer or conscious principle or inert principle; if you are the experiencer, you have to be what; consciousness principle only and therefore the observer, jeeva is parā prakṛti; the observed śarīram is aparā prakṛti; the observed mind is aparā prakṛti; but the observer jeeva, the awarer, the experiencer, the I am parā prakṛti; tat tvam asi. That is why it is said that this verse is important; because this contains mahā vakyam in that.

And therefore Krishna wants to say that the whole creation is a mixture of parā prakṛti the experiencer and aparā prakṛti; the experienced; parā prakṛti the observer and aparā prakṛti the observed; this is the creation. Therefore he says Hey

Mahabahoo; Oh Arjuna, the powerful one, it is not enough that you have a powerful arms, better you have a powerful intellect; hey महाबाहो जीवभूतां विद्धि, mahābāhō jīvabhūtām viddhi; may you know the parā prakṛti, the very jīva, means what; the very consciousness, the experiencer behind the body, mind complex; just as the electricity, the invisible one is blessing the fan and enlivens it; activates it, just as the electricity the invisible principle is behind this gadget activating it; this inert body mind complex is enlivened and activated by the touch of consciousness; that consciousness is my higher nature; so jīvabhūtām viddhi.

And what is the glory of that consciousness; यया yayā, because of that spirit alone; consciousness can be called spirit; and I do not want to use that word; you may think of some other spirit; OK; so therefore take it in the proper sense; because of that spirit; because of that consciousness principle alone, इदं जगत् धार्यते idaṃ jagat dhāryate; the entire inert material universe is sustained, maintained.

At the physical body level; the consciousness is experienced in the form of very life principle; if you have any doubt, touch your body, the body is sentient, means what the body is blessed by the consciousness principle; and as long as there is life, the body is together and functioning; the moment the life principle is not there; the body disintegrates; the dearest body has to be disposed at the earliest; now this body is bathed, dressed and perfumed and all kinds of things are done; it is together; but without life, this will disintegrate. Extend this the cosmic level; the whole cosmos is in harmony, only because of the intelligence principle, the chaitanya tatvam; the world is functioning as though a cosmic human being; because of the parā prakṛti alone, the world is in harmony; and that is why in our religion; we look up the universe itself as a cosmic person; the visible part of the creation is aparā prakṛti; the invisible sustaining principle is called parā prakṛti; and the creation itself is called a cosmic person.

That is why, we have puruṣa sūktam which means the cosmic person; translated into Tamil, it becomes Perum All; this is Chinna all, and the whole cosmos is Perum All; combine it, becomes what Perumal. That is Bhagavān; so yayā idaṃ jagat dhāryate; dhāryate means sustains.

अहं कृत्स्नस्य जगतः प्रभवः प्रलयस्तथा ॥ ७.६ ॥

ētadyōnīni bhūtāni sarvāṇītyupadhāraya |

ahaṃ kṛtsnasya jagataḥ prabhavaḥ pralayastathā || 7.6 ||

उपधारय इति upadhāraya iti ascertain that सर्वाणी भूतानि sarvāṇī bhūtāni all things and beings एतद्योनीनि etadhyonīni have these two prakritis as their material cause, अहं प्रभवः ahaṃ prabhavaḥ (Therefore) I am the source, तथा प्रलयः tathā pralayaḥ as well as the ground of dissolution, कृत्स्नस्य जगतः kṛtsnasya jagataḥ of this entire universe.

6. Ascertain that all things and beings have these two prakritis as their material cause. (Therefore) I am the source as well as the ground of dissolution of this entire universe.

In this verse Krishna talks about the conversion of the intermediary stage into the final cosmos; because in the previous two verses, he had talked about only the intermediary stage consisting of one parā prakṛti and eight fold aparā prakṛti; that is the plant stage as it were and now Krishna says from this plant stage alone, the huge tree of cosmos consisting of gross elements and as well as the elementals; the gross elements means what; the gross ākāśa; vāyu, agni, āpaḥ; prithvi; and not only the elements, the elementals; elementals means what; those products which are formed by the combination of the elements. What is the example for an elemental; our body itself is one of the combinations assembly; we have got earth in the body; body is made up of refined mud; remember; sometime we say clay is only in the head; but according to śāstrā, the whole body is made up of, may be some extra in the head; I do not know; it is only fine earth; for saline and earth; it is refined; and there is water in the body; in fact water alone is the shape to the body and then there is fire in the body in the form of temperature; you may go to Kailasa or Badri; where the temperature maybe one degree; but the bodies maintain the temperature; agni tatvam is there; vāyu is there in the form of breath; and ākāśa is there; OK; empty space is there; some times in the head or certainly within the stomach; of and on space is there.

In short, body is an elemental, in Sanskrit an elemental is called boudikam; element is called būtham; and elemental is called boudikam; Krishna says out of this plant stage came, būtha boudika prapanchaḥ. So सर्वाणि भूतानि sarvāṇī bhūtāni; all the things and beings that you experience from the minutest micro organism to the most evolved human body, everything, एतद्योनीनि etadhyonīni; has its cause as me, the parā aparā prakṛti. So here etat means what parā aparā mixture; yōni means what; the source; so the parā-aparā mixture alone is the source of the entire creation and this parā-aparā mixture is called God.

And therefore God alone has evolved in the form of this creation. So Krishna is revolutionising the concept of God. Until we study this, our concept of God is what: a person, sitting beyond the cloud; either śiva; sitting in Kailasam; or Viṣṇu, lying on the adhiśēṣa; பார்சுடல் pārkaṭal is there; the milky ocean and then he goes on creating and dumping down; he makes earth and dumps down; and little bit plants and then stars, then sun, the moon, the planets. So we have an idea; that idea is in the beginning stage; because we cannot appreciate God in his true nature in the beginning. Therefore the scriptures introduce God in three levels; God as a person, God as the universe, and God as the nirguṇa caitanyam; the propertyless consciousness; the abstract truth; God as abstract truth, very few people can appreciate; therefore it is never presented in the beginning. God is presented as a person in the beginning, then as the universe; then the absolute.

Now Krishna says do not look up God as a person, learn to look at everything as my own manifestation; therefore सर्वाणि इति उपधारय sarvāṇī iti upadhāraya; upadhāraya means assert in your mind; digest, assimilate this teaching. And not only the whole universe evolves out of me; the whole universe rests in me alone; and what is the fate of this universe; so the scientists who are studying the cosmology; they are talking about the big bang theory; that also is right or wrong; lot of controversy; and according to the theory creation at the time of big bang started evolving and expanding and they say that even now the universe is expanding; now what they are worried or wondering at is whether this expansion will be eternal or will it stop and if it stops, it will stop permanently or will it reverse back; Some people talk of big crunch; big bang opposite; big crunch; means what the whole thing will expand; reach a stage and thereafter the whole will again come back to singularity; they call it singularity and again expand.

This is what they are wondering; according to scriptures, this evolution of the world later will have to be reversed; so sṛṣṭi stithi will be followed again by pralayam; and at pralaya time what will be there; again parā prakṛti and aparā-prakṛiti; and then what will happen; again it will expand; do not worry, each one will take infinite time; not tomorrow or day after; certainly not in our life time; and again it will contract; expansion; existence and contraction; evolution, existence and involution; big bang existence big crunch. This Krishna had indicated in the 2nd chapter; if you remember.

avyaktādīni bhūtāni vyaktamadhyāni bhārata |
avyaktanidhanānyēva tatra kā paridēvanā || 2.28 ||

Everything goes back to unmanifest condition. Again from unmanifest condition it will come to manifestation; and again; and if you want a mini sṛṣṭi-sthithi-layam; Bhagavān has given a sample; micro; and what is that; daily it happens, during the morning time when we wake up, all our activities evolve from us; thoughts evolve; actions evolve; the moment we wake up. And during the night, everything is withdrawn into ourselves; actions are withdrawn; and thoughts are withdrawn; not permanently, next morning, again start; next night, again close; therefore the whole creation is a cyclic process.

And when did the whole thing start; we are particular to know that only; when it all started? when we talk about a cycle, understand it is a not line; only with regard to a line, we can talk about beginning and end; with regard to a cycle or circle, you can never talk about beginning and end; and therefore the scriptures say, it is an eternal process; ānadi ānantha; the cycle will not end; but you can get out of the cycle; that is called mōkṣa; you have got into merry-go-round, which will never stop; no switch; merry-go-round after sometime becomes sorry-go-round; first few rounds fine, then you just want to come out. So you ask someone to switch it off; they say that there is no switch off; the only way is what; you jump out, it will continue; this is called moksha; Therefore Krishna says अहं कृत्स्नस्य जगतः प्रभवः प्रलयस्तथा aham kṛtsnasya jagataḥ prabhavaḥ pralayastathā; I am the source, utpathi sthānam; prabhavaḥ; uthpathi sthānam; or origin, of the entire universe. And not only I am prabhavaḥ; thatha pralaya; in the same way, I am the resolution ground also; I am the graveyard of this creation; the whole thing will come to Me alone. So I throw out and I resolve; and in the scriptures they give another example to assimilate this; it is exactly like our projection of the dream universe; if you can imagine the process of dream; out of your mind, emerges the vast dream world; which has got not only creations or lokhas; but you generate even time and space out of your mind;

remember the dream time is different from the waker's time and that is why within a few minutes dream, according to scientists dream last for 1-1/2 minutes or something. Even the longest dream, it is only for a short while; they called it REM. Rapid Eye Movement; at that time, the dream projections come, even though the dream is for 1-1/2 minutes from waker's time, you will find that he will get married, have children and grand children; in 1-1/2 minutes; these can all happen for flies. but how can human being have grand children in 1-1/2 minutes, the dream time is different from waker's time; and who created that dream time; my mind created the time; my mind created the space; and when I wake up; what do I do; I just swallow the whole thing; I am the sṛṣṭi kartā; I am the sthithi kartā; and I am the laya kartā; with regard to the dream time, space and object; similarly God is sṛṣṭi-sthithi-layam kartā of the whole cosmos; and therefore sṛṣṭi-sthithi-laya karānam.

Continuing.

मत्तः परतरं नान्यत् किञ्चिदस्ति धनञ्जय ।

मयि सर्वमिदं प्रोतं सूत्रे मणिगणा इव ॥ ७.७ ॥

mattaḥ parātaraṃ nānyat kiñcidasti dhanañjaya |

mayi sarvamidam prōtaṃ sūtrē maṇigaṇā iva || 7.7 ||

धनञ्जय dhanañjaya Oh Arjuna अस्ति न अन्यत् asti na anyat there is no other
परतरं किञ्चित् parātaraṃ kiñcit cause at all मत्तः mattaḥ apart from Me, सर्वम्
इदम् sarvam idam all this प्रोतं मयि protaṃ mayi is strung in Me इव मणिगणाः iva maṇigaṇāḥ like beads, सूत्रे sutre in a string.

Normally, when we study the creation, we observe one law. And what is that: every cause has got its own cause. If you take our own parents; we are the products with regard to whom are parents are the cause; but what do we discover; the parents themselves have got a cause, who are the grand parents and with regard to grand parents, they become, an effect; a product; and what about the grand parents; they are cause with regard to parents, but the grand parents themselves are effects with regard to great-grand parents.

Thus the general law that we observe is every cause has got its own cause; since we are observing this in the creation; our question will be what; if God is the cause of the creation; then we will raise the question, who is the cause of God; who are the parents of God; Krishna says, I am the parent-less-parent of this creation; I am the causeless-cause of the creation; because I am never an effect of anything; and that is the reason I told in the introduction itself; parā prakṛti is anādhi; aparā prakṛti is anādhi; anādhi means beginningless; parā prakṛti the conscious principle is beginningless; aparā prakṛti, the inert principle is beginningless; and therefore their combination is what: God; therefore God also must be what; beginningless; and therefore God does not have anyone; Godder than the God is not there; or God, Godder, Goddest will come.

And this alone in pūraṇa and all they say; there is a song also; I do not hear this often now; தந்தை தாய் இருந்தால் உலகில் உமக்கிந்த தாழ்வெல்லாம் வருமோ அய்யா tantai tāy iruntāl ulakil umakkinta tālvellām varumō ayyā; it is a beautiful Tamil song; So there was a great musician; Vasanta kokilam; this generation may not know; she has sung that song; very beautiful song; Oh Lord Śiva; you have suffered a lot; one has beaten; this has been done; that has been done; if only you had parents, you would not have suffered this much; they would have come to your rescue; you do not have parents and therefore you are suffering; not suffering and all; what I say is the devotee brings out his feeling;

But there what is the philosophical teaching involved; that God does not have parents means. That's why somebody said Parvathy is lucky because she does not have a mother-in-law! To put in modern language; if there are any mother-in-laws, please do not get angry with me; sometime some mother-in-law comes and says: Swamiji you always criticise mother-in-law only and why can't you for a change, criticise the daughters-in-law also. You should have a balanced vision; so just a joke; do not take seriously.

Therefore He says; मत्तः अन्यत् किञ्चिद नास्ति परतरं mattaḥ anyat kiñcida nāsti parataram; parātharam means another cause; there is no other cause for Me; I am the ultimate cause, I am the absolute cause of the creation.

And now in the 2nd line, he comes to a very important corollary; these are all important philosophical ideas given here. For that I have to go an example. I said

God is the material cause of the creation; therefore God alone has evolved to manifest as the creation. Now we have to remember a general law; what is that; material cause is inherent in all the products; material cause is inherent in all the products. In fact, all the products exist only because of the inherent material cause; like what; all the earthen wares are pots exist because of what; the clay which is inherent in all pots; all the ornaments are existing only because of the inherent gold; remove the gold; no ornaments. If you have any doubt, at least at the end, give me the gold and take away your ornaments; is it possible; not possible; If you take the inherent wood, the furniture cannot be there.

Krishna says: I being the material cause of the creation; I am the antharyami, I am the inherent principle; the cause of whom the whole world is together; and Krishna gives an example, just as a māla has got the inherent thread which is keeping all the beads together; when you look at the māla; the beads are visible; but you know that, within the visible beads, is what; the invisible sūtram; sūtram means the thread and because of the thread alone; the māla is there; without that there is no māla. Similarly, I am inherent in the creation; so सूत्रे मणिगणा इव sūtrē maṇigaṇā iva; just as the beads are threaded together by the string; similarly the whole universe is threaded together because of this string called God.

And therefore if somebody asks where is God, what should be your answer; you should not answer; you should ask a counter question; where is not. The details in the next class.

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

अस्मद् आचार्य पर्यन्ताम् वन्दे गुरु परम्पराम्

sadāśiva samārambhāṁ śaṅkarācāryamadhyamām

Om

After introducing the subject matter in the first three verses of this seventh chapter, now from the fourth verse onwards, Lord Krishna has entered into the main theme of the seventh chapter; not only the 7th chapter, the entire middle section of the Gītā, that is up to the 12th chapter.

And one of the central themes of the middle sections is Īśvara svarūpam, or the nature of God; What is God and what is the function of God? And we saw God is defined as jagat kāraṇam, the cause of this universe. And when we say jagat kāraṇam, both the intelligent cause of this creation, as well as the very material cause of the creation, which means not only God has created the world, but being the very material cause, God himself has evolved into this universe. Therefore the main idea that Krishna wants to convey is that the entire cosmos is the manifestation, the evolved form of the Lord. Do not imagine, God as a person sitting in a place; but learn to understand that the very universe is the manifestation of the Lord.

And when I learn to look at the very world as the manifestation of God, that vision is called visvarūpa darśanam; and this visvarūpa darśanam not only requires the understanding of this teaching, but it also requires the inner maturity to learn to look at this very world as Īśvara's manifestation. Until we study this portion, our assumption is that God is a person and Īśvara darśanam is coming in contact with a personal God. Until we understand the middle section of the Gītā, our assumption is that God is a person and we think, Īśvara darśanam is coming personally in contact with a personal God. Krishna wants to remove this idea from our mind, and Krishna wants to refine our understanding, and he wants to present Īśvara darṣanam as nothing but the maturity to look at the very creation as the Lord Visvarūpa; for which Krishna is preparing from the 7th chapter. In the 7th, 8th and 9th and 10th chapters, Krishna prepares our mind, so that in the 11th chapter, we do not ask for the arrival of God, but we understand that God has already arrived in the form of ākāśa, vāyu, agni, jalam, prithvi. So thus not only I should understand what is God but I should reorient the mind to see the very world as God. When I look upon God as a person, it is ēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ; Krishna does not want us to confine to ēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ; Krishna want us to anēka rūpa Īśvara, the entire Gītā is aiming at anēka rūpa Īśvara darṣanam; visvarūpa Īśvara darṣanam, and Krishna considers this Īśvara darṣanam as superior because ēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ or personal God is subject to arrival as well as departure.

And therefore there is a happiness of perception and there is an unhappiness of separation also as given in the Bhagavatham; Gopi's attitude; so they have got viraha Gītām, called Gopika Gītām; they were so upset because Krishna appeared and disappeared. And when Krishna disappeared, they cried, the only difference is they cried in rāga; that is the only difference; when we cry, śṛuti will not be there; ruruduhu susvaram rājan, it is said in Bhagavatham; ruruduhu means they cried; how did they cry; that is the difference between them and us; susvaram; melodious cried; because of Krishna darṣana lalāsa; and because of their crying, Lord again appeared; tāsam avirabhoot shouri sowmayamāna mukhabhujā; with a smiling face; pithambara sragvi sākṣāt manmada manmadaḥ. So this beautiful Krishna appeared all smiles; again Krishna disappeared; all crying; we do not decry that devotion; that is wonderful; that is beautiful; it has got its own charm; but that is lower level of appreciating God.

And therefore Krishna wants to take us to a higher level which is seeing the very world as visvarūpa and what is the advantage of such an Īśvara darṣanam; there is no question of disappearance; wherever I see; whatever I see, sarvam viṣṇu mayam jagat; sarvam Śiva mayam jagat; sarvam dēvi mayam jagat. This visvarūpa darṣanam is going to be presented; for that alone Bhagavān introduces himself or God as jagat kāraṇam.

And then Krishna pointed out that this Īśvara consists of two aspects or amśās; amśā dvayam, one is called the parā prakṛti, the consciousness part; the cētana amśāḥ, and aparā prakṛti, the acētana amśāḥ, the higher and lower nature put together consciousness and matter put together is God. And how does this God evolve into the universe. Krishna said that it happens in two stages; in the initial stage, it is one parā prakṛti and one aparā prakṛti; then in the intermediary stage, the aparā prakṛti divides itself into 8-fold aṣṭādha prakṛti; parā prakṛti continues one only and then in the final stage the 8 fold aparā prakṛti becomes the manifold creation. And then also the parā prakṛti continues to be one and the same; and in this creation, wherever you see the changing matter, you appreciate it as the aparā prakṛti of Īśvara; and wherever you see consciousness which you can feel in your body, if you have doubt, you can touch. And because of consciousness alone, you are able to hear my words; that invisible, inherent consciousness principle, because of which एन रूपम् रसम् गन्धाम्, स्पर्शतः, मैथुनान्, एतेनैव विजानाति किमत्रपरिशिष्यते ēna rūpam rasam gandhām, sparśataḥ, maithunān, ētenaiva vijānāti kimatrapariśiṣyatē; we saw somewhere; where, yesterday, that principle because of which you are aware of my words, that invisible changeless awareness principle is parā prakṛti, the changing body, mind complex is aparā prakṛti.

And then Krishna says whatever is other than these two, that belongs to you; you can take; other than which two; consciousness and matter; what is there; and this alone is symbolised by the Mahābali story; with one step the Lord has measured the entire world, with another step the Lord has measured the entire aparā prakṛti; and there is nothing else other than what; your ego, that is the problem; which claims this is my body; this is my mind; this is my property. Therefore bhagavan takes the third step and removes that ignorance, the ego, to indicate that there is nothing other than God. This the systematic destruction of jīva and the jagat, there is neither jīva; nor jagat; Can you understand; can you understand the jīva, the individual you; jagat means what; the world, your possessions. Krishna wants to say that there is neither jīva, nor jagat, other than Īśvaraḥ; तन्-मन्-धन्-सबकुछ् तेरा tan-man-dhan-sabakuch terā; you do āraṭi in express mode and take the prasād; remember that it is a highly philosophical āraṭi mantra; tan-man-dhan-sabakuch terā; terā means what you alone are there; there is nothing other than God.

This is the teaching; which we are seeing now; very very important portion, in which we are seeing the seventh verse, mattaḥ parataraṃ nānyat kiñcidasti dhanañjaya. Arjuna there is nothing called effect other than cause; there are no ornaments other than Gold; there are no furniture other than wood; there are no walls, other than bricks; there are no waves and oceans and rivers other than water. Then what are waves; वाचारंबणम् विकारो नामदेयम् vācāraṃbaṇam vikāro nāmadēyam; river is only a name; there is no substance called river.

Therefore the teaching is there is no product other than cause, and the Lord being the cause, the world being the product, Krishna wants to say the world is only a word; remove the 'I' from the world; world is only a word; there is no substance called world; Then what is the substance, the substance is only the cause and what is that cause, God.

Therefore he says मयि सर्वमिदं प्रोतं सूत्रे मणिगणा इव mayi sarvamidaṃ prōtaṃ sūtrē maṇigaṇā iva; just as the thread is inherent in the beads; I am the sarva antaryāmi; in fact there is one name for bhagavan; that is sutrātma; why Bhagavān called sutrātma; just as the thread is inherent in the entire māla, without the thread, māla cannot exist; similarly bhagavan is the thread inherent in the creation. Up to this we saw.

8. Oh! Arjuna, I am the taste in water. I am the radiance in the moon and sun; I am the Omkara in all the Vēdās; (I am) the sound in space; (I am) the manliness in men.

Krishna wants us not only to understand this fact, but Krishna wants our attitude also to change accordingly. Any attitudinal change is based on understanding; if you have got love and reverence for your parents; how does it come; the more you think of the fact of what all things they have done; proportionally in keeping with that understanding; I develop the attitude of reverence; any attitude is based on knowledge; that is why when you meet a totally unknown person, what is the attitude that you have; it is neutral; neither rāgaḥ or dveṣaḥ; that is udāsīna bhāvana; audāsīnyam; after you move with that person, when you come to know that person is a man of principles, he has sacrificed so much; he has done so much to the society; you read the biography of Gandhiji or any such person, because you have the knowledge, then you develop what, reverence; you read the biography of Veerappan; fresh hot hot topic; so I can easily quote that; what comes; blood boiling.

If you do not know anything; you do not have an attitude. Therefore remember, attitude is based on knowledge. As you understand the world, so you entertain the attitude and as your understanding of the world undergoes a change, correspondingly there should be an attitudinal change also. When I look upon world as world, my attitude is rāgaḥ or dveṣaḥ; but when I understand the world as visvarūpa, the manifestation of God, then what is my attitude, reverence. In fact, the basic teaching of Hinduism is reverence to the creation; as manifestation of God. In fact you can spend your whole life to develop this reverence, Hinduism has fulfilled; you see all the prayers; Rudram which is supposed to be one of the most potent beautiful prayers. What is Rudram; many people think that Rudram has the highest philosophy; No; Rudram is only visvarūpa darśanam. If you read the translation of Rudram, very interesting; you will find I do namaskāra to Lord Śiva, who is in the form of Mud; muddāya namaḥ; who is in the form of leaf; that also two leaf; dry leaf; who is fresh leaf also; you will find that everything in the creation is enumerated, and we are asked to look at everything reverentially; and when the Sun rises in the morning, do not look at it as a matter principle; even if you look at it as matter, it is what; matter, what is matter, matter is aparā prakṛti; असौ यस्ताम्रो अरुण उत बभ्रुः सुमंगलः । ये चेमारुद्रा अभितो दिक्षु । asau yastāmrō aruṇa uta babhruḥ sumāṅgalaḥ, yē cēmārudrā abhitō dikṣu; I do namaskāram to Rudra; which has got red colour, yellow colour, white colour, at every stage; I reverentially worship the Sun.

Knowledge can be gathered immediately, but attitudinal change takes time; like eating food is immediate; and especially nowadays people are so many busy; they finish off a dozen idlis in two minutes; eating is simple, but if the whole thing should be digested, it takes hours. Similarly, we have got two fold job; understanding the teaching; and also bringing about an attitudinal change; perspective change; and this project is divinisation of the world; this is our project; and when the world is seen as world, it will persecute you; it will create fear; it will disturb you; so the world as world will cause samsāra; but the very same world as Īśvara will not cause any samsāra. In fact, this is the first mantra of Īśāvāsya upaniṣad; Īśāvāsyam idaguṃ sarvam. May you learn to look upon the very world as Īśvara svarūpa; Īśvara bhāvanāya āchhādaniyam; paint the world with Īśvara bhāvana. What a wonderful paint; paint the world with Īśvara bhāvana; and therefore Krishna says what should you do hereafter.

In the following verses, He asks you to bring about a attitudinal change; रसोऽहमप्सु कौन्तेय rasō'hamapsu kauntēya; Arjuna, when you drink water, you just do not look upon it as water, but the very essence of water, because of you are alive; that very essence is remember myself; rasaḥ means what the essence of water; the very basic taste of water is called rasaḥ; that essence I am; and that is why in the early morning Sandhya vandanam; we worship water; apōva, those who do the sandhyavandanam will remember;

पशव आपोऽन्नमापोऽमृतमापः सम्राडापो विराडापः

svarādāpaśchandāṃsyāpo jyotīṃsyāpo

satyamāpaḥ sarvā devatā āpo bhūrbhuvāḥ suvarāpa om .

āpaḥ means what, water; then आपो हि ष्टा मयो भुवः । ता न ऊर्जे दधातन āpo hi ṣṭā mayō bhuvāḥ | tā na ūrjē dadhātana; Oh waters you are not waters; you are Lord; and Oh lord you bless me with that knowledge, so that I will be able to look at everything as Īśvara svarūpam; In fact that is my destination; the ultimate goal of my life is learning to look at everything as God; therefore अहं अप्सु रसः अस्मि हे कौन्तेय शशिसुर्ययोः

प्रभा अस्मि ahaṃ apsu rasaḥ asmi hekaunteya śāśisuryayoḥ prabha asmi; I am the light, radiance, the brilliance, in the sun and the moon; śāśī means moon; surya means the sun; prabhā means the brilliance.

In fact this brilliance or light alone is worshipped in the most famous Gāyathri mantra, which is considered to be the essence of all the four vēdas, that Gāyathri mantra is prayer addressed to the light in the sun, the light symbolising the conscious principle parā prakṛti; so that savithu varenyam bhargaḥ; bargaḥ means prabha. Literally bhargaḥ, the destroyer of darkness. So I am worshipping that brilliance sunrise; which represents Lord; because of which light of consciousness alone, diyo yona prachodayat; that consciousness alone makes my inert brain into a live knowing instrument. So therefore, I look upon the sunlight, Sunlight not the soap; that is also bhagavan; sunlight and moonlight;

And प्रणवः सर्ववेदेषु praṇavaḥ sarvavēdēṣu; I am the praṇava; praṇava means Omkāraha; which is considered to be the essence of all the vēdās, So vēdās are condensed at three levels; the first level condensation is Gāyathri manthra; and that is why it is considered that chanting the Gāyathri is equivalent to the chanting of the whole vēdās. We have the entire vēda parāyaṇam; when you chant Gāyathri; and later the Gāyathri is further condensed into vyahriti; called the bhuhu, bhuvā, suvā, mantra. So vēda condensed is Gāyathri; Gāyathri condensed is vyahriti; bhuhu; bhuvā, suvā; and later the vyahriti is also further condensed and that is a, u and um, joined together becomes OM. So vēda condensed is Omkāra; and Omkāra diluted is vēda; like you have got some condensed fruit juice; which you pour water again and again and you give to hundreds of people. only one bottle; and go on adding; why because it is supposed to be the sāra;

yo vēdādau svara prokto, vēdāntē ca pratiṣṭhitāḥ, tasya prakṛtilīnasya, ya parasya mahēśvaraḥ

So Omkāra is the essence of the vēdās; Krishna says that Omkāra is also myself; so sarva vēdēṣu praṇavaḥ; शब्दः खे śabdaḥ khē; and I am the essence of the all pervading space; which is śabda tatvam; the sound principle is supposed to be the essential nature of ākāśa; So I am khē akāśē śabdaḥ, that is called śabda brahman;

शब्दब्रह्ममयि चराचरमयि ज्योतिर्मयि वाङ्मयि

निचयानन्दमयि चिरञ्जनमयि तत्त्वमयि चिन्मयि ।

चत्त्वातीतमयि परात्परमयि मायामयि श्रीमयि

cattvāītamayi parātparamayi māyāmayi śrīmayi sarveśvaryamayi sadāśivamayi māñ pāhi mīnāmbikē ||

śabda brahmamayi, carācara mayi; you are śabda brahman; therefore the sound you are; and पौरुषं नृषु pauruṣaṃ nṛṣu. So you are the very manliness or humanness in every human being; that essential nature which makes a human being, a human being, that essential nature, you are.

Continuing.

पुण्यो गन्धः पृथिव्यां च तेजश्चास्मि विभावसौ ।

जीवनं सर्वभूतेषु तपश्चास्मि तपस्विषु ॥ ७.९ ॥

puṇyō gandhaḥ pṛthivyāṃ ca tējaścāsmi vibhāvasau |
jīvanam sarvabhūteṣu tapaścāsmi tapasviṣu || 7.9 ||

च ca Moreover पुण्यः गन्धः puṇyaḥ gandhaḥ I am the fragrance पृथिव्याम् pṛthivyām in earth अस्मि तेजः asmi tejaḥ I am the heat विभावसौ vibhāvasau in fire जीवनम् jīvanam I am the life सर्वभूतेषु sarvabhuteṣu in all beings च तपः अस्मि ca tapaḥ asmi (and) I am the austerity तपस्विषु tapasviṣu in ascetics

9. O Arjuna! Moreover I am the fragrance in earth; I am the heat in fire: I am the life in all beings and I am the austerity in ascetics.

So पृथिव्यां पुण्यो गन्धः pṛthivyām puṇyaḥ gandhaḥ, the essential nature of pṛthivi, the earth is its fragrance or smell; among the five elements the earth alone has got gandhaḥ guṇaḥ; the other four elements do not have gandha; so akasa has got śabda guṇaḥ, Vāyu has got śabda and śparśa; śparśa means touch, agni has got śabda, śparśa and rūpam, visible; jalam has got śabda, śparśa, roopa, and rasa, unique and pṛthivi has got śabda, śparśa, rūpa, rasa and gandha (unique one).

The other four elements cannot have gandha; Swamiji our corporation water has got many gandha; do not say that; pure water does not have gandha; and if you get all kinds of smell, it is because it is mixed with all kinds of pṛthivi; chlorine, etc.

So therefore, and there also, Krishna is very careful; smell is of two types, Krishna says fragrance I am in the earth; because earth by itself is fragrant; only because of we polluting the earth it has got all foul smell; and you can feel that fragrance when there is a fresh rain and if you have mud; you will not get in city, because all tar road; In village, wherever mud is there; when the first rain comes, a beautiful मण्ण व्यासण्ण maṇṇ vāsaṇai. So therefore I am the vāsana in the man, the pṛthivi; तेजः अस्मि विभावसौ asmi tejaḥ vibhāvasau; agni tatvam; and tejaḥ means the heat principle in the fire; the essential nature of fire is heat, even the form and colour may not be available all the time, in the hot water, you cannot see the fire but you can feel the heat of the fire; and therefore tejaḥ, the heat and that heat principle I am;

And जीवनं सर्वभूतेषु jīvanam sarvabhūtēṣu; the very life principle, because of which a living being is a living being, without which a living being is a dead corpse, शिवः Śiva minus life; remove the e'; Śiva remove the e; you go home and think well; therefore the body becomes a dead corpse (शवः); that life-principle I am. देहो देवालय प्रोक्तहः जीव देव सनातनः dēhō dēvālaya prōktaha; jīva dēva sanātanaḥ;

That is why our basic religion is: respect all life principles; that is the uniqueness of our religion; in many other religions, they think all other living being are meant only for one purpose; svāhāḥ; our consumption; and they have got a convenient philosophy, animals do not have souls; plant do not have souls. Therefore Bhagavān has created, according to them; all animals and plants for what purpose; our consumption; and if they want to protect the animals and plants, it is not because of respect for life, but for the sake of our consumption and enjoyment; whereas Hinduism is talking about ecological protection; because every plant has got life principle; the ātma tatvam is there.

And therefore respect everyone; therefore that jīvanam; I am in every living being; and तपस्विषु तपश्चास्मि tapasviṣu tapaścāsmi; among the human beings there are some who are more evolved. In the previous verse, he talked about general human beings; pauruṣaṃ nṛṣu; there nṛṣu means the human being in general; they also ran; like that; common ones; but there are some evolved beings; they are called tapasvinaḥ; because of their tapas, because of their perseverance; because of their commitment; they have accomplished something; either materially or spiritually, and in those tapasvis, I am tapaḥ; I am the austerity in the austere people. I am the saintliness in the saintly people. Therefore tapasviṣu tapaścāsmi; if you study these two verses; Krishna has covered all the pañca bhūthas; pṛthivi; jalam; agni; ākaśa, Vāyu, you supply. In short, we look up the five elements themselves as God; that is why I told you the other day, we have five temples, each temple dedicated to one one bhūtha; ākaśa lingam in Chidambaram; Vāyu lingam in kalāhasti; agni liṅgam in Tiruvannamalai; jala lingam in Jambukesvaram, thirunaikavil; and pṛthivi liṅgam in Kancheepuram. What does it mean? I learn to look or see the five elements themselves as Īśvara's manifestation; all these indicate what; attitudinal change.

bijaṃ māṃ sarvabhūtānāṃ viddhi pārtha sanātanam |

buddhirbuddhimatāmasmi tējastējasvināmaham | | 7.10 | |

पार्थ pārtha O ! Arjuna विद्धि माम् viddhi mām know me, सनातनं बीजम् sanātanam bijam to be the eternal seed सर्वभूतानम् sarvabhūtānam of all beings बुद्धिः अस्मि buddhiḥ asmi I am the intelligence बुद्धिमताम् buddhimatām of intelligent, अहं तेजः ahaṃ tējaḥ I am the boldness tējasvinām of the bold

10. Oh! Arjuna, Know Me to be the eternal seed of all beings. I am the intelligence of the intelligent. I am the boldness of the bold.

Look at the second line; बुद्धिर्बुद्धिमतामस्मि buddhir buddhimatāmasmi; I am the very intelligence principle behind the intelligent people. There are some people who are extra-ordinarily intelligent; and their glory is because of their intelligence; that intelligence I am. That means what: because of my blessing alone; the intelligent people are enjoying the intelligence; and similarly तेजस्विनाः तेजस्विनाम् अस्मि tējasvināḥ tējasvinām asmi; I am the boldness; the valor in the valorous, in the bold people; so boldness stands for that capacity because of which a person is able to overcome obstacles; that is called boldness; parākramaḥ; bulldozer capacity; what is bulldozer, anything comes it pushes and goes forwards; whereas our car or cycle, the least obstacle it stops;

Similarly, there are some people, slightest suspicion of obstacle, they will withdraw; there are some people who have the capacity; come what may, they conquer the obstacle and go forward; that is called parākramaḥ; akramaḥ means overcoming; parā means any obstacle; human or non-human and that is called tējas; brilliance or boldness, and that parākramaḥ in people also I am. And from all these things, we have to derive certain important corollary also, because the essential nature of every thing is God; if we have got any of these virtues; like boldness, like intelligence; like austerity; like knowledge, if anyone of these virtues is in me; I should remember they really do not belong to me; but they are the manifestation of God.

Therefore the credit does not go to me, but it goes to the Lord alone; therefore the more I appreciate God, the more humble I will become. Humility born of knowledge will remain; but without proper understanding, humility will be only a show; outside they will be humble and inside they will be arrogant; real humility will come only when this is understood; and that is why in Kēnōpaniṣad we had this story, when the dēvās got a victory over asurās, even they become arrogant claiming that we have attained, accomplished the victory and then you know the story; how Bhagavān came in the form of a mysterious yakṣa and to find out this Lord, the mysterious God, agni devatha comes and the Lord places a blade of grass and asks Agni to burn; And the arrogant Agni thinks that I have got the infinite heat; I can raise my temperature and this is just a dry blade of grass; and agni goes on trying the blade of grass does not burn. Then he recognises the heat principle in Agni is Bhagavān's glory, better you accept. Then Vāyu devatha comes; already air is so much; Vāyu devatha what will have; lot of air; puffed with air; Then the Lord asks what he can do; and shows the same blade of grass to life the dry grass; then Vāyu attempts and miserably fails. All these to show that the essential nature of everything is Bhagavān. Therefore if you get any degree, any honour or anything glorious is there; and when somebody praises you, better remember God and if you get any award also, place it in front of the Lord. This is one corollary; understanding Īśvara will give you humility. Ignorance of Īśvara will lead to arrogance.

And the second advantage is which is equally important; that when I see glory in any other person also; I will never become jealous; when does jealousy come; when I compare my glory, which is not there; my assumed glory, to another person's glory. And I find that the society is glorifying that person; more than me; better award; better degree, better salary; better appreciation; comparison leads to jealousy; which is terrible; jealousy is the worst form of diseases; because it burns you eternally. When I appreciate God I can never have jealousy because all the glories belong to only soul; and if I can sing well (I cannot), if I can sing well and you can sing well, I am not going to compare because, both the capacity belongs to one God and we too are only empty pipelines. We do not have any glory. somewhere there is a thick pipeline and somewhere there is a thin pipeline; In thick pipeline, there is lot of water come; and in thin pipeline there is less water; but whether it is more water or less water; all water belongs to only one soul; the water tank; similarly we are all only pipes; and all the glories belong to only one central water tank; and that is Īśvara. So wherever I see any glory; let me learn to congratulate; if a person sings better than me; I go and appreciate, I am able to see Lord's glory in you. Therefore humility is one result; and non-jealousy or appreciation is another benefit of Īśvara jñānam.

Then come to the first line; Krishna says सर्वभूतानां sarvabhūtānām; सनातनम् बीजं विद्धि sanātanam bījam viddhi. In fact this should be a read at the end, which is the summing up line, but anyway Krishna gives it here; bījam means the seed, the primal cause; the basic cause, we use the word primal cause because the causes can be divided into two types, one is the intermediary cause or relative cause and the other is the ultimate or absolute cause. For example, our parents are the cause of us; therefore certainly they are kāraṇam; but they are not the ultimate cause, they are all intermediary cause because they themselves have their cause; and grand parents have their cause; therefore, whatever is an intermediary cause, that is āpēkṣika kāraṇam; but God is not āpēkṣika kāraṇam; but it is the absolute primal cause; and how do you define, primal cause, the absolute cause is that which is the cause of everything; but which itself is not the cause of anyone; therefore causeless cause; God is parentless parent; he is fatherless father of the creation; motherless mother of the creation; causeless cause of the creation.

Therefore Krishna says sarvabhutanam bījam; which is sanātanam; sanātanam; which does not have a beginning; anādi kāraṇam; so never ask the question; one small boy used to come to this class; at the end he came and ask, Swamiji, what is the cause of God; because that comes to the mind; so when we think of any cause, we come to know that cause has got some other cause; so when I say God is the cause; people ask the question, what is the cause of God; Krishna knows that you will ask the question; therefore he puts the adjective sanātanam bījam; I am the eternal cause; I am the causeless cause of the creation.

More we will see in the next class.

Om

In the 7th chapter, from 4th verse onwards, Lord Krishna has been talking about Īśvara svarūpam and the Lord pointed out that the Īśvara consists of two parts, one is the higher nature, which is of the nature of consciousness, and the other is lower nature, which is of the nature of matter; and this cit-jada-misram, this mixture consisting of cit and jada or cētana-acētana amśa dvayam is the nature of God; and this Īśvara happens to be the basic cause of the universe from whom the universe arises, in which the universe rests and into whom the universe resolves. And while studying this aspect that is God as the cause of the universe, we have to remember an important law; and that law is whatever be the composition of the cause, the same will be the composition of the effect also. In Sanskrit it is presented as कारण गुणाः कार्ये अनुवर्तते kāraṇa guṇāḥ kāryē anuvartatē; the features of the cause inhere the effect also. If out of a lump of gold, we create ornaments, then the composition of the gold and the ornaments will be the same, which means if gold has got six percent copper in it, then the ornaments also will have the same percentage of copper. This is not only in the case of the regular products that we make, even when we study the character of children, we find that the character of the parents inhere the children. Since Father and mother are involved, parā and aparā prakṛti, I do not want to say, who is parā prakṛti and who is aparā prakṛti get the wrath of one section of the students; that you can decide! just as parā and aparā prakṛti are there. Here also every child has the parents and we know that the children inherit the characters of father as well as mother. In fact, when the child is born; one of the important job of the visitors to find out which one the child resembles; a big quiz; kon banega carodpathi;; is the child like the father or the mother and some people like to compromise; and say that nose is like the father, etc. and brain is like the mother, I know which is better, because we know that not only in features even with regard diseases like pressure, sugar, etc., parents' diseases get transferred to the children; all these indicate the important law; what is the kāraṇa guṇāḥ kāryē anuvartatē. If this law is remembered, we can say Īśvarashya gunaha, kāraṇa bhūtha Īśvarasya guṇāḥ, kārya bhūtē prapañche anuvartatē.

And since Īśvara is a mixture of cētana tatvam and acētana tatvam; the universe is also a mixture of the conscious principle as well as the inert principle, and therefore Krishna claims here that whatever glories are there in the creation; all of them ultimately belong to me alone; because I am the essence, the sāra of the creation, and Krishna wants a total transformation should take place in our mind; so that hereafter when we look at the creation; we do not look at it as the world but we look at it as the manifestation of cētana acētana misra bhūta Īśvaraha.

And this vision, as I said in the last class, is the viśvarūpa darśanam of Īśvara, and Lord Krishna is gradually preparing us for this darśanam, so that in the 11th chapter, we will have the culmination of viśvarūpa darśanam.

And here Krishna makes a small difference, when we say the whole creation is the manifestation of the Lord. We know that not only the wonderful things are the manifestation of the Lord, even the terrible things also are ultimately the manifestation of the Lord only; but Krishna is very diplomatically, very intelligently suppressing the negative aspect, he is claiming only the glorious and wonderful thing as himself; what is the purpose of this deliberate suppression; because already we find it difficult to develop devotion to God. If Bhagavān is going to claim all the negative things also as himself, one will never develop devotion.

Therefore at the initial stages we learn to look at the positive side of the creation; and learn to appreciate it as Īśvara; until we get maturity; and once we are sufficiently mature; expand enough not only the positive, but also the negative. In short, we will be able to look at the totality of the creation; which requires a lot of maturity.

And the beauty is once we are sufficiently mature, you will find that a part of creation as negative; really speaking, is not negative also; it is also as beautiful and required as the positive things. In fact, they are not opposed to each other; they are complimentary pairs. Therefore we cannot hate a segment; hating a part of the creation is immaturity; for example, we look upon birth as mangalam; and we always look at death as amaṅgalam; and we do not want to talk about the death of people, especially death of family members, and especially the death of very close people, and especially the death of ourselves; because we think it is amaṅgalam. Amaṅgalam means inauspicious and negative and according to śāstrā, we look upon death as amaṅgalam, not because death is inauspicious; it is because our mind is not mature enough to look at death also objectively.

And therefore Krishna will not initially talk about death as himself; and then he will run away from Krishna; then he will initially talk about sṛṣṭi and sthithi only and once our mind is sufficiently mature, we will know that everything is Bhagavān only; there is no question of good and bad; there are only complimentary pairs in the creation; and that is the ultimate viśvarūpa darśanam; but here Krishna is deliberately suppressing the so-called negative things; I would not call them negative; but the so-called negative; and that is why, he says, verse No.10 we were seeing in the last class:

बुद्धिर्बुद्धिमतामस्मि तेजस्तेजस्विनामहम् ॥७.१०॥
bījaṃ māṃ sarvabhūtānāṃ viddhi pārtha sanātanam|
buddhirbuddhimatāmasmi tējastējasvināmaham||7.10||

I am the intelligence in the intelligent people; you should not talk about dullness in the dull people. You do not want to talk about that; until we are able to get sufficient maturity. Similarly, tējastējasvināmaham. In short, I am the seed of the entire creation. Up to this we saw in the last class.

बलं बलवतामस्मि कामरागाविवर्जितम् ।
धर्माविरुद्धो भूतेषु कामोऽस्मि भरतर्षभ ॥ ७.११ ॥
balam balavatām cāhaṃ kāmarāgavivarjitam|
dharmāviruddhō bhūteṣu kāmō'smi bharatarṣabha || 7.11 ||

भरतर्षभ bharatarṣabha Oh Arjuna!, बलवताम् balavatām of the strong बलम् अस्मि
balam asmi | am the strength कामरागाविवर्जितम् kāmarāgavivarjitam which is free from desire and attachment भूतेषु bhūteṣu in all beings कामः अस्मि kāmaḥ asmi I am the desire धर्मविरुद्धः dharmaviruddhaḥ which is not opposed to dharma

11. Oh, Arjuna, Of the strong, I am the strength which is free from desire and attachment. In all beings I am the desire which is not opposed to dharma.

The same idea is continued. हे भरतर्षभ; hē bharatarṣabha is another title of Arjuna, bhāratha means the descendants of bharatha; the bharatha vamśa janā is called here bhāratha; ṛṣabha means ṣreṣṭaḥ; so bharathavamśa ṣreṣṭaḥ; Oh Arjuna who is the greatest in your family. If Bhīma is the student, Krishna would have said the same thing; the idea is the student should feel fine; when you feel fine, you understand well; that is the psychology; a happy mind absorbs; and therefore teacher uses these techniques; you are wonderful; you are beautiful; whether you are not; encourages the students; hē sowmya; is oft used Upaniṣad expression; hey sowmya; pleasing one; bharatarṣabha Arjuna; बलवताम् अहम् बलम् अस्मि balavatām aham balam asmi. In the strong people, I am the very strength, because they enjoy the glory and status; and therefore I am balam; the sārāḥ, the essence the basic principle is kāraṇam is the sārāḥ of kāryam; cause is the sāram, the essence of the effect. If you extend it; you can put it in any context; strength is the essence of all the strong people; and therefore I am the strength.

But Krishna wants to divide the strength into two types:

one is positive strength, which is responsible for positive effects; constructive things; that also requires strength; and the second is negative strength, brutal strength, adhārmic strength, which is the cause of all destruction.

And having divided this strength into these two; constructive and destructive strengths, in the purāṇās we will find all the rākṣasās also had strength, but it is destructive; the strength of Hiranyakaśipu; Hiranyākṣa; Rāvaṇā, all of them; and we also see strength in Anjaneya; in Rāma etc.

What is the difference; one is constructive and the other destructive and therefore Krishna very intelligently says I am the constructive strength in the strong people.

And what is the definition of constructive strength. Dhārmica balam; positive strength. Krishna beautifully defines; it is free from कामरागविवर्जितम् kāma rāgaḥ vivarjitam; strength which is not backed by selfish desires; only when selfishness dominates, the strength will become destructive, because to become great, I have to suppress and destroy others. So kāma means desires; selfish desire; and rāgaḥ, means attachment; therefore a strength which is free from, which is not polluted by kāma and rāgaḥ, is the strength. What is the difference between kāma and rāgaḥ; kāma is desire with regard to an object which is not yet acquired by me; so when this watch is in the shop, I have not bought this watch, I have a desire for this watch; अप्राप्त विषये कामः aprāpta viṣayē kāmaḥ; and the moment, I buy the watch, there is no more the problem of desire, because it is already my watch.

And therefore now kāmaḥ is converted into what; rāgaḥ means attachment to this watch; therefore प्राप्ता विषये रोगः; aprāpta viṣayē kāmaḥ; before buying it is desire; after buying it is attachment; this kāmaḥ and rāgaḥ are the poison; and that strength which is free from both of them is pure strength and Krishna says that pure strength I am; and not only that; in the 2nd line he says; hey Arjuna, I am in the form of kāmaḥ, the desire also in the people who have desires; I am in the form of kāmaḥ also; in the people with desires; in the desire ridden people, I am the very desire; now it is confusing; in the previous line Krishna said I am the strength which is not polluted by desire; that means in the previous line, desire was presented as an impurity; and that is why he said strength must be free from the impurity called desire.

Now in the second line, Krishna says, I am desire also; that means what I am impurity also; because in the previous line desire is an impurity; how to resolve this problem? just as we divided strength into two types, we have to know that desires are also of two types; desires are also of two types one is called dhārmica desire or kāmaḥ; and the other is adhārmica kāmaḥ; those desires which will help me grow spiritually, constructive desires and those desires which will pull me down spiritually, destructive desires; adhārmica kāmaḥ.

So if I have a desire to do some service to others, to do my duty, to help other people, they are also what desires only; but they are desires which will help me grow positively. In fact, ultimately desire for mōkṣa is also a desire which will come under pure or impure desire; if desire for mōkṣa is impure desire; that is the first lesson in spiritual class should be what; do not have desire for mōkṣa; then why should one do sādānā.

In fact, while talking about the four fold qualifications of the spiritual seeker; the fourth qualification mentioned is mumukṣutvam; the desire for mōkṣa; desire for values; desire for sādānā catuṣṭaya sampathi; desire for Gītā class; all dhārmic or adhārmic desires? Any desire which will promote spirituality, is dhārmic kāmaḥ; any desire which will promote your inner growth is dhārmica kāmaḥ, and that is why even desire to earn wealth, Śankarācārya tells in Taittiriya, even desire for money can be a wonderful desire; provided, I want to earn plenty of money for what purposes; just to keep it under lock and key and enjoy only; and then that becomes adhārmic iccha; but when I want of plenty of money for sharing with others; for helping the society; for pañca mahā yajñāḥ, even that dāna iccha becomes dhārmica iccha; in Taittiriya Śankarācārya beautifully says.

dhānam dharmārtham; dharmāḥ citta śuddhyartham; citta śuddhiḥ jñānārtham; jñanam mokṣārtham.

money can be used for noble activities, noble activities will be useful for purification of mind, purification will be useful for knowledge. Knowledge will be useful for liberation; thus even desire for wealth can be a dhārmica iccha; and Krishna says such a dhārmic desire I am and therefore he says: hey Arjuna, अहम् कामः अस्मि aham kāmaḥ asmi; and what type of desire; धर्मविरुद्धः कामः dharmaviruddhaḥ kāmaḥ; I am the noble desire in the noble people; भूतेषु bhūteṣu; manuṣyeṣu; dhārmica puruṣeṣu; I am the noble desire.

ये चैव सात्त्विका भावाः राजसास्तामसाश्च ये ।
मत्त एवेति तान्विद्धि न त्वहं तेषु ते मयि ॥ ७.१२ ॥

yē caiva sātṭvikā bhāvā rājasāstāmasāśca yē |
matta ēvēti tān viddhi na tvahaṃ tēṣu tē mayi || 7.12 ||

भावाः bhāvāḥ all the states of mind, thoughts ये च एव सात्त्विकाः ye ca eva sātṭvikāḥ which are affected by sattvaguna राजसाः rājasāḥ rajoguna च ये तामसाहः ca ye tāmasāḥ and tamoguna विद्धि तान् viddhi tān know all of them मत्तः एव इति mattaḥ eva iti to be born of Me alone अहं न तेषु ahaṃ na teṣu I am not dependent on them तु ते मयि tu te mayi but they are dependent on Me.

12. All the states of mind which are affected by sattvaguna, rajoguna and tamoguna – know all of them to be(born) of Me alone. I am not dependent on them, but they are dependent on Me.

Until now, Lord Krishna talked about the external world, which is a product of the Lord, and therefore which is a manifestation of the Lord. Now Krishna points out not only the external world, even the internal world of thoughts is a product of the Lord alone. Therefore he says: भावाः bhāvāḥ; bhāvāḥ means antakaraṇa pariṇāmāḥ; the inner world of thoughts; inner world of vṛttihi; are called here bhāvāḥ; citta pariṇāmāḥ; and these thoughts are also a product of Īśvara only and according to the scriptures, even thoughts are inert by themselves; but they appear to be sentient; because of the pervasion of parā prakṛti.

And therefore in the mind there are two parts; one part is the changing thought; and the other part is the changeless consciousness; the consciousness part belongs to parā prakṛti; the changing thoughts belongs to the aparā prakṛti. But the problem is the thought and consciousness are so intimately intertwined that we are not able to discriminate them.

To remember our example, what is here; all of us will say; hand; then what else is there. In the hand, nails are there; what else is there; fingers are there; what else is there; lines are there; what else is there; bacteria or dust; that is there. In fact, we will enumerate everything missing one thing. What is that; the light which is not part of the hand; but which is a distinct entity; the light and hand are intimately mixed together. Of these two principles, the hand is the moving part, the light is the movement-less part.

Similarly the scriptures point out, within our mind also, there are two things; one is the changing thought, which is changing every moment. In fact, right from the first word that I uttered, your mind has been changing. In fact your mind has to entertain thoughts in keeping with the movement of my words. Every word I utter should generate what; it has to enter through your ears and you should know the meaning and in accordance with the meaning, a thought will come. And how are my words moving; fast; and what about your thoughts; suppose your thought is permanently stable; first word what I uttered; that only remains; imagine, imagine my plight; not your plight; imagine my plight.

In Pañcadaśī, Vidyāraṇya compares thoughts to a greatest, greatest dancer of the world; how the dancer violently (not violently) moves the hands and legs so fast; similarly the mind assumes thoughts after thoughts; the thoughts are varying but there is one thing which is not varying at all; what is that; I am conscious of your first sentence; conscious of your second sentence; conscious of your third sentence; conscious, conscious, conscious, no sentence; and even when the mind is blank without thoughts, I am conscious of what; the blankness of the mind.

Therefore what is continuously and changelessly present; the consciousness is present which is called parā prakṛti; because whatever does not change is parā prakṛti; and what is aparā prakṛti; whatever changes is aparā prakṛti and what is changing; Thoughts; and Krishna says Arjuna, every thought that rises in your mind is my own aparā prakṛti; and then we saw before that parā prakṛti is nirguṇam and aparā prakṛti is saguṇam; and this aparā prakṛti is supposed to have three guṇas; satva, rajas and tamas; satva standing for knowledge faculty; and rajas standing for dynamism or activity; and tamas standing for dullness or delusion. So knowledge, activity, and delusion, satva, rajas and tamas, are three guṇas belonging to aparā prakṛti; and now the thoughts which are products of aparā prakṛiti, they also will have three guṇas.

By applying the same law; what is the law; kāraṇa guṇāḥ kārye anuvartatē; and since aparā prakṛti has got three guṇas; every product of aparā prakṛiti has three guṇas; the entire material universe has got three guṇas; the body has three guṇas; the mind even the thoughts can be categorised into satvika bhāvāḥ; sātāvika vrittayaḥ; standing for thoughts of knowledge; satvik or noble thoughts also. We can say more about the three guṇas, we will be studying in the fourteen chapter. Here

Krishna indicates only three guṇas; since we will be seeing the details later. I am not going to the details. Sātvikaḥ here means noble thoughts; rājasāḥ bhāvāḥ; rājasāḥ means intermediary thoughts; rājasic thoughts; or dynamic thoughts you can take, and then tāmasāḥ bhāvāḥ; thoughts of delusion; mōha vṛittayaḥ. Śankarācārya generally comments as sukha, duḥkha, mōha vṛittayaḥ.

In short, varieties of thoughts occur in the mind; and all of them arise from where. Krishna says मत्त एवेति तान्विद्धि matta ēvēti tān viddhi; all those mental states are also born out of Me alone, which part of Me; the aparā prakṛti part of Me alone.

And here Sankaracharya makes a small note; because this line can be misunderstood; and misinterpreted also; and Śankarācārya's job is: wherever people can misinterpret; there add a note.

Now here Krishna has said all forms of thoughts are born of Me alone, which means I am responsible all forms of your thoughts; now very convenient and wonderful. So when we get violent anger; or when we get jealousy, when we get destructive thoughts and cause problems; and when other people come and complain and ask me to be responsible, I can easily answer, do not blame me at all; because Bhagavān has said in the Gītā that He is responsible for all the thoughts.

So therefore if you want to criticise; criticise; I am innocent; such a misinterpretation is possible; so that we can continue to be irresponsible; by putting all the akṣathai on the Lord, we can be irresponsible.

Therefore Śankarācārya says Bhagavān is only samānya kāraṇam for the rise of thoughts; is the only the general cause for the origination of the thoughts; whereas you and your buddhi and your freewill is the viśēṣa kāraṇam; the specific cause for the type of thoughts. Therefore Bhagavān is samānya kāraṇam; you are the viśēṣa kāraṇam.

And what is the difference between samānya and viśēṣa. I will give you an example. What is the general cause of this hall; it is a product; this particular hall or auditorium. We can say brick and cement is the samānya kāraṇam for the hall to come here; because without brick and cement; this hall cannot come. Therefore brick and cement are called what; samānya kāraṇam. In fact, it is the cause not only for this hall, but all the halls, in fact all the houses also. But even though brick and cement is the cause for all the halls, what particular shape this house should have; what should be the pattern of the house, whether it should be rectangular; whether it is square etc. that is not determined by the brick and cement; I have to decide what should be the pattern of the house and therefore my desire becomes my plan becomes viśēṣa kāraṇam and that is why, from owner to owner, the pattern is the house differs, not because brick and cement differ; because that is the samānya karanam for all; the houses differ why; the viśēṣa kāraṇam is different.

Or to give you another example; any number of example; petrol is the samānya kāraṇam for the movement of the car; the fuel; fuel is the samānya kāraṇam for the movement of the car; but whether the car should move on the road, or on the pavements, or anywhere else, the direction of the car is not determined by the petrol; it is determined by the particular driver. Therefore petrol becomes samānya kāraṇam; driver becomes viśēṣa kāraṇam. Similarly for our thoughts also; God becomes the samānya kāraṇam; and our discrimination becomes the viśēṣa kāraṇam.

Here Krishna is referring to the samānya kāraṇam; you should not mix up with viśēṣa kāraṇam. Therefore matta; samānya kāraṇāt ēva sarvam iti viddhi. And then Krishna concludes न तु अहं तेषु na tu aham tēṣu; the mayi; this entire creation, being a product born out of Me. It is dependent on Me, the cause; because the law is any effect depends upon the cause for its existence; कारणम् विना कार्यम् न तिष्ठति kāraṇam vinā kāryam na tiṣṭati; Try to remove gold and have ornaments; not possible; try to remove wood and have furniture; not possible. Because the existence of the effect always depends upon the cause and therefore the effect depends upon the cause whereas the cause does not depend upon the effect, because even if the whole world is destroyed; the cause Īśvara will continue to exist.

And therefore Krishna says Arjuna I do not depend on the world; but the world depends on me. I do not depend on the world; that is why during pralayam; even when the whole world is resolved, I continue to exist. And therefore he says tēṣu; tēṣu means कार्य पदार्थेषु अहम् न आश्रितो भवामि; न आश्रयामि; kārya padārthēṣu aham na āśritō bhavāmi; na āśrayāmi; I do not depend upon the products, the world, whereas they, the worldly products or the entire world is मयि आश्रिताः वर्थन्ते mayi āśritāḥ varthantē; they depend upon me. And since the Lord has independent existence, the Lord is called satyam; and since the world has got dependent existence; the world is called mithya; therefore I am Satyam; the world is mithya;

Continuing;

13. Deluded by these states (of mind) which are affected by the three guṇas, this whole world does not know Me who am beyond these (and) who am changeless.

With the previous verse Krishna concludes the topic of Īśvara svarūpam, the nature of God; and what are the main points mentioned here:

1. God is a mixture of parā aparā prakṛti; that is cētana-acētana tatvam is No.1;
2. The second feature is God alone is the sṛṣṭi-sthithi laya kāraṇam of the world, is the creator, the preserver and the destroyer; sṛṣṭi-sthithi laya kāraṇam is the second important feature;
3. And the third important feature is God being the cause, He alone manifests as the entire world and therefore world is the manifestation of God; the world is divine; This is what I call Viśvarūpaḥ Īśvaraḥ; this is the third important feature
4. And fourth and final thing is since God is the cause and the world is the effect; God has independent existence; therefore satyam; the world has dependent existence; therefore mithya;

tat ananyatvam arambhanam sabdadhibhyaha.

Vyasācārya writes a very important portion of Brahmasūtra based on this idea; it is called आरम्भाधिकरणं ārambhādhikaraṇam; in Brahma sutra tad ananyatvam.

So with this Īśvara śvarūpam topic is over.

Now in the following verses, that is the 13th verse Krishna wants to point out why the human beings suffer in the world; when everything is God; why should there be suffering in the world; why do people get frustrated; samsāra kāraṇam kim; is the question and Krishna gives the answer in the 13th verse.

First I will give you the essence of this verse; very important verse; we say very important because this gives the diagnosis all our mental problems and diagnosis is very important, if the treatment should be successful; without diagnosis you cannot go on trying; all the medicines possible; all the system, allopathic, all the medicines in the shop, whatever medicine is there I will take; ஒரே டோஸ்; உடனே கோள்ஸ்; one dose, immediately close; that is the only thing; you cannot afford to take any treatment without diagnosis. And in fact even though this is the fundamental principle of all-treatments, in fact the greatest wonder is we have been doing exactly that only. We have never really analysed why sorrow comes in life; we never analyse, we are not interested in analysis also; and without analysing, we keep on trying this solution; I thought education will give me happiness; thereafterwards I thought getting a job will give me happiness; and after job, parents say you should get settled; settled means unsettled; settled means get married. So then after marriage I thought I will be happy, then I discover it is worse sometimes; Ok; not always, then I thought that children will make everything right; children are born; then I thought their education and their marriage will settle the problem; They are settled and it goes on and on; till now we do not know why we mental problems; depression; anxiety; fear; sorrow, irritation, anger, jealousy; because we are treating the disease called bhava rōga without diagnosis.

And what is the diagnosis; Krishna gives in this verse. What is that, I briefly tell; that Krishna has pointed out that the whole universe is a mixture of two things; parā prakṛti of Īśvara and aparā prakṛti; and parā prakṛti happens to be, I hope you remember, cētana nirguṇa nirvikāra tatvam; We said parā prakṛti is the consciousness principle which is without any property; without any change; changeless, formless, property-less, consciousness is parā prakṛti. And what is aparā prakṛti; acēтана, saḡuṇa, savikāra tatvam is aparā prakṛti; changing properties or attributed matter principle is aparā prakṛti.

Now since aparā prakṛti has all the properties, it is very much perceptible for our sense organs; properties means what sound, form; smell; taste, touch, all these properties are there.

Therefore aparā prakṛti is visible to our sense organs; whereas parā prakṛti being without śabda, sparśa, rūpa; if you remember Kathōpaniṣad: aśabda; asparśa, arasa, agandam; parā prakṛti is invisible formless principle. So one is invisible and the other is visible; and when there is a mixture of visible and invisible principles, we are always attracted to what, the visible changing aparā prakṛti alone.

And therefore Krishna says we are distracted by aparā prakṛti to such an extent that we lose sight of parā prakṛti, the higher nature; exactly like my example, you are so much carried away by the hand and its motion, that you will always be distracted away from what; the very light principle. And that is why you take it lightly. Never say that in a movie, the screen is the motionless substratum; but once the movie is on, you are so much observed in the changing characters; that you lose sight of what; the changeless screen and once you miss the parā prakṛti; Krishna says, you are in trouble. And therefore, our problem is losing sight of parā prakṛti; parā prakṛti ajñanam ēva samsārasya kāraṇam; this is what Krishna is going to say in this verse; which we will see in the next class.

Om

With the 12th verse of the 7th chapter, Lord Krishna completed the description of Īśvara svarūpam, the nature of God; which topic He started from the 4th verse. And in this portion, He has pointed out that the entire creation is the manifestation of the Lord, consisting of the changeless spirit principle, and changing matter principle; spirit meaning consciousness and this matter principle, He called aparā prakṛti, the inferior nature, and the consciousness principle, the higher superior nature. Wherever we experience change and properties, we can blindly say it is aparā prakṛti of the Lord and with this norm, when we study the creation, the whole external world, our own physical body, our own mind, even the thoughts and feelings, they all come under the changing aparā prakṛti; the formless changeless witness consciousness alone comes under parā prakṛti.

Having given this much description, now Krishna enters into the crucial subject matter, when everything is God; and divine; why should the human being suffer samsāra. We are not talking about a particular human problem; but we are talking about the general human problem of samsāra; because of which one feels incomplete, one feels insecure, one feels the need for a support; this sense of incompleteness, ஏதோ குறை; something lacking, without being specific; some kind of discomfort or uneasiness; and also insecurity, incompleteness and insecurity. This is the universal problem. Different people try to solve this problem in different ways by acquiring things, by increasing relationship, by extending the family; by having more position, name, fame, etc. We try to get out of this problem, but the truth is nothing really seems to work. And this problem; fundamental problem is called samsāra. Krishna is diagnosing the disease called samsāra and suggesting a remedy and therefore these two verses are important; the thirteenth verse is the diagnosis. And the 14th verse is the tablet; or injection; whatever you call; what is the problem I was trying to explain in the last class. The problem is this. The superior nature of the Lord happens to be formless, colorless, changeless principle, and therefore generally we miss the parā prakṛti, the higher nature; because all our organs are meant to perceive and register the changing object with properties. And therefore the problem is parā prakṛti is not available for our perception. That is why it is called अप्रमेय apramēya; स्वप्रकाशः svaprakāṣh is not necessary now; apramēya; apramēya means not available for seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting, touching, Why? Parā prakṛti does not have śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa, gandha, etc. how can you perceive a nirguṇa object; and not only we do not perceive or recognise the parā prakṛti, we do not even attempt to know the parā prakṛti; because we are kept busy always by this wonderful tempting beautiful attractive aparā prakṛti.

And that is why Krishna is going to later call aparā prakṛti as Mohini; just as in the purāṇic story, how Mōhini came and all the asuras were attracted by Mohini; I do not want to tell the story, because you all know it; and because they were attracted by the Mohini; what did the asurās lose, amṛutham; amṛutham symbolises what; the knowledge of parā prakṛti; and mōkṣa, both we miss, why because the wonderful Mohini called aparā prakṛti keeps us busy all the time. I am always pre-occupied with this changing universe, of sound and colour and form and smell and taste. If I am not pre-occupied with the universe, I am preoccupied with the body, (decorating about it); therefore bothered about the body so much; books and books are written; how to maintain the hair; we are bothered more about what is outside the head rather than inside the head. So therefore hair-care and skin care and nail care and this care and that care, the body keeps us eternally busy; otherwise the thoughts in the mind, the emotions, the feelings which also belongs to aparā prakṛti. Thus the world and the body and the mind are so wonderfully attractive, that a person is carried away by them, and because of this pre-occupation, He is never interested in parā prakṛti; who wants it. Therefore Krishna tells in the 13th verse, trihi guṇamāyāihi bhavaihi idam sarvam jagat mohitham. So because of the aparā prakṛti endowed with trihi guṇamāyāihi, attracted either by satva guṇa or rajō guṇa or tamō guṇa; in the 14th chapter, we will see how each guṇa is responsible for our bondage; and because of this त्रिभिर्गुणमयैर्भावैः tribhirguṇamāyāirbhāvai; bhāva represents not only the external objects; according to Sankaracharya; bhāva represents emotions also because of that, इदं सर्वं जगत् idam sarvam jagat; 99.99%

of the world; except for rare ones; कश्चिद्दीरः प्रत्यगात्मानमैक्ष-दावृत्तचक्षुरमृतत्वमिच्छन्
kaściddhīraḥ pratyagātmānamaikṣa-dāvṛttacakṣuramṛtatvamicchan; पराञ्चि खानि व्यतृणत् स्वयम्भू parāñci khāni vyatṛṇat svayambhū. We saw in Kathōpaniṣad recently only.
And therefore sarvaṃ jagat here means all the people of the world. The world jagat means the humanity. If the animals are carried away, we cannot complain, because they are not meant to come to parā prakṛti; you do not expect a cow to study vēdānta; only a human beings have the faculty to study, but they do not the time or the inner leisure to think in those lines:

बालस्तावत्क्रीडासक्तः

तरुणस्तावत्तरुणीसक्तः |

वृद्धस्तावच्चिन्तासक्तः

परमे ब्रह्मणि कोऽपि न सक्तः

bālastāvatkṛīḍāsaktaḥ

taruṇastāvattaruṇīsaktaḥ |

vṛddhastāvaccintāsaktaḥ

paramē brahmaṇi kō:'pi na saktaḥ

And therefore मोहितं mōhitam; deluded and therefore what happens माम् एभ्यः परम् अव्ययम् न अभिजानाति mām ebhyaḥ param avyayam na abhijānāti; they do not come to know; they do not even attempt to know, mām, Me, means, which means, the higher Me, the superior Me, avyayaḥ parām; the guṇabhyaha parām; nirguṇam;
so nirguṇam mām parā prakṛti rūpam mām, caitanya rūpam mām and avyayam, which is never subject to change, which is śāśvatham; this people do not know.

Now the question is what is the harm if I do not know the parā prakṛti; what is the harm. In fact I find aparā prakṛti is wonderful and it is capable of providing everything to me; or for me; so if I can manage my life with the help of aparā prakṛti itself; why at all should I waste my precious time in the pursuit of parā prakṛti.

For that śāstrā answers, you should know that aparā prakṛti cannot give some of our basic needs of life; aparā prakṛti can never give some of the fundamental needs of our life, the first thing that we need is pūrṇatvam: fulfilment, completeness we expect; we have an yearning for that and that pūrṇatvam, aparā prakṛti cannot give because, everything within aparā prakṛti is finite in nature; because it is bound by time and space.

And if pūrṇatvam is there, śānti will not come; fulfilment in life will never come; fulfilment and peace go with pūrṇatvam; and śāstrā points out that parā prakṛti alone has got pūrṇatvam; anything within aparā prakṛti happens to be finite; and therefore there will be constant sense of apūrṇatvam, as long as you hold on to aparā prakṛti only; so śānti if you need, nimmathi if you need, நிம்மதி உங்கள் சோய்ஸ் nimmathi ungal choice; so if you want nimmathi, pūrṇatvam, fulfilment, you have to necessarily go to parā prakṛti alone; that is No.1.

The second thing is everything that obtains in aparā prakṛti is in constant flux. It is subject to time and therefore nothing is śāśvatham in aparā prakṛti; nothing is śāśvatham in aparā prakṛti; and since śāśvatham means permanent, nothing is permanent in aparā prakṛti.

And therefore if you hold on to anything in aparā prakṛti; after sometime it will give way; it will end; it will disappear; and since everything within aparā prakṛti will end, it can never give you security; nothing in aparā prakṛti can give security because, whatever you hold on to is attacked by time, as Śankarā said in Bhaja Govindam;

मा कुरु धन जन यौवन गर्व
हरति निमेषात्कालः सर्वम् |
मायामयमिदमखिलं हित्वा
ब्रह्मपदं त्वं प्रविश विदित्वा ||११||
mā kuru dhana jana yauvana garvaṁ harati nimēṣātkālah sarvam | māyāmāyāmidamakhilam hitvā brahmapadam tvaṁ praviśa veditvā ||11||

just because you have money; just because you have people around, just because you occupy a higher post now; do not have garvaṁ; because harati nimēṣātkālah sarvam; and therefore one thing, a human being wants is something changeless, as an anchor in his life; we want something permanent to hold on to; holding on to something permanent, we can play with the impermanent. If you want to take a dip in a gushing river ganga; in Haridwar you want to take a dip, in fact, it is very enjoyable and interesting; because in a flowing river alone; you will have that freshness; and it is a whole water and it will refresh you; but if you want to dip in that river and enjoy; nothing wrong in enjoying, the first thing you should look for is what; something to hold on to and that is why on the shore, they have kept the chain; iron chain; and holding on iron chain, you can go on dipping, playing and enjoying, do whatever you want; but one thing hold on to chain. And why you are boldly holding on to; because of the faith that, in fact one of the students, long before I took the students to Badrinath and that person there also there was facility for bath and chain; and he just took the chain and the chain gave way; but thank God there was lot of rocks, and he was held there and he was pulled; so in a flowing river, you require a non-flowing chain; if you want hundreds of changing relationship, at least you require one changeless relationship. So that all the other relationships continue or not, you hope at least you can hold on to one relationship. Therefore human mind requires something permanent; and the unfortunate thing is we try to stick to something belonging to aparā prakṛti; and expect that to be permanent and the tragedy strikes at the most unexpected moment. What we thought is permanent, gives away and suddenly we feel the ground underneath is disappearing; imagine, that is what happens in mountaineering; all have got tents; and it would have been fixed properly; deeply driven; tied the rope, everything is fine; but what happens, the whole chunk, that area, that itself will break and fall; what will you do.

So therefore we require something śāśvatham to hold on to; and that śāśvatha vasthu is called Bhagavān; especially the higher aspect, the parā prakṛti; and if we have got that chain called the Lord, then the worldly life is enjoyable, you can repeatedly take a dip; and you are not going to expect anything permanent because you know in aparā prakṛti nothing can be expected. But let anything go away; I know, I have got that chain called God;

And Krishna says this is the one unintelligent people miss and therefore terribly suffer; and therefore he says mōhitam deluded they expect śāśvatham from aśāśvatham. So this is the trouble with humanity; therefore what is the solution; do not hold on to aparā prakṛti; hold on to parā prakṛti; you need not renounce aparā prakṛti. Use aparā prakṛti is playing around; use parā prakṛti for security; in chain you cannot dip. Only chains are there, no water; mere parā prakṛti will be boring; therefore there should be the river; but there should be the chain also; the flowing river should have a chain. Similarly aparā prakṛti is the river, parā prakṛti is the chain, hold on to that; and play with aparā prakṛti; it cannot never threaten you; because it is not unexpected. So the solution he is going to give in the next ślōkā; we will see, 14th.

दैवी ह्येषा गुणमयी मम माया दुरत्यया ।

मामेव ये प्रपद्यन्ते मायामेतां तरन्ति ते ॥ ७.१४ ॥

daivī hyēṣā guṇamayī mama māyā duratyayā |

māmēva yē prapadyantē māyāmētāṃ taranti tē || 7.14 ||

एषा दैवि माया eṣā daivi māyā This divine māyā, मम mama of mine गुणमयि guṇamayī which consists of (three) guṇas हि दुरत्यया hi duratyayā is indeed difficult to cross over एव ते ēva tē only those people ये प्रपद्यन्ते yē prapadyante who surrender माम् mām to Me, तरन्ति taranti cross over एतां मायाम् etāṃ māyām this Māyā

14. This divine māyā of mine which consists of (three) guṇas is indeed difficult to cross over. Only those people who surrender to Me cross over this māyā.

So in this context only I remember an experience I had during that Badri-Kedar trip only. You have to cross many mountains; they would have cut a path; bridle path; And sometimes you see a mountain; the path will go around, but you see that it is a small hill; instead of going the round about way, just cross over and climb over, and you have saved a lot of distance; but the most dangerous thing is, the hills appear very small but if you try to climb only it is very really big; and I was going in front; and I thought that before the other people come I will just go like that; and I just climbed a little bit; and found that it is going on and on and suddenly I slipped; and when I slipped I started coming down because it was a slope and naturally tried to get a hold and therefore I just put my one leg there and there I found lot of dry leaves had fallen; and therefore you keep the leg there; that leg goes; and therefore what do you do, you try to keep the other leg; that also goes; because the whole area is dry leaves; that when both legs go forward, what do you do; fall down and you hope that you will have a hold with the hand; and you keep the hand down and there also the dry leaves and then you have got only four limbs; two legs and two hands; and you keep the other hand, there also dry leaf; and now I find myself on all the fours and having a beautiful skating; or whatever it is; and I am seeing I am coming down helplessly; because if you want to stop, you want something to hold and thank God, after a distance I found one tree half broken and the stump of the tree was there; and it was deep rooted; and till that, maybe a few feet or 10 feet, I was slipping; I just came down; Now I am laughing; so down below I see a Pahadi the mountain tribal was shouting; why are climbing such a trees; it is dangerous; I know I should not but what will I do now. Therefore what saved me was something which is motionless. In fact, this is samsāra; wherever you hold to is to is dry leaves; we think that it is a śāśvatham; the only support, remember, Krishna says, is Me alone. So before tragedy strikes better hold on to Me, that is the solution He gives here; एषा माया eṣā māyā; this aparā prakṛti which is saḡuṇa savikāra, savikalpa aparā prakṛti is māyā; māyā is capable of deluding the human mind, tempting the human mind, taking the mind away from the Lord. People will think why should there be religion; why should there be God; we can manage everything by ourselves; this arrogance comes because things are going nicely now; and therefore it is māyā; māyā means mōhini; it deludes; how, turning the mind away from parā prakṛti to aparā prakṛti and दुस्त्यया duratyayā; and it is so powerful a deluding principle that we can never transcend that by our own intellect; it is superhuman; it cannot be ordinarily crossed over; because we do not even know that we are deluded; and therefore duratyayā means it cannot be easily conquered; and why because guṇamayi; because it has got three guṇas to trap, either tamōguṇa will trap; or rajō guṇa or satva guṇa, in trap or the other, everybody will get caught; so how these guṇas trap a person, I am not going to the details, because in the 14th chapter it will come. If I tell here itself, you would not come for the 14th chapter; so therefore I will keep it secret.

Therefore गुणमयि guṇamayi; and where is that aparā prakṛti located; दैवि daivi, it belongs to me, the parā prakṛti; the only one upon which the aparā prakṛti is dependent is parā prakṛti; so it belongs to me; the higher lot.

And what is the solution; Krishna says the only solution is ये माम् प्रपद्यन्ते ye mām prapadyantē; those people who surrender to me; who take shelter in me humbly, without being arrogant, I do not require God or religion; without saying that humbly understand samsāra; we cannot cross independently we require Īśvara kripa, and that Īśvara alone will give guru; relay race; Īśvara will get you to guru; guru will give you the śāstrām; do not hold on to me but the śāstrām; the teaching; so from teacher to the teaching and the śāstrā will handover you to yourselves; you will discover that security, ultimately in yourselves; but to start with you have to depend upon God alone.

And therefore mām ēva tē prapadyantē; those who surrender to me; those who practice bhakthi; they एतां मायाम् तरन्ति etāṃ māyām taranti; so they alone will cross over this māyā; bhaktas alone will cross over this māyā.

So therefore what is the solution; bhakthi is the solution; which Krishna calls here prāpathiḥ; otherwise saraṇagati; all these words are synonymous; bhakthi; prapathi; or saraṇāgatiḥ.

Then naturally the next question will be: what exactly is bhakthi; and this Krishna himself will clarify later; there we will see the details;

Bhakthi has to go through three stages, Krishna will point out:

1. In the initial level of bhakthi; I use the Lord as a means for worldly ends; for arta; kāma, dharma, etc. this is the lowest form of bhakthi called मन्द manda bhakthi; where God is the means, worldly things are the end.

2. Then gradually that bhakthi has to evolve and become more and more mature; and manda bhakthi should give way of madhyama bhakthi; in which the Lord is no more a means for worldly end; but God is the end in itself; because I have discovered the limitations of all other things; that is when a person goes from world dependence to God dependence; because I know that nothing in the world is dependable; when I discover that; God becomes the goal of my life; which is called madhyama bhakthi.

3. And then comes the final level of bhakthi; uttama bhakthi; where God is neither the means nor the end; the God is I myself; because means is also different from me, end is also different from me, God is neither the means nor the end. Ultimately ईश्वर सर्वभूतानाम् हृद्देशे अर्जुन तिष्ठति Īśvara sarvabhūtānām hr̥ddeśē arjuna tiṣṭati; the real Lord that you are seeking is never away from you. That is I myself; these are the three levels of bhakthi; which one has to go through and only when a person comes to uttama bhakthi, one will get liberation or total freedom. So we have to start with manda bhakthi; graduate to madhyama bhakthi and culminate in uttama bhakthi; in uttama bhakthi; one gets liberation. It is that bhakthi that is pointed out here.

Continuing.

न मां दुष्कृतिनो मूढाः प्रपद्यन्ते नराधमाः ।

माययापहतज्ञाना आसुरं भावमाश्रिताः ॥ ७.१५ ॥

na māṃ duṣkṛtinō mūḍhāḥ prapadyantē narādhamāḥ |

māyayā'pahṛtajñānā āsuram bhāvamāśritāḥ || 7.15 ||

दुष्कृतिनः duṣkṛtinaḥ the vicious नराधमाः narādhamāḥ mean people अपहतज्ञानाः apahṛtajñānāḥ who are deprived of their discrimination मायया māyayā by māyā मूढाः mūḍhāḥ who are deluded, आश्रिताः āśritāḥ (and) who have taken आसुरं भावम् āsuram bhāvam to demonic nature न प्रपद्यन्ते na prapadyante do not surrender माम् mām to Me

15. The vicious mean people who are deprived of their discrimination by Māyā, who are deluded, (and) who have taken to demonic nature do not surrender to Me.

So here points out that the many people do not take recourse to the bhakthi sādhanā because they do not have the puṇyam. Even to come to bhakthi, they require a purva janma puṇyam; कथं अकृत पुण्यः प्रभवति katham akṛta puṇyaḥ prabhavati; in Soundaraya Lahari Śankarācārya says akṛta puṇyaḥ katham prabhavati; if puṇyam is not there; first thing he will not be born in a culture which talks about mōkṣa; he will be born in a materialistic culture; where the whole life is arta kāma pradhā; therefore I should have sufficient puṇyam to be born first to be born as a human being and that also in a culture which talks about four puruṣārthās; most of the culture talk about only two, arta and kāma; and thereafter above that to speak of dharma and then mōkṣa and not only that I should get interested in that; मनुष्यत्वं मुमुक्षुत्वं महापुरुषसंश्रयः manuṣyatvaṁ mumukṣutvaṁ mahāpuruṣasamśrayaḥ; all these things I require puṇyam; Krishna says many people do not have that puṇyam to come to this. Therefore Krishna says दुष्कृतिनः duṣkṛtinaḥ; there are many who do not have the puṇyam; they have sufficient puṇyam to be born as a human being but not sufficient puṇyam to come to Bhagavān or the śāstrā. Therefore duṣkṛtinaḥ means pāpinaḥ; pāpavantaḥ; and because of that, what do do they do; मायया अपहतज्ञानाः māyayā apahṛtajñānāḥ; they are deluded by the māyā, which keeps them busy in the pursuit of artha and kāma; money and entertainment; or else how do you account for so many channels in the TV. And 24 hours movie; movie channel alone this channel alone; that channel alone, we can all the time spend in front of TV; entertainment; then office; either earn or entertain yourselves. This is the trick of māyā; māyā keeps you busy, and it will never allow you to come near any mahātma; anywhere a śāstrā; satsaṅga, or lectures like this, there will be no interest; why, it is the glory of the māyā; māyayā apahr̥tajñānāḥ; discrimination; their discriminating power is robbed away by māyā means aparā prakṛti. If they had discrimination, a little bit discrimination, they can easily discern that all these things are perishable; because he has seen many people losing money and everything; having position and losing everything; having people and being deserted by them; constantly he is seeing impermanence; but he does not apply that in the case of his life; why, that is the job of the māyā. It will all come for them and not for me. Until he gets some bitter experience, he never turns his mind; that is the job of māyā; māyayā apahr̥tajñānāḥ.

And therefore only मूढः mūḍhāḥ; utterly deluded; delusion is taking the impermanent to be permanent; अनित्यम् नित्यत्वेन भावयति अतस्मिन् तत् बुद्धि अद्यासः anityam nityatvēna bhāvayati atasmin tat buddhi adyāsaḥ. This is called शोभन अद्यासः śobhana adyāsaḥ in śāstrā; śobhana adyāsaḥ means what; superimposition of the wrong things on the object. Therefore mūḍhāḥ. Knowing that we will be deluded; Bhagavān has given gurus and śāstrās. He knows we will be caught; therefore Bhagavān has KEPT Gurus and śāstrās; in the creation in the world; sahayajñāḥ prajāḥ sṛṣṭvā purōvāca prajāpatiḥ; like a manual coming along with the gadget; what to do and what not to do; do's and don'ts with regard to various instruments. We have got Gas in the house; how to carefully handle; otherwise it is dangerous; Similarly gurus and śāstrās are there; but this person will be arrogant; अविद्यायाम् अन्तरे वर्तमानाः स्वयम् दीराः पण्डितम् मन्यमानाः avidyāyām antarē vartamānāḥ; Mundakopanishad describes this brihaspathis; avidyāyām antarē vartamānāḥ svayam dīrāḥ paṇḍitam manyamānāḥ; they do not know anything; but they think they know everything; so why should I approach anyone; why should I study the scriptures; therefore they do not take the help available for them; help in the form of gurus and śāstrās.

And therefore they become नराधमाः narādhamāḥ; nara ādhamāḥ means the meanest people, the lowliest among the human being; and why they are nara ādhamāḥ; this human life can purchase or accomplish the highest goal of mōkṣa; but they miss that highest goal and use that precious human life for accomplishing ordinary thing; like using the sandalwood as fuel; sandalwood as fuel; so wonderful; Similarly, this wonderful human life, which can highest, they use for getting the lowest of thing; Therefore they are narādhamāḥ; indiscriminate people;

And not only that; Krishna says; आसुरं भावम् आश्रिताः āsuram bhāvam āśritāḥ; they get into problems for themselves as well as others; because when I use my life for procuring arta and kāma, I will find that any amount I get, I will not be satisfied; na vithēna tarpaṇiyaḥ manuṣyaḥ; we saw in Kathopanishad; any amount we get we will not get satisfied; and therefore there is always an ambition, desire for more; and a time will come when we cannot fulfil our desires by legitimate earning; because our earning increases in a particular proportion; it is increases or decreases; let us assume; that there is a monthly or yearly increase; but the increase of desire is not proportional; therefore a time will come when we clearly know earning by right means and fulfilling our desires will not work; and once we begin to see that fact and the pressure of desire is so much, and therefore what we will do; some adjustment; some here and there; cutting corners; compromise; and initially it pricks because we have a conscious; and if we do a thing for sometime, that conscious becomes blunt and blunt and blunt; and we do not mind doing anything for the sake of money; otherwise see the match fixing; what do you need more; why should these cricketers fix the match; when their earning is so much; in fact, so much earning they have got; in fact for three generations or five generations and adored by the society; but thereafterwards never possible to recover also; life is gone; that South African captain imagine; life is totally gone; so much earning; in India I do not know what is the earning; they get; I think in India also they get a lot of money; advertisement money, etc. and this money and that money, but any amount, and then you begin to compromise and therefore once life becomes arta kāma pradhāna; adharma will start. And Krishna calls it āsūric svabhāva; āsuram bhāvam āśritāḥ; they will gradually compromise with dharma.

mahāśanō mahāpāpmā viddhyēnamiha vairiṇam || 3.37 ||

all these problems will come; and therefore they are the most unfortunate people; whereas there are some people who are puṇyavān; they are talked about in the next verse.

16. O! Arjuna, Four types of virtuous people surrender to Me – the distressed, the seeker of wealth, the seeker of knowledge, and the wise, Oh Arjuna.

Whereas there are some other people who have got some puṇyam; So hey Arjuna; जनाः सुकृतिनः janāḥ sukṛtinaḥ; as opposed to duṣkṛtinaḥ in the previous verse; duṣkṛti are abhakthas; sukṛtinaḥ are bhakthas; and these bhakthas can be classified into four types, चतुर्विधाः caturvidhāḥ; based on their motive, based on their purpose, we can classify all the devotees into four types, Hey Arjuna; caturvidhāḥ; And what are those four types,

1. आर्तः ārtaḥ; crisis bhakthas; Ok; crisis bhakthas means what; when there is a crisis, not for the Lord; when there is a crisis for them; suddenly devotion comes from nowhere. So Oh Lord somehow remove my stomach pain; somehow take me out of this mess; then if you do that; and immediately a contract; this is called contract bhakthi; business bhakthi; sakāma bhakthi; commercial bhakthi; this is how bhakthi starts. Krishna calls them ārtāḥ; a person in distress; in difficulty; and this starts from childhood itself; whenever we have a tough subject, examination, and we have not studied properly, or we have studied only certain chapters, we want the questions to come from only those chapters; because we have mugged up only those three lessons; and teachers also say that there will not be question from these chapters; So that is arta; examination arti it is called; those days, you find special namaskara; temple visit; all those things are there; and we have got so many examples in the purāṇās also,

आर्थत्राण परयाणा स भगवान् नारायणो मे गतिः;

वात्सल्यादाभयप्रधान समयात् अर्थर्ति निर्वापनात्

आधूरात् अखशोषणात् अगणित श्रेयपदा प्रपन्नात्

सेव्य श्रिपतिरेक एव जगताम् सन्ध्यात षठ साक्षीणाः

प्रह्लादश्च विभीषणश्च करिरात् पाञ्चालि अहल्यात् द्रुवः ārthatrāṇa parayāṇā sa bhagavān nārāyaṇo mē gatiḥ; vātsalyādābhayapradhāna samayāt artharti nirvāpanāt ādūrāt akhaśoṣaṇāt aḡaṇita śrēyapadā prapannāt sevya śripatirēka ēva jagatām sandhyāta ṣaṭha sākṣiṇāḥ prahlādaśca vibhīṣaṇaśca karirāt pāñcāli ahalyāt druvaḥ

There are six examples in our śāstrās to show that the Lord will rescue a person when he is in distress; if that person surrenders to the Lord. Therefore Lord has a special title, ārthatrāṇa parāyana nārāyanaḥ; so crisis-management Lord; And who are the examples, Vibhīṣaṇa; Prahlāda; Druvaḥ; Pāñcāli; Ahalyā, all these examples are there; he is bhaktha No.1;

2. the second one अर्थार्थी arthārthī; I am the changing the order for convenience; arthārthī; this person is not crisis-bhaktha; he does not want a crisis for bhakthi; whenever he starts something, a business, or something or the other, and he wants to get profit or benefit, then he goes to the Lord; so the first one is duḥkha nivṛthiartam, the second one is sukha prapyartam; one is for removal of a problem; another is for getting something; either for getting or getting rid; so is called arthārthī; so when the business starts, he does special pooja and all; and there is a big photo of Lakshmi and all; Sarasvati will not come near; big Lakshmidēvi; and there is a special Lakṣmidēvi with a huge pot; pot full of gold coins; and then those are falling down; what happens if she is keeping it; therefore it is falling down; and then right underneath his table is there; so the gold coins; from the sākṣāt Lakshmi's hands falls on his table; This is another type of bhakthi; it is called arta-ārthī bhakthi; ārthī means desirer; arta means wealth; one who is desirous wealth; profit, position, etc. and both of them together we call mandha bhakthi; both these people have got bhakthi; which we call as mandha bhakthi or sakāma bhakthi; because this bhaktha is not interested in God; he is only using God for getting what he is interested in. So God is not an end for him; God is only a means; and you love the means more or end more; think of! You love the means more or end more; you love the end only more than the means; Why, because one the end is accomplished, means is often given up also. If there is an alternative means, we will give up this also; therefore God is a give-upable (I do not know whether such word is there), So God is a means;

3. then comes the third type of bhaktha; जिज्ञासुः jijñāsuḥ; the one who is interested in knowing more about God, and attaining the God himself; so jijñāsuḥ bhaktha is a person for whom God is the goal itself; not a means, therefore dearer; that is why we call it madhyama bhakthi; otherwise called nişkāma bhakthi. So he does not ask for this and that; he says Oh Lord I want you; nothing else; and for getting you I am ready to sacrifice everything else also; this is the jijñāsuḥ.

4. and the fourth and final variety is our hero; ज्ञानी jñāni, jñāni means the bhakta who has discovered that the Lord is not away from him; who has accomplished the Lord; and he is uttama bhakthaḥ; the highest bhakthaḥ; for whom God is neither sādānam; nor sādhyam; sādānam means the means sādhyam means the end. For him He is siddhaḥ; which means it is already accomplished; siddhaḥ means I myself.

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

अस्मद् आचार्य पर्यन्ताम् वन्दे गुरु परम्पराम्

Om

After dealing with Īśvara svarūpam consisting of parā and aparā prakṛti, in the initial part of this chapter, Krishna pointed out the cause of samsāra or human problems in the 13th verse and the cause that He pointed out is misplaced searching on the part of the human being. Seeking security from the insecure objects of the world; seeking permanence from the impermanent objects of the world; seeking fulfilment from the finite objects of the world; seeking happiness from the sorrowful or sorrow-giving objects of the world; this misplaced seeking is the cause of misery. And since our expectations are wrong-expectations and therefore they are never fulfilled in life; therefore leading to depression and sorrow; and once I have diagnosed this problem, then I will go in the right direction. Aparā prakṛti cannot give security and fulfilment and permanence; parā prakṛti alone can give security and permanence.

Having discussed the samsāra kāraṇam in the 13th verse, Krishna started discussing the solution, from the 14th verse, which runs up to verse No. 19; 14 to 19 samsāra nivṛtti kāraṇam. So what is the remedy for the problem of samsāra; and this remedy Krishna calls Īśvara prāpṭhiḥ; Īśvara śaraṇāgathi, or Īśvara bhakṭhiḥ; devotion to Lord Krishna presents as the solution.

Naturally the next question will be what exactly is bhakṭhi and therefore he begins the topic of bhakṭhi; and starts elaborating on the topic and also dealing with various stages of bhakṭhi. First Krishna pointed out that many people do not turn to bhakṭhi because they do not have sufficient puṇyam for that; and therefore they remove nāsthikas, they do not believe in God; and therefore they turn away; but there are some blessed ones and because of their puṇyam, they turn towards God.

Even though they do not know what exactly is the nature of God; until we know the real nature of God, scriptures temporarily present various forms of God for our worship; just as in Mathematics until we find an answer to a problem, we say suppose it is X. X only represents the solution and keeping that X, you start working and at the end, you find out X is equal to so and so. Similarly, we have got personal Gods or formed Gods or iṣṭa dēvathā which are like the X of mathematics, until I know what exactly is God, I hold on to that Īśvara .

And then Krishna pointed out those people who surrender to the Lord or God in the form of this iṣṭa dēvathā can be classified into four types:

चतुर्विधा भजन्ते मां जनाः सुकृतिनोऽर्जुन ।

आर्तो जिज्ञासुरर्थार्थी ज्ञानी च भरतर्षभ ॥७- १६॥

caturvidhā bhajante mām janāḥ sukṛtino:'rjuna |

ārto jijñāsurararthārthī jñānī ca bharatarṣabha | | 7- 16 | |

in verse no.16, which we saw in the last class. These devotees can be classified into four; and what are those four varieties:

- ārtaḥ; is the first variety who uses the Lord only in crisis; in fact he requires a problem to be a devotee. As Kunti asked, Oh Lord give me continuous problem so that I will not forget; this is called ārtaḥ bhakthi; we can say duḥkha nivṛttyartham bhakthi; and generally people start with this devotion only; as I said, as children we have got bhakthi whenever some problem comes, the mother introduces and as I said especially before tougher examination; there is real bhakthi and there is nothing wrong and that is why many people consider religion is only for weaker people. There is a conception like that. Generally we go to the Lord when we have a crisis and we are not confident enough of solving that; we go to some temple or some Swami or somebody or the other; therefore this is the majority; you go to any temple; we all have got a petition; like the petitions; petitions are there; because we generally see artha bhakthi prevalent, many people think that bhakthi is only for weak people. because that is how it begins.

-and later, the artha bhakthi gets promoted to arthārthī bhakthi; not only for solving the problem, for my progress in life; for my material accomplishments also, I use the bhakthi; he is called arthārthī;

- and then the third type is jijñāsuḥ bhaktha, the one who considers that the Lord himself is the end; while āṛta and arthārthī uses the Lord as a means for worldly ends, jijñāsuḥ is the only one who considers the Lord not as means, but as an end in itself;

- and jñāni is one for whom God is neither a means, nor an end, but God is I myself, the traveller; wherein the seeker becomes identical with the sought.

Now here Krishna has presented these four as four types of people; or four types of bhakthas; we can read the very same verse from another angle also; not as four types of bhakthas; but four stages of bhakthi, in one and the same person. So instead of four different types of bhakthas, we can say, one and the same person, goes through these four stages of bhakthi.

-Initially I start my bhakthi as an āṛtaḥ and arthārthī; for duḥkha nivṛthi and sukha prāp̥thi; and as I said, Lord is the means and these material ends are the goals.

-Then once I use the Lord and bhakthi for material ends; after sometime, I become more mature; and the maturity is I understand that the worldly things cannot give me security, fulfilment and happiness; and once I have understood the limitations of the world; I continue to be a bhaktha; but I am no more sakāma bhaktha; but I become a niṣkāma bhaktha; where my goal becomes God; so this is my own evolution in the bhakthi ladder;

-and a jijñāsuḥ bhakta is one who is really informed to a great extent. For a jijñāsuḥ bhaktha, certain factors are very clear; the first thing is: for him one thing is very clear, God alone can give me security and happiness. This is doubtless for him; then the second factor that is very clear is God can be accomplished only in terms of jñānam; accomplishing God is not a physical event; it is not a travel in time; accomplishment of God is in terms of knowledge; because if God is all-pervading; I do not have to travel for reaching the all-pervading God; previously I thought God is a person, sitting in Vaikuntha or Kailāsa; but I have got sufficient knowledge that God is omnipresent; why should I travel to reach the omnipresent God; and therefore what I require is not a physical journey; but what I require is a discovery of the Lord who is here and now; and this discovery alone is called accomplishment; therefore Īśvara prāp̥thi is equal to Īśvara jñāna prāp̥thiḥ. Previously I said I want

God, now I say I want what knowledge of God; and that is why this person is called jijñāsuḥ; jijñāsuḥ means desirer of the knowledge of God.

And then he knows another important factor, jijñāsuḥ bhaktha is a very evolved bhaktha; so all these steps remember. So he knows I want God alone; then he knows I want God knowledge alone; then he also knows that Īśvara jñānam is possible only in a purified mind; and for Īśvara jñānam, I want purity of mind. Therefore I want God; for that purpose I want knowledge of God; for that purpose I want purity of mind; and therefore jijñāsuḥ bhaktha continues to be a religious person; but he uses religion for purity of mind; and this conversion is conversion of a religious person into a spiritually religious person.

What is the difference between a religious person and spiritual person; a doubt may come; because we have two types of religious people; materialistic religious people and spiritual religious people. ārtāḥ bhaktha and arthārthī bhaktha, these two people are religious alright, but they are materialistically religious, because they use religion for materialistic purpose, whereas jijñāsuḥ bhaktha is also a religious person; but he uses religion for what? Oh Lord, I should get purity of mind; every pooja he does; every namaskāra he does; every temple he visits; he utilises this for purity. Purity is meant for what; jñānam; jñānam is meant for what; attainment of God; attainment of God is meant for what; for getting pūrṇatvam and security. And therefore jijñāsuḥ bhaktha is a karma yōgi; karma yōgi means a spiritually religious person; jijñāsuḥ bhaktha is a karma yōgi, karma yōgi is a spiritually religious person; whereas karmi is one who is materially religious person.

And this jijñāsuḥ bhaktha is initially a karma yōgi; because he wants purity of mind; and this jijñāsuḥ bhaktha becomes later jñāna yōgi for getting jñānam; therefore karma yōgi is jijñāsuḥ bhaktha; jñāna yōgi is jijñāsuḥ bhaktha; he is a spiritually religious person; he wants only Īśvara jñānam and Īśvara prāp̥thi; this is the third stage; and therefore jijñāsuḥ bhaktha's travel is very long; karma yōga for purification, is not for a day or two but for months and years, he is a karma yōgi, jijñāsuḥ bhaktha, and after purification he has to go through jñāna yōga, jñāna yōga means what?; the study of scriptures, for what purpose, for gaining Īśvara jñānam; and that also is elaborate life; just jijñāsuḥ bhaktha has to travel a lot

And finally he gets converted into what: jñāni bhakthaḥ. Having successfully completed karma yōga and jñāna yōga; jijñāsuḥ bhaktha gets converted into jñāni bhaktha; he has discovered the Lord and what is the discovery of the Lord; the Lord is never away from me.

And therefore since the Lord is never away from me, dvaita bhakthi gets converted into advaita bhakthi. I am never away from the Lord; the Lord is never away from me. So thus ārtah, jijñāsuḥ; arthārthī, jñāni; these four can be understood as the four levels of bhakthi, which everyone has to go through.

And since everyone has to go through these four levels; we need not feel bad if we are ārtah bhaktha; because Krishna accepts that everyone has to go through these four levels. Why should feel bad if I am an ārtah bhaktha; people ask Swamiji I am a Gītā student. Can I go to the temple, and pray for removal of some diseases; nothing wrong; you can go to temple and you can also have a prayer; that if this disease goes away; I will do tulabharam; aṅgapradikṣinam; you need not feel any inferiority complex, you can happily be an ārtah bhaktha; but what Krishna wants is do not be a permanently a ārtah bhaktha; gradually. You can go to the school but what is wrong is sitting there itself.

That is what is the problem; entering ārtah bhakthi is not a problem; but permanently sticking to ārtah bhakthi is a problem and gradually become arthārthī bhaktha; gradually become jijñāsu bhaktha; gradually become jñāni bhaktha and our scriptures are so generous. You can take even many janmās for that. In this whole janmā you can be a ārtah bhaktha; nothing wrong; at least in the next janmā become arthārthī bhaktha; try to finish in four janmās. So therefore never feel bad to ask something to the Lord; happily ask, but your aim should be transcending one level to another.

Continuing.

तेषां ज्ञानी नित्ययुक्तः एकभक्तिर्विशिष्यते ।

प्रियो हि ज्ञानिनोऽत्यर्थम् अहं स च मम प्रियः ॥ ७.१७ ॥

tēṣāṃ jñānī nityayukta ekabhaktirviśiṣyatē |

priyō hi jñāninō'tyarthamaḥ sa ca mama priyaḥ || 7.17 ||

तेषाम् tēṣām among them, ज्ञानि jñāni the wise man नित्ययुक्तः nityayuktaḥ who is ever steadfast एकभक्तिः ekabhaktiḥ (and) who has undivided devotion

विशिष्यते viśiṣyate is superior हि hi for अहम् अत्यर्थं प्रियः aham atyartham priyaḥ I am very dear ज्ञानिनः jñāninaḥ to the wise man च सः प्रियः ca saḥ priyaḥ and he is very dear मम mama to Me

17. Among them the wise who is ever steadfast (and) who has undivided devotion is superior, for I am very dear to the wise man and he is very dear to Me.

So Krishna has talked about four types of bhaktha; or to put it in another languages, four levels of bhakthi. Once there are four types and four levels; naturally our mind will compare. The human intellect's job is what; comparison, anything you take you compare, this is human nature. Therefore the question will be among the four types of bhakthas, who is the greatest; or among the four levels of bhakthi; which is the highest.

And now Krishna says तेषां ज्ञानी विशिष्यते teṣāṃ jñāni viśiṣyate; among the four types of bhakthas or four levels of bhakthi, jñāni bhakthi or jñāni bhaktha is viśiṣyate; he alone excels all others; so this is a very important thing that we have to note because this ślōkā removes many misconceptions.

First misconception is what; people think that I can follow bhakthi yōga without coming to jñānam; this is the one of the biggest misconception; they say jñānam is the most difficult thing; jñāna yōga is the driest sādhanā and in Kaliyuga, jñāna yōga is not possible and therefore I will come comfortably follow bhakthi. Here Krishna removes that idea; if you have to follow bhakthi yōga you have to ultimately come to jñānam. So a bhakthi yōgi cannot escape from jñānam; a bhakthi yōgi cannot escape from jñānam; he has to come to jñānam; initially he can confine to karma yōga alright; but having attained the purity, he will have to come to jñānam. And coming to jñānam means what? what do you mean by coming to jñānam; people coming to jñānam means meditation; another misconception; coming to jñānam does not mean meditation; in meditation you can reproduce only what you already know; can go on repeating that you already know; how can you know something new through meditation; and therefore what is jñāna yōga, Krishna has already said in the fourth chapter.

upadēkṣyanti tē jñānaṃ jñāninaṣṭattvadarśinaḥ || 4.34 ||

jñāna yōga means: systematic study of scriptures under the guidance of a competent ācārya; coming to jñāna yōga means systematic study of scriptures; what types of scriptures? those scriptures which deal with the lower as well as higher nature of God. Not only the saṅuṅa Īśvara svarūpam; we should study that scripture which deals with the nirṅuṅa svarūpam also. So many people talk about Bhāḡavatham; in fact Bhāḡavatham is a wonderful scripture which deals with both Saṅuṅa Krishna and Nirṅuṅa Krishna but they filter the Nirṅuṅa portion. They will talk about ajamilopākyānam; jadabharathopākyānam; all the upākyānams are there; the story part is beautifully described and when there is the higher nature; quietly they skip; like the school teachers leaving certain portion, saying this will not come and if at all it comes, leave it using your choice and write the simple ones; you have got a choice, you can leave it out. No. you have to study both the saṅuṅa and nirṅuṅa aparā and parā and therefore coming to jñānam means systematic study of scriptures.

And also this removes another misconception that whoever is a jñāni, he cannot have bhakthi; this is the biggest misconception. If jñānam comes, bhakthi leaves; some people complain also; Swamiji after studying vēdānta, my bhakthi is going; if the bhakthi going, we are only studying vēdānta but not understanding; really if it is understood, bhakthi will never go away; In fact, Krishna asserts that jñāni alone is the greatest bhaktha; and therefore this is very important; तेषां tēṣām; among all forms of devotees; jñāni viśiṣyatē; vēdānta jñāni, advaita jñāni, parā prakṛti jñāni; nirṅuṅa Īśvara jñāni viśiṣyatē;

And why does he excel; the reason is given; नित्ययुक्तः nityayukta; because he is ever established in my nature; he is ever steadfast; because in dvaita bhakthi; God is subject to arrival and departure; he comes gives darśanam; blesses and goes away. Therefore my association with the Lord is subject to arrival and departure; whereas in this bhakthi; the Lord is never away from me; therefore I am also never away from God. Therefore he is nitya yukthaḥ; Īśvara niṣṭāḥ; and ēka bhakthiḥ; he is ēka bhakthaḥ means advaita bhakthaḥ; abēda bhakthiḥ, he has got.

So here also a beautiful aspect we have to remember. So about love, there is a discussion in Brihadāranyaka upaniṣad; Which one, a human being loves most; there is a discussion; which one a human being loves most; and then the Upaniṣad comes to the conclusion; there is only one thing everyone loves the most. And you know what is that one thing; you know what is that one thing; people will say that it is husband, wife, or the only child, or dear mother, or dear father; he will enumerate everything; the upaniṣad clearly says,

न वा अरे पत्युः कामाय पतिः प्रियो भवति, अरे पत्युर् कामाय पतिस् प्रियस् भवति आत्मनस्तु कामाय पतिः प्रियो भवति ।
। न वा अरे जायायै कामाय जाया प्रिया भवति, आत्मनस्तु कामाय जाया प्रिया भवति । na vā arē patyuh kāmāya patiḥ priyō bhavati, arē patyur kāmāya patis priyas bhavati ātmanastu kāmāya patiḥ priyō bhavati | na vā arē jāyāyai kāmāya jāyā priyā bhavati, ātmanastu kāmāya jāyā
priyā bhavati |

No one loves anyone; everyone loves oneself only; Is a very disturbing fact; because we were thinking that all our family members. And that is also, we also, especially from Western things that is coming, regularly that I love you; why you have to say regularly, I love you; because always love is doubtful and now there are articles coming; how to keep your husband with you all the time; how to keep your wife with you all the time. All the time there is a fear that he or she may leave me and go; why because everybody is interested in one's own happiness only; as long as those external factors are conducive we love that; once they are not conducive, like a hot potato; everything is rejected; this is truth; the bitterest truth.

यावद्वित्तोपार्जनं सक्तः

vārtām kō:'pi na pṛcchati gēhē ||5||

as long as I am a productive earning member, I have got some extra respect. whether you need coffee, tea, etc. once retired; you attend yourselves; so that is why many people in old age feel rejected; just they wonder, I was respected until now; I think respect is coming down. Therefore the fact is everybody loves oneself, nobody loves anything else; even if anything else is loved; it is only conditional love; and what is the condition; that object of love should be favourable to me; its favorability is the condition; the moment it becomes unfavourable; I try to get out. If I cannot get out, I pray; somehow I should get out.

And the śāstrā goes one step further, even love of God, when God is an object other than You; even love of God is conditional. And when a bhaktha suffers, his bhakthi becomes you know wavery; today something was telling me; it is a lady; Swamiji I had so much devotion and I faced problem after problem so I was wondering what is the use of devotion; whether God is there or not, I started doubt, therefore I dropped going to temple, threw all my photos; that means what I want to love God as long as he or she is favourable to me; and therefore self-love is the highest object-love is conditional; therefore it varies; Now therefore the Upaniṣad says what a beautiful logic it says; if love towards God must be highest; if love towards God must be the highest, it is possible only under one condition; can you guess; if love towards God must be the highest; it is possible only under one condition; I have given you the clue; self-love is the highest I have given. If love towards God must be highest; the Lord should not be away from or different from me; when I and God become identical; God love be equal to self-love; and since self-love is the highest; God love will be the highest; and for jñāni, God and self have become one and therefore for a jñāni alone, God love is equal to self-love; and therefore it is the highest love; एकभक्तिर्विशिष्यते ēkabhaktirviśiṣyatē.

A beautiful topic, worth meditating upon; It is based on the Brihadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad approach; it is a beautiful portion; so ēkabhaktirviśiṣyatē and Bhagavān says; priyosi jñānina athartham; So jñāni is the greatest devotee because for a jñāni I am the dearest one; and why for a jñāni I am the dearest; can you see the logic; for a jñāni; also he is the dearest one; But since jñāni has identified myself with him, I become dearest to him. Therefore aham priyathamaḥ; and not only that, स च मम प्रियः ahaṃ sa ca mama priyaḥ; and mama saḥ priyaḥ; so अहं ज्ञानिनोऽत्यर्थम् प्रियः ahaṃ jñāninō:'tyartham priyaḥ and saḥ mama atyartham priyaḥ. I also love a jñāni as the closest to me; so jñāni is dearest to me; I am dearest to jñāni; because both have become identical.

Continuing.

उदाराः सर्व एवैते ज्ञानी त्वात्मैव मे मतम् ।

आस्थितः स हि युक्तात्मा मामेवानुत्तमां गतिम् ॥ ७.१८ ॥

udārāḥ sarva ēvaitē jñāni tvātmaiva mē matam |

āsthitaḥ sa hi yuktātmā māmēvānuttamāṃ gatim || 7.18 ||

सर्व एते sarve etē all these (devotees), एव उदाराः ēva udārāḥ are certainly noble तु tu however ज्ञानि आत्मा एव jñāni ātmā eva the wise man is myself मे

मतम् me matam this is my teaching हि hi because युक्तात्मा yuktātmā with a steadfast mind सः आस्थितः saḥ āsthitaḥ he has resorted to माम् एव mām eva Me alone अनुत्तमां गतिम् anuttamāṃ gatim who am the highest goal

18. All these (devotees) are certainly noble. However the wise man is myself --- this is my teaching. Because, with a steadfast mind, he has resorted to Me alone who am the highest goal.

So when Krishna mentioned this, the other types of devotees may feel bad. Bhagavān has voted for the jñāni and therefore Bhagavān does not like us; we may feel; therefore Krishna says; do not worry; I love all devotes; एते सर्वे एव उदाराः etē sarve ēva udārāḥ, all devotees are indeed great; whether it is ārtaḥ, arthārthī; jijñāsu or jñāni; all are great devotees only but difference is ज्ञानी त्वात्मैव मे मतम् jñānī tvātmaiva mē matam; jñāni happens to be identical with me; in the case of other bhakthas; bhaktha and God are different and therefore love towards God is conditional only. invariably conditioned. Therefore jñānī tvātmaiva mē matam; this is a Mahavākya ślōkā; where the aikyam between jñāni and Bhagavān is revealed.

And what is the greatness of this person? स हि युक्तात्मा sa hi yuktātmā and he is the one who has got a committed mind; and integrated mind, which is very clear about the goal of life, viz., liberation or mōkṣa. Therefore he is a person of commitment, he is a person for whom the destination is very clear; and direction is माम् अनुत्तमां गतिम् आस्थितः mām anuttamāṃ gatim āsthitaḥ; he has come to the highest goal of life; which is myself; so mām āsthitaḥ; he has come to the highest goal of life; gatihi means goal; anuttamāṃ means the highest.

Krishna will explain this later; in the case of ārtaḥ bhaktha; arthārthī bhaktha etc. they have different goals alright; but those goals are inferior and finite goals; therefore by the grace of Lord they may get. In fact, in Bhāgavatha there is a beautiful story; a couple do not have children; they pray to a ṛishi that somehow we want a child only; we do not want anything, including mōkṣa; I want only a child and especially in a culture where the look down upon a women if she does not have a child. Socially, she faces a lot of problems; and therefore this lady prays for a child and the ṛiṣi says OK; I have given; and then the ṛiṣi goes away; and after sometime something happens and the child dies; where birth is there; death also can happen; we do read many cases where the child dies; and then this couple cries and the same ṛishi comes and then the ṛṣī gives a special boon that you can talk to your child who has gone to another lōkā; and then the couple they address the child; we are your parents; you are our child; and the child asks the question; which parent you are talking about; because you can talk about a particular parent only from the standpoint of a particular body, but you know that in many janmās we had many bodies and with regard to each body, we had parents; and since the child has dropped the body; So the relationship is broken. Then only they recognised that all these accomplishments are only relative.

riṇau bandha ruphēṇa paśu patni sudhādayaḥ, riṇakṣayē kṣayaṃyānti, tatra kā paridēvanā.

Even the best relationship is subject to arrival and departure; then they ask for the wisdom and they are given the knowledge. Therefore any other gain in the world is inferior only which means subject to end; whereas Krishna tells that Lord is not a relative accomplishment; this is the highest one.

Continuing.

बहूनां जन्मनामन्ते ज्ञानवान्मां प्रपद्यते।

वासुदेवः सर्वमिति स महात्मा सुदुर्लभः ॥ ७.१९ ॥

bahūnāṃ janmanāmantē jñānavān māṃ prapadyatē |

vāsudēvaḥ sarvamiti sa mahātmā sudurlabhaḥ || ७.19 ||

अन्ते ante at the end बहूनां जन्मनाम् bahūnāṃ janmanām of many births प्रपद्यन्ते माम् prapadhyante mām one comes to ज्ञानवान् jñānavān as a wise man इति iti (with the wisdom) that वासुदेवः सर्वम् vāsudevaḥ sarvam Vasudeva is everything सः महात्मा saḥ mahātmā such a noble soul सुदुर्लभः sudurlabhaḥ is very rare.

19. At the end of many births one comes to ME as a wise man (with the wisdom) that Vasudeva is everything. Such a noble soul is very rare.

So here Krishna himself admits that these four stages of bhakthi, a person cannot go through in one janma itself. It takes time; it takes maturity; and therefore बहूनां

जन्मनामन्ते bahūnāṃ janmanām antē; initially when I am suffering from problems; imagine, water is not there; and Bhagavān comes and asks, do you want water or Me; what will we say; we will say You are Eternal anytime I can take you; wait, this is urgent; therefore I will see you later; give me water now; when you got pains and problems our first aim is removal; that is why Vivekananda or somebody said; in front of a hungry person, even God has to come with only bread, not with Gītā, sādhanā catuṣṭya sampanna, etc. who wants sādhanam or catuṣṭyam, I am hungry. Therefore when there are problems in life; first we will try to get rid of that; naturally; and thereafter gradually we begin to use bhakthi for various worldly accomplishments; how can I talk about mōkṣa; so kāma is important; that is why we have accepted kāma puruṣārtha also. In fact the entire vēda purva is nothing but using bhakthi is fulfil the worldly desires; use the bhakthi for that; there is no pāpam is sakāma bhakthi; and then having accomplished so many things; we get bored; diminishing returns. We have seen everything Swamiji, I have understood; the world is only that much; what age you ask; he says 93: So that is why I have understood everything that the world is this much only 93 years old; does not matter; at least now some realisation took place; better luck next birth; and thereafterwards I want mōkṣa; and I do not know; there is again struggle; and therefore having gone through several janmās, Then you will get several janmās; then Swamiji I have to go through several janmās? Krishna has said several janmās; but he did not say beginning from when; So why do you take it as beginning from this janmā; you can assume that you have already started several janmās before; and this the last. You can take anyway. So do not be pessimistic. So therefore, bahūnāṃ janmanām ante; at the end of many janmās alone, one will begin to value mōkṣa; valuing mōkṣa is needed for maturity; manuṣyatvam; mumukṣtavam;

And therefore at the end of many janmās; jñānavan bhavathi; a person becomes a jñāni; that is the fourth level of bhakthi; he comes to, and how he become jñānavan; वेदान्त श्रवण मनन निधिद्यासन द्वारा; गुरु उपदेश द्वारा; सः ज्ञानवान् भवति vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsana dvāra; guru upadeśa dvāra; saha jñānavān bhavathi vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsana dvārā; guru upadēśa dvārā; saḥ jñānāvān bhavathi.

And mām prapradhyante; and he attain Me, he becomes one with Me; he merges into Me; or the gap between him and me is removed;

And what is his jñānam; he attains jñānam alright; what is the type of jñānam; वासुदेवः सर्वम् vāsudēvaḥ sarvam, from Vāsudēva alone is everything; Vāsudeva is everything is what; who is Vāsudeva; thus Vāsudēva can be understand generally as what; Mr. Krishna; son of Vāsudeva; Vāsudevaḥ sarvam does not mean personal God Krishna is everything; it is logically impossible; if you are talking about a personal God Krishna, you know that personal God is finite in nature; specially finite, timewise finite; janma aṣṭami, beginning is there; and also svargarōhaṇa is there; and similarly physically also personal god is limited and that is why we got away from Gōpi and again he went to Gōpis, therefore personal Krishna cannot be everything and therefore, the ācāryās give a different meaning to the word Vāsudeva.

Here Vāsudeva does not refer to the finite personal God; but the infinite brahman; wherein Vāsuḥ means satrupam Brahma, the Lord who is in the form of very existence principle; we will see the details some time later; just hinted; Vāsuḥ means satrupa Īśvaraḥ; How do you know that: vasanthi sarvani bhutani asmin; iti Vāsuḥ; that existence principle in which all beings exist. And devaha means cidrūpa Īśvara or brahma, svayam prakaste iti devaḥ.

Therefore vāsuḥ means sadrūpa; devaḥ means cidrupaha; vasuscha asau devascha; sadcit rūpam brahma is here Vāsudevaḥ; and that is why in the 4th chapter, brahmārpaṇam brahma havirbrahmāgnau brahmaṇā hutam. So he knows Krishnaparāmathma; the formless Krishna is in the form of the entire creation; sarvam iti jñānavān; Such a knowledge he has got; and स महात्मा sa mahātmā. Such a jñāni alone is mahātma; greatest seeker; noblest soul; and सुदुर्लभः sudurlabhaḥ; such a person is extremely rare; Krishna has said in the beginning of this chapter:

मनुष्याणां सहस्रेषु कश्चिद्यतति सिद्धये ।

यततामपि सिद्धानां कश्चिन्मां वेत्ति तत्त्वतः ॥७.३॥

manuṣyāṇāṃ sahasrēṣu kaścidyatati siddhayē |

yatatāmapi siddhānāṃ kaścinnmāṃ vētti tattvataḥ | | 7..3 | |

many people do not want mōkṣa; among those who want; only few people come to this stage of bhakthi; and therefore he is the rarest; Arjuna; may you strive to become a jñāni bhaktha; of course, starting from ārtāḥ bhaktha; but end with this.

More in the next class.

Om

Having talked about the problem of samsāra, in the thirteenth verse of the seventh chapter, Krishna talked about the remedy for samsāra, from verse No.14 up to 19th. The problem of samsāra Krishna presented was that the human being basically seeks three things; one is security; another is permanence; and the other is fulfilment in life or happiness. Security, something permanent to hold on to and fullness or pūrṇatvam; or you may call it ānanda; these three things every human being basically seeks.

But the problem with the human being is he does not know where to find them; he does not know the sources of these three basic things; the source happens to be para prakṛti, the higher nature of God; and since one does not know the higher nature of God; he searches for these three things in the lower nature or the perishable creation; and unfortunately all these three things are not available in the creation, the world cannot give security because itself is bound by time; the world cannot give permanence, because it is all the time changed by time and the world cannot give pūrṇatvam or ānanda because everything in the creation is apūrṇaḥ or finite.

Chandōgya upaniṣad beautifully says: न अल्पे सुखं अस्ति na alpē sukhaṁ asti; alpa vasthu cannot give happiness, because happiness is the expression of pūrṇatvam; so यो वै भूमा तत् अमृतम् yō vai bhūmā tat amṛtam; pūrṇa vasthu can alone give ānanda; apūrṇa vasthu cannot give ānanda or fulfilment. Even if it seems to give ānanda; it is only a fake ānanda; that is why when one actually gets into that; one does not find any ānanda. And because he does not know the real source, he is expecting these three things from the world, where it is not there; and since his expectations are wrong expectations all the expectations fail; and this failure leads to sorrow, depression; disappointment; frustration; all these consequences put together we call samsāra. And then what is the remedy; Krishna said the remedy is bhakthi alone; and then he elaborated the bhakthi; and therefore Bhaktha alone will be able to fulfil this basic earning of security; permanence and pūrṇatvam; a bhaktha alone will be able to fulfil. Then Krishna wants to clarify that further and for that purpose, he divided bhakthas into four types, ārtah; arthārthī; jijñāsuḥ and jñāni.

And he said among these four bhakthas; only the fourth bhaktha will be able to fulfil these three urges. The first three are great only.

उदाराः सर्व एवैते ज्ञानी त्वात्मैव मे मतम् ।

आस्थितः स हि युक्तात्मा मामेवानुत्तमां गतिम् ॥७.१८॥

udārāḥ sarva ēvaitē jñānī tvātmaiva mē matam |

āsthitaḥ sa hi yuktātmā māmēvānuttamāṃ gatiṃ | | 7.18 | |

the fourth type of jñāni bhaktha alone will become successful. And therefore the aim of a seeker is becoming a jñāni bhaktha and a jñāni bhaktha knows where to tap to get these three things. What are those three things, security, permanence and fulfilment; and he said it will take time; initially a person cannot directly become a jñāni bhaktha; he has to go through stages:

बहूनां जन्मनामन्ते ज्ञानवान्मां प्रपद्यते।

वासुदेवः सर्वमिति स महात्मा सुदुर्लभः ॥ ७.१९ ॥

bahūnāṃ janmanāmantē jñānavān māṃ prapadyatē |

vāsudēvaḥ sarvamiti sa mahātmā sudurlabhaḥ | | 7.19 | |

It is a long journey but one has to become a jñāni bhaktha; jñāni bhaktha means a wise devotee. This much we saw in the last class; with the 19th verse, the topic of bhakthi as remedy for samsāra; samsāra nivṛttiḥ upāya rūpa bhakthi; that topic is over. Now Krishna is entering another topic; from the 20th verse; we will enter.

कामैस्तैस्तैर्हृतज्ञानाः प्रपद्यन्तेऽन्यदेवता ।

तं तं नियममास्थाय प्रकृत्या नियताः स्वया ॥ ७.२० ॥

kāmaistaistairhṛtajñānāḥ prapadyantē'nyadēvatāḥ |
taṃ taṃ niyamamāsthāya prakṛtyā niyatāḥ svayā || 7.20 ||

नियताः niyatāḥ governed स्वया प्रकृत्या svayā prakṛtyā by their own nature, हृतज्ञानाः hṛtajñānāḥ (and) deprived of discrimination तैः तैः कामैः taiḥ taiḥ kāmaiḥ by various desires प्रपद्यन्ते prapadyante (the others) resort to अन्यदेवताः anyadevatāḥ other deities आस्थाय āsthāya by taking to तं तं नियमम् taṃ taṃ niyamam various disciplines (of worship).

20. Governed (compelled) by their own nature (and) deprived of discrimination by various (finite) desires, (the others) resort to other deities by taking to various disciplines.

In the following portions, Krishna is going to classify Bhakthi broadly into two types, Sakāma bhakthi and Niṣkāma bhakthi; Sakāma bhakthi and Niṣkāma bhakthi; these are the two classifications of which Krishna is going to deal with Sakāma bhakthi; from verse No.20 up to verse 26. He will talk about both the plus points of Sakāma bhakthi; the advantages and he will also talk about the minus points of Sakāma bhakthi; it is an objective presentation of what is what;

And then from verse no.27 to 30, Krishna will talk about Niṣkāma bhakthi and also its advantages. Therefore we get a compare and contrast study of sakāma, niṣkāma bhakthi.

Now what is the general meaning of these two words: bhakthi we can roughly translate as devotion and worship of God; so the attitude of devotion and the act of worship, both together we call bhakthi.

And sakāma bhakthi means using bhakthi as a means for finite ends of the creation; of the world; using bhakthi, that is devotion and worship; as a means for accomplishing finite goals of life.

In the śāstrā all the finite goals are classified as dharma, arta, kāma puruṣārtha; arta means all types of material wealth; which is one form of finite goal; why it is finite goal; all forms of wealth will end, get exhausted; similarly kāma means all forms of sense pleasures or entertainments come under kāma, that is another form of finite goal, because that will also end.

And dharma means all forms of puṇyam which will take a person to higher worlds after death; bhulōkah; bhuvārloka, suvar lōka, mahar lōkah, etc. and according to śāstrās, all the higher lōkas are also finite in nature. So therefore dharma, that is puṇyam; arta, kāma, they all will come under what finite goal.

And to generalise we can say, anything other than God is finite goal; because God alone is beyond time and space; everything other than God falls within time and space; and whatever falls within time and space is finite; and therefore everything other than God is finite goal. So finite goals we can present in different forms; dharmartha kāma finite goals; if you use Kathōpaniṣad language; all forms of preyaṣ is finite goal; If you have to put in religious language; everything other than God is finite goal; and if you want to present in Vēdāntic language; all material things are finite goals; all anātma; all material things are finite goals because all materials are subject to destruction;

And sakāma bhakthi means a bhakthi through which I seek finite goals; in simple language we can say materialistic bhakthi; business bhakthi; commercial bhakthi. I will do this; in return, you give me; not even in return; first you give me that; he wants to be very safe; play safe, you do not want to risk; I will keep that money in my pūja room; cure my disease and I will give. Somebody promised a ring it seems to Tirupati Venkitachalapathy, I will give this diamond ring, if it is cured or something; and Lord is very very truthful and honest and therefore he fulfilled his contract and cured; and he had to give it; and then he thought, see when I promise, what will be the price of the ring; now the ring is much much much more costlier; and therefore I have said that I will give the ring and therefore I will give the equivalent of the ring and on the day of promise it was a few thousand, now it is double; and then what he did; and he took the money and he put in the hundi; and if you are smart, Venkitachalapathy wants to prove that he is smarter; and when he dropped the money, the money and ring both fell into the hundi; OK. yat gathva na nivartande; you cannot collect back that. So therefore generally we are business bhaktha; commercial bhakthas; contract bhaktha; this Krishna calls sakāma bhakthi.

Then the second type of bhakthi is niṣkāma bhakthi; niṣkāma bhakthi is a bhakthi which is not used for material end; there is no desire for material end; Niṣkāma bhakthi does not mean total desirelessness; In niṣkāma bhakthi also there is a desire; in niṣkāma bhakthi also, there is a desire; but the desire is for infinite or God. So niṣkāma bhakthi is a sakāma bhakthi; niṣkāma bhakthi is a sakāma bhakthi; in which a person is no more interested in dharma, artha or kāma, no more interested in finite ends; no more interested in material ends; but he is interested in infinite; that is security, fulfilment and permanence, This is niṣkāma bhakthi; mumukṣu bhakthi is niṣkāma bhakthi; bubukṣu bhakthi is sakāma bhakthi;

And having talked about both these bhakthis, Krishna wants to say both are OK; but ultimately you should know that niṣkāma bhakthi is superior to sakāma bhakthi, and ultimately you have to come to niṣkāma bhakthi. You take your own time; but you have to come to; this is what Krishna wants to convey in these verses. But for this purpose, Krishna uses a symbolic language; what is that; In the Bhagavad Gītā; Krishna points out that He the Lord Krishna represents the infinite. In the Bhagavad Gītā; Lord Krishna symbolises the infinite mōkṣa; and all other Gods represent finite ends in the Bhagavad Gītā, because even though Krishna as a personal God is a finite only. As a personal God Krishna is finite or infinite? You should not have a doubt; Krishna has a date of birth; and date of departure, and Krishna has got a finite size; He has got a form; and therefore any personal God is finite only; but a personal God can symbolise the infinite; very careful; personal God is finite; but a personalised God can symbolise the infinite; exactly like the flag is very small; but a small flag can symbolise the vast country; What is the size of the flag you know; what is the size of India you know; even though flag is not India; flag represents India. Therefore you learn to superimpose India on the national flag; and then when August 15 comes; January 26 comes, and at other times; Olympic, if some medal comes; you do that; anyway one came; great.

And we have got in our religion, any number of symbols, because deities are countless in our religion; Rama is there; Krishna is there; Śiva is there; Venkitachalapathy is there; Ayyappa is there; முப்பத்து முக்கோடி muppathi mukkodi it is said; countless dēvathās are there; each dēvathā is finite; but any finite dēvathā can represent the infinite; and the general convention is depending upon the type of scripture, the representation will change. If you read Śivapūraṇam, then who is the hero of Śivapūraṇam; do not crack your head; who is the hero of Śivapūraṇam; Lord Śiva; and therefore in Śivapūraṇam, Lord Śiva will represent infinite and all other Gods will represent finite goals; and if you go to Bhāgavatham, Viṣṇu will represent the infinite; poor Śiva will be a part of Viṣṇu; then go to Dēvi Bhāgavatham; it is women's lib; Dēvi is the ultimate; Lord Śiva, Brahma, Viṣṇu etc; they are all at the feet.

Similarly if you take Muruga's Subramanya's any pūraṇam; then you remember, no deity is infinite; any deity can be used by us to invoke the infinite; and therefore, which deity is superior will be determined by what; which deity is superior will be determined by your invocation. If my iṣṭa dēvathā is Krishna will represent infinite for me and all others will be what finite; and if my iṣṭa dēvathā is Ganēśa; Ganēśa will represent infinite and all the others will be finite.

That is why I give the example of the cheque leaf; in the cheque book, there are so many leaves; which leaf is superior and which leaf is inferior, more valuable or less valuable; I ask you; I give the cheque book; what will be your answer; before writing; all leaves are the same; after writing which leaf is more valuable, will be determined by what you write; if the first leaf you write one rupee; and in the second you write, one lakh, the second is superior; if in the first you write one lakh and in the second one you write one rupee, then naturally the first leaf; therefore tell me, Viṣṇu is great or Śiva is great; people are quarrelling even now; Vaiṣṇavās claim Viṣṇu alone is great; Saivas claim Śiva alone is great; our śāstrās say that both have not understood the vēdic teaching; who is great depends upon your invocation.

In the Bhagavad Gītā, Krishna represents infinite; and therefore all the anya dēvathā s represent finite goals of life. And therefore in the following portions; sakāma bhakthi will be presented as anya dēvathā bhakthi; symbolically sakāma bhakthi means anya dēvathā bhakthi; and anya dēvathā bhakthi means what; worship of any God other than Krishna; and Niṣkāma bhakthi will be equal to what; Krishna bhakthi will represent Niṣkāma bhakthi, where the goal is what; Krishna the infinite; and in Śiva pūraṇa; Śiva bhakthi will be niṣkāma bhakthi; and the goal will be Śiva the infinite; and Viṣṇu bhakthi and Ganēśa bhakthi will be what; anya dēvathā bhakthi; inferior bhakthi.

Keeping this symbolism; we have to read the following slōkās; and first Krishna will talk about anya dēvathā bhakthi; otherwise known as sakāma bhakthi. So He tells in this verse; कामैस्तैस्तैर्हृतज्ञानाः अन्यदेवता प्रपद्यन्ते kāmaistaistairhṛtajñānāḥ anyadēvatā prapadyantē; there are some bhakthas, they are interested only in finite ends; kāmaihi, means dharma arta kāma icchayā; either they want wealth or they want entertainment or they want puṇyam and higher lōkās and because of these various desires; what do they worship; anya dēvathā bhajantē; they worship other finite deities; each finite deity can give only one finite result. For example, Lakṣmi dēvi will represent only one finite end; What is that; only wealth; and another dēvathā will represent only health; aśvini dēvathā or dhanvanthari dēvathā; and another dēvathā, Surya dēvathā will represent only the power of perception; Ganēśa dēvathā will represent only freedom from obstacles. Thus each dēvathā giving a finite result is worshipped by this sakāma bhaktha; and anya dēvathā bhakthaḥ; and one will say Navagraha also. Go to Rahu temple, go to Ketu temple (whether it is there?) or whatever temple, go to śaniśvara temple, that is the most respected temple in the entire India; śani you say and everyone has a bhakthi mayam; this deity and that deity, for what, either removal of a particular problem or attainment of a particular result; prapadyantē'nyadēvatāḥ, because of their intense desire.

And because of this desire, what happens, हृतज्ञानाः hr̥tajñānāḥ; their discriminative power is stultified; obstructed; blunted; and why do we say that their discriminative power is blunted; if they think a little bit; they can easily know that, even if the finite desires are fulfilled; they cannot give lasting happiness because those objects of desire will go away. Why it will go away; because they are finite; they can give me only a temporary fulfilment; the fulfilment will not last long; they do not have that far sightedness. There hr̥tajñānāḥ means these people are shortsighted people, who cannot see beyond their nose; therefore hr̥tajñānāḥ, mūdhāḥ; alpa buddhayāḥ; mandāha; anya devathāḥ prapadyantē; they are sakāma bhakthas;

And then once you seek finite ends, through bhakthi; you have to follow all the rules of pūja; conditions are many; because you seek a benefit; there are so many conditions; so they will say you have to do the pūja at a particular time; you have to go that temple, you have to take one lime, two limes or three limes, all these, and you have to go for seven weeks, I do not know; you know better; there are so many temples particular days are there; how you should approach; and if the wedding of son or daughter is desired, you have to go to that temple, give a māla, and keep one māla with you; (do not ask Swamiji, how you now, I have not tried that) therefore this māla you keep and that māla made for the wedding, and exchange that māla, etc. So many.

So therefore every rule you have to observe. āhara niyama; naivēdya niyama; which deity will like which particular naivēdya; not what you like; they will say; which particular dress should be given; and what colour, green dress, yellow dress; all those things are there.

And therefore Krishna says; तं तं नियममास्थाय taṃ taṃ niyamamāsthāya; they religiously observe all those rules for the sake of getting that benefits; taṃ taṃ is repeated to indicate the respective rule associated with that respective dēvathā; so taṃ taṃ niyamamāsthāya; all because of what; so प्रकृत्या नियताः prakṛtyā niyatāḥ; because they are whipped up by their own rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ; because of intense rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ alone, either they want to get something, or they want to get rid of something else; for getting also one type of pūja, for getting rid also, another type of pūja. All because of what, rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ; here prakṛti means svabhāva; and svabhāva means personal like and dislikes; and even if somebody talks about mōkṣa.

They do not have time at all to think, because they are busy running after this and that; and rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥs are not one or two and they are infinite; and anywhere you turn; every advertisement is meant to hook you, with one rāgaḥ or one dveṣaḥ; dveṣaḥ; not rāgaḥ; therefore they are controlled; they are enslaved by their own kāma.

Continuing

यो यो यां यां तनुं भक्तः श्रद्धयार्चितुमिच्छति ।

तस्य तस्याचलां श्रद्धां, तामेव विदधाम्यहम् ॥ ७.२१ ॥

yō yō yāṃ yāṃ tanuṃ bhaktaḥ śraddhayā'rcitumicchati |

tasya tasyācalāṃ śraddhāṃ tāmēva vidadhāmyaham || 7.21 ||

यः यः भक्तः yaḥ yaḥ bhaktaḥ whichever devotee इच्छति icchati desires अर्चितुम् arcitum to worship श्रद्धया śraddhayā faithfully यां यां तनुम् yāṃ yāṃ tanum any particular form अहम् अचलां विदधामि aham acalāṃ vidadhāmi I stabilise ताम् एव श्रद्धाम् tām eva śraddhām that very faith तस्य तस्य tasya tasya of that devotee

21. Whichever devotee desires to worship faithfully any particular form – I stabilise that very faith of that devotee.

So this sakāma bhaktha, who wants to fulfill various personal desires will go to the scriptures to find out which dēvathā will fulfill that desire. And we have got a huge literature, vēda pūrva bhāga is the vast literature which presents countless dēvathās to fulfill countless desires;

pasukāmaas chinveetha; vithakaama chinveetha;
amayavee chinveetha; brahma varcha kaamas chinveetha;

do you want to glowing skin; glowing skin; because now lot of beauty parlors for men also and women also; want shining skin; even for that Śāstrā prescribes; brahma varcha kaamaha chinveetha; So therefore भक्तः तनुम् चित्तुमिच्छति bhaktaḥ tanum rcitumicchati; tanum means a particular deity, and it will vary from literature to literature; a person has some disease, if he is a Viṣṇu bhaktha; they say worship Dhanvanthari mūrthi; they will not say Mruthunjaya; because Vaishnavaas you know; they have got a deity Viṣṇu associated deity to remove diseases; and another person will say chant triyambhakam yajamahē mantra; mṛtyu dēvathā pūja; another person will say aśvini kumara presides over arōgyam; another person will say arōgyam bhaskarad itye; Lord Surya represents arōgyam; thus you choose one of them; Surya or Dhanvanthari or aśvini kumārās; or mruthjnaya; thus sakāma bhaktha will take to one of these deities.

And Krishna says sakāma bhakthi is also a valid bhakthi. Therefore, their desires will be certainly fulfilled; but what is the condition; śraddhayā arcitum icchati; if one worships a particular deity to fulfill a particular desire; certainly the desire will be fulfilled; but you should have faith in that;

मन्त्रे तीर्थे द्विजे देवे दैवज्ञाने भेषजे कुलो यादृशि भावना यस्य सिद्धिर् भवति तादृशि ॥ mantrē tīrthē dvijē dēvē daivajñanē bhēṣajē kulau
yādṛśi bhāvanā yasya siddhir bhavati tādṛśi ||

There are seven items which will give you benefit directly proportional to your faith; higher the faith, higher the benefit; no faith; no benefit; and in that Isvara bhakthi is also included; and therefore śraddhayā arcitum icchati.

And what will happen; तस्य तस्य श्रद्धां अचलां विदधामि tasya tasya śraddhām acalām vidadhāmi. I reinforce his bhakthi; I reinforce his bhakthi; by fulfilling his desire. Aham acalām vidadhāmi; because faith is reinforced only in one way; how is faith reinforced; when your desire is fulfilled; naturally it is reinforced; next time problem comes, again you run; and not only you run, you propagate the message also; and another person runs; and another person runs also. And that temple becomes popular; so even temples have got jathakams; for sometime they become popular, another time nobody goes there; not only temples; even Swamis; if Swamis fulfill the desire of the devotee; all these space is not enough; you will find a long queue; mōkṣa mōkṣa you say, limited number only comes; you have to fulfill that.

And therefore Krishna says I fulfill the desire and thus reinforce his devotion, his shradha and here you have to make a important note; Krishna says I will fulfill his desire; actually they are doing pūja to whom; anya dēvathā, finite dēvathās; so therefore Krishna must be saying those deities will fulfill the desire; but instead of saying those deities will fulfill; Krishna says I fulfill their desires;

Why does Krishna says so; what is the significance of this statement. For that you should remember, in the Bhagavad Gītā; Krishna represents the totality, the infinite; and all other deities represent what: finite deities; therefore in Bhagavad Gītā; Śiva is finite or infinite; do not worry; Śiva will not get angry; because he knows śāstrā; in Bhagavath Gītā Ganēśa is finite; Krishna is infinite; now since Krishna represents infinity; and all other dēvathās are finite dēvathās; all the other dēvathās will become a part of Krishna, because all finite things are part of the infinite. All the finite should be included in the infinite or not; if it is not included in the infinite; what will happen, the infinite would not be infinite; and therefore all the dēvathā s will become part of Krishna and since all the dēvathās are part of Krishna the infinite, any worship you give to a part, it will go to the whole Krishna alone is receiving; every worship that is offered to any deity; That is what is said in the famous sloka;

अकाशात् ततितं तोयम् यथा गच्छति सागरम्

सर्वं देव नमस्कारः केशवं प्रतिगच्छति ॥

akāśāt tatitam toyam yathā gachhati sāgaram

sarva dēva namaskārah keśavam pratigachhati ||

In this slōkā, who represents infinite; keśavaṃ pratigachchati; keśava represents the infinite, all the others are finite; and therefore Śiva pūja will go to Krishna, Ganēśa pūja will go to Krishna, and since the pūja is received by Krishna, not directly, but through various other dēvathās; the pūja phalam is also given by whom, Krishna also gives pūja phalam also; but Krishna will not give pūja phalam directly and how does he give; through whichever deity he received the gift, received the gift, through the same deity he gives the phalam also; therefore the Śiva bhaktha thinks that Śiva gave him the fruits; that he has worshipped Śiva and Śiva has blessed him but what is the fact; through Śiva, the pūja went to Krishna and through Śiva, Krishna gave the phalam also; all the other dēvathās will become the pipelines and Krishna will become the ultimate deity and therefore Krishna says that I bless every bhaktha through that particular deity; but remember, if you are Śiva bhaktha you need not get disturbed because of that; because in the Śiva pūraṇam what will be said; Śiva receives all the pūja through other dēvathā s.

Now how you should convert logically; we should forget Śiva and Viṣṇu; logically you have to convert; the infinite God receives all the pūja through finite form; that infinite God you call Krishna, Śiva, you call Dēvi; you call Jesus; you call Allah; you call father in heaven; we do not bother about the name, but we are interested in knowing; whether you see it as infinite or not; invocation is important; not the form. And that is why, you take any aṣṭōthara arcana; you find that certain names will be common for all; the description will be different in aṣṭōthara; Śiva description will be different; Viṣṇu description will be different; but certain nāmās will be common; ananthāya namaḥ; in everything; ananthaḥ means infinite; sarva gathāya namaḥ; all pervading; how many all pervading Gods are possible.

If Viṣṇu is also infinite; Śiva is also infinite; Viṣṇu and Śiva are two different names for one infinite God; that is why in Viṣṇu Sahasranama itself one of the nama is what; sarva śarva Śiva sthānuḥ; so that is so, how can you say I will worship only Viṣṇu; I will not go to Śiva temple, I will not utter the name Śiva; I will not do namaskara to a person who puts vibhūthi. So therefore Krishna says aham tasya tasya śraddhām acalāṃ vidadhāmi.

Continuing.

स तथा श्रद्धया युक्तः तस्याराधनमीहते ।

लभते च ततः कामान् मयैवा विहितान् हि तान् ॥ ७.२२ ॥

sa tayā śraddhayā yuktastasya"rādhanamīhatē |

labhatē ca tataḥ kāmān mayaiva vihitān hi tān || 7.22 ||

युक्तः yuktaḥ endowed तया श्रद्धया tayā śraddhayā with that faith सः ईहते saḥ ihate he engages in राधनं तस्याः rādhanam tasyāḥ the worship of that (form), च ततः ca tataḥ and, from that लभते labhate he attains तान् कामान् tān kāmān all those desires हि विहितान् hi vihitān which are indeed granted मया एव mayā eva by ME alone

22. Endowed with that faith, he engages in the worship of that (form) and, from that, he attains all those desires which are indeed granted by ME alone.

Now since one infinite God fulfills the desire of the devotee; through that particular deity; the devotee is going to say that Śiva fulfills my desire; and therefore Śiva is कण्ठ कण्ठल क्थवम् kaṇ kaṇṭa taivam; kaṇ kaṇṭa daivam means what; he is working God and another person who worships another deity; his desire also will be fulfilled; and he will say Guruvayoorappan is kaṇ kaṇṭa daivam; another person will say that the Bālāji is the real fulfiller; and another person will say that Shreenāthji is; Shreenāth is a very popular deity in Gujarat area; and you go further North; further North, there is another different deity; each person thinks that my God is superior. man nāthaḥ sri jagannāthaḥ; my God is superior he thinks and Krishna says I allow him to entertain such a conclusion and therefore He says: स तया श्रद्धया युक्तः sa tayā śraddhayā yukta.

Now because of the fulfilment of the desire; his bhakthi has been reinforced now; for a Śiva bhaktha, Śiva bhakthi is reinforced; for a Ganēśa bhaktha; Ganēśa bhakthi is reinforced and that is why even if anyone wants to chant a mantra; they want to do some japa; generally if some ācārya wants to give a japa; what does he does; he asks what is your iṣṭa dēvathā; that is how the japa should be given; if my iṣṭa dēvathā is Krishna it is perfectly alright to take a Krishna mantra; the ācārya who gives the Krishna mantra may be a Śiva bhaktha; or Devi bhaktha; but he does not want everybody to become a Śiva bhaktha or Dēvi bhaktha; Any bhakthi is OK. So Namasivaya is superior or Nārāyaṇā is superior; all nāmās are great; what is important is where your mind is attracted; whereas some other ācāryas they do not ask the question; you take Śiva mantra; because that is his iṣṭa dēvathā; so some institutions standard iṣṭa dēvathā; now in that the problem maybe what; this person chants a mind and his mind goes to another deity; so one lady came and complained swamiji I have been given namasivayaha mantra; but my iṣṭa dēvathā is Krishna and therefore there is constant conflict and therefore I try to visualise Śiva and only Guruvayoorppan comes; all kinds of problems; therefore, we can choose any particular nama associated with any particular deity; it will bless; therefore Krishna says, reinforced Śiva bhakthi or Krishna bhakthi or Dēvi bhakthi; and that person will develop. and because of his aradhanam ikṣate. Tha deity; he wants to do more ārāadhanam; ārāadhanam means ārādana; and more worship he does more benefit will also be more; so ततः कामान् लभते tataḥ kāmān labhatē; he is able to fulfill more and more desires; because of that bhakthi.

And then Krishna once again reminds that all those desires are fulfilled by whom, you think Śiva is fulfilling or Dēvi is fulfilling; Krishna says they are not fulfilling the desires really, because they are all finite dēvathās; but I, the infinite Lord, is fulfilling through that particular deity; मयैवा कामान् विहितान् mayaiva vihitān kāmān; which are fulfilled by me alone; therefore I am the ultimate receiver all pūja and I am the ultimate fulfiller of all the desires also.

More we will see in the next class.

Om

Lord Krishna is, in this portion of the 7th chapter, differentiating sakāma bhakthi and niṣkāma bhakthi. Sakāma bhakthi is devotion and a form of worship of the Lord; through which a person seeks material ends; in the form of either dharma, artha or kāma; or to use the Upaniṣadic expression seeing preyas. And Krishna wants to point out that niṣkāma bhakthi as that form of devotion and worship, through which the person seeks the spiritual end, which is called mōkṣa, or in the upaniṣadic language, sreyah. To contrast sakāma bhakthi and niṣkāma bhakthi, first Krishna is dealing with sakāma bhakthi. And as we were in the last class Krishna is presenting sakāma bhakthi in a symbolic language. Because a sakāma bhaktha seeks only finite material ends; because all material ends are finite; so since a sakāma bhaktha seeks only finite material ends; Krishna symbolically presents sakāma bhakthi as worship of finite deities. Worship of finite deities in the 7th chapter represents sakāma bhakti, symbolic language; and a niṣkāma bhaktha seeks the spiritual end which is infinite and therefore symbolically Krishna presents niṣkāma bhakthi as the worship of the infinite Lord. Therefore parichinna dēvathā bhaktha or apūrṇa dēvathā bhakthi sakāma bhakthi; aparichinna dēvathā bhakthi is niṣkāma bhakthi.

Now the next question is: who is finite deity, and who is infinite deity, because you are talking about apūrṇa dēvathā and apūrṇa dēvathā. If you analyse, every deity has got a form as described in the scriptures; Therefore there is no question of infinite deities; because the very picturisation of deity indicates that it is finite; therefore it is a contradiction to talk about infinite form; because form means finite; therefore what can be infinite deity, what can be finite deity is the question; for which we give the answer, any deity can be infinite deity, if we choose to invoke the infinite in that deity. On the other hand, if you choose to invoke the finite thing, then the deity is called finite deity. Therefore Rama also, if you talk about form, it is finite; Krishna also form-wise finite; Gaṇapathi also, form-wise finite; all the dēvathās described in the smṛithi sruthi purāṇa itihāsaḥ, they all have got a form as described in the dhyāna slōkā; क्षीरोदन्वत्प्रदेशे शुचिमणिविलसत्सैकतेर्मौक्तिकानां kṣīrōdanvatpradēśē śucimaṇivilasatsaikatēрмаuktikānām.

The very dhyāna slōkā gives a picture or form of the deity and from the dhyāna slōkā we know that it is finite only; but upon the finite we have a choice to invoke to visualise, to imagine, to superimpose the infinite; just upon a small flag, we can invoke the nation, which is much much more vaster than the flag. And if you invoke infinite in Krishna form, Krishna becomes infinite God for you and if you are a Ganēsā bhaktha; Ganēsā will represent infinite; as far as the nāmavalis are concerned, it will have both infinite nāmās, infinite nāmās means what; the nāmās revealing the infinite and there will be certain other nāmās, which indicate the finite also. Almost anathaya namaḥ is one of the nama for every deity; and in the Bhagavat Gītā, since Lord Krishna is the main deity, infinite God for you, and if you are Ganēsā bhaktha, Ganēsā will represent infinite; as far as the Nāmavalis are concerned, it will have both infinite nāmās, infinite nāmās means the nama revealing the infinite, and there will be certain other nāmās which indicate the finite also. Almost ānandaya nāmaḥ is one of the nama for every deity and in the bhagavad Gītā since Lord Krishna is the main deity for us, in the context of bhagavad Gītā, Krishna becomes pūrṇa avathara; people talk about pūrṇa avathara; there is no question of pūrṇa avathara or apūrṇa avathara; every avathara is pūrṇam; every avathara is a apūrṇam; whether it is pūrṇam or apūrṇam depends upon how you invoke.

And then Krishna says a sakāma bhaktha can worship the finite dēvathās, who are other than Lord Krishna, he calls them Anya dēvathā bhakthā and the one who is seeking infinite, in the Bhagavath Gītā will be called Krishna bhaktha; and having said this much, Krishna says anya dēvathā bhakthas; that is the devotees of other deities, can worship them and seek finite benefit; like rāhu worship, kētu worship. All the navagrahās are worshipped for what; for a particular result; for 7-1/2 Saturn; Therefore a person wants to get out of that; and Krishna says there is nothing wrong in worshipping the finite dēvathās for a finite result, and their worship is valid and their desires will be fulfilled. But when desires are fulfilled, it appears as though the finite dēvathās are blessing the devotee. Krishna says finite dēvathās are seemingly blessing the devotees, but really speaking, those dēvathās are not blessing, why the finite dēvathās have blessing power because of whom, because of me who represent the infinite. And therefore the infinite Krishna is giving the blessing power to all the finite dēvathās; and those finite dēvathās in turn are blessing the devotee; and therefore who is really blessing the devotee. Krishna says, I, the infinite alone, I am blessing everyone through varieties of dēvathās; all those dēvathās will become only postman. You know postman. When you receive the money order, suppose the neighbour talks to the postman; why you are very partial; you are giving money only to those people, and not to me; what will be postman's answer; He will say I am not giving the money, even though visibly, apparently I am giving, there is someone somewhere else and that person, your son or brother or father, that person is giving the money through the postman. Thus every parichinna dēvathā is like a postman only; they are only intermediaries, Krishna alone is the ultimate receiver of all the worship and Krishna alone is the ultimate karma phala datha also. That is why at the end of the fifth chapter, Krishna said

suhṛdaṃ sarvabhūtānāṃ jñātvā māṃ śāntimṛcchati || 5.29 ||

I am the ultimate receiver of all the poojas; just as the flowers offered into the river goes into the ocean only, any namaskara done to any finite dēvathā will go to Krishna and Krishna will bless the devotee through that particular deity; this is all to show that Krishna is infinite; all the other dēvathās are finite. Therefore if you want mōkṣa; whom should you go to; in the context of Bhagavad Gītā, you have to go to Krishna also.

If it is navarathri, I am reading Dēvi Bhāgavatham; in the context of Dēvi Bhāgavatham; if you want to mōkṣa, whom should you go to; Dēvi. So therefore, do not be enamoured by the form; no form is superior; no form is inferior, what is inferior and superior is determined by what you invoke in that form; and therefore Krishna says in verse No.22, which we were seeing in the last class, in the second line:

labhatē ca tataḥ kāmān mayaiva vihitān hi tān; labhatē; anyadēvathā bhakthaḥ labhatē, devotees of the other finite deities will certainly get their desires fulfilled; so anya dēvathā bhakthaḥ; kāmān labhatē, here kāma should not be translated as desire; but here kāma represents the desired end; the object of desire; kamyate iti kāma; karma vithpathihi; so kāmān viṣayan labhatē.

And what does the devotee think, he thinks my iṣṭa dēvathās has blessed me he thinks, like a person thinking postman is giving money, a child thinking, but a parent knows, postman does not give, but somebody in Mumbai, America in London, but that person is invisible. Similarly behind the visible deities; parichinna dēvathā; I am there. Therefore मयैवा विहितान् mayaiva vihitān; vihitān means given by, blessed by; offered by, or sanctioned by; that is nice; sanctioned by; I alone give the ultimate sanction, so maya vihitān, maya here represents, Krishna, the infinite God.

So, in short, Krishna says, sakāma bhakthi is valid; sakāma bhakthi will also be successful; these are all the plus points of sakāma bhakthi; because Krishna wants to talk about both the plus points of sakāma bhakthi and later he is going to talk about the minus points of sakāma bhakthi; because Krishna's intention is not to make us sakāma bhaktha; but Krishna wants us to ultimately become niṣkāma bhaktha; therefore not only he talks about the plus point, but he talks about minus points which we have to focus later;

What are the plus points; it is valid; it is allowed; it is OK; it is not sinful; there is nothing wrong if you ask anything from God; people say that you should not ask anything from God; people say even God knows; so God knows you want many things; but which one, you want, who has to decide; only you have to decide; if God has to decide, he will decide Mōkṣa only. In fact he is ready to give Mōkṣa but when a person is eager to have a child, somehow I want to have a baby; I do not have one, so a couple, who is very very particular to have a child. Suppose Bhagavān comes and says I will give mōkṣa; what will the couple say. Mōkṣa is eternal; we do not want that now; we can see that later, we want a baby now. So therefore what you want God cannot decide; and if God has to decide he will decide only one thing, which is good for all of us; and what is that; Mōkṣa; and God knows, even if he gives mōkṣa; many are not ready to take it; Swamiji, now there is a water problem in the house; I want water first and mōkṣa later; therefore what you want Bhagavān cannot decide; what you want, you alone have to decide, that is why in the śāstrā, before every pooja, sankalpa is present; otherwise if God knows what do you want; why should śāstrā prescribe a saṅkalpa; the very purpose of saṅkalpa is for you to decide and see. And there is nothing wrong in seeking any particular phalam that you want; you need not feel inferior, if you ask for a small little thing. And therefore, sakāma bhakthi is OK; but need not feel bad about it; it is not sinful, it is valid and it will produce the result, if the pooja is properly done.

That is a very big If: because once it is a sakāma pooja, I think we saw in the previous class, the rules and regulations are many. Krishna will emphasise this point very often; In sakāma pooja, rules and regulations become very very important, to be carefully and minutely observed; and if anyone of them is violated, the result cannot come; so observe the rules; then it will produce the result. So up to now we have got the plus points of sakāma bhakthi; now we are going to enter into the minus points; what is that:

देवान्देवयजो यान्ति मद्भक्ता यान्ति मामपि ॥ ७.२३ ॥

antavattu phalam tēṣāṃ tadbhavatyalpamedhasām |

dēvān dēvayajō yānti madbhaktā yānti māmapi | | 7.23 | |

तत् फलम् tat phalam that result तेषाम् अल्पमेधसाम् teṣām alpamedhasām (accruing) to those indiscriminate ones तु अन्तवद् भवति tu antavad bhavati is indeed finite देवयजः यान्ति devayajaḥ yānti the worshipers of gods attain देवान् devān the gods, मद्भक्ताः madbhaktāḥ the worshippers of यान्ति yānti attain माम् अपि mām api Me only

23. The result (accruing) to those indiscriminate ones is indeed finite. The worshippers of God attain the gods. The worshippers of Me attain Me only.

So Krishna has presented the benefits. Now he wants to give a statutory warning; you now have in the cigarette packet; first they will advertise; I think advertisement is banned perhaps; advertisement is every big; Every Puff A Promise or something like that; OK; promise of what nobody knows; that is safe statement; Every puff a promise; that is written is mōtta akṣar; big letter it is written; and then in invisible letters, statutory warning, cigarette smoking is injurious to health; Krishna is doing exactly that; He says sakāma bhakthi is wonderful; it is enjoyable; you can fulfil your materialist desires; therefore the sense pleasures, certainly you can get; but there is a problem. What is that; this we have discussed in the Upaniṣadic class, and in Gītā also, I think I have discussed this; every worldly gain, every materialist gain has got certain intrinsic dōṣās; which we classified into three varieties; every materialistic end, either belonging to this world or even svarga lōkā; it has got intrinsically three defects; what are those defects; I have talked about, the first defect is duḥkha misritatvam; all worldly accomplishments are mixed with equal amount of pain also; just as the two sides of the coin, all worldly pleasures have got pain; how is it mixed with pain; first there is pain in accomplishing that; fighting all competition; Kon banega carodpathi; Even to enter the competition, you have to fight; competition, heavy competition. Therefore the first thing is acquisition involves struggle; anxiety; tension, worry, fear, jealousy; whether the other person will beat me; once I have acquired, I have acquired, the problem of retaining it; yōga is followed by kṣēma; the preservation is a problem; so आर्जने दुःखम्; रक्षणे दुःखम् ārjanē duḥkham; rakṣaṇē duḥkham; and then however much you struggle to preserve it; inspite of your effort and care, everything will be lost in time; all material accomplishments will be lost in time; and the ultimate loss will also give pain and the pain will be directly proportional to the pleasure I derive; Krishna said in the fifth chapter, yē hi saṃsparśajā bhōgā duḥkhayōnaya ēva tē. Every worldly pleasure is a potential pain; this is called pain born out of nāśa; ārjanē duḥkham; rakṣaṇē duḥkham; nāśa duḥkham; therefore it is mixed with dukham; we call it duḥkha mistritvam; negative point No.1.

2. and the second defect in all the worldly accomplishment is athriphthikaratvam; since every accomplishment is finite in nature; limited in nature; we never choose to enjoy what we have got; we always think of the next higher possibility; what the other person has; always there are someone, some people who have got more than me; and therefore I never enjoy what I have; I always suffer from the disease of comparison; and comparison invariably leads to inferiority complex and jealousy; this is called dissatisfaction. In Kathōpaniṣad Nachiketas makes a bold statement; वित्तेन न तर्पणीयो मनुष्यः vittena na tarpaṇīyo manuṣyaḥ. No human being will be satisfied with any amount of wealth; otherwise why should there be corruption at higher level; lower levels understandable; why at higher levels; satisfaction never comes; So the second defect is what: athriphthikarathvam; my beggarliness continues; as Swami Dayananda swami says; he is a poor rich man; or a poor moneyed man; previously he was poor without money; now he is poor with money; the poverty, the inner bankruptcy will not go; because finite plus finite is equal to infinite. No. finite plus finite plus finite is equal to finite only; therefore since all these accomplishments keep me in finite level; my distance from infinity is the same; what is the distance between hundred rupees and infinite; And what is between a million rupees and infinite; the distance is same; Therefore I continue to be apūrṇam.

Therefore I travel from apūrṇam to apūrṇam in material accomplishments; What is the second defect; athriphthikaratvam; and the third and final defect we have seen it is what: bandakatvam; once you are used to those accomplishments, that status, that name, that fame, that attention, having enjoyed that, we can never think of losing them; it leads to some form of addiction; that is why after retirement for sometime, we suffer; because that importance, of course importance in society is gone; previously I had a position; even in family suddenly I find position is gone; so sambhāvitasya cākīrtimaraṇādatiricyatē; where does it come; Bhagavat Gītā; sambhāvitasya cākīrtimaraṇādatiricyatē; having enjoyed those things I get addicted to them; that without them, I cannot imagine a happy life.

This addiction or slavery or weakness is the third defect; and all these are the result of what; sakāma bhakthi; therefore what Krishna wants to say is sakāma bhakthi will keep a person in samsāra only; in sakāma bhakthi there is material progress; but in sakāma bhakthi there is spiritual stagnation; materially it is positive because there is progress; because of sakāma bhakthi he fulfills his desires. Therefore money is there; family is there; everything is there; there is progress; but from spiritual angle; sakāma bhakthi will keep a person in spiritual stagnation; that means what; he does not come down; there is no spiritual fall in sakāma bhakthi; because sakāma bhakthi is not committing a sin; therefore there is no spiritual fall; but there is no spiritual progress; therefore neither fall nor progress; there is stagnation; in niṣidda karma there is spiritual fall; in niṣkāma karma, there is spiritual growth; in sakāma karma; there is neither spiritual growth, nor spiritual fall; but there is spiritual stagnation; spiritual stagnation means samsāra will continue. I am a religious samsaari;

So an atheist cries everywhere; because of samsāra; this religious sakāma bhaktha cries in front of God; the crying will continue, one cries in front of God; one does not cry in front of God; crying continues why; because he is a religious samsāri; why because he is a sakāma bhaktha.

This is what is said in this slōkā; तेषाम् teṣām; so these people who are sakāma bhakthas are अल्पमेधसाम् alpamedhasām; they are unintelligent people; indiscriminate people, why, because through the very same worship, they could have sought the infinite mōkṣa; but instead of seeking the infinite from the Lord; they have chosen the finite result. So we have to imagine Bhagavān has two pockets; in one he has got infinite that is sreyas; in the other pocket, there is finite, preyas; both Bhagavān has got in his pocket and both his hands are inside the pocket, so that he can immediately give the benefit to the devotees and then He wants to see what a devotee asks after the namaskāram; so this person says water problem should be solved; another person says someone in the family should be married; another says that tender I should get; another says I should get into kon banega crorepati; everything except mōkṣa. Therefore Bhagavān's one hand is busy, giving giving, giving; the other hand is stuck in the mōkṣa pocket; nobody is asking; and he is ready to give free; No No; therefore he says alpamedhasām; unintelligent people; they have chosen a wrong destination; nitya-anitya vasthu viveka rahitānām; therefore vairagya rahitānām; therefore arta artarthi bhakthānām; they are those unintelligent ones and phalam, they will get the result in the form of money, name, fame position, people, they will get those results, but what is the tragedy, अन्तवद् तत् antavad tat; means what it is finite in nature; money will be exhausted; even the highest position you have to vacate. That is why in the 9th chapter, which is very very parāllel to the seventh chapter, Krishna will say, even Indra will have to vacate his position and become ordinary member in Madras.

kṣiṇē puṇyē martyalōkaṃ viśanti ... ९.२१

You have to come back, coovam nadikarayinile; back to coovam bank, and Upaniṣad goes one step further; even that is not guaranteed; it says इमम् लोकम् हीनतरम् वा विशन्ति imam lokam hīnataram vā viśanti; he may get an inferior janma. Therefore antavad means finite in nature. And whose mistake it is: Krishna says do not blame me; my hands are in both the packets; and I am ready to give anyone of them; preyas or sreyas; but you have chosen the wrong goals; therefore do not the put the akṣathai on my head; do not blame me.

So Krishna says, देवान्देवयजो यान्ति dēvān dēvayajō yānti; worshippers of finite dēvathās will get finite results which means sakāma bhakthāḥ antavad phalam prāpnuvanti. So worshippers of finite deities is a symbolic language for sakāma bhakthi; So sakāma bhakthas will attain finite result; dēvān yānti; here the word dēvā represents again finite result; like higher position. Because according to the scripture, all the Gods in heaven are none other than the ordinary jīvās only; who have got the exalted position because of their puṇya karma; that is why Yama Dharma rāja said.

न ह्यध्रुवैः प्राप्यते हि ध्रुवं तत् ।

jānāmyaham śēvadhirityanityam
na hyadhruvaiḥ prāpyatē hi dhruvam tat |

Even yama dharma rāja is a post; you can become yama dharma rāja; already you might be yama. Similarly you can become Indra; you can become anyone; it is a finite post, even brahmāji is a finite dēvathā post. You can become; and even that brahmāji will have to vacate that post; there will be a last day; he will have to get down.

Therefore dēva yaja, sakāma bhaktha; dēvān parichhinna phalam yānthe; whereas मद्भक्ता madbhaktās; my devotee, my worshippers, worshippers of Krishna, the infinite, who represent niškāma bhaktā; the intelligent ones, vivekinaḥ; jijnasu bhakhāḥ; mumukṣava; sādana catuṣṭaya sampanāḥ; those real ones, मामपि यान्ति mām api yānthe; they come to Me.

Here Me does not represent finite Krishna śārīram; Krishna's śārīram is finite or finite; Krishna's body is finite; therefore going to Krishna is attainment of the infinite represented by finite śārīram; Krishna's body symbolises the infinite brahman. So madbhakhāḥ; nishakāma bhakhāḥ; mām yānthe means pūrṇatvam yānthe; mōkṣam yānthe; jīvan mukthim labantē.

24. Not knowing My superior nature which is changeless and unsurpassed, the indiscriminate ones consider Me to be the unmanifest which has assumed manifestation

So here Krishna talks about two types of people; one set of people who have not understood God properly; and the other set who have understood God properly. Previously while talking about the nature of God, Krishna pointed out that I have got two aspects; one is parā prakṛti, the cētana tatvam; aparā prakṛti, the jada tatvam; the cētana amsa; and acētana amsa; the cētana tatvam. The consciousness aspect is called the higher nature of God; and the acētana jada tatvam is the lower nature of God.

Now those ignorant people are ones who see only the inferior nature of God and mistake the physical body of the Lord to be real God. The physical body of God is aparā prakṛti or parā prakṛti; the physical body of God. Do not ask me what is parā prakṛti and aparā prakṛti; I will be in trouble; that is why you have to keep revising the previous lessons; to get the full benefit; So Krishna's body comes under matter principle only; therefore it is only aparā prakṛti. And when I look upon God as a personality; with the body; I take God as one who is subject to arrival and departure; so departure means the visible body will again become what; after svargarohanam; after the avathara job is done; Lord Krishna disappears; in the Bhagavatham Krishna disappearance and departure is said; at the time of avathāra; the śarīram comes and after the avathāra, the śarīram goes; therefore the aparā prakṛti īśvara is subject to arrival and departure. Therefore if I say God comes and goes, I am talking about which aspect of God; parā or aparā prakṛti? I am only talking of aparā prakṛti; that is the material bodily aspect of God; that is why I am talking about arrival and departure. In fact, Gōpis had this problem only constantly; and you talk about hide and seek; கண்ணாமூச்சி விளையாட்டு kaṇṇāmūcci viḷayāṭṭu; Lord comes, gōpis are ecstatic; Lord goes, gōpika Gītām; I have told you the other day; therefore God comes, happy; God goes, unhappy; therefore it is aya ram gaya ram God; and whoever is talking about arriving and departing God, they only know the aparā prakṛti of the Lord; and Krishna says they are ignorant people; they are unintelligent people; they are deluded devotees.

Whereas those higher devotees; who know parā prakṛti aspect of īśvara; which is consciousness principle is that God, that is the higher aspect of God, subject to arrival and departure; is consciousness; subject to arrival and departure; it is never subject to arrival and departure, because it is all pervading; and not only it is all-pervading; consciousness is one thing which is evident all the time; Isn't it; Consciousness is that which is evident all the time; svayam prakāśa rūpam; nitya prakāśa rūpam; anavrata caitanya rūpam. Things can be covered; if you are talking about a thing being covered; you are able to talk about the covering of a thing; because of what; because you are aware that is covered; that means what; consciousness is one which is never covered by anything at any time. In fact, you are able to talk about all covers or coverings, because of what: the consciousness; jagrat svapna suṣuptiṣu sutathara ya samvit vijrumbate.

And therefore the wise people know that God is here and now; all the time evident as what: the consciousness in me. Prathibodha viditham matham. So they do not talk about God arriving; they do not talk about God departing; only unintelligent people talk about the arriving departing God. He says: abuddhayaha; abuddhyayaha means the unintelligent people, who mistake the Lord as the aparā prakṛiti, the physical body, manyante. They have got a misconception; so abuddhayaha; the unintelligent unenlightened, uninformed devotees; have got a misconception of the Lord,

And what is the misconception; अव्यक्तं व्यक्तित्मापन्नं avyaktaṁ vyaktimāpannaṁ; they think that Lord is avyaktha; means has disappeared now. And again vyaktimāpannaṁ; the Lord has appeared now; in fact in the puraṇam, you will always read; the devotees performs tapas for the Lord to appear. And the Lord will appear; in TV and all you can nicely see; out of nothing the Lord comes; and says Oh! Bhaktha; I am very very pleased by your tapas; What do you want. Then he asks: I should not die; then afterward blessing he wants; and after giving the boon, thatraivanthar gathe prabhu; the Lord disappears. Therefore the unintelligent people talk about the appearance and disappearance of God, which corresponds to what; the body, the physical God alone appears and disappears.

And why they have such a misconception; अजानन्तः ajānantaḥ; because they do not know the higher nature of God, which is not physical, which is not the body, which is not even the mind; which is not pāñca boudika; which does not have date of birth; which does not have date of death; that higher nature, they do not know, परं भावम् paraṃ bhāvam.

And what is that higher nature; caitanya svarūpam; which is everywhere all the time and ever evident, in fact, you are able to listen to every word of mine, because you are a conscious principle. If you are conscious of the first word; you had conscious. you are conscious of the second word; you have the conscious; and suppose I stop talking; what is there; silence; Are you conscious of the silence or not. If you are not conscious of silence, you cannot talk about silence. Therefore, whether there are thoughts or no thoughts, whether there are sounds or no sounds, forms or no forms; consciousness is always there; that consciousness is there paraṃ bhāvam; that satcidānanda svarūpam; satyam jnanam ananda brahma svarūpam, ajānantaḥ; they do not know;

And what is the glory of that nature, avyayam; it is never subject to change; whereas Krishna's physical body is only an inferior form of Krishna, because it is subject to change; he was a baby Krishna; then boy Krishna; then youth Krishna and thereafter disappearing Krishna; therefore it is Vyaya svarūpam; whereas the higher caitanya svarūpam is what; avyayam, ever changeless; Nirvikāram

And अनुत्तमम् anuttamam; anuttamam means unsurpassable; the highest; so navidhyate uttamam yathu, bahuvrihi; that which is the highest form; aparā prakṛti is only lower form; sakāma bhaktha holds on to the aparā prakṛti; the lower form of bhaktha; niškāma bhaktha alone knows the superiority of the higher form.

नाहं प्रकाशः सर्वस्य योगमायासमावृतः ।

मूढोऽयं नाभिजानाति लोको मामजमव्ययम् ॥ ७.२५ ॥

nāhaṃ prakāśaḥ sarvasya yōgamāyāsamāvṛtaḥ |

mūḍhō'yaṃ nābhijānāti lōkō māmajamavyayam || 7.25 ||

योगमायासमावृतः yōgamāyāsamāvṛtaḥ veiled by my yōga maya अहं न प्रकाशः ahaṃ na prakāśaḥ I am not evident सर्वस्य sarvasya to all मूढः mūḍhaḥ being

deluded अयं लोकः ayaṁ lokah; this world न अभिजानाति na abhijānāti does not know माम् अजम् mām ajam who is birthless अव्ययम् avyayam and deathless

25. Veiled by my yōgamaya, I am not evident to all. Being deluded, this world does not know Me who (am) is birthless and deathless.

So in the previous verse Krishna said, Krishna has got higher nature; What is that; consciousness; and it is ever evident. Krishna has got a lower nature; what is that: the physical body, which is subject to arrival and departure. Now one may have a doubt; if you do not have; we will create that doubt; what is that? If consciousness is ever evident and if consciousness is the higher nature of God; how come the people miss the ever evident higher nature.

And how come people are running after the inferior lower nature. Majority of devotees want to have Īśvara darśanam. I want to see the Lord; when they want to see God; they want to see inferior nature or superior nature? The very fact they say I want to see God, they have the picturisation of adharam madhuram; nayanam madhuram; vadanam maduram; etc. One lady told I want to have the rāsa dance with Krishna; that is my desire; that is my programme; what about mōkṣa? We can see that later; I want to have kolattam with Krishna. So therefore most of the people are interested only in the formed and finite God; why, if the infinite consciousness is always available, why do people vote for the inferior one; Krishna says योगमायासमावृतः yōgamāyāsamāvṛtaḥ.

So the lower nature or aparā prakṛti, that is the material nature of God is always attractive; it is beautiful; adharam; madhuram; so beautiful sabda; the sound of the flute; beautiful sparsa; beautiful roopam; beautiful rasa, beautiful gandha; the aparā prakṛti is always attractive. And therefore a person becomes extrovert; interested in that form. Therefore yōgamāyāsamāvṛtaḥ; so yōgamāya means that māya which consists of three guṇas; yōga here means combination; combination of what; guṇa, three guṇas; which is called māya; So yōga māya means thri-gunathmika maaya which belongs to the what; the aparā prakṛiti and this māya is always Mohini; very very tempting and therefore āvṛtaḥ; so deluded by, tempted by, seduced by, carried away by, robbed by yōgamāyāsamāvṛtaḥ; their intellect is what; the thinking power is clouded.

That is why people talk about 'fall in love'; why do you use the word 'fall'; I do not know; it is indirectly indicated; why cant a person rise in love; it does not happen; so therefore enamoured by some finite aspect or the other. Therefore, samāvṛtaḥ; अहं न सर्वस्य प्रकाशः āhaṃ sarvasya na prakāśaḥ; my higher nature is not evident because of extrovertedness, because of delusion.

And therefore मूढः mūḍhaḥ; even if people are interested in God; they are interested in formed God; they are interested in saṅuṇa īśvara; they are not interested in formless nirguṇa isvara; to get interested in that; you require some discrimination.

Om

From the 20th verse of this chapter, the seventh, Lord Krishna is dealing with the topic of sakāma bhakthi; a bhakthi or worship through which a person seeks everything other than God, the infinite. First Krishna talked about the plus points of sakāma bhakthi; and the plus points are that sakāma bhakthi is also perfectly okay; it is not sinful to entertain sakāma bhakthi. By sakāma bhakthi, a person does not spiritually fall. And not only that; sakāma bhakthi is very much valid and if it is properly practised, sakāma bhakthi can give the phalam also. All these are the plus points of sakāma bhakthi. Thereafter, Krishna talked about the minus points of sakāma bhakthi; in verse No.23; and the minus point is that sakāma bhakthi however sacred and great it may be, it can give only finite result. Either money or children, or possession or position or the highest lōkās it can give; but one should remember that all of them are finite in nature; and being finite in nature; they can give only pleasure for a limited time. And since they can give pleasure only a limited time, a time will come when those joys will have to be lost; and when those pleasures are lost, certainly they will give you pain; and therefore every finite pleasure according to Vēdānta is potential pain. And the pain that they can give will be directly proportional to the pleasure that one gains. And therefore all sakāma bhakthi will keep a person within samsāra only, which involves temporary pleasure, again pain, again temporary pleasure, samsāra will continue in sakāma bhakthi; a person may not fall alright; but a person will not spiritually grow through sakāma bhakthi.

And therefore what should an intelligent person do; if he is far-sighted enough and if he knows that all finite things are potential pain, an intelligent person should seek only the limitless one; which alone can give permanent security; which alone can give permanent peace; which alone can give permanent happiness.

So the next question is what is that infinite goal which is free from all these limitations; for which Lord Krishna says that infinite Goal I have already introduced before, which is parā prakṛti; My own higher nature. Everything falling within aparā prakṛti; aparā prakṛti is matter; everything falling within matter field will be finite; parā prakṛti alone is infinite. Therefore one should seek parā prakṛti. Then the natural next question is where is this parā prakṛti available; Where can I find it; Krishna says for this also, I have given the answer before. And what is that answer; parā prakṛti is the caitanyam, the consciousness principle, which is everywhere including your own body. Krishna said this: jīvabhūtāṃ mahābāhō yayēdaṃ dhāryatē jagat in the fifth verse of this chapter. Krishna had pointed out, parā prakṛti is the higher nature of God; parā prakṛti is the infinite; parā prakṛti is caitanya svarūpam and that caitanyam is in every one. In fact because of that consciousness alone, I am aware of everything including my body and my mind and thought. And therefore the infinite source of peace and happiness is where; it is closest in my very heart; in my very mind; it is there.

So the next question will be what; if the infinite is very much available closest, how come people run after finite goals of life; when infinite peace is my own courtyard; why should I go in search of finite; when I got water underneath in my house, just available for tapping; perennial source of ground water is available; why should I run after the miserable Corporation heavily chlorined sewage mixed water; which is put in some water tank and fight and why should I go after, when I have got perennial source of peace and security. Krishna says; there can be only one reason; what is that reason; when I have with me; I should not seek it outside; if I am seeking outside, it can be only one reason; and that is sheer ignorance of this fact. This fact is covered from my eyes; this fact is covered from my mind; this fact is veiled; and that is why we have to dis_cover; discovery means what; dissing the cover; dising means dismissing. So we require discovery because there is covering;

And the next natural question is who is responsible for this cover, for which Krishna gives the answer in 25th verse, which we were seeing in the last class. Nāhaṃ prakāśaḥ sarvasya yōgamāyāsamāvṛtaḥ. So yōgamāyā; my own māya shakthi has got the covering power; āvaraṇa shakthi. And this idea also is not a new idea; Krishna has given this in the 13th verse of this chapter.

त्रिभिर्गुणमयैर्भावैः एभिः सर्वमिदं जगत् ।

मोहितं नाभिजानाति मामेभ्यः परमव्ययम् ॥ ७.१३॥

tribhirguṇamayairbhāvairēbhiḥ sarvamidaṃ jagat |

mōhitaṃ nābhijānāti māmēbhyaḥ parāmavyayam | | 7.13 | |

Because of the power of māya; because of the three guṇas of māya, we miss our original nature and we are enamoured by the three guṇas of māya; three guṇas of aparā prakṛti. And where are they; the three guṇas are in the outside world; and three guṇas are in the form of my very body; and the three guṇas are in the form of my mind, because mind is matter, body is matter, world is matter, I am enamoured by matter, and miss the consciousness, the spirit. And therefore अयं लोकः मूढः ayaṃ lokaḥ mūḍhaḥ; the whole world is deluded by the attractive matter and miss the consciousness. So mūḍhaḥ ayaṃ; न अभिजानाति na abhijānāti; he does not recognise the fact that the very source of fullness is in his own body; mūḍhaḥ ayaṃ na abhijānāti.

And there are people called water diviners; dowsers; dowsing, and they will be able to find out where water is there; they use some material and they have got some special character in the body and they can fix up and they can say that water is down; and if you make use of them; you can dig the well and access the water; Similarly, the guru-water diviners, they are ready to inform you that whatever you are seeking, you have got underneath you; and how to dig the borewell they know; sṛavaṇam; mananam, nidhidhyāsanam; all these are not my idea. Sankaracharya gives this in Vivekachūdāmani.

So that the source of ānanda, the source of peace, is within you; there is a method of digging and owning that peace. Even though gurus are there to help; this person tempted by the materialism, he does not have time to come to the guru; He does not have time for śāstra. And therefore disowning what he has, he runs after the very same thing, externally. So what should we call him; mūḍhaḥ; upaniṣad is most impatient; it says vimūḍhaḥ; Krishna is compassionate; therefore says mūḍhaḥ; upaniṣad says vimūḍhaḥ means what, filtered muttāl; mūḍhaḥ ayam na abhijānāti lōkaḥ. The entire world is busy and bigger the city, more you are busy; go to Mumbai, my God, so busy, rush; and go to America, still busier you are. And they criticise you are all lousy people; therefore busy, busy, busy, no time for the primary pursuit of life. We have forgotten for what we have come here; therefore Krishna is so angry. Therefore he says; lōkaḥ; here lōkaḥ means the people of the world, do not recognise Me; Me means parā prakṛti; which is ajam, birthless and avyayam; deathless, eternal Me, they do not have time to pursue.

Continuing.

वेदाहं समतीतानि वर्तमानानि चार्जुन ।

भविष्याणि च भूतानि मां तु वेद न कश्चन ॥ ७.२६ ॥

vēdāhaṃ samatītāni vartamānāni cārjuna |

bhaviṣyāṇi ca bhūtāni mām tu veda na kaścana || 7.26 ||

अहं वेद ahaṃ veda I know, भूतानि bhūtāni all the beings समतीतानि samatītāni belonging to the past वर्तमानानि च vartamānāni ca present च भविष्याणि ca bhaviṣyāṇi the future, तु tu but न कश्चन na kaścana no one वेद माम् veda mām knows Me अर्जुन Arjuna Arjuna !

26. I know all the beings belonging to the past, present and future, but no one knows Me, Oh! Arjuna.

So in the previous verse Krishna said the whole world; that is the entire humanity is deluded by māya; that is why māya is called mōhini; deluder. So naturally the question comes, if māya is deluding everyone, then will it not delude the Lord also because after-all Lord is intimately associated with māya, the aparā prakṛti; because he has told before, daivi hyesha guṇa mayi, mama māya duratyaya; māya is my own māya, He has said; therefore will it not delude the Lord also.

The question will come; because, if there is a book in between; because of the book, if you cannot see me, because your vision is obstructed, the same thing holds good for me also; Is'nt it? Because of the book covering, you cannot see me; then, naturally, because of the very book, I will also not be able to see you. Therefore, will not māya cover the Lord will be the question. Krishna says, that is not there; I am the master of māya; whereas you are the slave of māya; that is the difference. I am the master of māya, therefore even though māya is closest to Me, I am the controller; whereas you are deluded by māya.

So Swami Chinmayānanda gives a beautiful example. It seems the father was taking the child on the road, then a person was coming in the opposite direction and policeman was holding him. Therefore the boy asked his father; what is this; then the father told; this person is a thief; that is why a policeman is nearby to take him to prison; then after person, another person was coming with two policeman; then he asked who is he; he said that he is a bigger thief; and therefore there are two policemen, therefore he will not run; then the child made a beautiful law; what is that; more the number of policeman around, bigger the thief; then he saw the President coming; surrounded by too many policemen. Then the child said; daddy daddy, biggest thief of the country is going; then the father has to tell; thief is also surrounded by police; the President is also surrounded by the police; but the difference is one is the controller; the other one is the controlled. President is the controller of the policeman; whereas the thief controlled by the police. Similarly māya is around me, māya is around God also; God is the controller of māya; why because he is God; and I am controlled by māya, that is why I am called the jīva.

Therefore Krishna says अहं वेद ahaṃ vēda; I know I do not have the problem of ignorance; I know both parā prakṛti as well as aparā prakṛti; in its entirety. So vēdāhaṃ; what भूतानि bhūtāni; all the beings; the entire creation I know thoroughly; I do not have the limitation caused by māya; समतीतानि वर्तमानानि भविष्याणि samatītāni vartamānāni bhaviṣyāṇi; samatītāni means the past, vartamānāni means the presents; bhaviṣyāṇi means the future; all the three words are adjective of bhūtāni; so samatītāni bhūtāni; vartamānāni bhūtāni; bhaviṣyāṇi bhūtāni; past beings; present beings; future begins.

In short, the entire creation, I know; I do not have the problem caused by Māya; whereas कश्चन मां न वेद kaścana māṃ na vēda, whereas the jīva does not know Me, especially my parā prakṛti; therefore kaścana here refers to jīvaḥ; jīvaḥ māyaya avruthaḥ san na vēda. Therefore jīva has the problem of ignorance; Īśvara does not have the problem of ignorance; and therefore what; jīva suffers from samsāra. That is explained.

इच्छाद्वेषसमुत्थेन द्वन्द्वमोहेन भारत ।

सर्वभूतानि संमोहं सर्गे यान्ति परन्तपः ॥ ७.27 ॥

icchādvēṣasamutthēna dvandvamōhēna bhārata |

sarvabhūtāni sammōhaṃ sargē yānti parāntapa || 7.27 ||

27. Oh! Arjuna, due to the delusion of duality caused by desire and hatred, all beings get deluded at the time of birth itself, Oh Arjuna.

So the jīva has missed the infinite God who is residing in himself; infinite peace which is within himself; infinite security which is within himself, he has missed; when, right from the time of birth itself. Therefore Krishna says the second line, सर्वभूतानि संमोहं सर्गे यान्ति sarvabhūtāni sammōhaṃ sargē yānti; sargē means what at the time of birth itself every jīva is affected by ignorance. And since I do not know that the peace and happiness are within myself, I seek the very same peace and happiness outside. Thus begins the life of extrovertedness; बालस्तावत्क्रीडासक्तः bālastāvatkriḍāsaktaḥ. First I seek happiness and security from toys as baby. Then as I grow up, motor cycles and what you call, computer games this and that; and then a little bit grown up, wife and children, through them I seek; little bit more grown up; तरुणस्तावत्तरुणीसक्तः taruṇastāvat taruṇīsaktaḥ vṛdha stāvaccintāsaktaḥ; throughout the life he is extrovert; he never asks the question; perhaps what I seek may be within myself; he does not even have that suspicion; in fact he falls dead, but he never finds that what he wants is within himself. Therefore the entire world is deluded because of ignorance; and not only that, the more the scientific advancement, they try to make me more and more extrovert only; they increase the number of channels; number of entertainment; increase the number of travel the whole world for Rs.99. Then immediately you think, it is good; world tour for Rs.99 only; then rest of life, you pay Rs.1000 monthly. That is shown in a smaller print; so thus, you will find that you are kept busy throughout, never allowing you the time for self-enquiry.

And therefore he says, द्वन्द्वमोहेन dvandvamōhēna; whole world is deluded by dvandva; dvandva means pairs of opposites, caused by what rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ; icchā and dveṣaḥ; I divide the world into two; this is the source of joy; this is the source of sorrow; which is my own delusion.

And having divided the world into two; whole life I am interested in acquiring what I consider as a source of joy, and I am busy getting rid of the things I consider source of sorrow; sukha hētum prati pravṛtti, duḥkha hētu viṣaye nivṛtti; getting and getting rid; acquiring-disposing; acquiring-disposing, this is called pravṛtti - nivṛtti activities; born out of what; rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ. And since the delusion is born out of raga rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ pair, it is called dvandvamōha; dvandvamōha, rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ pair caused mōha. And because of this delusion, born out of rāgaḥ and dveṣaḥ; the whole world is running here and there.

As far as Vēdānta is concerned it does not look upon the world as either cause of happiness or cause of sorrow. World is neither cause of happiness, nor the cause of sorry. Cause of happiness is knowing myself; cause of sorrow is what; not knowing myself. Sorrow and happiness are both centered on me. Self-ignorance being cause of sorrow; self-knowledge being cause of happiness, I do not know. Therefore I put the responsibility on the world; and go on adjusting, change the people, change the car, and nowadays people change the wives also and husbands also; and if they are not available for change, change your body, change your hairstyle; if you have mustach, next day remove it; change the strap of the watch; change this and that; we go on adjusting the world, thinking that a change of situation will make me better. And I am so busy, no time for solving the real problem; Sammmōham, sargē yanti parāntapa. This is the lot of humanity; but there are some blessed people, somehow, they are different from the majority; Who are they, the Gītā students.

dvandvamōhanirmuktāḥ and who are totally free from the delusion of duality, भजन्ते माम् bhajante mām seek Me दृढव्रताः dr̥ḍhavrataḥ with a resolve

28. However, those of the people who are of noble actions, whose papa has ended and who are totally free from the delusion of duality seek Me with a firm resolve.

But there are blessed people, who have done some puṇya karma; either in the previous janma or in this janma; and because of the puṇya karma they do, in the form of pañca mahā yajñās prescribed in the third chapter we saw, their mind gets purer and purer and therefore their obstacles get lesser and lesser. So puṇya karmaṇa janānām pāpam anthagatham. In the case of those people who have done some pāpam, their pāpam becomes lesser.

And what is the indication of the reduction of pāpam; they begin to think. They begin to think; that means what; They begin to think means what? Until then, they were not thinking. Did you not understand; if not, it means that you were not thinking. Krishna says when pāpam comes down only we begin to think; what am I doing; if adjusting the world can give me happiness; I should have discovered happiness long before, I have been busy adjusting from my childhood, I am now so many years old; you can fill up, 70 or 80, I have done so many things; but even now I am not happy. In fact, I feel like singing; அந்த நாளும் வந்திடாதோ anta nālum vaṇṭiṭāṭō; those days seems to be wonderful. In spite of so many achievements; children are there; grand children are there; minimum achievements; other achievements are there or not; so many things I have acquired; but my problems continues; perhaps my direction is wrong; if my direction is right; at least I should have stumbled upon the solution. The very fact my, what you call, the disturbance continues, anxiety continues, worry has worsened; tension, I require sleeping pills; therefore, for something must be wrong; parīkṣyalokān karmachithān brāhmanō nirvēda māyat. Once that purity comes, he feels like asking someone; is some other direction; do we have some other goal in life; is it merely arta and kāma; or do I have something else; and the moment the enquiry begins; the moment the purity comes, Bhagavān begins to give direction. Their delusion subsided and they begin to understand sukam and duḥkam are not outside; the problem is not outside; the problem is within me. As Dayānanda Swami gave a talk, the Problem is You; the Solution therefore is You alone. So once the direction is turned towards myself; then I have become spiritual. Until then, there was other spirituality!!!; he was taking to that; the real spirituality is when I turn towards myself. Krishna says when the pāpam ends, te dvanada mōha nirmukthāha bhavathi. They are no more deluded; they have got nityānitya vasthu vivēkaḥ; therefore they have got ihāmuthraḥ phala bhōga vairāgyam, they have got; they have diagnosed the problem of life.

And what is the problem; I do not know who I am; that is the only one; only one? that is the fundamental problem; Without knowing what I am, I have been doing all things, like a drunk, I have been doing that; and therefore what do they do; mām bhajante. They begin to seek me, the parā prakṛti; not the aparā prakṛti personal God; but the parā prakṛti, they begin to seek, bhrama anveṣaṇam; seeking the infinite; which is called niṣkāma bhakthi. Therefore because of confusion, people are sakāma bhakthas; once clarity of thinking comes, one will become niṣkāma bhaktha. Then the next question is what is niṣkāma bhakthi; which we will enter.

आश्रित्य माम् āśritya mām having resorted to Me, ते ये यतन्ति te ye yatanti those who strive जयामरणमोक्षाय jayāmarāṇamokṣāya for freedom from decay and death विदुः viduḥ come to know तद् ब्रह्म tad brahma that Brahman कृत्स्नम् kṛtsnam completely अध्यात्म adhyātma the Self (completely) च कर्म ca karma and karma अखिलम् akhilam completely

29. Having resorted to Me, those who strive for freedom from decay and death come to know that Brahman completely, the Self (completely), and karma completely.

Where does niṣkāma bhakthi begin? When I know that world is neither the cause of sorrow, nor the cause of happiness, and when I know that I am the cause of both sorrow and happiness. How do I become the cause of both; when I have got a wrong understanding about myself; misunderstood-I is the cause of sorrow, rightly-understood-I is the cause of happiness. Like when a rope is understood and seen as a rope, it is not the cause of fear; but when the very same rope is misunderstood as snake, it frightens.

Similarly when I am misunderstood, I become the cause of sorrow. When I know myself, I am the cause of happiness. Once I have this clarity, then my attempt would be what; to know myself; jijñāsa bhakthi begins; Therefore Krishna says; jarā maraṇa mōkṣāya, for attaining mōkṣa, freedom, from what; jarā maraṇam; freedom from samsāra. Samsāra consists of what; many problems, but the most prominent problems; frightening problems are and maraṇam; old age and death. These are two things, we dread; we never want to die; we will tell; we are not afraid of death; till it comes near; when the death comes, nobody wants; and even if one is not frightened of death; one is certainly frightened of old age. They say Swamiji, I should die posukkinnu; means instantly; I should go to bed, and in sleep I should die; why, I am frightened of old age, where all the faculties go away and mind is fully active; and it has got enough matter for worrying also. What else you need; and you cannot share the worry because everybody is busy. And they know that once they ask: How are you; you will start from 1917. Who has time for that; and you do not remember that you have told this story; Therefore repeatedly like a broken gramophone record; they will be telling the same thing; Therefore nobody to share; I have got so much to share; I cannot do anything; this is a mental problem; jarā is the worst samsāra; So if you want to mōkṣa; mōkṣa is from jarā maraṇa mōkṣa; For this mōkṣa, ye yatanti; some people work for that immortality; work for that freedom; माम् आश्रित्य mām āśritya; by taking shelter in Me; By taking shelter in Me; that is seeking my grace, there are some people who want to go beyond kāla; jarā and maraṇam represents time. Going beyond time means going beyond matter; matter and time are inseparāble; matter and time are inseparāble; so going beyond old age and death means, going beyond time; See the logic; going beyond time means going beyond matter; going beyond matter means, going beyond aparā prakṛti; going beyond aparā prakṛti is going to parā prakṛti. Some people work to attain parā prakṛti; तद्विदुः tadviduḥ; they certainly discover the parā prakṛti; which is the source of immortality; which is the source of security; which is the source of peace, which is the source of happiness, that some rare people discover, tē viduḥ.

That means what; they will know both the aparā prakṛti as well as parā prakṛti; of the Lord. Until now when they were worshipping personal God, they only knew aparā prakṛti. Now they know the formed aparā prakṛti as well as the formless parā prakṛti; they know the saṅuṇa īśvara; they know the nirṅuṇa īśvara; in fact, they know the Lord, in totality; tē viduḥ.

But here, Krishna does a small mischief; what he wants to say is: These niṣkāma bhakthas will ultimately know both parā and aparā prakṛtis; this is what He wants to say; you should remember parā and aparā prakṛtis are what; the higher and lower nature of God; instead of using these two words, Krishna uses a set of new technical words; which he has never discussed before. Krishna could have said what; they will know both parā and aparā prakṛti of Me. But instead of saying that, he introduces a set of new term; and naturally Arjuna will not understand and naturally Arjuna will ask questions; naturally we can go to 8th chapter. This is Krishna's trick to keep you coming to the classes; therefore this parā and aparā prakṛti put together is presented with a new set of technical terms; what are they; Brahma is technical term No.1; which will be explained only in the 8th chapter. Then the next technical term he uses is karma; so tē tat brahma kṛtsnam viduḥ. They will know Brahman completely; then अखिलम् कर्म विदुः akhilam karma viduḥ; they will know karma completely; what is karma; Krishna does not explain; he will explain only in the 8th chapter; these people will know Brahma, these people will know karma; second term; then अध्यात्मम् adhyātmaṃ; they will also know completely. What adhyātmaṃ is; what is the meaning of adhyātmaṃ; adhyātmaṃ; I also do not want to explain; then you would not come for the 8th chapter; therefore the 8th chapter Arjuna will ask what is brahman, what is karma; what is adhyātmaṃ. That is coming; therefore be patient; we will see the details there; therefore a īśvara jñāni will know these three factors and not only these factors, he will know some more; what are those some more.

प्रयाणकालेऽपि च मा ते विदुर्युक्तचतसः ॥ ७.३० ॥

sādhībhūtādhidaivaṃ māṃ sādhiyajñaṃ ca yē viduḥ |
prayāṇakālē'pi ca māṃ tē viduryuktacētasah || 7. 30 ||

ते युक्तचेतसः te yuktacetasaḥ those with disciplined mind ये विदुः ye viduḥ who know माम् mām Me साधिभूताधिदैवम् sādhibhūtādhidaivam along with adhibhuta, adhidaiva, च साधियज्ञम् ca sādhiyajñam and adhiyajñā विदुः माम् viduḥ mām will remember Me प्रयाणकाले अपि च prayāṅakāle api ca at the time of death also

30. Those with disciplined mind who know Me along with adhibhuta, adhidaiva and adhiyajñā will remember Me at the time of death also.

Not only they will know the previous three factors, they will know the following three factors also. What are those three; ādhi bhūtam; ādhi daivam; ādhi yajñām cha. So these three factors also they know; in short, they will know six factors. What are the six factors; brahma, karma, adhyātmaṃ, ādhi bhutam; ādhi daivam; ādhi yajñām; all these six factors they know. But you know what is the secret; all these six factors is nothing but parā prakṛti plus aparā prakṛti; but the very parā-and-aparā-prakṛti-mixture Krishna is presenting in the form of these six technical terms.

And not only he will know these six technical words, or the six factors; Krishna adds one more; this wise man; or wise women, (women's lib day) let us be safe; so this wise person, this wise person will not only know these six factors completely; wise person will remember them at the time of death also; प्रयाणकालेऽपि च मां prayāṅakālē:'pi ca mām; This wise person will remember Me, consisting of parā-and-aparā-prakṛti; or consisting of these six factors, the wise person remembers at the time of death also.

Naturally, this will also create a question in Arjuna's mind; why should Krishna talk about Īśvara smaraṇam at the time of death; we are now happily alive and we hope that the maraṇa kālam has not come. Why should Krishna specifically mention; Īśvara smaraṇam at the time of death; from that we get two questions; Is there any significance in Īśvara smaraṇam at the time of death. That is question No.1. second question is how can a person, remember God at the time of death; because at the time of death, we will remember everything except God. Because we have got so many incomplete jobs; this deposit that deposit, etc. bill is there; key is here; to whom all I have lent money (from whom I have borrowed is forgotten completely); so we have got so many things; And so many people we would like to meet; peran pethi; so who will remember God. So Krishna is talking about prayāṅa kāla Īśvara smaraṇam, which seems to have some significance; therefore the question is what is the significance of that; and how to remember God at the time of death.

Naturally, Arjuna will ask seven questions in the next chapter; what brahma, what is karma; what is ādhi bhūtam; what is ādhi deivam; what is ādhi yajñām; and how to remember God at the time of death; therefore these two slōkās are the seed for the next chapter. Therefore Krishna says here; prayāṇakālē api; prayāṇam means death; not Delhi, Mumbai, Calcutta, etc. of course they are also prayāṇam; prayāṇakālē api, at the time of death also; yukta cētasa also; Those devotees of disciplined mind; remember God that too at the time of death; requires tremendous discipline, and therefore they are yukta cētaṣaḥ; yukta cētaṣaḥ is the name of the people who have got the disciplined mind and those people mām viduḥ; viduḥ means smaranthi. They remember Me at the time of death also; and who are they; Niṣkāma bhakthāḥ.

So with this Krishna concludes the topic of sakāma bhakthi; niṣkāma bhakthi; differentiation and with this the seventh chapter is getting over; with the seed for 8th chapter; Like முந்நொட்டம் munnottam; like munnottam in TV; two people would be in conversation and you would want to know; they will say next week; certainly you will watch that; Krishna is using that technique here.

Om

Today I will give you a summary of the seventh chapter. As I had indicated before, the seventh chapter happens to be a turning point in the format of Gītā teaching; in the first six chapters, Lord Krishna focused on certain topics and now from the seventh chapter onwards, Krishna is going to focus on a different set of topics.

In the first six chapters, three topics were generally dealt with, viz., jīva svarūpam; jīva prayathnaḥ; and karma yōgaḥ; jīva svarūpam meaning the essential nature of the individual; in whose analysis Krishna established that the individual is neither the perishable body, nor the changing mind, but the changeless consciousness is the nature of the individual. This was done almost in every chapter, 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 6th. Then Krishna highlighted on the role of individual effort, so that we do not have a dangerous fatalistic approach. One of the pitfalls of the human pursuit or human life is the tendency to become fatalistic. Especially when we face a few problems. When we face a few failures; we conclude that nothing is in our hands; everything is controlled by someone; things have been already written on the forehead, we are only simple puppets in the hands of someone. This is the most dangerous fatalistic approach which is fatal. Spiritually fatal. Therefore Krishna gives a strong warning in the first six chapters. Never take to this fatalistic approach; it is not that everything is pre-determined; you have got control over your future; you can take charge of your life; Krishna does not say I have got total control. Krishna says I am not totally helpless. Krishna does not say I have total control; Krishna only says I am not totally helpless; I do have a contributory role in deciding my future and therefore take charge of your life. You are responsible for your future; this is called jīva prayathna; puruṣa prayathnaḥ; or assertion of the freewill, which is the unique faculty of a human being. Thus jīva svarūpam was topic one; jīva prayathna was topic two; and the third topic was karma yōga; as a very important spiritual sādhanā for one's spiritual growth. This karma yōga sādhanā also was highlighted up to the end of the 6th chapter.

From the 7th chapter onwards, the topics are going to change and I said three topics are going to be newly and freshly highlighted; first one being Īśvara svarūpam; the nature of God; and the second being Īśvara anugraḥ; the role, the contributory role of Īśvara's grace. While the individual effort has a important contributory role, equally important is the role of Īśvara anugraḥ. This is the second topic; not only in the 7th chapter, but in the following chapters up to 12th. And then the final topic Krishna will highlight is the upāsana sādhanā, the discipline of meditation upon God in any particular form. Īśvara upāsanam; otherwise called saguṇa dhyānam; Īśvara svarūpam; Īśvara anugraḥ; Īśvara dhyānam; these three are going to be focused.

With this background we have to study each one of these six chapters, with this background. We will try to summarise the 7th chapter.

Krishna introduces the subject matter in the first three verses; so straight away he makes it very clear. I am going to deal with the nature of God. And the knowledge of the nature of God; that is Īśvara svarūpam jñānam; he divides into two; jñānam and vijñānam; jñānam referring to the saguṇa Īśvara knowledge; the knowledge of the formed-Īśvara; and vijñānam, referring to the knowledge of the higher formless-Īśvara; nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam, vijñānam bhavathi; saguṇa Īśvara jñānam jñānam bhavathi; and hey Arjuna I am going to give you both jñānam and vijñānam.

And then Krishna glorifies this knowledge; do not approach this knowledge as a timepass, because Sunday is a holiday; nothing else to do; take it seriously; because it is a very very rare knowledge; very very valuable knowledge. In fact it is the liberating knowledge; a knowledge which gives you fulfilment at all the levels; emotional fulfilment; as well as intellectual fulfilment.

And thus Krishna gives the introduction by mentioning the subject matter as well as the glory of knowing that. Having introduced in the first three verses; from the fourth verse up to the 12th verse, Krishna discusses the main topic of this chapter, as well as the five chapters, viz., Īśvara svarūpam; which is very important subject matter; first Krishna defines God. What is Īśvara. Krishna says Īśvara is that principle which consists of two factors, known as parā prakṛti and aparā prakṛti; Īśvara is that one principle which consists of two aspects; two features, two amśas known as parā prakṛti and aparā prakṛti. In simple English spirit principle and matter principle. Only thing is when I use the word spirit, do not take any other spirit; spirit means consciousness principle.

And what are the common features and uncommon features of these two; you should remember all throughout the Gītā study; the common feature is that both of them are beginningless; consciousness is never created; never creatable. It is eternal principle; and the second is matter also is never created, never creatable. Even according to the modern science; by the law of conservation of matter, we know even an ounce of matter cannot be created by all the scientists in the world. Therefore parā prakṛti, the consciousness is anādi; aparā prakṛti, the matter is anādi; this anādi cētana tatvam; plus anādi acētana tatvam, this mixture is called anādi īśvaraḥ; Therefore do not ask when did īśvara come. īśvara did not come. He is not gone. This is information No.1; the nature of God.

Then Krishna gives an additional and important knowledge; and what is that; this īśvara, who is a mixture of parā and aparā prakṛti is the cause of the entire universe. In fact, this īśvara alone has evolved into the universe. This īśvara alone manifests as the universe. In technical language we say īśvaraḥ jagat upādāna kāraṇam. Krishna does not present īśvara as a person, sitting somewhere; and going on creating things and dubbing like making chappathis or something. No. go on a creating. Therefore īśvara does not create the world and dump it down; but īśvara himself evolves into the form of the world. And technically it is called; the upādāna kāraṇam; shristi, sthithi, laya kāraṇam īśvaraḥ; or jagat kāraṇam īśvaraḥ; then having said this much, Krishna derives important corollary from this information or knowledge, which is important for the future development of the teaching. What is that. If īśvara is the cause, God is the Cause, and world is the effect, an important corollary we get is; there is no world separate from God; There is no world separate from God; because God himself is appearing or manifesting as the world which means world is another name for God himself in a different configuration; If we cannot understand this, I do not think, you cannot understand; we can take any example and understand. If Gold is the cause, ornaments are the effect, we can very easily conclude that there are no ornaments separate from gold. There is no substance called ornament; ornament is non-substantial; the only substance that is there is gold alone. Then what does the word ornament indicate; the word ornament does not indicate a new substance; but the word ornament indicates the same substance gold; but in a different manifestation. What was previously called gold in one condition is called ornament in another condition; there is no substantial difference but there is only avastha bhēdaḥ; configuration difference; like ice, water and steam; these three do not have substantial difference; all these three are H₂O; The difference is only in avastha bhēdaḥ; one is in solid state; another in liquid; another is in gaseous state;

And therefore Krishna says Arjuna do not take this world for granted; do not look down upon the world; because the world is my own avathāra as it were. If Rama is an avathāra of God. Krishna is another manifestation of God; the very world itself is an avathāra of God which is very easily available for whom; the world avathāra is available for whom; You should not ask for whom; it is not available; For having Rāma avathāra darśanam, you might have to do lot of tapas. Tyāgarāja had to do; 96 crores Rāma nāma; thus you have to do lot of tapas, for the experience of Rāma avathāra; Krishna avathāra; but without any tapas, one avathāra of the Lord, one manifestation of the Lord, i.e. accessible to everyone is Viśvarūpa avathāra; This is called Viśvarūpa avathāra.

And therefore Krishna said when you look upon the world, if you remember this fact, which fact, God alone is appearing as the world, then you look at the world as divinity; it is no more a secular world; it is no more a mundane world; but it is a divine world; and therefore Krishna said

rasō'hamapsu kauntēya prabhā'smi śaśisūryayōḥ |
praṇavaḥ sarvavēdēṣu śabdaḥ khē pauraṣaṃ nṛṣu || 7.8 ||

open the eyes, bhagavān, open the ears, bhagavan, nose you smell, bhagavān, காக்கை சிறகினிலே நன்தலாலா kākkai ciṛakiṇilē naṅtalālā. This is called sarvaṃ Viṣṇu mayam jagat; if you are a Śiva bhaktha, sarvaṃ Śiva mayam jagat. And therefore, God is in the form of the world is the important derivation.

And then comes another technically important understanding. If the world is manifestation of God; the world also must consist of parā and aparā prakṛti; because if Īśvara is a mixture of two; the world also must be a mixture of two. Therefore what is aparā prakṛti and what is parā prakṛti here: Krishna says whatever you experience is aparā prakṛti; matter only; the world is matter; aparā prakṛti; the body is matter, aparā prakṛti. That is why bio-chemistry is possible; all chemicals only; outside it is chemistry, the same chemicals inside, bio-chemistry; That is the only difference; outside chemistry; inside bio-chemistry. So world is aparā prakṛti; body is aparā prakṛti; even mind is aparā prakṛti; because mind is also subtle matter only; that is why change in body chemistry can often affect your psychological condition.

That is why psychiatrists often offer chemical medicine for what problem; depression tablet; depression is a emotional problem; why are you giving chemicals for that; They say and they have proved that a difference, a change in bio-chemistry can change your emotion. From this it is proved that mind is also what: subtle chemicals. subtle matter. Therefore world is aparā prakṛti body is aparā prakṛti; and mind is aparā prakṛti.

And where do I find the blessed parā prakṛti; தேடி தேடி; search and search; Krishna says never search for parā-prakṛti; you will never across parā prakṛti; Then what is parā prakṛti; the very searcher, the very I, the experiencer of the world, experiencer of the body, experiencer of the mind, that I, the observer consciousness principle is parā prakṛti; jīvabhūtāṃ mahābāhō yayēdaṃ dhāryatē jagat (7.5); when the consciousness obtains before the creation evolves, it is called paramātmā. When the very same consciousness is available after the creation comes, in our body, the very same consciousness is called jīvātmā; सृष्टेहे पूर्वम् परमात्मा; सृष्टेहे अनन्तरम् जीवात्मा इति उच्यते sṛṣṭehē pūrvam paramātmā; sṛṣṭehē anantaram jīvātmā iti ucyatē; Consciousness is ever the same. So this is the Īśvara svarūpam, discussed from verse No.4 to 12th.

Then from verse No.13 to 19, Krishna deals with the topic of samsāra kāraṇam; and samsāra parihāraḥ; what is the cause of human misery; the cause of human worries; human anxieties; human fear. In simple language, samsāraḥ; and only he diagnoses the disease, he also gives the tablet; the medicine; what is the bacteria; and what is the anti-biotics. What is the cause of samsāra. Krishna says when the Lord or the world is available in the form of aparā prakṛti; the matter principle and in the form of parā prakṛti; we human beings are pre-occupied with only aparā prakṛti; We heavily spend our life in the pursuit of aparā prakṛti; We heavily lean upon aparā prakṛti; for our security; for our happiness; For our fulfilment; unfortunately we are depending on the aparā prakṛti or material aspect of the world; What is the wrong in that. The problem is aparā prakṛti by nature being matter, matter by nature being changing;

aparā prakṛti will never remain steadily; Any part of aparā prakṛti; let it be body; let it be mind; or let it be anything in the world; it can never remain the same. It is heavily fluctuating; and fluctuation means I can never keep the ideal condition all the time. Generally ideal conditions do not come; some problem would be there somewhere; ideal condition is like ideal gas in chemistry; It does not exist; only for writing in the book; there is no such thing like ideal gas; like pure God means does not exist; pure gold is 99.9999999%. Similarly perfect ideal aparā prakṛti you can never order; and even by some good luck and punya; even if all conditions are favourable, you cannot retain. Either there is a problem in yōga acquiring or in kshema, maintaining. As somebody said first we work for status; then we work for quo; quo means what status quo; Working for status is called yōga; working for quo is called kṣēma. This is our struggle. And invariably miserably we fail because aparā prakṛti is subject to birth, growth, transformation, decay and death ultimately.

And therefore leaning an insecure thing is going to give me security and therefore expecting security from aparā prakṛti is samsāra. It is like trying to extract oil from sand. You can crush any amount. But no oil will come; why, because it should be there; aparā prakṛti can never give permanence, because it is not there in that; and therefore Krishna says aparā prakṛti can be used only for fun; only for enjoyment, only for game, only for appreciation; handle aparā prakṛti but when you want to dependence, psychological or emotional security and fulfilment; turn towards something permanent and only permanent thing is parā prakṛti. You need not reject aparā prakṛti; you need not throw away aparā prakṛti. I have given you an example, when a beautifully decorated cardboard chair is there; you can use it in keeping in kolu; In your show case you can keep, you need not destroy it; you do everything; you can give it as a wedding gift; everything, except one thing; what; do not sit over that chair; when I say that do not sit over that chair, I do not ask you to hate the chair; I do not ask you even to renounce the chair; you can keep it in your pocket, carry all over, but after bringing to the class, do not try to sit on it; some people bring chair; try cardboard chair. Similarly use aparā prakṛti for sport; use parā prakṛti for fulfilment and security. It is this trick, this solution people do not know. Therefore they are trapped;

mōhitam nābhijānāti māmēbhyaḥ paramavyayam||7.13||

parā prakṛiti; na abhijānāti means they do not the parā prakṛti shop which alone sells security. You can go to all the T Nagar shops for buying all the clothes, ornaments, all those things; For that one should not go to parā prakṛti shop, for dipavali shopping go to aparā prakṛti shop, go to appropriate shop for appropriate things; aparā prakṛti shop is useful; use it; but do not ask for security from aparā prakṛti shop. So then what is the remedy for this problem; Krishna presents the remedy as surrender unto Me:

daivī hyeṣā guṇamayī mama māyā duratyayā |
māmēva yē prapadyantē māyāmētām taranti tē || 7.14 ||

Prapathiḥ; saraṇāgathiḥ; or bhakthiḥ He presents as the remedy. But when we say bhakthi is the remedy, we should very very carefully understand; otherwise it will create a very big confusion; because in the beginning of the second chapter, in the 11th verse, we have said:

aśōcyānanvaśōcastvaṃ prajñāvādāṃśca bhāṣasē |
gatāsūnagatāsūṃśca nānuśōcanti paṇḍitāḥ || 2.11 ||

There in the second chapter, I talked long before, I do not know whether you remember; I will give a fourth chapter reference;

Sreyan dravya mayat yajñāha, jñāna yajñā parām tapah;
sarvam karmakhilam partha, jñāne parisamapyathe.

In those portions, we have ascertained that jñānam is the only remedy for samsāra; we did not say jñānam is one of the remedies, we did say jñānam is the remedy and jñānam is the only remedy for samsāra.

Now here we are coming and saying that bhakthi is the remedy, are we not contradicting; this student should ask the question; If the student does not ask, the teacher should ask; do you accept that there are alternative remedies also; do we accept that there are many paths for liberation; multi-path theory it is called. Some people say one path; some people say two path. Some people say karma bhakthi jñānam; another person says four paths, karma bhakthi jñānam rāja means rāja yōga; and another person says fifth path, kundalini yōga; another says sixth path, SKY; simplified kundalini yōga.

Now tell me; what do you mean; you should have consistency in your teaching; that is called samanvaya; an ideal teacher is one who never misses the importance of samanvaya; which means no statement should be contradicted; How do you say bhakthi is remedy.

For that our answer is Bhakthi is not one particular sādhanā; bhakthi is a series of sādhanās which has to culminate in jñānam; Bhakthi is not a particular sādhanā; but it is the name of a range of sādhanās, which has to culminate in jñānam; and when the bhakthi culminates in jñānam; we call it jñāna rūpa bhakthiḥ.

So what are the sādhanās or what are the series of sādhanās which constitute bhakthi, we will discuss later. Krishna does not go elaborately here; in the 12th chapter, we will discover that; where we will show that bhakthi is not a particular sādhanā, but it is a range, series of sādhanās which has to culminate in jñānam.

And therefore when we say bhakthi is remedy, what do we mean, bhakthi which culminates in jñānam is the remedy for samsāra; And Krishna himself knows that we will have this confusion; and therefore Krishna clarifies;

caturvidhā bhajantē māṃ janāḥ sukṛtinō'rjuna |
ārtō jijñāsurarthārthī jñānī ca bharatarṣabha || 7.16 ||

tēṣāṃ jñānī nityayukta ēkabhaktirviśiṣyatē |
priyō hi jñāninō'tyarthamahaṃ sa ca mama priyaḥ || 7.17 ||

So bhakthi has to go through various stages; and ultimately bhaktha should get knowledge, and that bhaktha is called jñāni bhaktha. The other bhakthas who are in the process of the journey, they are called either artha bhaktha; artharthi bhaktha, jijñāsu bhakthas, they are all only in the process, they will not be free from samsāra; Arta bhaktha is samsāri; have no doubt, write in bold letters; artarthi bhaktha is samsāri; jijñāsu bhaktha is samsāri.

Then only when travelling through various stages of sādhanā; which we will be seeing later, I am suspending it; so that you will come to the 12th chapter, that is all secret; so that you get five levels Krishna will tell there; five levels of bhakthi; and when it culminates in jñānam; the bhaktha will become jñāni bhaktha; He alone is liberated from samsāra; because jñāni bhaktha alone knows parā prakṛti; artharthi bhaktha, artha bhaktha, jijñāsu bhaktha, none of them knows parā prakṛti; Therefore they continue to lean upon aparā prakṛti only, a jñāni bhaktha only knows the source of security, which is parā prakṛti. And Krishna says, that it is a long-term process.

vāsudēvaḥ sarvamīti sa mahātmā sudurlabhaḥ || 7.19 ||

So it is a long journey; therefore you have to start somewhere; even starting from artha bhakthi; I hope you remember what is artha bhakthi; worshipping God only when you are in crisis; in Malayalam they say as a joke;

പാലം കടക്കുവോളം നാരായണാ!; പാലമ് കടന്നാൽ കുരായണ.
Palam kadukkuvolam Narayana; paalam kadannal, kurayana.

So only when I am in crisis; I remember Bālāji, Guruvaryoorappan, we all know where we get what; for marriage, this temple, for disease curing, this temple, for money, stomach ache, all this is in the list. Krishna says you have to start somewhere; Therefore Bhakthi culminating in jñānam is the remedy for samsāra; this is the topic from verse 13 to 19.

Then the next topic from 20 to 26 Krishna wants to deal with two forms of bhakthi; based on one's motive. He divides bhakthi in two forms based on the motive; and they are sakāma bhakthi and niṣkāma bhakthi. Krishna wants to point out that both of them are OK; but ultimately one has to graduate to niṣkāma bhakthi. niṣkāma bhakthi is impossible without going through sakāma bhakthi initially; first bhakthi should come means, it will be business bhakthi; contract bhakthi; you do this; I will give you; after you finish the job. Not before, payment is only after you deliver the goods money will be given; very very smart business people. we will keep the money here; finish and take it.

Krishna says sakāma bhakti is the only means to arrive at niṣkāma bhakthi; niṣkāma bhakthi is impossible without sakāma bhakthi and sakāma bhakthi is incomplete without coming to niṣkāma bhakthi. This is the secret; this Krishna wants to convey. Therefore from first from verse No.20 to 26, Krishna deals with sakāma bhakthi.

What is the definition of sakāma bhakthi; any form of worship through we seek only the aparā prakṛti benefits; aparā prakṛti is what: matter; aparā prakṛti benefit means what: material benefits; Therefore things, money, name, fame, status, position, possession, relation; in fact, everything that we generally ask comes under aparā prakṛti. In short, whatever is subject to arrival and departure, is aparā prakṛti; and any form of worship done for the accomplishment of those material ends; called in śāstra as dharma-arta-kāmāḥ; otherwise called prēyaḥ; in Kathōpaniṣad language.

And Krishna talks about the brighter side of sakāma bhakthi as well as the darker side; both He says; what is the brighter side; sakāma bhakthi is not sinful; it is not pāpam; you need not feel bad, if you are sakāma bhaktha; you can go to any God and ask for anything in the world; instead of asking the local who will never fulfil; instead of kandavan kalil, fall in the feet of the Lord; why should you fall at the feet of the local. Narasthuthi sukama; nidishaala sukama; ramuni sannidhi seva sukama. Therefore why fall at the feet of the, what you call, mamata bandanayuda nara stuthi; Why should I fall at the feet of local people with all kinds of weakness; Therefore brighter side is sakāma bhakthi is not sinful. Then sakāma bhakthi is always valid and fruitful. Bhagavān will answer your prayer; if you have done the sakāma bhakthi properly and if you do not have any obstacles for that; that is there; Suppose somebody feeds me food; because I am hungry; but if I have got digestion problem, this is my problem; Similarly Bhagavān will bless; but if I have some obstacle, that is a different issue; but sakāma bhakthi is valid and fruitful; these are the brighter aspects.

Then what is the darker side; as I said before itself; all the accomplishments belong to aparā prakṛti; therefore you can never permanently hold on to them; antavattu phalaṃ tēṣāṃ tadbhavatyalpamēdhasām; No aparā prakṛti gain you can hold on to. At any time, it will leave you high and dry. And not only that; even before it actually leaves, our mind is so imaginative, that we constantly think of possible loss; we will only worry about the loss; in fact we do not enjoy. Dayananada swami beautifully says, when you drink the cola, with the straw, you have to look down; or otherwise it would not go up; it is like that; Now you are sucking the cola, whatever the taste; why can't you enjoy; you look at the level, which unfortunately falls in your eyes; And therefore instead of drinking and enjoying, you think that the level is coming down; and final the 'purr' sound comes and finish; Therefore, not only in future it gives you trouble, even in the present, there is a constant sense of the fear of loss, these are all the darker side of sakāma bhakthi.

Having said this much, Krishna comes to his favourite topic of niṣkāma bhakthi from verse No.27 to 30. 20 to 26 sakāma bhakthi; 27 to 30 niṣkāma bhakthi; and nishkama bhakthi is a bhakthi, in which a person uses bhakthi for the accomplishment of parā prakṛti; or for the discovery of parā prakṛti; or for spiritual growth; everything a niṣkāma bhaktha does is primarily meant for inner spiritual growth; not that he does not want money; he looks upon that as a bye product; an incidental secondary thing we need; but my primary focus is on, inner growth; even simply going to office, salary is incidental, my service and my consequent inner growth is the primary. Therefore Krishna said:

tē brahma tadviduḥ kṛtsnamadhyātmaṃ karma cākhilam ||7. 29||

niṣkāma bhakthas are interested in going beyond time; jarā means old age, marāṇam means death; both are caused by what kāla or time;

ma kuru dana jana youvana garvam;
harathi nimeshath kaala sarvam;

kālō jagat bhakṣakā. Therefore going beyond jarā and marāṇam; that is old age and death is going beyond time and the only thing beyond time is parā prakṛti; Therefore mōkṣa means discovery of parā prakṛti; and those who use bhakthi for that discovery. They are called niṣkāma bhakthāḥ; and such niṣkāma bhakthas will ultimately discover the Lord in his totality; that means what; both aparā prakṛti and parā prakṛti. They will understand; both saṅuṇa and nirṅuṇa they will understand; both the matter and the spirit they understand; ubhayōrapi dṛṣṭō'ntastvanayōstattvadarśibhiḥ (2.16).

And therefore Krishna wants to conclude by saying niṣkāma bhaktha will have total Īśvara jñānam; but Krishna does a mischief; what is that: instead of using the word Īśvara jñānam; consisting of parā and aparā prakṛti, Krishna uses a set of new technical words; What are the technical words; six of them He uses, Karma, Brahma, Adhyatmam, Adhibhutam; Adhidevam, adhiyajñām; six factors, in fact the secret all the six factors put together is parā plus aparā prakṛti only. Just like in our school examination; there was a question; in which all States you get chukku; dried ginger; but in our lesson, they have taught, where all we get inji; OK and if you do not know, inji alone is chukku - dried; what do you see; the teacher has only taught where inji grows; but he has told us where chukku is available, So it is only nāma bhēdaḥ; nathu vasthu bhēdaḥ; Therefore Arjuna does not know what these six factors are only parā and aparā prakṛti, so he is blinking; that is what Krishna wants. And then Arjuna himself will ask what are these things; Krishna can reply. But the lesson we have to note is niṣkāma bhaktha will attain liberation.

With this chapter is over; and the chapter is called jñāna vijñāna yōga, because it deals with the knowledge of Īśvara both in his aparā and parā prakṛti form.

||aṣṭamō'dhyāyaḥ - akṣaraBrahma yōgaḥ||

Having completed the seventh chapter, we will now enter into the 8th chapter of the Gītā. The 8th chapter is primarily based on the last two verses of the seventh chapter. We saw in the seventh chapter, in the last two verses, Krishna introduced certain technical words, without explaining them to Arjuna. He introduced six terms: Brahma, karma, adhyātmaṃ, adhi bhūtam; ādhi daivam, and ādhi yajñām.

And after introducing six terms, Krishna also talked about remembering God at the time of death. And naturally it creates a curiosity in the mind of Arjuna, why should Krishna talk about Īśvara smaraṇam at the time of death. Naturally there must be some significance for that expression. All put together in Arjuna's mind, seven questions arise. Six questions dealing with the six technical terms, and the seventh question dealing with the significance of remembering God at the time of death and the entire 8th chapter is devoted to answering these seven questions; arising from Arjuna. And by way of answering Arjuna's questions, Krishna introduces the important topic of Upāsana; otherwise called saḡuṇa Īśvara dhyānam; I had said that in the middle section of the Gītā; that is from seventh to the 12th chapter, Krishna highlights the sādānā of upāsana.

While in the first six chapters, karma yōga sādānā is highlighted, in the middle part of the Gītā; upāsana is to be highlighted and this topic Krishna deals with the 8th chapter; and therefore the chapter begins with Arjuna's questions based on the last two verses; with this background, we will enter into the chapter proper.

अर्जुन उवाच --

किं तद् ब्रह्म किमध्यात्मं किं कर्म पुरुषोत्तम ।

अधिभूतं च किं प्रोक्तम् अधिदैवं किमुच्यते ॥८.१॥

arjuna uvāca

kiṃ tad-Brahma kimadhyātmaṃ kiṃ karma puruṣōttama |
adhibhūtaṃ ca kiṃ prōktamadhidaivaṃ kimucyatē | 8.1 | |

अर्जुन उवाच arjuna uvāca Arjuna said किं तद् ब्रह्म kiṃ tad Brahma what is that Brahman? किम् अध्यात्मम् kim adhyātmam what is adhyatma किम् कर्म? kim karma what is karma, किं प्रोक्तम् kiṃ proktam what is said to be अधिभूतम् adhibhūtam adhibhuta च किम् उच्यते ca kim ucyate and what is said to be, अधिदैवम् adhidaivam adhidaiva पुरुषोत्तम puruṣōttama O best of Purushas

1. Arjuna asked –What is that Brahman? What is adhyatmam? What is Karma? What is said to be adhibhootha? What is said to be adhidaiva, O Krishna!

Arjuna uvāca; Arjuna asked the following seven questions based on the 29 and 30th of the seventh chapter. So the first question is तद् ब्रह्म किं tad Brahma kiṃ. Brahman the term was mentioned in the 29th verse, tē brahma tadviduḥ kṛtsnam.

There Krishna used the word Brahma. Therefore Arjuna wants to know; kim tad Brahman; what do you mean by Brahman.

Similarly, अध्यात्मम् किम् kim adhyātmam; what is the meaning of the technical term adhyātmaṃ; which was also introduced in the 29th verse; second line; adhyātmaṃ karma chakilaṃ; therefore what is adhyātmaṃ, question No.2;

Then the third question is किम् कर्म? kim karma. What do you mean by karma? Even though it has got a dictionary meaning of action; but technically what is the significance of the word karma; this is question No.3.

Then the fourth question is; अधिभूतम् किं प्रोक्तम् adhibhūtam kiṁ proktam; Oh Lord what is the meaning of the word ādhi bhūtam; which occurs in verse No.30 of the seventh chapter, साधिभूताधिदैवं sādhibhūtādhidaivam. There Krishna has introduced the word.

And then the fifth question is अधिभूतम् च किम् उच्यते adhibhūtam ca kim ucyatē. And what is referred to as ādhi daivam; this word also is introduced in the 30th verse of the seventh chapter. Hey Purūṣōttama; Purūṣōttama is not the sixth question. Purūṣōttama is Arjuna addressing the Lord. So Hey Krishna please answer these five questions.

And then two more words are there. Therefore one more verse Arjuna's question continues, we will read:

अधियज्ञः कथं कोऽत्र देहेऽस्मिन् मधुसूदन । प्रयाणकाले च कथं ज्ञेयोऽसि नियतात्मभिः ॥ ८.२ ॥
adhiyajñah katham kō'tra dēhē'smin madhusūdana |
prayāṇakālē ca katham jñeyō'si niyatātmabhiḥ || 8.2 ||

कः अधियज्ञः kaḥ adhiyajñah who is adhiyajñā?, कथम् katham how does (he remain), अत्र अस्मिन् देहे atra asmin dehe here in this body? च कथं ज्ञेयः असि ca katham jñeyah asi and how are you to be remembered, प्रयाणकाले prayāṇakāle at the time of death नियतात्मभिः niyatātmabhiḥ by self-disciplined ones मधुसूदन madhusūdana O destroyer of Madhu

2. Who is adhiyajñah? How does (he remain) here in the body? And how are you to be remembered at the time of death by the self-disciplined ones, Oh Madusudana.

Now comes the 6th question; अधियज्ञः कः adhiyajñah kaḥ; who is adhi yajñah or what is adhi yajñah, which is also mentioned in the 7th chapter, 30th verse. And there Arjuna adds another question also; 6(a) and 6(b); So the question is what is adhiyajñah, there itself he adds a clause, कथम् अस्मिन् देहे वर्तते katham asmin dehe varthathe; and how does adhiyajñah reside in the body. You do not know how Arjuna thought it resides in the body; when Arjuna does not know what adhi yajñāḥ is, how does he know it resides in the body. Perhaps he has heard somewhere and therefore raises the question how does adhiyajñā reside in the body; So this is a side question of the 6th one.

And then comes the 7th and final question; there also you have to see 7(a) and 7(b); what is the main question; what is the significance of remembering God at the time of death. Is there any significance at all; and if there is a significance, what is that. That is question No.1. 7(a) and there itself question No.2 is how can a person remember God at the time of death. Even when we are very much alive; we are finding it difficult to remember God and especially if we sit in meditation; we remember everything except God; when it is so difficult during normal days, how can I manage to remember God,

कन्ठावरोधन विधौ, स्मरणम् कुतस्ते ॥ prāṇa prayāṇa samayē kapha vāta pittai |

kanṭhāvarōdhana vidhau, smaraṇam kutastē ||

when all faculties are failing, how am I to remember the Lord at the time of death; if there is any technique Oh Krishna teach me that technique also; that is said here; prayāṇakālē, prayāṇakālē, at the time of the final journey. When we are taking leave of the all the near and dear ones; so prayāṇakālē, not the local journey; but anthima prayāṇakālē, कथं ज्ञेयोऽसि katham jñeyaḥ asi. How are You to be remembered; jñeyaḥ here means dhēyaḥ; How are You to be remembered. by whom; नियतात्माभिः niyatātmabhiḥ; by committed people, by integrated people; by the people of self-control. There must be a tremendous control over the mind to remember the Lord at the time of death; therefore how can self-controlled people remember God at the time of death. This is the 7th question regarding anthakāla smaraṇa.

Hey Madhusoodhana; Madhusoodhana is not the eight question; Madhusoodhana is addressing the Lord; Hey Krishna; who has destroyed the asura known as Madhu; so Madhu, rakṣasa naśaka, Madhusūdhana.

In philosophical symbolism, they take the word Madhu as all the Karmas also. In Mundakopanishad, the word Madhu is used in the meaning of karma phalam also.

And if you take madhu as all the karma, Madhusūdanaha means the destroyer of all the sanchita, agami, prarabdha karmas, therefore the one who gives moksha; So that is the philosophical significance, of the word Madhusoodhana; Hey Krishna, please answer these questions.

So thus the eighth chapter begins with Arjuna's question and Lord Krishna has exam season for Krishna also; he has to answer now; not any two or three; or like choosing one of the four answer given; you know. So Krishna does not any choice like that; he has to explain each one. Krishna has no problem.

अक्षरं ब्रह्म परमं स्वभावोऽध्यात्ममुच्यते ।

भूतभावोद्भवकरः विसर्गः कर्मसंज्ञितः ॥ ८.३ ॥

śrībhagavānuvāca

akṣaram Brahma paramam svabhāvō'dhyātmamucyatē |

bhūtabhāvōdbhavakarō visargaḥ karmasaṁjñitaḥ || 8.3 ||

श्री भगवान् उवाच śrī bhagavān uvāca The Lord answered परमम् अक्षरम् paramam akṣaram The supreme imperishable entity, ब्रह्म Brahma is Brahman स्वभावः svabhāvaḥ The self उच्यते ucyate is said to be, अद्यात्मम् adyātmam adhyatma विसर्गः visargaḥ the sacrificial offering भूतभावोद्भवकरः bhūtabhāvōdbhavakaraḥ which brings about the origin of beings, कर्मसंज्ञितः karmasaṁjñitaḥ is known as karma

3. The Lord answered – The supreme imperishable entity is Brahman. The self is said to be adhyatmam. The sacrificial offering which brings about the origin of beings is known as Karma.

Krishna begins his reply. The first question was: What is Brahman and Krishna gives the answer परमम् अक्षरम् ब्रह्म paramam akṣaram Brahma; the word akṣaram means the imperishable principle. Na kṣarati, Na nasyathi, iti akṣaram; and the adjective paramam means the highest, the greatest imperishable principle is called Brahman.

And why Krishna adds the adjective paramam. If Krishna uses the word akṣaram only, it may be mistaken as alphabetic letter also. Because the word akṣaram can refer to any alphabetic letter. That is why initiation into alphabet is called akṣarabhyasaha; and in Sanskrit, alphabet is called akṣaramāla. Therefore a person may take akṣaram as a letter. By adding the adjective paramam; the greatest and the most supreme akṣaram, Krishna wants to say, do not take the ordinary alphabet but take the ultimately imperishable entity. The root kshar is to perish; kṣarathi ithi is kṣarah; perishable one is kṣarah; akṣaram means imperishable one. In fact, Brahman is called akṣaram in the Mundaka upaniṣad.

सुसूक्ष्मं तदव्ययं यद्भूतयोनिं परिपश्यन्ति धीराः ॥

atha parā yayā tadakṣaramadhigamyatē || 5 || yattadadrēśyamagrāhyamagōtramavarṇa-
macakṣuḥśrōtram tadapāṇipādam | nityam vibhum sarvagatam susūkṣmam tadavyayam
yadbhūtayōniṁ paripaśyanti dhīrah ||

In Mundakōpaniṣad, Brahman is known by the name akṣaram; that is here referred to.

And what is that principle, which is imperishable; there is only thing, that is imperishable; that is sarvagata caitanya tatvam; consciousness is the only entity which remains imperishable; matter is subject to decay and destruction; and that is why our very body is decaying and dying every moment. To put in the 7th chapter language, apara prakṛti is perishable, para prakṛti, the caitanya tatvam alone is imperishable. Therefore what is Brahman, the eternal consciousness is Brahman and the very word Brahma means brihat tamatva Brahma. It is derived from the root brih, to mean big and Brahma means that which is superlatively big. That which is superlatively limitless entity; anantha tatvam is called Brahman. So with this Krishna has answered first question very very briefly. Krishna does not elaborate because, this Brahman has been talked about as para prakṛti in the 7th chapter. Therefore if you want to know more about Brahman, go back to the seventh chapter, para prakṛti topic. Where does it come; from verse No.4 to 10; I am telling that also; So you can go back to see that topic.

And because Krishna's teaching begins with the word akṣaram Brahma, the very chapter is called akṣara Brahma yōgaḥ. The chapter does not begin with that word; chapter begins with kim tad Brahma; but Krishna's teachings begins with akṣara Brahma paramam. Therefore the chapter is called akṣara Brahma yōgaḥ.

Then Krishna comes to the second question. What was the second question; what is adhyatmam; Krishna says स्वभावः अद्यात्मम् उच्यते svabhāvaḥ adyātmam ucyate; the very all-pervading consciousness must be existing within the individual body also. If the consciousness is all-pervading, it must be within the body also. And when the consciousness is seen within the body, that is called adhi ātmam, or adyātmam. The word atma here means śarīram; adhi ātmam means obtaining within the body. So thus consciousness looked from the angle of samaṣṭi or total; it is called Brahma. When the very same consciousness is looked from the standpoint of the individual body, it is called adhyātmam. So the word, svabhāvaḥ means the inner essence, the consciousness within. Brahman is paramātmā; adhyātmam is jīvatma; Brahman is the consciousness from macro angle; adhyātmam is the consciousness from the micro angle; consciousness is the same; two different words are used; because of two different terms of reference.

And this is very common for us also; a person remaining the same; when he is looked from the stand point of the wife, he is called the husband, when the same person is looked from the standpoint of the children, he is called the father or parent; and when looked from the standpoint of the parent; he himself is called son or child. How can one and the same person be called father, son, grandfather, husband, brother? This is called śabda prakṛti nimittam in technical language; in simple English, the point of reference, when it differs, the nama, the name also differs.

Thus consciousness is called paramātmā, consciousness is called jīvatma; depending upon macro and micro point of reference. So with this second question is answered.

Then what is the third question; what is karma. Krishna gives the answer; भूतभावोद्भवकरः विसर्गः bhūtabhāvōdbhavakarō visargaḥ; visargaḥ refers to all the activities. All the actions, deliberate actions of human beings which are responsible for the future creation. All the deliberate activities of human beings which are responsible for the future creation is called karma, because according to our scriptures, creation is not an accident; creation is not an accident; creation is a clean incident caused by previous factors or action. For if I am born here with a physical body, it is not an accident, it is a result of what; my own past karma. Similarly, you are born because of your karma; the individual birth is because of individual karma; the birth of humanity is because of the karma of the humanity.

So therefore Krishna says bhutabhāva; bhutabhāva means the insistence of living beings; udbhavakaraḥ means that which brings about; so bhutabhāvodbhavakaraḥ means that which brings about the existence of every living being. Not only humans; a mosquito is there with a mosquito body, because of what; its karma; and a dinosaur is because of its karma. And not only my karma determines by body; it also determines by parentage. Why I should get such and such parents; wonderful parents; or terrible ones. And why I should get such and such brothers and sisters; my karma; and why should I be born in India; my karma; I do not want to say good or bad. There are people who think it is bad karma; there are people who think it is good karma; I do not want to qualify; but one thing is certain; it is because of your karma. And the beauty is I get a set of parents by my karma; my parents get me as their child because of their karma. And similarly, I get wonderful disciples like you, because of my good karma; and you get a teacher like me because of ___ ~ you can decide; ~ ___ karma. So thus, everything that happens is the result of our actions and when you take the creation as a whole; we say the present creation is the result of the past creation. And the past creation is the result of its past creation; and the future creation will be result of the present creation. And therefore what is karma, sṛiṣṭi kāraṇam karma. Therefore remember, the creation has come into being, not because of Bhagavān's wish, the creation has come to being, because we have asked for that. Therefore never put the akṣathai on Bhagavān's head. That is what we are seeing in Brahma sūtra now. Bhagavān is not responsible for the creation. The type of creation and the necessity of creation is because I have asked for it, by my good/bad/mixed action. puṇyēna puṇyam lōkam bhavathi; pāpēna pāpam bhavathi; upabhyām ēva manushya lōkam. and if fourteen lōkās are there, not because Bhagavān wants 14 lōkas, but because we have done varieties of karmas requiring the 14 lōkās. We do such terrible action, necessitating a naraka environment; and also we do wonderful actions necessitating a wonderful heaven; and we also manage to mix up and necessitating manuṣya lōkās. Thus everything is karma ordered and therefore karma is defined as sṛiṣṭi kāraṇam. That is here presented as bhūta bhāva udbhavakaraḥ and visargaḥ means action. My contribution; is called कर्मसंज्ञितः karmasamjñitaḥ. So with this three questions are answered.

Now we are going to the next verse and further questions are answered.

अधिभूतं क्षरो भावः पुरुषश्चाधिदैवतम् ।

अधियज्ञोऽहमेवात्र देहे देहभृतां वर ॥ ८.४ ॥

adhibhūtaṃ kṣarō bhāvaḥ puruṣaścādhidaivatam |

adhiyajñō'hamēvātra dēhē dēhabhṛtām vara || 8.4 ||

क्षरः भावः kṣaraḥ bhāvaḥ the perishable creation अधिभूतम् adhibhūtam is adhibhoota च पुरुषः ca puruṣaḥ and Hiranyagarbha, अधिदैवतम् adhidaivatam is adhidaiva, अहम् एव aham eva I Myself अत्र देहे atra dehe (who reside) in this body अधियज्ञः adhiyajñāḥ am adiyajñā देहभृतां वर dehabhṛtām vara Of the embodied. O Arjuna

4. The perishable creation is adhibhuta and Hiranyagarbha is adhidaiva. I myself, (who reside), in this body, am adhiyajñā. O Arjuna, the best of the embodied.

So Krishna answers three more questions here. अधिभूतं किम् adhibhūtam kim; what is adhibhūtam. Here Krishna answers. Every perishable thing in the creation is called adhibhūtam; क्षरः भावः kṣaraḥ bhāvaḥ; bhāvaḥ means an entity. So thus any object that you experience is adhibhūtam, because it is kṣaraḥ; kṣaraḥ means as opposed to akṣara seen before; akṣara means imperishable; therefore kṣaraḥ means perishable. All the five elements come under the adhibhūtam; the Sun, moon stars, etc. come under adhibhūtam; Everything like rivers, mountains, they all come under adhibhūtam. Even our physical bodies come under adhibhūtam; because the bodies also are perishable; kṣaraḥ bhāvaḥ; any doubt? It is perishable. That is why we look for security; If it is imperishable, we do not require security; Therefore the entire perishable material world is called adhibhūtam; So the fourth question is answered.

Then he goes to the fifth question; adhi daivam; अधिदैवतम् adhidaivatam Krishna defines as puruṣaḥ; here the word puruṣaḥ means the hiranyagarbha; puruṣaḥ means hiranyagarbha; and hiranyagarbha in śāstric language means the total consciousness associated with the total mind. And therefore associated with total knowledge. If you remember Tatva Bodha, samaṣṭi sukṣma śarīra sahita caitanyam is hiranyagarbha; Consciousness associated with total subtle body. If you do not know or remember what is subtle body, you take it as mind; therefore consciousness associated with the total mind is called hiraṇyagarbha. And that hiraṇyagarbha alone is called a presiding deity from the standpoint of every organ, So the presiding deity of the eye is sūrya dēvathā; so cakṣūsa sūryaḥ; and the presiding deity of the ears is what dēvathā; srothasya dig dēvathā. So thus we have got presiding deities for every organ; all the presiding deities put together is called hiraṇyagarbha; that hiraṇyagarbha is called adhi daivam.

And then the sixth question: अधियज्ञः adhiyajñah adhiyajñah Krishna says aham eva; aham means Krishna the Lord himself Īśvara is adhiyajñah; adhiyajñah is Īśvaraḥ. And what is the definition of Īśvara in tatva bodha; if you remember tatva bodha. Īśvara is defined as consciousness associated with the total karaṇa prapañcha.

And what is the definition of karaṇa prapañcha; the whole universe in potential form. So before the creation evolves; whole creation existed in potential form; otherwise called śakthi; otherwise called māya; and that śakthi plus the consciousness is called Īśvaraḥ.

And who is that Īśvaraḥ; Krishna says do not see here and there, I am that Īśvaraḥ; I am the cause of the entire universe. Therefore adhiyajñah aham ēva; I am the seed of the universe. And that Lord alone in puranic symbolism, they say after the pralaya comes, when everything is destroyed, then on a leaf, ஆலிலை ālilai Krishnan, banyan leaf, Lord Krishna floats, it is said.

What does the water and the banyan leaf represent? It is nothing but the seed form of the universe, and Lord Krishna represents the consciousness principle; Consciousness plus potential universe is called Īśvara. In science language, consciousness plus basic energy is Īśvara. So with this, the 6th question is also answered.

And Arjuna had asked an additional question also there; and where does the Lord reside; adhiyajñah, the Īśvaraḥ. Can you differentiate adhidaivam and adhiyajñam.

Samaṣṭi sūkṣma śarīra sahita caitanyam adhi daivam; Samaṣṭi kāraṇa śarīra sahita caitanya adhi yajñā; hiraṇyagarbha is adhi daivam; and Īśvara is adhi yajñah;

And where is that Īśvara. So where can I find him. Krishna says, atra dēhē, dēhabhṛtām vara. Arjuna addressed Krishna as Madhusoodhana; Krishna says I will also address you as देहभृतां वर dēhabhṛtām vara, the greatest human being; There is no loss in saying, so that Arjuna will be very happy and it is also true also. Arjuna was a great person. So, Oh Arjuna, the greatest one, the Lord resides in everybody; In the 10th chapter, Krishna will say, ahamātmā guḍākēśa sarvabhūtāśayasthitaḥ; and in the 18th chapter, Krishna will say, Īśvaraḥ sarvabhūtānām hr̥ddēśē'rjuna tiṣṭhati; and because the Lord resides in every human being, Lord is called nārāyanaḥ; nāram means all the living beings; narānām jīvānam samūhaḥ nāram. Nāram is not naaru; Nāram means jeeva samūhaḥ; and ayanam means the residence; So every living being is the residence of the Lord, therefore where is the Lord, atra dēhē varthathe; praajñā rūpēna; again if you remember, tatva bodha; visva tajasa and prājñā, prājñā rūpēṇa Īśvaraha asmin dēhē varthathe.

Then is the Lord therein Kailasa and Vaikuntha or not? He is there also; the Lord is everywhere; the Lord happens to be in the heart also. And then why is he known as adhiyajñāḥ; adhiyajñāḥ means residing in the heart, the Lord is associated with every action you do; yajñāḥ means every prayer or pooja or action you do.

In what way the Lord is associated with our yajñās, our poojas. He is the receiver of the pooja, as we saw in the 7th chapter.

And not only he is the receiver of the pooja, he also gives the pooja phalam; remember the 7th chapter

yō yō yām yām tanuṃ bhaktaḥ śraddhayā'rcitumicchati |
tasya tasyācalām śraddhām tāmēva vidadhāmyaham || 7. 21 ||

Any pooja done by anyone I receive, the pooja, I give the karma phalam. Therefore yajñā bokthru rūpēṇa, and karma phala dhathru rūpēṇa, and as the receiver of the pooja and as the giver of the result, I remain in the heart of everyone. And therefore you need not bother. whether my good actions will be registered in God's diary or not; because far away He is there, is it not? Do not think that it will not be visible to Him because of that. Every small action you do, good or bad, it is immediately registered and the Lord according to the law of karma, will punch the result and punch your nose if required.

So therefore every experience you go through is karma phalam coming from Lord. For a vedic person, every experience is my karma phalam; therefore I cannot complain to anyone; Why me; Why this suffering comes; Why this enjoyment comes; there is no question; I am reaping the result of my own action; but I do not remember all those past actions; I have told you; you do not remember last class itself; therefore where is the question of remembering.

But non-remembrance does not mean non-performance; that is to be understood; non-remembrance does not mean non-performance. Whether I remember or not; what I have done, I have done, and therefore I have to dearly pay the price; given by whom, adhi yajñāḥ. So adhi yajñāḥ means karma phala dātha. So with this the sixth question is also answered.

Now remains the seventh question. Verse No.5

अन्तकाले च मामेव स्मरन्मुक्त्वा कलेवरम् ।

यः प्रयाति स मद्भावम् याति नास्त्यत्र संशयः ॥ ८.५ ॥

antakālē ca māmēva smaran muktvā kalēvaram |

yaḥ prayāti sa madbhāvaṃ yāti nāstyatra saṃśayaḥ || 8.5 ||

मुक्त्वा कलेवरम् muktvā kalevaram dropping the body अन्तकाले च antakālē ca at the time of death सः saḥ one यः प्रयाति yaḥ prayāti departs स्मरन् माम् एव smaran mām eva remembering Me alone याति मद्भावम् yāti madbhāvam attains my nature अस्ति न संशयः asti na saṃśayaḥ there is no doubt अत्र atra in this regard.

5. Dropping the body at the time of death, one who departs remembering Me alone attains My nature. There is no doubt in this regard.

In the previous two verses, 3 and 4, Krishna answered all the six questions very briefly. And now Krishna wants to answer the seventh question very elaborately. In fact the rest of the chapter beginning from verse No.5 up to the last verse No.28, Krishna is answering the seventh question; for six questions two verses; and for one question five to 28; 24 verses; both inclusive; do not ask how 24; because by way of answering this question, Krishna wants to introduce an important topic I said.

And what is that topic, Īśvara upāsanam; Īśvaraḥ means the Lord with attributes; saḡuṇa Brahma Īśvaraḥ. And this Lord with various attributes as described in the scriptures can be meditated upon and it is considered a very important spiritual sādānā; And this saḡuṇa upāsanam can give two fold result, depending upon the motive or attitude with which it is done. So broadly the saḡuṇa upāsanam is divided into two types; sakāma saḡuṇa upāsanam and the other is niṣkāma saḡuṇa upāsanam. Sakāma saḡuṇa upāsanam means, upāsana done for material benefits; material benefits belonging to iha lōkā; material benefits belonging to para lōkā; to go to the heaven, I can practice upāsana; and for a better birth, I can practice upāsana. In this janma itself for getting various benefits like health, wealth, status etc. I can practice Upāsana, and above all to accomplish siddhis, or miraculous powers, upāsana can be practised. That is why you will find many upāsakās are siddhas. They will say I am an Anjaneya upāsana; I am a Devi upāsaka; I am such and such deva upāsaka. And as a result of upāsana, this person gets extra ordinary powers like capacity to predict the future; kuri shollarathu. In fact many people go there; in fact people go there only. Because they have got a particular day, when they say deity is entering them and then whatever question you ask; when will my business improve; or when will this disease go; how many people stand in line; that person during that person is able to predict and suggest parihārās, and reading the minds of other people, all these come under varieties of siddhis. Hundreds of siddhis are enumerated in the purāṇas, in bhāḡavatham and all; knowing the past, knowing the future, knowing the past janma of mine, past janma of yours, (is not the existing problem enough?) and also capacity to see what is underground; water divining; what is inside without digging you can see; countless siddhis are mentioned; all the result of what, sakama saḡuṇa Īśvara upāsanam.

And then there is another Īśvara upāsanam, which comes under niṣkāma saḡuṇa Īśvara upāsanam. Practice of saḡuṇa Īśvara upāsanam; upāsanam means what, meditation. Remember, practice of this upāsanam; not for material benefit, but for spiritual benefit:

नास्था धर्मे न वसुनिचये नैव कामोपभोगे
यद् भाव्यं तद् भवतु भगवन्पूर्वकर्मानुरूपम् ।
एतत्प्रार्थ्यं मम बहुमतं जन्मजन्मान्तरेऽपि
त्वत्पादाम्भोरुहयुगगता निश्चला भक्तिरस्तु ॥ ५ ॥

nāsthā dharmē na vasunicayē naiva kāmōpabhōgē
yad bhāvyaṁ tad bhavatu bhagavanpūrvakarmānurūpam | ētatprārthyam mama bahumataṁ janmajanmāntarē:'pi

tvatpādāmbhōruhayugagatā niścalā bhaktirastu || 5 ||

One devotee says: Oh Lord I am remembering you not for arta; not for kāma; not for puṇyam; I am not interested in anyone of them; because I know they are all perishable in nature. I have got only one goal; and that is the spiritual goal called mōkṣa or religious language, God himself is my goal. I want to attain oneness with you; Īśvara aiykam prāp̥thi; otherwise called moksha; and this upāsana requires vairāgyam; naturally; because as long as I have got kāmas, I will use my bhakthi only for the fulfilment of them. A viragi bhaktha becomes a niṣkāma upāsakaḥ; and this niṣkāma upāsakaḥ can take two different courses or direction; one direction is he practices niṣkāma upāsana for a long time; which is saguṇa Īśvara upāsanam.

And having practiced this upāsana, he becomes very well qualified for nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam; in this janma itself. So one course is what; saguṇa upāsanam; preparation of the mind; dropping saguṇa upāsanam and entering into nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam; parā prakṛti jñānam; and by gaining nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam; in this janma itself; I attain mōkṣa, which is called sadyōmukthiḥ; this is one option;

The second option is the person continues in saguṇa upāsanam, and he is not confident of coming to nirguṇam; he is allergic to nirguṇam; because nirguṇam means attributeless Brahman; I do not understand at all; if a person is allergic to nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam; he continues the saguṇa upāsanam; throughout the life, and at the time of death also, he remembers saguṇa Īśvara and prays to the Lord; Oh Lord, I want mōkṣa and nothing else. And as a result of such upāsana; he will go to Brahma lōkā and get jñānam there; Instead of gaining nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam here, he gets the jñānam there; this second course is called kṛama mukthiḥ; and Krishna is going to deal with the kṛama mukthi topic here; the details of which we will see in the next class.

Om

Based on the last two verses of the 7th chapter, Arjuna raised seven questions in verse No.1 and 2 of this 8th chapter, and Krishna started answering them from the 3rd verse onwards. In the third and fourth verses, Krishna briefly answered all the six questions and from the 5th verse, Krishna wants to elaborately answer the 7th question, which is dealing with the remembrance of the Lord at the time of death. antakālē Īśvara smaraṇam or Prayāṇa kāla Īśvara smaraṇam. And this is going to be answered in the rest of this chapter. And by way of answering this question, Krishna proposes to deal with the important topic of saguṇa Īśvara upāsanam as a sādhanā.

Saguṇa Īśvara upāsanam means meditation upon God with attributes. Saguṇa means with attributes; Īśvara upāsanam means meditation of God, which can be taken as either Rāma upāsanam; Krishna upāsanam; Devi upāsanam; with any attribute. By attribute I mean the personality; a particular form; a particular colour, number of heads, number of hands we have got. In fact, every dhyāna ślōkā gives the description of the Lord in a particular form.

And in the last class, I pointed out that the saguṇa upāsana can be first classified into two types, based on the motive, and they are sakāma saguṇa upāsana; and niṣkāma upāsana.

Sakāma upāsana is the practice for all worldly goals other than spiritual goals. So it can be arta, kāma or dharma; which will benefit me in this janma or which can benefit me in the next janma. And as I said in the last class, even various miraculous powers can be attained through such upāsana; and that is called sakāma upāsana.

Niṣkāma upāsana is that meditation, which is exclusively utilised for spiritual growth, by which I mean acquiring the required qualifications totally, and asking for the appropriate opportunity for getting mōkṣa; anything connected with mōkṣa, I call spiritual growth.

And this niṣkāma saḡuṇa upāṣana itself can be divided into two types. In one person practices Niṣkāma upāṣana for acquiring all the qualifications for entering into nirguṇa jñanam. Because we have seen in the 7th chapter that saḡuṇa īśvara is not the ultimate reality. Saḡuṇa īśvara is only empirical vyavaharika satyam or if you want to strong word, it is also mithya only; nirguṇa īśvara which was called para prakrithi in the 7th chapter, that alone is the ultimate reality; and we have to come to the ultimate nirguṇa īśvara. Without that no mōkṣa is possible and therefore a person can follow saḡuṇa upāṣana, prepare the mind very well; then switch over from saḡuṇa upāṣana to nirguṇa jñanam. Upāṣana to jñana yoga; by which we mean vēdānta sṛavaṇa manana nidhidyasana; practice niṣkāma upāṣana, acquire the required qualifications well; then switch over to nirguṇa īśvara jñanam and attain mōkṣa in this life itself, which is called sadyōmukthi or jīvan mukthiḥ; sadyō mukthiḥ means what, instant liberation; like fast food, instant idli, instant sambar, instant mōkṣa; in this life itself.

This is one course of sādanā a person can take to. There is another alternative method also; what is that; a person follows saḡuṇa upāṣana; and afterwards he has to come to nirguṇa jñanam; but somehow he finds he is not able to switch over to nirguṇa īśvara; because it is not that easy. You can visualise the Lord with attributes; but how can you visualise the Lord without śabda sparṣa rūpa, rasa, gandha. There is nothing. In fact, in the 12th chapter, Krishna himself will admit,

avyaktā hi gatirduḥkhaṃ dēhavadbhiravāpyatē || 12.5 ||

appreciation of and enquiry into the nirguṇa īśvara requires very very subtle sūkṣma buddhi; drisyetu agryaya buddhya, sūkṣma bhuddhya darśibhihi.

and if the mind is not ready for nirguṇa īśvara; it will not appeal to that person. Then what should that person do; No doubt, he wants mōkṣa; no doubt he wants to become one with God; he does not have interest in any other material goal; he is a niṣkāma puruṣaḥ; he is mumukṣu puruṣaḥ; but his mind is not ready for nirguṇa vichāraḥ. Then what should that person do. Krishna says that there is a solution; keep your fire of enthusiasm or desire for liberation; maintain your niṣkāmatvam or vairāgyam very well and continue the saḡuṇa upāṣana throughout the life. One need not come to nirguṇa vicāra; continue to be attached to your Krishna; your Rāma, your Gaṇapāthi; whoever it is; but when you meditate make sure that it is niṣkāma mumukṣu upāsana. And because of this intense desire for īśvara prāp̥thi; a person will be able to successfully continue and naturally at the time of death also, a person is going to remember what he values more. At the time of death, a person is going to remember only that which he values the most in his or her life; and being a saṅuṇa upāsaka; at the time of death also; he will remember only the saṅuṇa īśvara and as a result of that what will happen; something will happen. What is that something; certainly he would not get liberation in this life, because he has not come to the higher īśvara. Therefore liberation is ruled out; but because of his intense desire for God; he is supposed to go to Brahma lōkā; do not ask how do you know; I did not see; Lord Krishna says which I totally believe. And that jīvātma will go through a special path, which we will see later, sūkla mārga and that jīva will go to brahma lōkā; OK.

What will happen in Brahma lōkā. Again Krishna says; I have not seen. A person who is desirous of mōkṣa alone goes to Brahma lōkā, he will get there, ideal conditions for nirguṇa īśvara jñānam; which he carefully avoided in this janma; that he can very successfully pursue, the conditions will be provided, guaranteed by God; and the scriptures point out that and there Nirguṇa jñānam is not imparted by an ordinary mortal swami; but it is imparted by sakṣāt chaturmukha Brahmāji himself; He will be conducting classes there and Brahmāji, the four heads representing the vēdās, totally he must be far far superior teacher; and he will never get tired, because four head; (he can always change the head, side to side!) and you are also supposed to not to get tired at all; therefore not weekly ones; continuously you can listen; no hunger; no thirst; and mind also is ideal; body will also cooperate, that is also to be told:

So brahmaṇa tē sarvē samprap̥the prati sancāre parasyan̥the kritamaṇḥ pravishanti param padam.

This is what is said in the śāstrā; and this niṣkāma upāsaka goes to brahma lōkā, attains jñānam; nirguṇa īśvara jñānam there and attain liberation; and this course of liberation is called kṛama mukthiḥ; the first one is called akṛama mukthi; akṛama mukthi; do not mistake; sadyō mukthi or jīvan mukthi

And Krishna says a niṣkāma upāsaka can follow either of the method and the 8th chapter is going to specialise on kṛama mukthiḥ. So this is one unique chapter which deals with kṛama mukthiḥ, whereas seventh chapter, 9th, 10th etc. Krishna is going to highlight what; mukthi here and now. Krishna wants to point out: Do not postpone liberation; because you do not what will happen after death. There may be traffic jam and then we do not know. Therefore having got a wonderful human birth; follow niṣkāma upāsana, gain jñānam; and be free here and now. That is Krishna's primary advice. But in this chapter, Krishna takes a diversion and He is going to highlight kṛama mukthiḥ.

With this background, we have to study the verses herein. Look at the verse. 5th. यः प्रयाति yaḥ prayāti; so yaḥ refers to niṣkāma saguṇa upāsaka; so practiced saguṇa īśvara meditation, like Rāma dhyānam; Krishna dhyānam; dēvi dhyānam, throughout the life, never came to nirguṇa brahma at all; vēdānta vicāra he did not come out; throughout he has attached to his iṣṭa dēvathā. And such a saguṇa upāsaka; prayāti; suppose he dies; and kālēvaram muktha; and leaves this physical body; and travels; travel is definite; because he has not attained mōkṣa; and therefore the upāsaka's jīva will leave this physical body and travel; and how come we do not see; because it is sūkṣma śarīram, and therefore we do not see; better we do not see; better not to see; or you will see who is going where; why all that; as such it is difficult to manage; why do you desire for all such things. So therefore कलेवरम् मुक्त्वा kālēvaram muktvā; kālēvaram means śarīram; different Tamil meaning; kālēvaram means śarīram; leave this physical body and travels. What will happen to him; anta kālē, at the time of death, antha, final, last moment; so suppose a saguṇa upāsaka dies leaving this physical body, in the last moment of death; how, mām eva smaran; of course, remembering Me only; saguṇa Me or nirguṇa Me; saguṇa Me alone, me (not me) Bhagavān, remembering the Lord, mām ēva smaran; ēva is to emphasise; remembering Me alone. And what will happen to him; मद्भावं याति madbhāvaṃ yāti; he will certainly get kṛama mukthi. So here madbhāvaṃ refers to kṛama mukthi; the intermediary stages, Krishna does not describe here; we have to fill up the blank; he goes to brahma lōkā, attains knowledge there; and gets liberation.

And suppose a person asks what is the guarantee; Krishna says I am giving you to the guarantee card; atra samśayaḥ nāsthi; there is no doubt about that; such a devotee will come to Me alone.

Continuing.

यं यं वापि स्मरन्भावं त्यजत्यन्ते कलेवरम् ।

yaṃ yaṃ vā'pi smaran bhāvaṃ tyajatyantē kalēvaram |

कौन्तेय kaunteya Oh ! Arjuna स्मरन् smaran thinking of यं यं वा अपि भावम् yaṃ yaṃ vā api bhāvam whatever object त्यजति tyajati one gives up, कलेवरम् kālēvaram the body अन्ते ante at the time of death तं तम् एव taṃ taṃ eva that very object एति eti one attains सदा तद्भावभावितः sadā tadbhāvabhāvitaḥ being always steeped in that thought.

6. Oh ! Arjuna, Thinking of whatever object one gives up the body at the time of death, that very object one attains, being always steeped in that thought.

Naturally the question will be suppose a person does not remember God and remembers something else. What will happen to that person after death; for such a possible question; Krishna gives a general reply and what is that reply, the next janma of a person will depend upon the remembrance at the time of death. As the famous proverb goes; "As a person thinks, so a person becomes". It is a very very powerful law, which is a fact; it is not a law applicable only after death; but it is a law applicable within this life itself; as a person thinks, so he becomes;

yō yat sraddhā, sa ēva saḥ, saḥ yathā kāmo bhavati, tad kṛtur bhavati, yat kṛtur bhavati, tat karma kurutē, yat karma kurutē, tad abhisampadyatē

Brihadāraṇyaka.

And I have told you another beautiful proverb which I like;

Watch your thoughts; they become the words;
Watch your words, they become your actions;
Watch your action, they become your habit;
Watch your habit; they become your character;
Watch your character, it becomes your destiny.

Therefore your ultimate destiny or future condition is already determined by the type of thought which I am entertaining. Even though the thought seems to be too feeble; but when they are continued; they can decide your future. And what Krishna wants to emphasise here, not only this law is applicable within one life; it is applicable with regard to next janma also. We saw in Mundaka Upaniṣad, kāmānya kāmāyathe manyamāna, sa kāmābir jāyathe tatra tatra. With whatever desire of objects or environment, a person dies, he will find himself in such a set up, and with such an object; and that is why they have the story of the Jada Bharatha upākyaṇam also; how he had noble intention to pursue spirituality and got attracted to a small deer, deer became dear; and he is OK that he protected and after it grew up, he could have let it out; but he started meditating, You have to read that story in Bhāgavatham; then a time comes when he is only obsessed with that deer; and naturally at the time of death also; he is worried who will take care of it, after I die; just as we worry; forgetting things will be better off after we go. So this is the human psychology, then Jada Bharatha is supposed to have born as a deer; whether it really happened or not is the question; But what is the lesson that is taught.

And this important lesson Krishna imparts in this slōkā; कलेवरम् अन्ते त्यजति kālēvaram antē tyajathi; suppose a person drops the physical body at the time of death; how यं यं भावम् स्मरन् yaṁ yaṁ bhāvam smaran; remembering various objects in his mind, any particular object, any particular goal in mind, remembering, then, tam tam ēva ēti; he will certainly attain only such a birth which is in keeping with the person's thought process; So yaṁ yaṁ bhāvam smaran tyagati; tam tam bhāvam; bhāvam means such a condition; he attains. Kounteya; this is the most important law, Arjuna may you remember.

Now we will have a thinking. It is very fine no, we can easily find a loophole, we are very good in finding loopholes; what does Krishna say; at the time of death; whatever you think that will determine your next birth. Therefore I should be bothered about only the last thought; so until death, I can do any akṛama I want; and when I know death is going to come, then what to do, think of the Lord or whatever you want; we want to cheat the Lord; Bhagavān says; Arjuna that would not work; because of many reasons; the first reason is how do you know what is your antakāla; will Yamadharma rāja send a letter; on such and such date and such and such time, you will die? so we do not whether yamadharma rāja decides or local autoricksaw or water lorries decide. I do not know. So therefore, there is no question of planned thinking at the time of death; that is No.1 problem.

And the second problem is the thought of a person is based on two forces; one is the Will of the person; and the other is the vāsana of the person; our thought process is governed by our Will and our Vāsana. Vāsana means what, our habit; our samskāra; our mental impressions; Now at any time, the thought that we have in our mind will be decided by one of the two. And sometimes the will becomes successful; sometimes the vāsana becomes successful; which you will know when you try to sit in meditation; the will decides Rāma Rāma Rāma decides and the vāsana decides everything else other than that; so there is a constant clash between will and vāsana; Will planning one thing and vāsana deciding one thing; and as we grow older and older, the vāsana become more and more powerful; because they have a momentum, which is caused by 50 years, 60 years, 70 years of habitual thinking. Whether you are thinking or not, they go on. As we grow older, vāsana becomes stronger; our sub-conscious is saturated with thought, which we have dumped in the last so many years; and the Will becomes feebler and feebler and even when we are young, we are finding it difficult to think what we want; then what to talk of the moment of death. It is almost impossible for us to control our thought process.

And therefore Krishna says the only alternative method is what; your vāsanās must be śuba vāsanās, Godly vāsanās. You have to saturate your subconscious with Īśvara chintana; daivi sampath and then alone, even if your Will is feeble or not there; or even if the person is in coma, where Will is not there, the sub-conscious will have what; only what he has trained.

And therefore Krishna says do not try to deceive me; that will not work, if you have to think of the Lord at the last moment, preparation should start from: next year you should not say; next month do not tell; next week do not say, not next day, next hour you cannot tell, the preparation should start from now. Rehearsal for death it is called. People do not like this topic but these are all bitter facts, which we have to face; better be prepared to face them.

And therefore Krishna because He is interested in our well-being, he is discussing this topic even though we would not like. Therefore, He says sadā tadbhāva bhāvithaḥ; bhāvithāḥ means soaked in, saturated with, influenced by, tat bhāvaḥ, īśvara chintaha; tat means īśvara, bhava means bhavana or chintha; bhāvithāḥ means உரு போடறது repeated thinking, which is saturated.

And when should you do; सदा sadā; so by constant practice, make your sub-conscious a divine or Godly oriented sub-conscious. That is why one great devotee; Appaiya dikshithar he wanted to find out what is in sub-consciousness. One method of finding out is svapna. Dream will give a clue to what is inside; and what people talk in dream; but it will be hazy; So therefore one method is dream. So he wanted to find out what is in his sub-consciousness and therefore he took a particular milk, எருக்கும் பால் erukkam paal, from a tree called erukku, and if you take that, a person will be temporarily off-balance, it is said. Do not try that; it is said like that; that is how the story goes and then he called his disciplines and he said when I am not in my senses, whatever comes out of me, you please note down; can we do it; what all dirt will come out, whom and all we will curse; donkey, money, etc. all you have suppressed and he brings out, and it comes as a great stuthi or hymn on Lord Shiva; his ishta devatha; it is called उन्मत्त स्तोत्रम् unmathastothoram; he was unmatha; from that only the flower is called umatham poo came. So unmatha sthothram, or daśakam or śatkam, they say. So it is because he has practiced such a devotion; therefore Arjuna सदा तद्भावभावितः sadā tadbhāvabhāvitaḥ; be ever committed your ultimate goal of God.

तस्मात्सर्वेषु कालेषु मामनुस्मर युध्य च ।

मय्यर्पितमनोबुद्धिः मामेवैष्यस्यसंशयः ॥ ८.७ ॥

tasmāt sarvēṣu kālēṣu māmanusmara yudhya ca |

mayyarpitamanōbuddhirmāmēvaiṣyasyasaṁśayaḥ || 8.7 ||

तस्मात् tasmāt therefore अनुस्मर माम् anusmara mām remembers Me सर्वेषु कालेषु sarveṣu kālēṣu all the time च ca yudhya युध्य and fight, अर्पितमनोबुद्धिः arpitamanobuddhiḥ with your mind and intellect fixed मयि mayi upon Me, एष्यसि eṣyasi you will attain माम् एव mām eva Me alone असंशयम् asaṁśayam doubtlessly.

7. Therefore remember Me all the time and fight. With your mind and intellect fixed upon Me you will attain Me alone doubtlessly.

Therefore Arjuna my advice to you is सर्वेषु कालेषु माम् अनुस्मर sarveṣu kāleṣu mām anusmara. Therefore Arjuna may you always remember me; then alone your subconscious will be saturated with my thought. Then naturally the next question will be if I remember the Lord all the time, how can I do my family duties; office duties; I will have to apply my mind in my duties; if you try to remember and if you are accountant, calculating things, everything will go wrong; you lose your job, Therefore how am I to remember the Lord all the time; should I drop all things; should I become a sanyāsi; so that right from morning till night, I can remember you only.

Therefore Krishna says, I do not ask you to drop your duty; your responsibilities; your worldly activities; I do not ask you to drop; you have to continue that also; युध्य च yudhya ca; because Krishna knows, Arjuna is trying to escape from the war; now he gets a wonderful chance; as Krishna says always remember me; therefore OK, I will go away from here; anyway I want to go away from the battle; and say Rāma Rāma and sit down; and how can I fight. Therefore Krishna knows, and immediately therefore he says: yuddhyacha; you have to fight also; fight means, for Arjuna the advice is fight; not that you all should fight. So here fight is symbolic of svadharma anuṣṭānam. So may you follow or fulfil your duties; discharge your duties also;

Then the next question will be what; how can I do two jobs simultaneously. You ask me to perform my duty also; you ask me to remember the Lord also; how can I do both of them; the mind can do only job at a time. So I remember I met some person; who was claiming to be some kind of religious person; he has been told to say all the time namaśivāya something; and he was telling namaśivāya, namaśivāya; and when that person met me; he asked question; where are you coming from; and then namaśivāya; namaśivāya, how can I answer; if he questions and I answer, he should listen, isn't it? So therefore some problem is there; otherwise such a question should not be asked; namaśivāya namaśivāya, what do you do; namaśivāya, namaśivāya; where did you get sanyāsa from; namaśivāya; what can I tell; What do you mean by doing both simultaneously.

The conscious mind cannot do two jobs simultaneously; the conscious mind cannot do two jobs simultaneously. It has to be committed to one thing only; but even when the conscious mind is dedicated to some work, in the sub-conscious mind, in the background, we should be clear about the ultimate priorities of life.

So what Krishna wants to say here is: Let in the background, your goal be very much remembered. Therefore, the sub-conscious have Īśvara chintha and the conscious can perform the worldly duties and when you have time away from worldly duties, at that time, your conscious mind also. When you are listening to me, your conscious mind or sub-conscious mind should listen; your conscious mind should listen. In the sub-conscious mind we generally worry; that is the background tanpura śruti. Is it possible, ask every musician, he does that only. He has got a tanpura śruti behind; and you will find he adjusts also; but when he is singing the song, naturally his mind has to be applied; for that particular thing and especially when the chitta svaram you can sing straight; but when the kalpanā svaram comes, and difficult pallavi comes, certainly the mind has to be applied. Then what happens to śruti; conscious mind is involved, but in the background, the tanpura śruti is kept in mind. How do you know; how do you know; otherwise you will not be able to listen; apasruti will come; if that is possible for a musician; or I give the example of the train journey, when you are travelling in the train, in the intermediary station you get down, and buy masala dosai or vadai and you have change also and you give and get back. You do everything, but one corner of the mind remembers what; intermediary station; any horn you hear, any bell you hear, any whistle, Suddenly see your train is going; you do not forget; you are travelling towards some other destination; masal vadai is good but that cannot be destination of life; in the same way, do everything, earn money, get married, nothing wrong; have children, bring them up, have them married; do second baby sitting; grand children, everything you do as required; but in and through all of them, let not the primary goal be forgotten.

Therefore tasmāt sarvēṣu kālēṣu, mām anusmara, may you remember Me the goal and also perform your duty. And मय्यर्पितमनोबुद्धिः mayi arpita manōbuddhir, so with your mind and intellect, committed to Me; Mind and intellect means your emotional personality is committed to the Lord, by which Krishna means let your emotional needs be also fulfilled through Īśvara. Learn to emotionally depend upon God; rather than depending on the mortals around. Because I do not how long the mortals will be around; because they are mortals; Therefore how can I heavily lean on something; whose availability is unpredictable. And make my life risky; therefore love everyone, but for your emotional need, may you depend upon your saṅga īśvara. That is called emotional application; so if you see Tyāgarāja song, most of the time, he talks only with Rāma; because to talk to others is a headache; he knows that; therefore any talk, he does with Rāma. You can also talk to your Lord; of course in a closed room; otherwise people think, after attending the Gītā classes, some screws are becoming loose! Therefore do not do it openly; enclosed door you do; perfectly all right; this is emotional application.

And also buddhim; may you be rationally also convinced; because the physical personal God symbolises the truth; symbolises immortality; symbolises love; symbolises compassion; symbolises steadiness. Therefore the physical form we do not say is the ultimate truth; but the physical form represents the highest reality; and that is called the intellectual conviction.

And once you are able to appreciate the abstract truth; then the God with form is optional for you. You have it, enjoy. You do not have it. But until then you require a support; alampanam.

Therefore be emotionally hooked to īśvara; be intellectually convinced; and माम् एव एष्यसि mām ēva eṣyasi; if you follow this lifestyle, you will certainly attain Me alone. asamsayaha; Again Krishna gives guarantee; do not doubt me, because we know, the other people's guarantee, what it is; as somebody said, the politicians are those, who shake your hands before your elections and shake your confidence after elections; we know that nobody in the world is reliable; Therefore we extend that to God also; therefore God says do not put Me in that pedestal; I am reliable.

8. Oh Arjuna! Constantly thinking of the Lord with a mind that is undistracted due to the practice of Meditation, one attains the divine supreme (Lord).

So we have to supply prayaṇa kālē, at the time of death, a saṅgā upāsaka anuchinthayan; remembers the Lord; what type of Lord; paramam puruṣam divyam; the Lord which is the highest reality, and the Lord who is known as puruṣaḥ; puruṣaḥ, the word has two meaning, I think I have told you;

one meaning is puri shete iti puruṣaḥ; the one who resides in the heart of everyone; or puri or pure, means the body, shete means dwells, resides, puruṣaḥ, the indweller of all.

And the second meaning पूरयति सर्वं इति पुरुषः pūrayati sarvaṁ iti puruṣaḥ; pūrayati means the one who spreads, the one who fills up the whole world, from that only the word pūrṇam comes; pūrṇam so that all pervading indweller who is paramam, the absolute reality.

And divyam; so divyam means the one who is the caitanya svarūpam; so that Lord, a saṅgā upāsaka remembers at the time of death; how, cetasa; with a mind, What type of mind, अभ्यासयोगयुक्तेन abhyāsayōgayuktēna; which has the strength of practice, regular exercise; because the mind is able to do, because of regular rehearsal; abyāsa means what practice; repetition; abhyasa yogaha means the sādānā of abhyāsa; I think in Tamil also they use Abyasam, practice makes a man perfect; so that practice is called abhyāsa yōga yuktēna; a mind which is endowed with the strength of practice, the support of practice with such a mind; and therefore only नान्यगामिना nānyagāminā; with a mind which is undistracted; with a such a mind, the saṅgā upāsaka remembers Me.

And याति yāti; and it is very very natural; it is not extra ordinary; I have heard that mathematics prodigy Rāmanujam, he had an early death; he was suffering from some disease; I think TB or something; and he was in his deathbed and somebody went and he asked what is your car No. at the time of death; we may ask the bank number; he asked about the number of the car and when he said that number, he said this is the only number which has got two different cube root form or something; for us mathematics is allergy. At the time of death; he remembers the uniqueness of the car number; I forget what he said, it has come unique number; presented in the form of cube root of something or like that.

How he is able to do that; because of abhyāsa yōga yuktēna; so whatever you love, whatever you love, your mind automatically will think of that; if you have valued the highest truth; then you should think of that; which is represented of God; and thinking of that God; yāti; yāti means he will attain or merge into that Lord; thinking of God, he merges into God; and here merges into God means kṛama muktim prāpnōti.

More we will see in the next class.

Om

Answering the 7th question of Arjuna, from the 5th verse of this chapter, Lord Krishna is dealing with the topic of antha kāla īśvara smaraṇam. The significance of remembering God at the time of death, and as a part of this topic, Krishna is dealing with saguṇa īśvara upāsanam. And saguṇa īśvara upāsanam is meditation upon the Lord with attributes. And here the upāsaka that is kept in mind is Niṣkāma upāsaka, an upāsaka who has only a spiritual goal; who does not have materialist desires or to put in another language, who has got vairāgyam. And this Niṣkāma upāsaka can take to two different courses of life, one is practising Niṣkāma upāsana for sometime, and thereafter switching over the sādhanā to the vēdānta vicāraḥ; or nirguṇa īśvara jñānam. So from saguṇa to nirguṇa, from upāsana to jñānam. And jñānam is in the form of vēdānta śravaṇa, manana nidhidhyasanam. And by following that jñāna yōga, a person gets liberation here and now, which is called jīvan mukthiḥ. And this jīvan mukthi topic, Krishna is keeping aside now for the 9th chapter, but He is talking about another course that the Niṣkāma upāsaka can take to, and in this he continues in Niṣkāma upāsana throughout the life, without coming to vēdānta vicāraḥ or nirguṇa īśvara, because of any reason. We are not bothered about the reason; either he feels he is not subtle enough or qualified enough to appreciate nirguṇa or he might not have an appropriate ācārya to enter into vēdānta vicāra, or he might not have sufficient health for that. Thus due to any obstacle a person may not be able to come to nirguṇa īśvara vicāra, in which case, he continues in saguṇa īśvara, as Niṣkāma upāsana with vairāgyam for īśvara prāp̥thi he continues. And Krishna says, naturally since he has a great value for īśvara prāp̥thi; at the time of death also, his mind dwells upon what he values most. What he considers as top priority in life. For a Niṣkāma upāsaka, īśvara prāp̥thi is the top priority, therefore at the time of death also he remembers and a result of that, that person after death, leaves the physical body here, carries the subtle body, and goes to brahma lōkā. And in Brahma lōkā, he has to enter into Nirguṇa īśvara vicāra. There is no escape from vēdānta. You have to definitely come to vēdānta without escape. So Nirguṇa īśvara vicāra, nobody can escape, because that is the ultimate root to liberation; and in brahma lōkā he is supposed to get jñānam, and as a result of that jñānam; he attains liberation; which is called kṛama mukthiḥ. And it is this kṛama mukthi, Krishna is dealing with throughout the 8th chapter. Therefore you should remember, in the 8th chapter, Nirguṇa īśvara jñānam is not the subject matter; it is kept aside; for the time being.

And naturally the question will come, how can a person remember Lord at the time of death; prāṇa prayāṇa samaye, khapa vātha pithaihi, kanda avarodhanavithau smaraṇam kuthaste; so how can I remember, because I do not have any control over myself; now itself whether I have control over myself is doubtful; and that is why some devotee it seems said, அப்போதைக்கு இப்போதே சொல்லிவைத்தேன். appodaikku eppode shollivaithe; so they have understood. So for that question, Krishna himself gives the answer, it will become effortless, if your devotion goes to your sub-conscious mind. By conscious meditation, if a person pushes the īśvara smaraṇa to the subconscious mind, at the time of death, even if conscious mind is not operative, from the sub-conscious mind, whatever is there in saturation, that will surface.

And therefore He said in the 8th verse, which we completed in the last class, abhyāsa yōga yukthēna. That is why I told you repeatedly

Watch your thought, that will become your words,
watch your words, they become your actions,
watch your action, they become your habit;
watch your habit; it becomes character;
watch your character, it becomes your destiny.

So therefore alert life from now itself is called abyāsa yōgaḥ. And with a mind which is strengthened by abyāsa yōga, and therefore with an undistracted mind, when a person remembers the Lord, he will attain kṛama mukthi. Up to this we saw, kṛama mukthi.

यः अनुस्मरेत् yah anusmaret one who thinks of the Lord (at the time of death attains the Lord), कविम् kaviṁ who is omniscient पुराणम् purāṇam ageless अनुशासितारम् anuśāsītāram the ruler of all अणियांसम् अणोः aṇiyāṁsam aṇoḥ subtler than atom धातारं सर्वस्य dhātāram sarvasya the sustainer of all, अचिन्त्यरूपम् acintyarūpam incomprehensible आदित्यवर्णम् ādityavarṇam effulgent like the sun, परस्तात् तमसः parastāt tamaśah and beyond ignorance

9. One who thinks of the Lord at the time of death attains the lord who is omniscient, the ruler of all, subtler than atom, the sustainer of all, incomprehensible, effulgent like the sun, and beyond ignorance.

So here Krishna talks about the attributes of the Lord who is remembered by the Niṣkāma upāsaka at the time of death: Īśvara guṇāha; Īśvara kalyāna viśeṣa. What are the attributes that are mentioned here. Each word is an attribute of the Lord. कविम् kaviṁ, पुराणम् purāṇam, अनुशासितारम् anuśāsītāram; अणोः अणियां aṇoḥ aṇiyāṁ; सर्वस्य धातारं sarvasya dhātāram; अचिन्त्यरूपम् acintyarūpam; आदित्यवर्णम् ādityavarṇam, तमसः परस्तात् tamaśah parastāt, वर्तमानः varthamānāḥ. Eight attributes are mentined here.

From this it is very clear that the Niṣkāma upāsaka must be in touch with the scriptures; Otherwise he will not know all these things. So what are the attributes; कविः kavihi; kavihi means sarvajñāḥ; omniscient; the all illuminating principle, because the Lord is seen as the total mind; so kavihi, the omniscient one; पुराणम् purāṇam, purāṇaḥ, the most ancient one; the one who is never created; the one who is the creator of eveyrone, but the one who himself is uncreated; and therefore purāṇam; here purāṇam means the ancient one. Not bhāgavatham purāṇam, not in that sense; here purāṇam is used as an adjective; our purāṇams are also called purāṇams, because they are also ancient ones; so purāṇam;

Then the next one is अनुशासितारम् anuśāsītāram; anuśāsītā means the one who gives the karma phala to all the jīvās, according to the laws of karma. And when we talk about the laws of karma, not only the physical laws, we take into account, most importantly we take into account, the moral laws also; in keeping with all those laws, the one who gives karma phalam; therefore karma phalaa dātāh;

Then the one who is अणोः अणियांसम् aṇoḥ aṇiyāṁsam; the one who is subtler than even the subtlest atom; which means the one who is not available for any sense organs or any sensory perception. So the one who is beyond śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa, gandha. So from this, it is very clear, that a physical form that we attribute to the Lord is only symbolic, exactly like national flag; the flag is not India; but the flag represents India. Similarly, the formful God represents the formless reality; the formless beauty; the formless immortality; the formless peace; the formless security, in fact everything that we seek in life, that is symbolised as God. These are the things that we seek, peace, we seek, security we seek, fullness we seek, all these are abstract goals; and these abstract goals are concretely symbolised as the physical God; and therefore aṇoḥ aṇiyāṁsam, whose real nature is formlessness.

And then in the second line, सर्वस्य धातारं sarvasya dhātāram, the one who is the substratum, the support of the entire creation, being the very cause of the creation; just as ocean is the very substratum for all the waves and bubbles, they all rise in the ocean, rest in the ocean, and resolve in the ocean. Similarly, the Lord is vishva ādhāram and in vēdāntic context, we use the word, sadrūpam; sattha; the one who is the very existence principle.

sadēva sōmyēdamagra āsīdēkamēvādvitīyam

इमाः सोम्य नद्यः पुरस्तात्प्राच्यः स्यन्दन्ते पश्चात्प्रतीच्यस्ताः

imāḥ sōmya nadyaḥ purastātprācyaḥ syandantē paścātpratīcyaḥ

In Chandōgya upaniṣad, the Lord is presented as the very existence principle, which supports all. But to understand the existence principle, we require a subtle intellect and therefore we symbolise the 'sat' in a particular form; but existence has no form at all. Therefore sarvasya dhātāram;

And अचिन्त्यरूपम् acintyarūpam, the one who is incomprehensible; the one who is beyond our thoughts; the one who cannot be objectified by the mind; the reason being, one can give many reasons, mind can visualise only the attributes; mind is a instrument meant to study only the attributes. And therefore the mind cannot function in a field where the attributes are not there. just as the best car cannot move in the ocean; and the best ship cannot move in the land; because ships are not meant for the land and the cars are not meant for the ocean; mind is not meant for a field which is beyond attributes; therefore mind cannot conceive of that.

And the second reason is God cannot be ultimately objectified because, God happens to the very subject, who objectifies everything. So such unobjectifiable God is temporarily objectified by adding attributes;

निर्विशेषम् परम् ब्रह्म साक्षात् कर्तुम् अनीश्वरः

ये मन्ता ते अनुकम्पयन्ते सविशेष निरूपणैहिः

nirviśēṣam param brahma sāksāt kartum anīśvaraḥ ye mantā tē anukampānyantē saviśēṣa nirūpaṇaihiḥ

For those people who cannot conceive of the attributeless truth, for those mandhāḥ; the Upaniṣad calls them mandhāḥ; for them the upaniṣad comes down and presents the attributed God. Steeping over the attributed, we have to go to the attributeless; Therefore acintyarūpam

And aditya varnam; and the one who is bright like the Sun, the one who is the illuminator of everything like the Sun. If you remember, recently in Kathōpaniṣad we saw

सूर्यो यथा सर्वलोकस्य चक्षुः

na lipyatē lōkaduḥkhēna bāhyaḥ || Part II. Canto 2. 11 ||

Just as one Sun illumines everything, God is that one consciousness, because of which we are conscious of everything else; therefore अदित्यवर्णम् ādityavarṇam is svyam prakāśa caitanya svarupām; so the one who is all-illuminating consciousness.

And तमसः परस्तात् tamasah parastāt; and which is unaffected by even darkness. This is the difference between the sunlight, and the ātma jyōthiḥ. What is the difference between soorya jyōthiḥ and ātma jyōthiḥ, the Sunlight can illumine everything; except one thing, it cannot illumine darkness. Swami Chinmayanand nicely says: somebody went and told Sun God it seems and said: There is a beautiful girl, Miss Darkness; so you can get married; it is a story; therefore the Sun God thought, somehow I should meet that Miss Darkness; so Sun God asked it seems where is Miss Darkness; then they said it is on the other side of the earth; so the Sun started running after Miss Darkness. Still the Sun is going round and round; that is why sunrise and sunset; Bachelor Sun wants to marry Ms. Darkness because in Sanskrit, the word darkness is feminine gender; niśā is feminine; some people keep the name niśā also; I know how this word came. niśā means darkness. Anyway, I hope there is no one here; niśā means darkness. Ok. leave it aside; So what is the problem. Sun can illumine everything, but it can never illumine darkness; that is the limitation of the Sun; but consciousness is a superior light, which can illumine the darkness also. In fact, if this room becomes dark, not now; you have to continue the class; how do you know, it is dark; you are conscious of darkness, that means consciousness illumines the existence of darkness also, which means it is not driven away by darkness, it is not affected by darkness; and therefore it is called tamasah parastāt; the one who is illuminator of both.

Such a God, the Niṣkāma upāsaka meditates; अनुस्मरेत् यः anusmaret yaḥ anusmaret yaḥ; yaḥ here means Niṣkāma upāsaka; and anusmaret, means he repeatedly remembers. Not only throughout the life; but at the time of death also.

And this verse is grammatically incomplete; because yaḥ anusmaret, whoever remembers, it is incomplete. So you have to gramatically complete by adding He attains the Lord. yaḥ anusmaret, saḥ paramam puruṣam yāthi; so this we borrow from the previous verse. saḥ paramam puruṣam yāthi; so he gets which mukthi; not jīvan mukthi; he gets kṛama mukthi.

10. At the time of death, having properly brought the praṅa between the eyebrows by the power of yōga with an undistracted mind endowed with devotion, one attains that divine supreme Lord.

So here Krishna talks about the Niṣkāma upāsaka, remembering God at the time of death. So what are the things that he practices; when, prayāṅakālē, so prayāṅakālam, at the time of death; What does he do; second line, भ्रुवोर्मध्ये प्राणमावेश्य bhruvōrmadhyē prāṅamāvēśya; so praṅa means this very life principle, the pañcha prāṅaḥ; he withdraws from every organ of the body, and he has to bring the praṅa to hṛdayam; and from the hṛdayam he has to direct the praṅa through a special nādi called suṣumnā nādi. It is not mentioned here; but in other places, it is said

स्तासां मूर्धानमभिनिःसृतैका ।

तयोर्ध्वमायन्नमृतत्वमेति

विष्वङ्ङन्या उत्क्रमणे भवन्ति ॥ १६ ॥

tayōrdhvamāyannamṛtatvamēti
viṣvaññanyā utkramaṇē bhavanti || Part II. Canto III. Mantra 16 ||

In Kathōpaniṣad, the details are given. We have to remember that here; praṇa is brought into hṛdayam and the praṇa is directed through a special channel called suṣumnā nādi and the channel is supposed to open on the top of the head and that opening is called Brahma randram; Brahma randram means passage to brahma lōkā; so like a rocket; which is forcibly released on a trajectory, on a particular course. Similarly praṇa has to be released through that passage; And from this brahma randra, there is a route, which we will see, which is known as shukla gadi, through that the the jeevathma travels; and this sukla gati is supposed to take him to brahma lōkāḥ.

For all these things, he has to prepare. Therefore, prāṇamāvēśya bhruvōrmadhyē, he has to bring the praṇa to a place between the eyebrows; which represents suṣumnā nādi; because it is supposed to travel through the middle of the head and directly behind the bru dēśaḥ.

Now the question is how can I withdraw the praṇa, that too at the time of praṇa leaving the body; how can I can have so much control over the praṇa; to withdraw it; bring it to the heart; send through the suṣumnā nādi, it seems impossible. So Krishna says; yōga balēna chaiva; If a person wants kṛama mukthi; not only he must be a great upāsaka, he also must a great yōgi; he must have practiced aṣṭāṅga yōga; and he must have practiced lot of praṇāyāma and through that, he must be able to control all the praṇas; and you know it is possible also; there are many people who can control the so-called involuntary action; what involuntary for us; for us most of the actions are involuntary. Anyway action which are considered involuntary like heartbeat etc. by the practice of yōga, he can control the so-called uncontrol and therefore Krishna says upāsaka must be a yōgi; if he wants kṛama mukthi; what about jīvan mukthi; to come to nirguṇa īśvara jñānam; and attain mukthi here, the greatest advantage is you need not be a yōgi; now you can decide what do you what; so if you postpone that is the punishment; if you postpone you should be a tremendous praṇāyāma practioner having total control over your system; and therefore Krishna adds योगबलेन yōga balēna by the strength of his yōga practice, he must be able to withdraw the praṇa, and direct through this suṣumnā nādi and while doing all these things, he has to do some more things; here he has to do something else also; what is that; मनसाचलेन manasā'calēna; he should enjoy a mind which is very very steady; when at the time of death; not only he should be able to withdraw the sūkṣma śarīram or praṇa, he should be able to have perfect balance of mind; therefore acalēna manasa; so with an undistracted mind; and if you ask how is it possible; again you have to add; yōga balēna; thus yōga śāstrā is meant for yōgaḥ citta vṛittihi nirōdhaḥ; for disciplining the thoughts in the yōga; therefore Niṣkāma upāsaka, steadies the mind; and then what is the next thing he has to do; (not finished) bhakthya yukthaḥ; he must be endowed with total devotion towards me which means his intense urge should be for Īśvara praapthi and nothing else; and how is it possible; yōga balēna; for each thing you have to add; yōga balēna he has control over praṇa; yōga balēna he can withdraw the mind; and yōga balēna, he can direct the mind towards the Lord; in the form of any iṣṭa dēvathā; that is not said here; we can understand it as in the form of any iṣṭa dēvathā; Rāma rūpam, Krishna rūpam, Dēvi rūpam, etc. and by such upāsana, what will he get; saḥ param puruṣam divyam upāithi; as a result of such a Īśvara smaraṇa, he will attain the Lord himself; what type of Lord; another description; परं पुरुषम् दिव्यम् param puruṣam divyam; I have given the meaning of the word puruṣa before; the one who indwells in every one; and one who fills up the whole creation, such a Lord; and param, the one who is the highest, dēsa kāla vasthu parichheda śūnyam; the one who is limitless one and divyam; the one who is svayam prakāśa caitanyam; the one who is of the nature of consciousness; such a Lord he will attain; how kṛama mukthi; not directly, go to Brahma lōkā, attend Brahmāji's classes; gain knowledge and attain mōkṣa.

सङ्ग्रहेण पवक्ष्ये saṅgrahaṇa pavakṣye – I shall briefly declare ते te to you तद् अक्षरं पदम् tad akṣaram padam that imperishable goal यद् वेदविदः वदन्ति yad vēdāvīdaḥ vadanti which the knower of the Vēdās speak about –यद् वीतरागाः यतयः yad vītarāgāḥ yatayaḥ which the dispassionate sannyasis विशन्ति viśanti attain इच्छन्तः यत् icchantāḥ yat and desiring which, चरन्ति ब्रह्मचर्यम् caranti brahmacaryam they live a life of Brahmacharya.

11. I shall briefly declare to you that imperishable goal which the knower of the Vēdās speak about, which the dispassionate sanyāsis attain, and desiring which they live a life of brahmacharya.

Here Krishna talks about the glory of the Lord. यदक्षरं वेदविदो वदन्ति yad akṣaram vēdavidō vadanti. So this destination, that is God, all the vēdā vidhaha, vedic learners, the expert in the scriptures called as akṣaram; akṣaram means the absolute reality; yath akṣaram in the Mundaka upaniṣad, the ultimate reality is called akṣaram; so yath tat akṣaram adhigamyathe. So akṣaram means the imperishable one, the infinite means which means the only source of security; the only source of happiness and the only source of fullness. This vēdā vidhaha vadanti; vēdā vidhaha means the one who has studied the scriptures; they talk about that.

यद् यतयः विशन्ति yad yatayaḥ viśanti, which is accomplished by committed seekers; So literally the word yatayaḥ means sanyāsinah; and sanyāsi represents the one who pursues this spiritual goal, single mindedly to the exclusion of every other thing. Always sanyāsa represents priority for spirituality and whoever gives top priority to spiritual goal, he or she is a sanyāsi. We are not talking about the external sanyāsa here, but we are talking about people of priority; so yatayaḥ viśanti; is that Lord whom these committed seekers accomplish.

And what is their qualification, वीतरागाः vītarāgāḥ; who have turned away from the finite goals of life; because they have attempted all other goals, and they have found that every thing other than God is finite; they come under aparā prakṛiti; God alone represents the parā prakṛiti; and therefore everything is finite; and therefore what remember, cardboard chair; I hope you would not forget; Cardboard chair; you can do everything except sitting over. Similarly everything in the creation, you can handle, you can use, you can be nearby except expecting emotional security from that. If you want security, that aksharam alone can give and therefore these people understood the limitation, turned away from the finite and turned towards the Infinite one;

And यदिच्छन्तो ब्रह्मचर्यं चरन्ति yadicchantō brahmacaryam caranti; desiring this spiritual goal alone, the seekers follow the life of brahmacaryam; and in this context, brahmacaryam means the committed study of scriptures; gurukula vasalakṣaṇam brahmacaryam; brahma means scriptures, charyam means dwelling in the scriptures; because scriptures alone help us in discovering that reality and this is the nature of brahma.

And Krishna says about the nature of that Īśvara, अहम् संग्रहेण प्रवक्ष्ये aham saṁgrahēṇa pravakṣyē; I shall briefly define the nature of that Īśvara; and he promises to define the nature of Īśvara here; but he gives the definition later only; in verses 20, 21, and 22. There he will give the definition of Īśvara, but here he promises to give the definition; tad padam saṁgrahēṇa pravakṣyē. I shall define that God briefly.

And we might forget Krishna's promise but Krishna remembers it; and he will give it later; padam means goal or destination.

sarvadvārāṇi saṁyamya manō hṛdi nirudhya ca |

संयम्य saṁyamya having restrained सर्वद्वाराणि sarvadvārāṇi all the sense organs निरुध्य nirudhya having confined मनः manah the mind हृदि hṛdi to the heart च आधाय ca ādhāya and having fixed आत्मनः प्राणम् ātmanah prāṇam one's praṇa मूर्ध्नि mūrdhni on the top of the head आस्थितः āsthitaḥ one should take to योगधारणाम् yōgadhāraṇām yōgic concentration.

12. Having restrained all the sense organs, having confined the mind to the heart, and having fixed one's praṇa on the top of the head one should take to yōgic concentration.

I said before that God in his real nature is formless; and since it is difficult to conceive of the formless God, the scriptures present a concrete symbol to visualise the formless; which is called in the language of upāsana, an alampanam; alampanam means a concrete symbol to represent an abstract object of meditation. And this alampanam or symbol is of two types; one is called prathima alampanam, and the other is called pratheeka alampanam; prathima alampanam is a symbol which has got all the limbs or organs like a head, hands, legs etc. where the Lord is personified. If there is a Rāma vigraha, Rāma picture that picture becomes what; pratima alampanam. Similarly Krishna prathima alampanam, because have the description also.

क्षीरोदन्वत्प्रदेशे शुचिमणिविलसत्सैकतेर्मौक्तिकानां kṣīrōdanvatpradēśē śucimaṇivilasatsaikatērmuktikānām or

मेघश्यामं पीतकौशेयवासं श्रीवत्साङ्कं कौस्तुभोद्भासिताङ्गम् mēghaśyāmaṁ pītakaśyāvāsaṁ śrīvatsāṅkaṁ
kaustubhōdbhāsitāṅgam and they give the description of the hands and various weapons which are held in the hand, all those descriptions are given, they become what, prathima alampanam; when the symbol does not have any organs or limbs like a shiva linga. For a shiva linga, there is no hand, leg or anything; and therefore it will become what pratheeka alampanam; a flame is pratheeka alampanam. And for Vinayaka, when you have the turmeric powder; पीदिच्छा पीनंनयारं pidichaa pillayar; just make a lump out of turmeric powder and asmin haridra bimbe, sumukam mahaganapathim dhyayami; thereafter, asanam, argyam, padyam, etc. who is vinayaka, a lump of turmeric powder and in that lump there is no organ. And therefore it becomes what pratheeka alampanam, and the scriptures say you can use any alampanam you like; that is how you choose your iṣṭa devatha; and suppose you do not like a personal God, some people say; personal God I have no appeal, and if you do not want prathima, you can have a pratheeka, you can take a flame, a flame can represent and once such important alampanam or symbol given by the scriptures is Omkara alampanam; Omkara is an alampanam given by the scriptures themselves; we saw in Kathōpaniṣad:

एतद्ध्येवाक्षरं ब्रह्म एतद्ध्येवाक्षरं परम् ।
एतद्ध्येवाक्षरं ज्ञात्वा यो यदिच्छति तस्य तत् ॥ Part I. Canto II. १६ ॥
एतदालम्बनं श्रेष्ठमेतदालम्बनं परम् ।
एतदालम्बनं ज्ञात्वा ब्रह्मलोके महीयते ॥ Part I. Canto II. १७ ॥
ētaddhyēvākṣaraṁ brahma ētaddhyēvākṣaraṁ param |
ētaddhyēvākṣaraṁ jñātvā yō yadicchati tasya tat || Part I. Canto II. 16 ||
ētaḍālabanaṁ śrēṣṭhamētaḍālabanaṁ param |
ētaḍālabanaṁ jñātvā brahmalōkē mahiyatē || Part I. Canto II. 17 ||

Thus Omkāra is an alampanam; and when you visualise God in Omkāra, it is called Omkāra upāsana; Omkāra upāsana is a meditation in which I invoke the Lord in Om. And it is considered a very well known upāsana; and therefore almost in every upāniṣad, Omkara upāsana is talked about; these two mantras are Katha, I quoted; and Mundakopaniṣad.

धनुर् गृहीत्वौपनिषदं महासं शरं ह्युपासणिशितं सन्धयीत । praṇavō dhanuḥ śaro hyātmā brahma tallakṣayamucyate

apramattēna vēddhavyaṁ śaravat tanmayō bhavēt || 2.11. 4 ||

Omkāra is talked about. In Taittiriya Upaniṣad, Omkāra is talked about; and since Omkāra upsana is very popular in scriptures, Krishna also borrows Omkāra upāsana and talks about that in these two verses. 12 and 13 talk about Omkāra upāsana.

And when Krishna talks about Omkara upāsana, remember, it is only a sample that is given, it is not compulsory that every one has to do Omkāra upāsana; it is a choice. Instead of Omkāra, one can choose Krishna Rāma, Saraswathy, Lakhmi, any deity can be chosen, you should have a concrete symbol for the abstract God. and All these he should practice throughout the life and also at the time of death. That is said here: सर्वद्वाराणि संयम्य sarvadvārāṇi saṁyamya; maraṇa kālē, OK; at the time of maraṇam; he has to withdraw from all the sense organs he has to shut, all the sense organs; because sense organs are the gateways through which the world gate-crashes into your mind; without your permission; and once the world enters your mind, then each one will trigger a line of thinking; and therefore if you have to remember God; shut the sense organs; so sarvadvārāṇi saṁyamya; manō hr̥di nirudhya; bring the mind to your heart, in which the Lord is visualised. Sankaracharya in a prayer verse known as Shivashankara ashtakam, he prays to Lord himself:

अतिभीषणकटुभाषणयमकिंकरपटली
कृतताडनपरिपीडनमरणागतसमये ।
उमया सह मम चेतसि यमशासन निवसन् हर शंकर शिव शंकर हर मे हर दुरितम् ॥ १ ॥ atibhīṣaṇakaṭubhāṣaṇayamakimkarapaṭālī kṛtatāḍanaparipīḍanamaraṇāgatasamayē |

umayā saha mama cētasi yamaśāsana nivasan hara śaṁkara śiva śaṁkara hara mē hara duritam || 1 ||

Can you understand. atibhīṣaṇa at the time of death; Oh Śiva, all the yamakiṁkaras are coming, yama dhuthas are coming, and not using polite words; does not enquire about you politely; atibhīṣaṇa kaṭubhāṣaṇa, threatening me and criticising me for wasting my time; yamakiṁkarapaṭālī, kṛtatāḍana paripīḍana maraṇāgatasamayē, making lot of noises they come; and at that time, when I am terribly frightened, when my will is very weak; at the time what should you do, now itself I am booking you; what should you do; umayā saha mama cētasi yamaśāsana nivasan; you should come into my heart; and not alone, umayā saha; mama cētasi, yamaśāsana, the Lord is addressed beautifully, the Lord is here called yama śāsana, which means he is Yama to Yama; there was one cinema, I did not watch, just saw the title, I do not know its contents; kāla kāla, Therefore yama kiṁkaras come, you the yama śāsana should come and dance in my heart; that the yama dhoothas will bolt; just run away; that is why we seek the grace of the Lord also; it is a beautiful Śivaśankara Aṣṭakam; 8 verses; in all of them, hara śaṁkara śivaśaṁkara hara mē hara duritam. It is a beautiful prayer.

And therefore मनो हृदि निरुध्य manō hṛdi nirudhya; having withdrawn the mind, and placed in the heart; hrdni atmanaḥ praṇam adāya; the same old story; the praṇa should be withdrawn from their respective centers and it should be brought to the top of the head; murdha, the top of the head, where the suṣumnā nādi emerges out.

And what should the mind be doing at that time; योगधारणाम् आस्थितः yōgadhāraṇām āsthitaḥ; āsthitaḥ; so one should practice the yōgic concentration; dhāraṇa means focussing, dwelling, concentrating; how is it possible; if you ask; it should have been practised earlier; and then once the time comes, I know that all these things are going to go away; any way, therefore, I should seek my way out; I have till now done everything for the family; now let me look for my way; so a person should practice yōga dhāraṇa; which is Omkāra upāsana.

And what is that omkāra upāsana; he said in the next verse; which we will see in the next class.

Om

From the 5th verse of this 8th chapter, Lord has been answering Arjuna's question regarding remembrance of the Lord at the time of death. Prayānakāla Īśvara smaraṇam and the method of that practice and the significance of that smaraṇam and also the benefit of that Īśvara smaraṇam; and we saw that to remember the Lord at the time of death, a person has to be a Niṣkāma upāsakaḥ; upāsakaḥ means the one who practices meditation on Īśvara; with attributes; therefore we say saṅga upāsakaḥ. And not only he has to be a meditator of Īśvara, he also must have recognised the fact that the highest possible in life is Īśvara prapthi itself, because Īśvara alone is the infinite one. The form that we attribute to Īśvara, is of course finite, but the finite form symbolises the Lord who is the infinite. We do not take the symbol as God; we take symbol as the representative of God; because we know that the symbol is finite; and therefore taking a particular finite symbol, he knows Lord as the infinite, represented by the symbol and he considers that infinite God as the primary goal of life: Asatōma sad gamaya; everything else other than God is asat, God alone is Sat; Tamasōmaya jyotirgamaya; everything other than God is tamas; God alone is jyothihi; and Mrythōma amrutham gamaya; everything other than God is mruthyu means mortality; God alone represents immortality. And the person who has this top priority, we call him Niṣkāma upāsakaḥ and we have been seeing in these verses, this Niṣkāma upāsakaḥ remembers God at the time of death also. And according to the Law which Krishna said: यम् यम् भावम् स्मरति तम् तम् भावम् प्राप्नोति yam yam bhāvam smarati tam tam bhāvam prāpnoti. As a person thinks, so he becomes; and since the Niṣkāma upāsakaḥ thinks of God, he becomes one with God.

And how he becomes one with God we saw before; and Krishna himself will clarify later; after death this Niṣkāma upāsakaḥ will go Brahma lōkā and in Brahma lōkā, he will get nirguṇa īśvara jñānam and as a result of that jñānam, he will get jīvātma-paramātma-aikyam; and this method of īśvara prāp̥thi we call by the name kṛama mukthi. So anthakāla īśvara smaraṇam will lead to kṛama mukthi. This is the topic.

And I said in the last class, even though infinite God is only one, the finite symbols representing the Lord, the symbols can be many. Symbols are finite; and they can be many. And therefore in our scriptures, many symbols are given. Some of them are personal God, like Rāma, Krishna, etc. which we called prathimā symbol; and there are symbols which are non-personal also; which we called prathīka symbol; like flame as a symbol; like shiva lingam as symbol; like sāligrāma as a symbol and in that list Omkāra also is a prathīka symbol; In Sanskrit called prathīka alambanam. And a Niṣkāma upāsakaḥ can practice Omkāra upāsana and through Omkāra, he remembers the Lord. And having remembered the Lord through Omkāra throughout the life, at the time of death also he utters Om and dies. A Rāma bhaktha with the name Rāma in his mouth; a Krishna bhaktha dies with the name Krishna. Can abhaktha dies with all words like Ayyo; something comes whatever he has been practising.

You know the story; a person was about to die; and Pārvathi wanted to help that person and therefore Pārvathi requested Paramēśvara to bless him; Paramēśvara said he does not want us, because depends upon other things; Still after all universal mothers, she said that they should have consideration for him and bless him. Then Paramēśvara said that both of us with go near him at the time of death; If he dies with the word Amma in the mouth, you should help, you are the mother; if he says Appa and dies, I will help, because I am Universal father; jagata pitharau vandē Pārvathi Paramēśvararu. This was the contract/deal between Pārvathi and Paramēśvara; and both of them went near the person who is dying. and then at the time of death, he started the word ah, then they were not sure, appa also starts with a, amma also starts with a, both were ready, and he died neither saying appa nor amma, but ayyo; and left the prana; Lord Śiva looked at Pārvathi and smiled; this is what it is. Even if you are ready to rescue, generally humanity does not want on God, they want to depend on parivara and possession; and as long as they have got confidence in them, let them try. And that is why they say instead of Ayyo; Rāma, Krishna, Shiva, etc. Some name should be uttered. So Krishna is going to take the example of Omkāra upāsana in the following verses; which we will read now.

ओमित्येकाक्षरं ब्रह्म व्याहरन्मामनुस्मरन् ।

यः प्रयाति त्यजन्देहं स याति परमां गतिम् ॥ ८.१३ ॥

ōmityēkākṣaram brahma vyāharan māmanusmaran |

yaḥ prayāti tyajan dēhaṃ sa yāti paramāṃ gatim || 8.13 ||

व्यवहरन् vyavaharan uttering एकाक्षरम् ओम् इति ekākṣaram om iti the monosyllable 'om' ब्रह्म brahma which is (the name of) Brahman अनुस्मरन् माम् anusmaran mām and remembering Me सः यः प्रयाति saḥ yaḥ prayāti one who departs त्यजन् देहम् tyajan deham leaving the body याति परमां गतिम् yāti paramāṃ gatim attains the supreme goal.

13. Uttering the monosyllable 'Om' which is (the name of) Brahman and remembering Me, one departs leaving the body attains the supreme goal.

So what does this Niṣkāma Omkāra upāsakaḥ will do at the time of death is the topic. And you should remember throughout this discussion, this upāsakaḥ has never come to nirguṇa Īśvara; he has not come to vēdānta jñānam; therefore he does not have aham brahmāsmi iti jñānam and therefore from vēdāntic angle, this person will come under ajñāni only. Even though he is a very informed person, with regard to all other things, even though he is very informed with regard to upāsana, he is ignorant with regard to one particular thing; what is that, the essential oneness between the jīvātma and paramātma, he does not know. And if he has already that knowledge, he need not bother about kṛama mukthi at all; because with this knowledge itself liberation is guranteed here and now.

All these kṛama mukthi topic is only with regard to ajñāni; regarding aikyam; therefore remember, this ajñāni Niṣkāma upāsakaḥ, அழ்த்தம் திருத்தம்மாக சொல்லிவிடுவோம் ajñāni Niṣkāma upāsakaḥ uses Omkāra for remembering the Lord in his own concept with his own attributes; ओम् इति व्याहरन् om iti vyāharan. So he utters the word Om which is एकाक्षरम् ब्रह्म ekākṣaram Brahma; which is ekākṣaram, which is mono syllabled word revealing Brahman. So ekākṣaram means a word of one syllable, because Om is only one syllable and which reveals Brahman that ekākṣaram Brahman om iti vyāharan; utters. It does not mean that everyone has to utter Om; whatever he has practiced throughout the life, that nāma he has to utter.

And suppose a person says I have not practiced anything; that is why Krishna is warning, start practising now itself; Rāma Rāma Rāma start; that is why in our culture, even when they yawn they say Krishna Krishna Krishna, anything practice; and therefore whatever nama I have practiced, that I have to utter; the Omkāra upāsakaḥ utters Om iti vyaharan; vyāharan means uttering the word; and through this word अनुस्मरन् anusmaran; he remembers, not any finite thing in the world, because none of them is going to accompany him. So whether it is money, வீடு வரை உறவு; வீதி வரை மனைவி; காடு வரை பிள்ளை; கடசி வரை யாரோ? vīṭu varai uṟavu; vīti varai maṇaivi; kāṭu varai piḷḷai; kaṭaci varai yārō? ; only Bhagavān; so all the others are going to drop me, in one stage or other, because they cannot help me; that is their limitation; therefore remembering God is the only help; यः प्रयाति yaḥ prayāti; so the one travels with God accompanied by; assisted by God; through a special path, Niṣkāma upāsakaḥ has a special route which Krishna will explain later, it is called sukla gati; yaḥ prayāti; the one who travels; देहम् त्यजन् deham tyajan, having dropped the physical body here, and the travelling is done by what, the physical body, the sthūla śarīram is dropped here, and it is burned down, therefore there is no question, physical body travelling and there is no question of atma travelling also; atma the consciousness cannot travel because it is all pervading; therefore what travels is the subtle and causal body; in which all the punya paapa karmas are stored. It is that one which travels, which alone we call the soul or jīvaha and therefore this jīvaha consisting of sūkṣma śarīram and of course the reflected consciousness, it travels; and where does it travel? स याति परमां गतिम् sa yāti paramāṃ gatim; such a jīvātma travels towards the highest goal of life; they lead kṛama mukti; so the travel is towards kṛama mukthi; by which we mean going to brahma lōkā and gaining knowledge and liberation.

अनन्यचेता सततं यो मां स्मरति नित्यशः ।

ananyacētāḥ satataṃ yō māṃ smarati nityaśaḥ |

tasyāhaṃ sulabhaḥ pārtha nityayuktasya yōginaḥ || 8.14 ||

अहं सुलभः ahaṃ sulabhaḥ I am easily accessible tasya yoginaḥ तस्य योगिनः to the yogi नित्ययुक्तस्य nityayuktasya who is ever steadfast यः yaḥ (and) who स्मरति माम् smarati mām remembers Me नित्यशः सततम् nityaśaḥ satatam always, continuously अनन्यचेताः ananyacetāḥ with an undistracted mind पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna !

14. I am easily available to that Yogi who is ever steadfast (and) who constantly and continuously remembers Me always with an undistracted mind, Oh Arjuna!

So the question comes; how all these things are possible; especially at the time of death. For that Krishna's answer is in this verse, which he has already dealt with before. It is by sheer abhyāsa or practice; and what is the practice. All the time remembering the fact that every thing that I am associated with, belongs to the Lord alone; and I have been given an opportunity to be with various people, so that I can learn to love them; It is a field, an exercising field to learn loving other people. Not to get security from them; not for taking anything from them; we will only be training in giving care, love, compassion; and my training all the time is, that it belongs to the Lord and I am using; and I have been given a nice opportunity.

And when the time of separation comes also; my thinking is that everyone belongs to the Lord and therefore Lord has to take care of everyone. Our worry is if we go away, what will happen to them; they will be stranded and they will be in trouble; our scriptures point out; in fact, if they are good condition; not because of you, it is inspite of you; and therefore when we are off, situations would be generally better only. Therefore if you have any such feeling, hand over everything to the Lord, yōga kshemam vahamyaham; then your mind will not dwell here; these all requires a lot of practice and therefore Krishna says here; यः मां नित्यम् स्मरति yaḥ māṃ nityam smarati, suppose a person remembers me all the time, and remember God represents the totallity only; personal God is only for convenience, but what personal God represents is the totallity, everything belongs to the macro; this is the awareness; therefore yaḥ māṃ smarati; the one who remembers this fact that there is no individual separate from the total; there is no wave separate from ocean. If wave claims I have a separate existence, it is ignorance on the part of the wave. An enlightened wave never claims individuality; it knows that there is nothing separate from ocean; with this awareness, yaḥ māṁ nityaśaḥ smarati; regularly reminds this fact. That is why I repeatedly tell this example, a wave is always permanently related to the ocean; a wave is fundamentally related to the ocean alone; because it rises from the ocean; it exists in the ocean; and it resolves into the ocean. And not only in this birth; if the wave takes a punarjanma, again it is born out of what; the ocean; and therefore, wave's permanent relationship is with the ocean only. The relationship between any two waves is only temporary; between one wave and the other wave, the relationship is incidental and temporary; in my preoccupation with incidental relationships, I should not lose sight of the fundamentals. The fundamental relationship makes me a bhaktha; incidental relationships make me a husband, wife, father, mother, brother, sister, in laws, etc. So all the roles that you play are incidental; and you have to play those roles, nobody says that you should deny them. But remember, that fundamental is with the Lord, the one who remembers, How, अनन्यचेताः ananyacetāḥ; without being distracted by, without being side-tracked by the incidental roles that he plays, the one who remembers in the background like tanpura śruti. Just as a musician does not lose sight of tanpura śruti, the moment tanpura śruti is lost sight of, apa śruti comes; then the music will not be music; not only you cannot enjoy the music; for others also it will be terrible.

And therefore, ananyacetāḥ; in the background the one who remembers, tasya, for such a Niṣkāma upāsakaḥ, Hey Pārtha, अहं सुलभः ahaṁ sulabhaḥ; I am the easiest person to remember. Just as a person who is attached to money always remembers money, whatever he does, similarly, if I know the value remembrance is easier. Your mind remembers what you value most in your life;

And नित्ययुक्तस्य योगिनः nityayuktasya yōginaḥ, it is easy for that upāsakaḥ, who is nithya yukthaḥ; who is ever integrated; ever balanced, ever clear about his priorities in life;

And yōginaḥ; and who is a seeker; so here yōgi means upāsakaḥ yōgi.

15. Having attained Me, those great souls do not take rebirth which is an ephemeral abode of misery. They have attained liberation, ultimate.

With the previous verse, Krishna concludes his answer to the seventh question of Arjuna, regarding antha kāla īśvara smaraṇam. Now in the following verses, he wants to deal with some important topics connected with this discussion.

From this verse, that is 15th up to 22nd verse, Krishna wants to talk about two types of human goals. Two types of possible human goals; one human goal he calls God; and the other human goal he calls world; God and world. You can understand them as the infinite and the finite; the spiritual and the material. And he wants to point out that for an intelligent person, God alone becomes the primary goal; for only the indiscriminate one everything other than God becomes the goal.

And why we say God is the right goal to be chosen; he wants to give the reason. I have discussed this before also. With regard to all finite goals or accomplishments, there are three defects or allied problems; like the thorn going along with rose; they are all wonderful goals alright; but they have traps also.

What are the three-folds dōṣās; do you remember; the first dōṣā is duḥkha misrithatvam; they have got pleasure in them; but equally they are mixed with pain also; The pain in the form of acquisition; the pain in the form of preservation; and the pain in the form of ultimate loss. If acquisition gives me pain, preservation is more pain, and the loss is the greatest pain. This is dōshā No.1.

And second dōṣā with all finite goals is being finite, they will never give total satisfaction; because always you know there is something bigger than that. So if I have got Rs.100, I always miss thousand. If I have thousand, I always miss Rs.10000. Any amount I get, there is no satisfaction at all. न वित्तेन तर्पणीयः मनुष्यः na vittēna tarpaṇīyaḥ manuṣyaḥ; 9 year old boy Nachiketas tells in Kathopaniṣad; Therefore what is the second problem; any amount of money I have, I will look upon myself only. Swamiji, we are all middle class people only. 5 bungalows and 6 cars are there; and if you go on insisting maximum he will say, upper middle class. In that there is Appar and sundarar; he will add. Even though the whole world says that they are rich people, he does not feel, because he has got who in his mind you know; Bill Gates. No Tripthi. Therefore athripthikaratvam is the problem; that is match fixing. Remember.

Then the third and final one is bandakatvam; once I learn to depend on external factors, I only become weaker and weaker. I become enslaved by that; this is the third dōṣā; Krishna indicates all these defects with regard to any goal other than God and Krishna says God alone represents pūrṇatvam; Independence. Because when you choose God as your goal; ultimately you are going to discover God not outside; we introduce God as an outside entity. But ultimately when you choose God as your goal; you are going to introduce God as what; tat tvam asi; therefore ultimately God dependance is going to become self-dependance, because God is not going to be away from me. Therefore God represents tripthi; God represents security; God represents fulfilment.

And therefore choosing God is the wisest choice, Krishna wants to declare in these verses. Now, comparison between two goals; God and world. He says: माम् उपेत्य mām upetya; If a person attains Me the Lord, then what is the advantage? महात्मानः mahātmānaḥ, those great people, those successful people who have made a wise choice in their life, such mahātmās, पुनर्जन्म न आप्नुवन्ति punarjanma na āpnuvanti; they never come to finitude again; they never come to mortality again; they do not have ups and downs in life. In the case of any other accomplishment I am on the top of the world, like the cricketer; so he is going through a bad patch; what is bad patch; 2nd ball out; Sometimes in good form, the whole world praises; so many man of the matchers; and thereafter again come down; just like a floating log, up and down, happens with regard to other goals; Here punarjanma means finitude; na āpnuvanti; these people do not come to.

And what does finitude represent; duḥkhālayam; which is only a source, a temple of sorrow; we have heard temple of Siva; Rāma, Krishna etc. Krishna coins a new word, duḥkhālayam; why this word ālaya he used; in Rāmalaya, Rāma is permanently established through praṇaprathīṣṭai; not temporary yatha stanam, etc. permanent; in Shivālaya shiva is permanently there; and in the finite world of samsāra, the only permanent thing is what: duḥkhālayam; It is only a source of dissatisfaction. And aśāśvatam; which is fleeting, which is impermanent;

And such finitude, otherwise called samsāra, mahatmana na āpnuvanti; these intelligent people do not come to that; Then what will happen to them; परमाम् संसिद्धिं गताः paramām saṁsiddhiṁ gatāḥ; they have accomplished the highest goal of pūrṇatvam; they have accomplished mōkṣa.

आ ब्रह्मभुवनाल्लोकाः पुनरावर्तिनोऽर्जुन ।

मामुपेत्य तु कौन्तेय पुनर्जन्म न विद्यते ॥ ८.१६ ॥

ā brahmabhuvanāllōkāḥ punarāvartinō'rjuna |

māmupētya tu kauntēya punarjanma na vidyatē || 8.16 ||

अर्जुन arjuna O Arjuna लोकाः lokāḥ All the worlds आ ब्रह्मभुवनात् ā brahmabhuvanāt up to (including) the realm of Brahma पुनरावर्तिनः punarāvartinaḥ subject to return तु tu but उपेत्य upetya having attained माम् mām Me विद्यते vidhyate is न na not पुनर्जन्म punarjanma rebirth कौन्तेय kaunteya O ! Arjuna

16. All the worlds, O Arjuna, including the realm of the Brahman, are subject to return, but after attaining Me, O son of Kunti, there is no rebirth, O Arjuna.

What about heaven? Because we have heard about heaven; anything that is wonderful, we say heavenly. So what about heaven; a question comes. Religion they define heaven eternal heaven. Here Krishna clearly declares there is no such thing called eternal heaven; heaven also comes under finite goal only.

And in our scriptures we have got six heavens, bhuvar lōkā, suvar lōkā, mahar lōkā, jana lōkā, tapo lōkā, and satya lōkā; six levels of heaven; and in each higher level; the pleasures are higher; security is better; it is finer and finer; and highest is brahma lōkā; and Krishna says even that Brahma lōkā cannot guarantee total security; brahma lōkā also comes under finite goals only; which means you can go there; enjoy and then you have to return back; return back to Madras; or still worse.

And therefore he says: He Arjuna, लोकाः पुनरावर्तिनः punarāvartinaḥ lōkāḥ; all the 14 lōkāḥ, exist within time and space. There is only one thing which is beyond time and space, which is Īśvaraḥ; otherwise called Brahman in vēdāntic language; he will talk about that later; There is only one thing, which is unlocated; whereas the other lōkāḥ are within time and space, that is why you have to travel to reach them. So the very fact that you have to travel indicates that it is not available here;

And what about brahma lōkā; he says ब्रह्मभुवनात् brahmabhuvanāt; up to brahma lōkā, even Brahmaji is not permanent. Even Brahmāji, the creator is not permanent; in fact it is the name of a post only, like PM or President, and having enjoyed that post for sometime, even Brahmāji will have to vacate. So if Brahmāji has to get security, even he has to depend upon jñānam alone. And therefore everything is ephemeral; whereas मामुपेत्य तु कौन्तेय māmupētya tu kauntēya; He Arjuna, if you come to Me, who is beyond time and space, māmupētya tu kauntēya पुनर्जन्म न विद्यते punarjanma na vidyatē; there is no question of the infinite becoming finite again; therefore that alone will give you permanent security.

yugāsahasrāntām to be lasting up to (another) one thousand chatur-yugās.

17. Those people who are conversant with day and night know the day of Brahma to be lasting up to one thousand chatur-yugās and the night to be lasting up to (another) one thousand chatur-yugās.

So in these verses, Krishna talks about the duration of brahmaji's life. His longevity is discussed here; Brahmāji, I am using the word 'ji'; it is not a Sanskrit word, it is Hindi; to differentiate it from Brahman, the formless reality. In Sanskrit two words are there; one is Brahma or Brahman which is the nirguṇa brahma, which is beyond time and space; and there is another word ब्रह्मा Brahmā, with long aa. That Brahmā, saguṇa Brahmā, who is Mr. Saraswathy; Saraswati's husband; therefore who is described as chaturmukha Brahmā; that Brahmā is finite; therefore these two nirguṇa and saguṇa, nirguṇa is called Brahman, the saguṇa is called Brahmāji for our convenience.

So what is the duration of Brahmaji's life. Krishna says; 2000 chatur yugās of the human beings; he is equal to 1 calendar day of Brahmaji; how is it; 2000 chatur yugās! I hope you know what is chatur yugā; and I know you know yugā; yugā is a duration of time, like month, year, etc. Yugā is a duration; and we have got four yugās, krita yugā; threta yugā; dvāpara yugā and kaliyugāha; and what is the yugā in which we are now; the kaliyugā; and the duration of kaliyugā; according to the scriptures is 432000 years; the scriptural calculation. 432,000 years constitute kaliyugā; this is the fourth one; the previous one is called dvāpara yugā; and it is supposed to be double the duration of kaliyugā; so 864,000 years. and then the 2nd one is treta yugā; dvāpara yugā end Krishna came; treta yugā Rāma came; the treta yugā is supposed to be 3 times kaliyugā; 3x 432,000 = calculate it at home; Then Krita yugā is supposed to be four times kaliyugā; so therefore what about one chaturyugā; you have to multiply and add and if you do that, the total will come to 4,320,000 years. Kaliyugā 432,000; extra zero is enough; if you add one time, two time, four times, three times; totals 10 times. So therefore 4,320,000 years is supposed to be the duration of one chaturyugā; like that 2000 chatur yugās if it is finished, Brahmāji will tear of one day (daily tear off) one sheet; and like that Brahmāji has got 100 years of life; So for one year 365 days we have to multiply by 365 and then you have to multiply by 2000 chaturyugās and then you have to multiply by 4320000 years. So many years; this will be life of Brahmāji.

Now what is the present age of Brahmāji. In all the saṅkalpa we say: Brahmāji is running 51st year. he is more than 50 years; One hair must have turned grey; Brahmanah parārdvaya kālē, parārdham means 50 years; Brahmāji has got parārda dvayam means, two fiftyyears, can he say 2 fifty years he has got; and now dvithiya parardhe; and this the first day of the 51st years; and on the first day he has got 2000 years; and this is the 27 or 28th caturyugā; ashtavimsati tame, kaliyuge; in the 2000 caturyugās, 28th caturyugā is over. Now you can calculate how many caturyugās more he has to cross; to reach the total; Of these 2000 caturyugās; 1000 caturyugā Brahmāji keeps awake; and another 1000 caturyugā is asleep.

That is what is said here; sahasra yugā paryantham; a duration of 1000 caturyugās; here the word yugā must be translated as chaturyugā; So 1000 caturyugā duration is ब्रह्मणः अहः brahmaṇah ahaḥ; means day time; 12 hours; of Brahmāji; and what about night; yugā saharantham rathri; another 1000 chatur yugās will be the duration of night of Brahmā; here also Brahmā means Brahmāji; Brahmaji caturyugā; caturyugā of Brahmāji;

Who knows all those things; अहोरात्रविदः जनाः ahorātravidaḥ janāḥ, those people who have studied, the scriptures in which all the lōkās are talked about, such people only know these details. Then what happens during the day and night of Brahmāji; that is going to be said in the next verse.

अव्यक्ताद्व्यक्तयः सर्वाः प्रभवन्त्यहरागमे ।
रात्र्यागमे प्रलीयन्ते तत्रैवाव्यक्तसंज्ञके ॥ ८.१८ ॥
avyaktād-vyaktayaḥ sarvāḥ prabhavantyaharāgamē |
rātryāgamē praliyantē tatraivāvyaktasamjñakē || 8.18 ||

अहरागमे aharāgame at the approach of day (of Brahma), सर्वाः व्यक्तयः sarvāḥ vyaktayaḥ all manifestation प्रभवन्ति prabhavanti proceed (emerge), अव्यक्तात् avyaktāt from the unmanifested रात्र्यागमे rātryāgame at the approach of night प्रलीयन्ते praliyante merge तत्र एव tatra eva into that itself अव्यक्तसंज्ञके avyaktasamjñake which is called the unmanifested.

18. On the arrival of the day of (Brahma) all manifest beings emerge from the unmanifest. On the arrival of the night (of Brahma) they merge into that itself called the unmanifest.

So what happens during Brahmāji day and night. Krishna wants to point out that it is very similar to our day and night. When our day begins, then our world of interaction also begins; So now we have got interactions; activities; knowledge, emotions; It is a fully active world with dēśa, kāla and parārdhaḥ. Now I have got space, I have got time and I have got people and I have got interaction and I have got consequent responses also. In fact my life begins when I wake up. And the moment I go to sleep, what happens; my whole world of plurality is resolved for me; In my deep sleep state, dēśa is resolved, time kāla is resolved, and dvaitam, the world of plurality is resolved and therefore all the transactions are resolved; and therefore all the suka dukha emotions are also resolved. That is why we called nirvikalpaka avastha; stage of nirvikalpa, undifferentiated state; but the only difference is when I go to sleep, only my world of plurality is resolved. For other people who are awake; the world continues; the transaction continues; so my private world rises when I rise, and my private world resolves when I go to sleep. But in the case of Brahmāji, this happens at the macro level; When I sleep, it is called layaḥ; and when Brahmāji sleeps, it is called pra-layaha; pra means macro; when I sleep it is micro; micro means layam; macro means pralayam and what do you mean by pralayam; it is not my subjective world that resolves. When Brahmāji goes to sleep, the whole creation resolves into unmanifest condition; like individual's sleep; my private world is not destroyed; it goes to only dormant condition; because when I wake up next day, everything comes; along with the worry; duality comes, time comes, space comes and worry also comes; therefore when I go to sleep, my private world is not destroyed; but it goes to dormant condition.

Similarly during Brahmāji's sleep, the whole creation goes to avyaktha avastha; that is what is said here; रात्र्यागमे rātryāgamē; look at the second line first; when Brahmāji's night comes; सर्वाः व्यक्तयः प्रलीयन्ते sarvāḥ vyaktayaḥ pralīyantē; all these individuals are resolved; pralīyantē; into what condition; अव्यक्तसंज्ञके avyaktasamjñake to a state of unmanifest; because scientifically also matter cannot be destroyed; you can never create matter; you can never destroy matter, even in an atomic explosion, if matter is destroyed, it gets converted into energy condition. So what do you mean by destruction. From visible condition, it goes to invisible condition, which boiling water, water disappears from the vessel; but it is not destroyed; but it remains in the atmosphere; in the form of invisible vapour. Similarly the whole concrete visible universe, at the time of pralayam; gets converted into unmanifest matter, you may call it energy, but we will call it prakṛiti; or māya or avyaktham; This is Brahmāji goes to sleep; and अहरागमे aharāgame; when Brahmāji wakes up the energy is converted back into matter; the invisible is converted to visible; the non-dual is again converted to duality; again activity begins. So vyaktayaḥ sarvāḥ; avyaktāt prabhavanti; out of the unmanifest again they become manifest. Thus the world goes in a cyclic form of manifestation and unmanifestation. Expansion-contraction; evolution-involution. Like our heart saying lub-tub. The whole universe continues in a cyclic form, eternally.

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

From the 15th verse of this 8th chapter, up to 22nd verse Lord Krishna is comparing two forms of human goals. One attainable through karma; varieties of actions, loukika and vaidika. Scriptural and non-scriptural; secular and religious activities. They can give one set of results and the other type of goal attainable through Niṣkāma upāsana.

And Krishna wants to point out that karma phalam is finite and upāsana phalam is infinite. You should remember throughout this chapter, that jñānam is kept aside during the 8th chapter. We are not making a comparative study between jñānam and any other sādanā; the comparative study is only between karma and upāsana. And Krishna wants to establish that if one has to choose between karma phalam and upāsana phalam, upāsana phalam is superior to karma phalam.

And how is it so; he wants to point out that karma can give all types of results up to brahma lōkā prapthi; and one can even get Brahmāji's position but all those goals are finite, both time-wise and space-wise. Dēśa Kāla parichinam. Whereas when a person practices Niṣkāma upāsana; as a result of that, he will get krama mukthi, which is going to Brahma lōkā, and from there reaching God. Therefore here we should remember, Niṣkāma upāsana phalam as krama mukthi or Īśvara prāpthi; Īśvara or Lord comes under infinite result.

Therefore karma phalam is parichinam; whereas Niṣkāma upāsana phalam, krama mukthi is aparichinna. This is the idea Krishna wants to convey through the verses beginning from the 15th to 22nd.

While talking about the finite of karma phalam or material results, he is taking up the highest goal possible, within time and space. The highest goal possible within time and space he wants to study and he wants to point out that even that highest goal happens to be finite in nature. And what is that Brahma lōkā prāp̥thiḥ; or getting the post of Brahmāji; and Krishna accepts that Brahmā has got a very very long life; I admit. But he wants to point out later, that even the longest life will end one day, therefore it comes under parichinna phalam only. For this purpose, He talks about the duration of Brahmāji's life.

So He said in sahasra yugā paryantham, i.e. 17th verse he said, Brahmāji's one day is equal to 2000 catur yugā's of human being, and therefore it appears as though Brahmāji's life is infinite; but Krishna wants to point out that even the seemingly infinite life is really not infinite; even Brahmāji will have a last day to vacate. And while talking about that, Krishna gives a incidental information; and what is that; when Brahmāji's day begins, the whole creation starts or emerges and when Brahmāji's night comes, the whole creation resolves. Just as when the individual wakes up, the individual's world also wakes up, his emotions, his relations, his interactions, his pleasures, his pains, his pursuits, the subjective universe of the individual arises when the individual wakes up and when the individual goes to sleep, his private world is resolved. And that is why the individual's sleep is called layaḥ. Whereas when Brahmāji, the macro, he wakes up and sleeps, the world that resolves and emerges is not the private world of the individual, but the objective world emerges and resolves.

And therefore He said in verse 18, which we saw in the last class, aharāgame avyaktāt sarvāḥ vyaktayaḥ prabhavanti; vyaktayaḥ means individual things and beings of the creation is vyaktayaḥ; they all arise or emerge; Emerge from where: avyaktāt, from their potential condition; and where were they resting in potential form; they were resting in Brahmāji himself; So Brahmāji carries the whole thing in potential form and then throws out as it were. And it is not an unknown thing; we throw our dream world from our own mind; our today's dream is potentially there in our mind; in what form; vasana rūpēna, impression rūpēna vartatē, and we throw out the dream space, dream time and dream objects and we have a duration for the dream and we withdraw into our own mind. In the same way, with Brahmāji withholds the creation and again throws out. And that withheld form is called avyaktam. And this is very important thing to be noted; we had got a parāllel idea in the 2nd chapter.

avyaktanidhanānyēva tatra kā paridēvanā || 2.28 ||

The same idea is repeated here. This is important; because we get a corollary from this verse. What is the corollary. The universe is never created by anyone. We should never use the word creation; which is one of the biggest misnomers, confusing word, because nothing can be created; nothing can be destroyed. Even the scientific law is matter can never be created or destroyed. That being so, how can we talk about the creation of the world. Vēdānta never accepts the creation of the world. And since we do not accept the creation, we need not answer the question why Bhagavān created; Only on accepting that Bhagavān created the world, we have to answer that why Bhagavān created.

According to Vēdānta, creation is eternal; 'creation' word should not be used; the world is eternally there; nobody including God has created; and nobody including God can create; it is impossible, because it is against the fundamental law of conservation of matter and energy. Then how are we to understand this so-called creation. The word creation must be replaced by the word manifestation; The world was always there, God did not create; it was there in potential form; and the potential matter; the potential world in time acted upon by time, undergoes a modification and the unmanifest modified becomes manifest.

It is caused by what? time, which is an integral part of the creation; Time is an integral part of the matter; matter and time can never be separated; you can never conceive of matter, without time, nor can you ever conceive of time, without matter; that is why we are not able to say anything about the condition before big bang; we will not be able to.

And therefore Krishna beautifully says: From avyaktāt, from unmanifest condition all manifest things comes, acted upon by time;

And then what will happen, and again acted upon by time, all the manifest will again go back to unmanifest condition.

Then what will happen. Again come back to manifest. Then what will happen; Again will go back to unmanifest. Then I can go up to 7 o'clock. So therefore we say, the creation is an eternal manifestation-unmanifestation process; whose beginning or end can never be talked about. If you call manifest as the beginning, you can choose to call unmanifestation as the end but the end is not the end of the universe.

Therefore Krishna says: रात्र्यागमे प्रलीयन्ते तत्रैवाव्यक्तसंज्ञके rātryāgamē praliyantē tatraivāvyaक्तasamjñakē. Up to this we saw.

रात्र्यागमे rātryāgame On the arrival of the night (of Brahma), सः एव अयं भूतग्रामः saḥ eva ayam bhutagrāmaḥ that very same multitude of beings, प्रलीयन्ते praliyante merges भूत्वा भूत्वा bhūtvā bhūtvā having emerged again and again अहरागमे aharāgame on the arrival of the day (of Brahma), प्रभवति prabhavati it emerges again or remanifest अवशः avaśaḥ helplessly पार्थ pārtha O Arjuna

19. On the arrival of the night (of Brahma) that very same multitude of beings merges, having emerged again and again. On the arrival of the day of (Brahma) it emerges again helplessly, Oh Arjuna!

So if the universe goes to unmanifest condition, and again comes to manifestation, what will happen to all the jīvās, all the individuals. Krishna says the individual will also have the same destiny. Means what? They also will go to unmanifest condition; in which all the jīvās will remain potentially inactive dormant like the hibernation of some animals; we all will go back to hibernation. And after remaining in potential form for how many yugās; 1000 catur yugās, and again the jīvās will emerge with their own karmas puṇyam and pāpam intact. How will it be; what will be the experience like;

Suppose you want to know; how will we remain during pralayam; and how will we come back again; suppose you want to taste pralayam; Bhagavān has given a sample. Stimulated experience. Like the astronauts has on earth itself; they have to undergo training, where the upper space things will be stimulated; no gravitational force; how to float; like that Bhagavān wants to give a taste of pralayam. In fact you get it regularly when, you know the answer; when we go to sleep. What happens to our individuality; our ego is resolved; our knowledge, our ignorance, our happiness, unhappiness, pleasure pain all of them; all in resolved condition; and they remain dormant; not destroyed; How do you know, they are dormant and destroyed? For example English knowledge or Gītā 8th chapter knowledge; I will come to my condition. Suppose in tonight's sleep, all the 8th chapter knowledge destroyed; then next class I have to again start with the same topic. But how am I able to continue with the same topic; during sleep, your knowledge is not destroyed; it goes to potential condition. In the same way, during pralaya, all the jīvā rāsīs goes to potential condition and again come back in the next sṛiṣṭi.

Therefore Krishna says, सः एव अयं भुतग्रामः saḥ eva ayam bhutagrāmaḥ; The same multitude of jīvās. The same group of jīvās, that means we are only; the same multitude of jīvās, we will all go to dormant condition and that we will we do, and the same set of jīvās, will again come back; bhutva bhutva, by repeating this expression Krishna says it is an eternal process. Again pralaya, we go back to potential condition; we will comeback. That means what; no new jīvā is created. No new jīvā is created. The same set of jīvās are circulated. So like thermostat; there is a jīvostat; which will keep all the jīvās constantly. Now this will create immediately a doubt. In all question answer sessions, this is asked; What is that?

If no fresh jīvās are created, how do you explain population explosion; because new new jīvās are coming; for that we should remember; whenever we are talking about the number of jīvās, or increase in population, we are taking into account only human jīvās; but remember, when we use the word jīvā, it includes all the human beings, all the insects, (you have to count all the ants in this hall) all the insects, all the mosquitos, all the plants and not only upon earth; we have got 14 lōkās, dēvās, asurās, they are all jīvās; and what we say is the total number of jīvās will be the same; not the total number of human jīvās; the distribution of the jīvās may and will vary.

That is why Swami Chinmayananda used to tell a nice joke whenever such a question comes. Please assume that plenty of forests were there; therefore the wild animals were living; all the forests were destroyed and wild animals were hunted by people like Veerappan; those animals like lions and tigers, could not survive and therefore they got converted into human beings! That is why we have got pulses, and lions; lionesses (both have to be told equally ~ it is a joke, do not take seriously). Scorpions and cobras, in human body; because everything has come as humans by mistake.

Therefore the number of jīvās are the same. No new jīvās can be created; because, if a new jīvā has to be created, what type of body will be given. Bhagavān will have confusion; Bhagavān can give us a body, based on what; our past karma. So Bhagavān has got a norm to determine the body for myself; because I have happily existed in the previous sṛṣṭi and therefore based on that Bhagavān can give a manushya śarīram or paśu śarīram; but when a fresh jīvā is created; since past karmas are not available; why past karmas are not available; fresh jīvās; and if past karmas are not available; what will be the basis; or which the body will be detected. You cannot say Bhagavān will take a lot and then give somebody. No. Remember the body is not determined by Bhagavān's wish; the body is determined by pūrva karma; a fresh jīvā will never have a pūrva karma; therefore it is not possible. And this defect is called kritahāna akritabhyagama dōṣa.

Then will come another natural question; if a fresh jīvā cannot be created; because pūrva karma is not possible; then what will be the next question. When we were created first what was the basis. OK; fresh jīvā cannot be created, as pūrva karma is not there; (do you understand the question, or else you will not understand the answer). Fresh jīvās cannot be created as pūrva karma is not there; we are now created because of our pūrva karma.

Now the question is when we were created first, what was the basis? For that the answer given is, we were never created first; all the jīvās are anādīs. That is why in avaṇi avitta sankalpam, we start with anādi avidya vasanaya; paśu pakṣi mrigādi yōniṣu, anekadaḥ puna punaḥ janīthva, kēnāpi puṇyakarma viśēṣeṇa idānim thana maanuṣye, dvijanma viśēṣa prāptavataḥ.

Therefore, the set of jīvās are anādi; and fresh set of jīvās are not created; and therefore the same jīvās go through manifest and unmanifest condition and therefore Krishna says, sa ēva; means, the same set of jīvā rāsi; भूत्वा भूत्वा प्रलीयते bhūtvā bhūtvā pralīyatē.

And when they do get resolved; रात्र्यागमे rātryāgame; if it is a cyclic go round process; why can't we call it merry-go-round, as if in some trade fair; so that is very nice; so that can be called merry-go-round, because I can choose to get in and get out but I find this cycle, a helpless one; and therefore merry go around becomes sorry-go-around and therefore Krishna says अवशः avaśaḥ; helplessly; I find I am here and whether I like or not, I have to die. Therefore avaśaḥ Partha, प्रभवति prabhavati; Again the jīvā is born; अहरागमे aharāgame; just mortality cannot be escaped as long as you choose time bound result.

परस्तस्मात् तु भावोऽन्यः अव्यक्तोऽव्यक्तात्सनातनः ।

यः स सर्वेषु भूतेषु नश्यत्सु न विनश्यति ॥ ८.२० ॥

Parāstasmāt tubhāvō'nyō'vyaktō'vyaktātsanātanah |
yaḥ sa sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu naśyatsu na vinaśyati || 8.20 ||

तु tu however परः parāḥ beyond तस्माद् अव्यक्तात् tasmād avyaktāt that unmanifest अन्यः अव्यक्तः भावः anyaḥ avyaktaḥ bhāvaḥ there is another unmanifest being यः सनातनः yaḥ sanātanah which is eternal सः saḥ it न विनश्यति na vinaśyati does not perish सर्वेषु भूतेषु sarveṣu bhūteṣu when all beings नश्यत्सु naśyatsu perish

20. However, beyond that unmanifest there is another unmanifest being which is eternal. It does not perish when all beings perish.

Up to the previous verse, Krishna has talked about all the finite result, which will come under the field of matter; and any result which falls within matter is bound by time and therefore it will have two conditions; manifest and unmanifest. In Sanskrit, it is called manifest matter and unmanifest matter, which you may call energy. So energy becomes matter, and matter becomes energy and again energy becomes matter. Now Krishna says: there is another goal, which a human being can achieve, which is beyond both these. Both these means what, the manifest matter and the unmanifest matter. Karya prapañcha and kāraṇa prapañchaḥ; vyakta prapañchaḥ and avykta prapañchaḥ; the avyakta or kāraṇa prapañcha is otherwise called Māya; Therefore Māya becomes the world, the world becomes Māya; world is also matter, Māya is also matter, and both of them exist within time. And Krishna says there is another thing which is beyond both, which Krishna calls unmanifest No.2. So manifest matter, unmanifest matter, unmanifest matter, we will call unmanifest No.1 and he says other than these two, there is another one, which is unmanifest No.2, and that is nothing but the consciousness principle. That consciousness which is the witness of the unmanifest condition of matter, as well as the manifest condition of matter; and that witness consciousness does not fall within the witnessed field. because the observer is different from and beyond the observed.

And if you have to understand this, we can make use of our own daily experience of three states. In the waking and dream states, there is world, there is time, and there is space. The material world conditioned by time and space, I am experiencing in the waking. In the dream state also; I experience a material world conditioned by time and space and when I go to sleep state, the whole material world is resolved; and the time and space also go to unmanifest condition; and there is total blankness; but even at that time, there is someone who is aware of that condition. Who is aware of that; I am aware; how do you know, I am aware; because when I wake up, I am able to talk about the blank state, that means I was continuing, unchangeably, even when the duality came and the duality resolved, I remained unaffected by that. This observer of the matter, this observer of the change is the changeless consciousness principle; which is beyond time and space. Consciousness does not fall within time. Consciousness does not fall within space. Consciousness therefore does not fall within matter and therefore consciousness does not fall within the physical and the chemical laws; And that is why the scientists who are struggling to understand consciousness in terms of the physical and chemical laws, they are not able to get head or tail. And some of the scientists have already started saying that consciousness is beyond the physical laws; is beyond chemical laws, is beyond even location. Consciousness cannot be located. Why it cannot be located; whatever exists within space can be located. Consciousness does not fall within space; therefore it is unlocatable.

And who is that unlocatable consciousness; that which is the witness of all these things; and Krishna says that witness consciousness is God; Satyam, jñānam, anantham brahma; which was called parā prakṛti in the 7th chapter.

Then what about various forms what we attribute to God. We say that all the forms attributed are in the initial stages, because a gross mind cannot appreciate the subtlest consciousness.

निर्विशेषम् परम् ब्रह्म साक्षात् कर्तुम् अनीश्वरः

ये मन्ता ते अनुकम्पयन्ते सविशेष निरूपणैहिः

nirviśēṣam param brahma sākṣāt kartum anīśvaraḥ

ye mantā tē anukampāmyantē saviśēṣa nirūpaṇaihiḥ

Human intellect cannot conceive of something which is beyond time and space. Therefore until the intellect gets sufficiently sensitised; until it is sufficiently prepared, we have to attribute a form. Therefore now we say God is Krishna, Rama, etc. and if you ask where He is, you say safely that He is in Vaikunta, Kailsam, etc. but our ultimate approach is God is suddha caitanya svarūpam.

And hey Arjuna, I want to you to discover oneness with that God. That is the aim of all the religious and spiritual struggle; This is the idea; important verse; परः तस्माद् अव्यक्तात् अन्यः अव्यक्तः paraḥ tasmād avyaktāt anyaḥ avyaktaḥ; we talked about one anyaktha, which is nothing but unmanifest matter; other than that unmanifest matter, there is something else, which is a third entity. So what are the three entities, manifest matter No.1; unmanifest matter No.2, you may call energy and third one is consciousness which is beyond manifest and unmanifest matter.

Therefore anyaḥ avyaktaḥ; consciousness-principle, and what is its nature; sanātanaḥ; it can never be affected by time. Any matter is affected by time, consciousness is the only thing, which witnesses time, which witnesses the arrival or time, which witnesses even the dissolution of time in sleep; but which is never affected by time. And what is not affected by time is called immortal. And therefore he says; sanātanaḥ; it is timeless;

And where is that consciousness present; he says यः स सर्वेषु भूतेषु नश्यत्सु न विनश्यति yaḥ sa sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu naśyatsu na vinaśyati; it does not perish; sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu naśyatsu, even when all the beings perish. Perish means what; again goes to unmanifest condition.

And where it is located; you can never answer that question because, consciousness is not located in space. In fact, we go one step further and say, time and space are located in consciousness. In fact, it is mind-blogging; space is located if you say what is the meaning; where everything is located is space; how can you intellectually conceive the location of space; But when say space is located in consciousness, what we mean is consciousness is not located in space. That is the meaning.

So where is it; no answer, where is God; there is no answer; because the very question is based on the misconception, that God is someone located in space; and when is God, it cannot be answered; because it is location in time. and how does God function, even that cannot be answered; because the question how means cause and effect; which is also within time and space; In the field of God; even cause effect concept cannot enter. So when, you cannot ask; where, you cannot ask; how, you cannot ask; why, you cannot ask; all these questions can be answered only with regard to a thing, which is time space and causality.

Anyway Krishna does not dwell upon this topic; if you want to dwell upon this topic, you have to go to upaniṣads; upaniṣads alone enjoy dwelling on this topic; because Gītā is supposed to be a diluted subject matter and therefore this subtler topic, Krishna will just hint at and leave. If you remember Kathōpaniṣad, definition of Brahman; anyathra dharmāt, anyathra adharmāt, anyathra asmāt krita akritat; which is beyond the concept of causality; So Brahman is not a joke and we have to go to that Brahman. When we say Go, again a problem, because go is again a concept in time, space and travel. That is why any word you use in Vēdānta, you get trapped; because intellect can function only in the field of time space causality; that is why we say it is a matter to be understood.

ivartathante they return तत् tat that मम mama My परम् parām highest धामः dhāmaḥ state

21. The manifest (Being) is said to be the imperishable one. (Scriptures) declare that (Being) to be the supreme goal. That is the supreme abode of Mine attaining which they do not return.

Krishna talks more about God, the limitless goal; the real goal of life, which is worth attempting; which is avyakataḥ; avyaktha No.2 mentioned in the previous verse. And what is avyaktha No.2 mentioned in the previous verse. Consciousness principle; and this consciousness or caitanyam; अक्षर इत्युक्तः akṣara ityuktaḥ; also known in the scriptures as akṣaraḥ; literally means imperishable means, imperishable means timeless; imperishable does not mean, it remains in time permanently; imperishable does not mean it remains in time permanently. No. imperishable means it is timeless. You cannot define it in terms of time akṣaraḥ ityuktaḥ; this is the word used in Mundaka upaniṣad; atha parā yaya tat akṣaram adhigamyate.

And what is the definition of that consciousness; yat tat adreshya, agrahya; agothram, avarnam, achakshu sthothram, tat apāni paadam nithyam vibhum sarva gatam susukshmaḥ, tad avyayam; yad bhūta yoni pari pasyanthi dheera; it is called akṣaram; colourless, formless, smellless; tasteless; touchless; etc.

And Arjuna तम् परमां गतिम् आहुः tam paramāṃ gatim āhuḥ; accomplishing such Brahman is the real goal; because only then you will go beyond time and space; any located place you go, then you are within space; whether you call it Vaikuntha; whether you call it Kailasa, whether you call it Brahma lōkā, you have a concept of a particular place, it is within space and therefore time, therefore it cannot be called liberation. That is why we say liberation is not going to any place at all. So then what is that liberation. Liberation is going to Brahman; Swamiji again, I am just looking for your response; going to Brahman? "going" within quotes; so tam parāmaam gatim ahuh, That is considered to be the ultimate destination; yam prapya na nivarthante, "reaching" (again in quotes) reaching which one does not return.

Then how do you reach that Brahman; it should not involve travel; because the moment you talk of travel, you have come to the field of time and space. and you have to reach Brahman and you should not travel; it is only possible in one way; and that is through wisdom; that Brahman has never been away from me, will never be away from me; Brahman is that consciousness principle which happens to be I myself. So you reach Brahman in the form of claiming Brahman as myself. ज्ञानम् एव ब्रह्म प्राप्ति jñānam ēva brahma prāpti.

So through will I reach Brahman? Through knowledge you do not reach Brahman; Through knowledge you drop the notion that Brahman is away. Knowledge you do not reach Brahman; through you drop the notion that Brahman is away; So all these are the important fundamentals of Vēdānta which you have to reflect more and more. yam prapya nivarthante; reaching whom one never returns; tat mam parāmam dhāma

And that alone that means that consciousness alone is my supreme nature, literally means dream abode; abode means nature; Because if you talk abode in the literal sense, again you get into problem of what; time and space; Therefore here abode means swarupam; Krishna Rama etc. are my inferior nature; aparā prakrithi; because they exist within time and space; whereas consciousness is my parā prakrithi which is beyond time and space. So start with my aparā prakrithi; but one day you have to recognise the parā prakrithi; so तद् मम तद्धाम धाम tad mama paramam dhāma.

पार्थ pārtha O son of Partha तु tu Indeed सः परः पुरुषः saḥ parāḥ puruṣaḥ that supreme Lord लभ्यः labhyaḥ can be attained अनन्यया भक्त्या ananyayā

antaḥ sthāni yasya are in Him इदं सर्वम् idaṃ sarvam (and) all this ततम् tatam is pervaded येन yena by Him

22. Oh Arjuna! Indeed, that supreme Lord can be attained by undivided devotion. All beings are in Him (and) all this is pervaded by Him.

So the nature of Brahman which is beyond time and space is presented again here; Hey Partha! स परः पुरुषः sa paraḥ puruṣaḥ. So this avyaktha No.2; this consciousness principle is called para puruṣaḥ; So he is the supreme puruṣaḥ; supreme Brahman, the highest reality; the absolute truth. I have given two meanings of the word puruṣaḥ and you have to recollect it in this context. This absolute Brahman यस्य अन्तः स्थानि भूतानि yasya antaḥ sthāni bhūtāni; in which Brahman alone rests; all the beings; the idea is Brahman does not exist within the creation; on the other hand, the whole creation rests in that Brahman; so bhutani; vishvādhāram gagana sadṛśam (you should not go Megavarṇam, if you go, you go to aparā prakṛiti).

that is why all our prayers, the beauty is they will give both the lower form as well as the higher form; and you can choose according to your level; if you do not like gagana sadrusam; gagana sadṛśam means what space like God; if you cannot conceive of that; mega varṇam subhāngam, you can keep.

Thus both saguṇa and nirguṇa aspects are told; here in Him alone all the beings rests and येन सर्वमिदं ततम् yēna sarvamideṃ tatam; and by this consciousness the whole creation is pervaded; because if you talk about the existence of anything; consciousness must be present there; How; can you guess how; because, to talk about the existence of something, you require what, consciousness; because how can you talk about something without being aware of that; and therefore existence presupposes knowledge; knowledge pre-supposes consciousness and therefore whatever you talk about, consciousness must be there. Therefore ena; by that consciousness, the whole creation is pervaded; and that is Brahman.

Krishna himself feels that many people we feel, that this is too high a subject matter, which goes many feet beyond the head. Very very subtle; I find the Bhāgavatham daśama skandam very nice. So there Krishna plays and he does rāsa creeda; kills asurā s; and just goes; and that is better; but this is too high for me; if any person feels Krishna feels do not get disheartened everybody can come to the level of appreciating; but what is required is sincere desire to that.

So Krishna says अनन्यया भक्त्या लभ्यः ananyayā bhaktyā labhyaḥ. You can to nirguṇam brahma; by your Niṣkāma bhakthi; once you understand that alone is the ultimate goal; because anything else falls within what time and space and therefore mortality; I am no more interested in mortality the tyranny of time; janma mruthu jara; vyadhi; then janma mṛthu jarā vyādhi. But once you have understood tyranny of time, and once you have sincerely voted for the timeless Bbrahman, you are called a Niṣkāma bhaktha; or a mumuṣu; And with this sincere desire, you continue your saṅga bhakthi; sooner or later, you will get the qualifications required for that nirguṇa bhakthi; therefore he says ananyaya bhaktya; Niṣkāma bhakthya; saḥ puruṣaḥ labhyaḥ; that Brahman is attainable.

So with this Krishna completes his comparātive study of God as higher goal and world as the lower goal. and an intelligent person would vote for god and not for world and if you vote for God, you become a Niṣkāma upāsaka and not for karma; this is the idea; details of which we will be seeing in the next class.

More in the next class.

Om

Lord Kṛiṣṇa made a comparative study or more precisely a contrast study of two possible destinations of a human being. Even though human goals are innumerable, and even though puruṣārthās themselves are supposed to be four in number, dharma arta kāma mōkṣa; Kṛiṣṇa broadly classifies all the possible goals including dharma arta kāma mōkṣa into two varieties only. And those two varieties are the infinite ones and the finite one. You cannot imagine a third possible goal because every goal has to be either finite in nature or infinite. If you take even dharma arta kāma mōkṣa, dharma arta and kāma will come under finite. Because dharma means puṇyam and any amount of puṇyam you acquire, it is born out of finite actions; therefore dharma is finite. Similarly arta, any amount of wealth you acquire will come under finite, because it is the result of finite action. And similarly kāma, all the sources of entertainments; all the sources of pleasures including the 14 lōkās, including sakṣat Brahma lōkā itself, including the very post of Brahmāji, all those sources of pleasures, also will come under finite; they might have a very long duration of existence, but even the longest duration is finite in nature. Just as we say in astronomy, that our Sun will also explode in future; because all stars will have to explode; called nōva or supernōva.

And naturally our Sun also being one of the stars, will explode in future; when we read we will get but frightened but one advantage in astronomy is that they calculate time in millions of years; If they soon it will explode, soon will mean that it would be a millions of years; for us we are concerned about only the next 30 years; that is what we want; whatever be the number. So therefore they might have a very long duration; but that is also finite. So therefore all goals can be divided into finite and infinite, finite goals can be called materialistic goals or anātma; and infinite goals can be called spiritual goals or ātma, otherwise called Bhagavān in this chapter; and therefore Kṛiṣṇa's conclusion is God alone is śāsvatham; other than God everything else is aśāsvatham. And therefore an intelligent person should not try to hold on to aśāsvatha vasthu; an intelligent person must seek śāsvatha Īśvara alone. And therefore may you choose God as your goal. This is what Kṛiṣṇa's advice or teaching is. And to drive home this point, he just discussed this elaborately from verse No.15 to verse No.22.

And when we say God is the destination, initially we present God as a person, situated in some lōkā, like Vaikuntha or Kailāsa, that is OK to think of initially, but Kṛiṣṇa wants to remove that idea because, if God is a person located in a place, even God will come under finite goal. Bound by time and space.

And therefore ultimately God must be understood as someone which is not bound by time and space and anything that is not bound by time and space, has to be formless principle, and therefore defined God as formless, consciousness principle, which is beyond manifest matter and unmanifest matter, otherwise called energy: God is neither matter, nor is God energy. Many people think God is a form of energy. We do not accept even that because it is illogical; if God is a form of energy, it will be subject to transformation, because all forms of energy transforms; mechanical energy, electrical energy, magnetic energy, light energy, heat energy, they are inter-convertible, transformable; If God is also a form of energy, it will come under time; transformation means time. Therefore God is neither matter, nor energy; but God is aware of the changing matter, and the changing energy and the witness God is not subject to change at all. This changeless-consciousness-principle which is beyond matter and energy is God and this God is infinite; and this God should be your destination. This is the content of the verses from 15 to 22. Up to this we saw.

प्रयाता यान्ति तं कालं वक्ष्यामि भरतर्षभ ॥ ८.२३ ॥

yatra kālē tvanāvṛttimāvṛttiṃ caiva yōginaḥ |

prayātā yānti taṃ kālaṃ vakṣyāmi bharatarṣabha || 8.23 ||

भरतर्षभ bharatarṣabha O bull of bharatas (Arjuna), वक्ष्यामि vakṣyāmi I shall speak about तं कालम् taṃ kālam those paths प्रयाताः prayātāḥ departing यत्र काले तु yatra kāle tu by which paths योगिनः यान्ति yōginaḥ yānti yōgis attain अनावृत्तिम् anāvṛttim the world of non-return च एव आवृत्तिम् ca eva āvṛttim and the world of return.

23. Oh! Arjuna I shall speak about those paths departing by which path, the yōgis attain the world of non- return and the world of return.

Having talked about two types of destination in the previous verses, now from this verse, that is 23rd verse onwards, Kṛṣṇa talks about two types of mārgās or paths which will lead to the two forms of destinations; because destination means, there must be path; and if there are five destination, there must be five routes; that is why we call route No.27, because without route, you cannot have destination. Therefore yathi sadya dvayam varthathe, tarhi mārga dvayam api syat; what are those two mārgās; Kṛṣṇa wants to talk about; and once you talk about two types of paths, leading to two types of destination.

Then the next topic will be two topics of travellers, who will take to two types of paths, reaching two types of destination; so two travellers, two routes, two destinations; two destinations have been talked about; now what should be said; two routes and two travellers; that is going to be topic from 23 to 27.

Of these we are first going to deal with two mārgas. Kṛṣṇa introduces them in this verse. यत्र काले योगिनः प्रयाता यान्ति yatra kālē yōginaḥ prayātā yānti; so prayātāḥ means travelling by two routes, here the word kāla refers to mārga; very careful, it is a confusing expression; the word kāla refers to mārga; so yathra kālē means yēna mārgēṇa prayātāḥ; so travelling through two different routes, yōginaḥ yānti; yōginaḥ means the seekers; the travellers, the pilgrims; yōginaḥ means the travellers, yānti reach two types of destinations; what are they; अनावृत्तिम् आवृत्तिम् च एव anāvṛttim āvṛttim ca eva; anāvṛttim means infinite goal; from where there is no return; anavrithi means non-returnable goal which indicates nitya mōkṣa prāp̥thiḥ; otherwise we can understand as kṛama mukthiḥ; so anāvṛttim means kṛama mukthiḥ; nitya Īśvara prāp̥thiḥ; and the other destination is āvṛttim, āvṛtti means returnable goal; where they go with return ticket; they cannot permanently stay there. Even as they give the onward journey, they ask when are you going to return;

and only when you are going to return, visa is given; that returnable goal is called finite goal; lōkā prāp̥thiḥ; so those two mārgās which will lead to nithya prāp̥thiḥ; and anithya prāp̥thiḥ; tam kālam, here also carefully note, tam kālam means tam mārgam, those two routes are mārgās, अहम् वक्ष्यामि aham vakṣyāmi, I shall teach you. Hey Arjuna; and these two paths will be called sukḷa mārga, the brighter path, it leads to God, it is brighter path; and the other one is called Kṛṣṇa mārga, it is darker path; gloomy path; because a person will go to a destination where there will be pleasures alright; but after enjoying the pleasures, one has to come back. That is various higher lōkās. And that path, which will lead to higher lōkās is called Kṛṣṇa mārga; otherwise called dēva yānaḥ; and pithru yānaḥ; Kṛṣṇa is going to explain them;

अग्निज्योतिरहः शुक्लः षण्मास उत्तरायणम् ।

तत्र प्रयाता गच्छन्ति ब्रह्मविदो जनाः ॥ ८.२४ ॥

agnirjōtirahaḥ śuklaḥ ṣaṇmāsā uttarāyaṇam |

tatra prayātā gacchanti brahmaavidō janāḥ || 8.24 ||

प्रयाताः prayātāḥ departing तत्र tatra by that (bright) path अग्निः agniḥ (which is presided over by the deities of) fire ज्योतिः jyotiḥ flame अहः ahaḥ day शुक्लः śuklaḥ the bright fortnight षण्मासाः उत्तरायणम् ṣaṇmāsāḥ uttarāyaṇam and the six months of the sun's northern course जनाः ब्रह्मविदः janāḥ brahmavidaḥ those people who meditate on (saguṇa) Brahman गच्छन्ति ब्रह्म gacchanti brahma attain Brahman.

24. Departing by that (bright) path (which is presided over by the deities of) fire, flame, day, the bright fortnight, and the six months of the sun's northern course, those people who meditate on (Saguṇa) Brahman attain Brahman.

So in this verse Kṛṣṇa defines the brighter path called sukḷa mārga, or sukḷa gathi, or dēva yānaḥ. And tatra, in the second line, tatra means dēva yānaḥ, sukḷa mārgēna prayātāḥ; those who go via sukḷa mārga; through sukḷa mārga, Brahma gachanthi, they will attain Brahman; they will attain Īśvara; or they will attain kṛama mukthiḥ; here the word Brahma refers to kṛama mukthi prāp̥thiḥ; gradually going to Īśvara; how I have explained before; they go to Brahma lōkā and in Brahma lōkā they will get aham Brahmāsmi jñānam, which they escaped by not attending the Gītā classes here. So, that one they are forced to get and then having got the knowledge aham Brahmāsmi, they will get liberation; Therefore sukṣa mārgēṇa prayātāḥ; prayātāḥ means travelling people; brahma gachati.

And what is the nature of this sukṣa mārga; here Kṛṣṇa identifies the sukṣa mārga, in a particular way, based on the upaniṣadic literature. The vēdās talk about the sukṣa mārga and Kṛṣṇa mārga; in the 10 upaniṣads, they are discussed and in Brahma sūtra, very elaborately discussed and while talking about these two paths; the scriptures point that there are guides to help these travellers in those two mārgas; because we do not know what is ahead and what is behind; and we cannot take the local map and therefore we cannot know what is the mārga properly, therefore vēdā says there are special dēvathās to welcome. And not only that, they will welcome; they guide up to a particular distance and thereafter handover to the next guide; like the European tour and like; you go to the next country; next set of guides take over; and you visit that country and go to the next one, and another set of guides; similarly dēvathās guide this seeker to reach Brahma lōkā.

And who are those dēvathās who will guide; the celestial tourist guide; the upaniṣad itself names them; Kṛṣṇa is giving the names of those dēvathās in the first line; agniḥ, jyothiḥ; ahaha, sukṣaḥ, uttarāyaṇam; five dēvathās are the guides for this traveller. agni dēvathā, jyothir dēvathā; ahar dēvathā, ahaha means day time literally, but in this context, day time does not represent time at all, it is the name of the dēvathā. Similarly sukṣaḥ refers to sukṣa pakṣa dēvathā; the presiding deity of sukṣa pakṣa. Similarly, uttarāyaṇam, uttarāyaṇa dēvathā, uttarāyaṇa consists of six months, when the sun is going towards north; as even the sun is going from east to west, you know that there is a shift; because of which we call uttarāyaṇam and dakṣiṇāyaṇam; uttarāyaṇam consists of six months; and the Lord governing the law of this sun's movement, it is called a dēvathā; dēvathā refers to the intelligent principle, governing the law of nature. So we have got gravitational dēvathā; because it is a law; there must be an intelligent principle governing that law; and every law must be presided over by a corresponding intelligent principle, which we call dēvathā; and all the dēvathās put together is called hiraṇya garba tatvam; but individual aspect is known by Surya dēvathā; chandra dēvathās, etc. these five dēvathās preside over, or guide the seeker who travels through sukṣa mārga; and by this mārga, this traveller goes.

Now the next question is: who is the traveller: who is given the travelling ticket; Whether everyone can get it: if you ask; the upaniṣads say that they are special people alone will be entitled for this travel; for this route and who are they: ब्रह्मविदो जनाः brahmaidō janāḥ; brahmaidō janāḥ means saḡuṇa Brahma upāsakaḥ; Īśvara upāsakaḥ; those who meditate upon Īśvara with attributes; with form. Which means what: those people who merely perform rituals, they will not get the ticket for this route; they will be sent through Kṛṣṇagati; just going and coming; mere karmis will not get shukla gati; what about jñānis: Will jñānis get the ticket for sukḷa gati; if I keep the exam, I will have this question; but do not worry, I would not have any exams. Remember jñānis also will not get sukḷa gati because they need not attain kṛama mukthi; because they have attained liberation here and now; we saw yesterday, athra Brahma samasunute. Therefore jñānis would not get kṛama mukthi; after death; because jñānis have got mukthi here itself; and karmis will not get kṛama mukthi also, karmīs, means ritualists, not the Tamil Karumis கருமி. Ritualists will not get kṛama mukthi also, ritualists will not get jeevan mukthi also; they will go through other routes; but this is neither for karmis; nor for jñānis; only for the upāsakaḥ; to go brahma lōkās, gain jñānam and liberation. Therefore Bhrama vidha, very carefully note; saḡuṇa Īśvara upāsakaḥ; not Brahma jñānis; thus we have got the route and also traveller. What is the route; sukḷa gati; who is the traveller, saḡuṇa Īśvara upāsakaḥ. Now we have to see the other route.

धूमो रात्रिस्तथा कृष्णः षण्मासा दक्षिणायनम् ।

तत्र चान्द्रमसं ज्योतिर्योगी प्राप्य निवर्तते ॥ ८.२५ ॥

dhūmō rātristathā kṛṣṇaḥ ṣaṇmāsā dakṣiṇāyanam |

tatra cāndramasaṃ jyōtiryōgī prāpya nivartatē || 8.25 ||

तत्र tatra (departing) by that (dark) path धूमः dhūmaḥ (which is presided over by the deities of) smoke रात्रिः rātriḥ night कृष्णः kṛṣṇaḥ the dark fortnight तथा tathā and षण्मासाः ṣaṇmāsāḥ dakṣiṇāyanam the six months of the sun's southern course योगी प्राप्य yōgī prāpya the yōgi attains चान्द्रमसं ज्योतिः cāndramasaṃ jyotiḥ the lunar light (of the heavens), निवर्तते nivartate and returns

25. (Departing) by that (dark) path (which is presided over by the deities of) smoke, night, the dark fortnight, and the six months of the sun's southern course, the yōgi attains the lunar light (of the heavens) and returns.

So second line तत्र tatra; travelling by the second path; so tatra prayātāḥ; prayātāḥ should be supplied, prayātāḥ means travelling by that path; tatra means tēna mārgēna; and this is the second mārga Kṛṣṇa has not named the route here; He will give the name later only, but we can note the name, tēna kṛṣṇa mārgēna; tatra is equal tēna kṛṣṇa mārgēna gatāḥ; travelling by that not-so-brighter routes; like most of our streets; there will be no lights; but if there are lights, it will not be burning. So that is called kṛṣṇa mārga; therefore you can decide whether you travel by shukla or kṛṣṇa, so tatra prayātāḥ, yōgi prāpya; so yōgi here yōgi refers to the karmi, the ritualistic people, who do not practice upāsana; They do their duties very well; they do lot of service and all; they do lot of rituals, lot of pūjās; so naturally they will get puṇyam alright, but the puṇyam is of a lower quality; because they have not done upāsana which is supposed to be higher sādhanā; any mental sādhanā is supposed to be of higher quality than any physical sādhanā; Because mental sādhanā is more difficult; because mind runs all over; physical sādhanā you can do pūjā very fast; physical sādhanā, mind can be anywhere; so therefore mere ritualists would get puṇyam but of a lower order and therefore he goes through tatra; Kṛṣṇa mārgēna; and reaches us chandramasam jyothihi; he reaches only svarga lōkā, otherwise known as chandra lōkā, which is lower than Brahma lōkā, because in the purāṇās, you must have heard; I must have told you also; above bhu lōkā, higher lōkā is supposed to be bhuvan lōkā, mahar lōkā, jana lōkā, tapo lōkā and satya lōkā or Brahma lōkā; Brahma lōkā is the highest lōkā, through which the upāsakaḥ will get kṛama mukthi, but the ritualist will never go to brahma lōkā, they will go to only to the lower lōkās; lower lōkās means, between bhu lōkā and Brahma lōkās, all those intermediary lōkās are called svarga lōkās and that svarga lōkā he reaches; And this kṛṣṇa mārga is also presided over by dēvathās; and who are those dēvathās, the list is given; do not ask, how do you know; we have not seen; it is all described in the Vēdā.

And we accept vēdā because, Vēdā does not lie unlike us. Vēdās tells the truth and therefore it is truth only. What are the dēvathās; धूमः dhūmaḥ, dhūmaḥ dēvathā, literally the dhūmaḥ means smoke, here it is the name of the dēvathā; धूमः dēvathā; रात्रिः rātriḥ, literally means night, but here it refers to rātriḥ dēvathā; Similarly कृष्णः kṛṣṇaḥ, kṛṣṇaḥ in this context means kṛṣṇaḥ pakṣa dēvathā; not Vasudeva kṛṣṇa; here Kṛṣṇa means kṛṣṇaḥ pakṣa dēvathā; kṛṣṇa pakṣa means the dark fortnight, and then षण्मासाः दक्षिणायनम् ṣaṇmāsāḥ dakṣiṇāyanam; dakṣiṇāyana dēvathā. So these four dēvathās are given as a sample. In the upaniṣads, especially Chandōgya and Brihadāranya the list is more extensive; but Kṛṣṇa here gives only a few as a sample and guided by these four dēvathās, this person will go to svarga lōkā.

And if he is going to svarga lōkā, why do you call it a gloomy path, should not it be a brighter path; svarga means people should be happy; why do you call the path to heaven as dark path. Kṛṣṇa says the reason is प्राप्य निवर्तते prāpya nivartate. The bad news is that he will go and enjoy alright; but once the puṇya gets exhausted; he will come down; Becoming more miserable; because here our body very much used to mosquitoes; very much used to our corporation water in which all kinds of things are mixed up, including sewage water. And inspite of taking all these things, we survive; And having enjoyed better health in svarga; the moment you come down, the mosquito bite and not only that even if you do not enjoy that because you will count down; I will come down soon; I will come soon; therefore it is not bright, compared to the kṛama mukthi; So compared to sukhla mārḡa, kṛṣṇa mārḡa is certainly is inferior and therefore it is dark like the black spot in the Sun. Really speaking the black spot is not black spot at all; it is really bright; but it is black spot because, compared to other parts, it appears black; similarly in kṛṣṇa mārḡa is blacker; or darker compared to sukḷa gati.

So thus we have got the second mārḡa which is called kṛṣṇa mārḡa and who is the traveller, yōgi; and in this verse, carefully note, the word yōgi means a ritualist; non-upāsakaḥ ritualist is called yōgi, in this verse. In Sanskrit, karmī or to be precise, kēvala karmī. And now Kṛṣṇa sums up these two mārḡās in the next verses.

शुक्लकृष्णे गती ह्येते जगतः शाश्वते मते ।

एकया यात्यनावृत्तिम् अन्ययावर्तते पुनः ॥ ८.२६ ॥

śuklakṛṣṇē gatī hyētē jagataḥ śāśvatē matē |

ēkayā yātyanāvṛttimanyayā"vartatē punaḥ || 8.26 ||

एते गती ete gatī these two paths जगतः jagataḥ of the world शुक्लकृष्णे śuklakṛṣṇe (known as) the bright path and the dark path हि मते hi mate are indeed considered शाश्वते śāśvate to be eternal एकया ekayā by the former, याति yāti one attains अनावृत्तिम् anāvṛttim the world of non – return अन्यया anyayā by the latter आवर्तते पुनः āvartate punaḥ one comes back again

26. These two paths of the world (known as) the bright path and the dark path are indeed considered to be eternal. By the former one attains the world of non- return; by the latter one comes back again.

So Kṛiṣṇa is giving the name in this slōkā only. In the previous two slōkās, He indicated the presiding dēvathās; but not the name of the path; he gives the name here; ह्येते गती शुक्लकृष्णे hyētē gatī śuklakṛṣṇē; these two paths are known are known by the name sukḷa; you have to add the gathiḥ; sukḷa gathiḥ; and kṛiṣṇa gathiḥ; otherwise sukḷa mārga and kṛiṣṇa mārga; otherwise dēvayanam and pitṛyānam;

And when were these two roads created; he says जगतः शाश्वते मते jagataḥ śāśvatē matē; these two mārgās have been created along with the universe; not in between like putting a new creation; it is not that Bhagavān thought after the creation to lay two new roads. No; it is not a later added route; but along with the creation itself; these routes have been made because along with the creation, Vēdā has come; and along with the creation, the karma upāsana teaching also has been given; and along with the creation, human beings also have come; and therefore along with the creation, these two types of sādakās are also there; therefore these two mārgas must be there. And therefore jagataḥ śāśvatē matē; these are two eternal paths; which come along with the creation; and which will go only at the time of pralayam; and again when the next shristi comes, again these two mārgas will come. Therefore they are as eternal as the universe itself; and of these two mārgas, एकया अनावृत्तिम् याति ekayā anāvṛttim yāti; by following one path; which one, you cannot put anyone, sukḷaya; ekayā means sukḷa gathya; by following shukla gathi; anāvṛttim yāti; a person will get kṛama mukthiḥ by going via brahma lōkā; Brahma lōkā is the transit point; like in London, Frankfurt; etc. So a transit point in Brahma lōkā; a stop over; kṛama mukthi. Jīvan mukthi is direct flight; no stop over in between; straight flight; not like Indian Airlines. ekayā anāvṛttim yāti; अन्यया anyayā; thru the other one, kṛṣṇaya gathya. So here the word anāvṛttim means kṛamaya mukthi; Īśvara prāpṭhi; the goal of non-return.

And anyayā; through the other path, that is kṛṣṇaya gathya; आवर्तते पुनः āvartate punaḥ; a person will definite go to svarga lōkā, because even though he has not done upāsana; he has done noble karmas; he has done service to the society; he has done lot of pūjā; he has done duties; therefore certainly he has acquired puṇyam; therefore he will go to svarga lōkā; but the minus point is what: having exhausted, he will āvartate; come back; āvartate punaḥ; and here the previous two verses have got certain confusing aspects and therefore these two verses are discussed in Brahma sūtra; wherever there is a possible confusion in Gītā or Upaniṣad, Brahma Sūtra will analyse and resolve the confusion.

What is the confusion? In the previous two slōkās, Kṛṣṇa mentions uttarāyaṇam; and sukḷa pakṣa, and day-time and Kṛṣṇa says whoever dies in those times, uttarāyaṇakāle, or sukḷa pakṣē, or अहः ahaḥ daytime, a person will go to kṛama mukthi. So the confusion that can come is we may think the time of death will determine whether we will get sukḷa gati or kṛṣṇa gati; if you read the verse superficially, it appears as though if you die in uttarāyaṇam, die in sukḷa pakṣa, or you die during day time, you will get sukḷa gati. Similarly if you study the 25th verse, it appears as though if you die in dakṣiṇāyanam; kṛṣṇa pakṣa or night time, it appears as though you will get kṛṣṇa gati. Therefore it appears as though the time of death will determine the direction of travel; because the word kāla is used there.

After elaborate analysis in brahma sūtra; it has been established that time of death does not determine the direction of the journey; but it is the quality of life that determines the direction of the journey; It is not the time of death at all. And several arguments are given; I am not going to the details; just one argument is this; with the 24th verse, uttarāyaṇam; sukḷa pakṣa and daytime are mentioned; and in the 25th verse, dakṣiṇāyanam, Kṛṣṇa pakṣa and rātriḥ are mentioned. Suppose a person dies in uttarāyaṇa kṛṣṇa pakṣa, what will happen; because according to 24th verse, uttarāyaṇa maraṇam means sukḷa gathi; according to 25th verse, kṛṣṇa pakṣa maraṇam, is kṛṣṇa gati; uttarāyaṇa kṛṣṇa pakṣa is there or not?; Basic doubt should not come. So Bhagavān will be confused. Similarly, according to 24th verse, sukḷa pakṣa maraṇam; sukḷa pakṣa is uttarāyaṇa; suppose we take; and according to 25th night time is given as indicated of kṛṣṇa gati. Suppose a person dies during sukḷa pakṣa rātriḥ; sukḷa pakṣa rātriḥ comes or not; any doubt? sukḷa pakṣa rātriḥ a person dies; according to 24th verse, sukḷa pakṣa maraṇam should give sukḷa gati; and according to 25th verse, a rātriḥ maraṇam should give kṛṣṇa gati; sukḷa pakṣa rātriḥ maraṇam; confusion will come. So never interpret these two slōkās as referring to the time of death at all; not only that if the time of death will determine the higher goals; there will be problems; How many criminals die in uttarāyaṇam. Everyone will get shukla gati How many saints die in dakṣiṇāyaṇam; for them kṛṣṇa gati means what happens? And not only that people can do akṛamam and commit suicide in uttarāyaṇam; still easier; he will get kṛama mukti; Like LTTE people, bite the potassium cyanide; so therefore, time of death will not determine your future; it is the quality of life. This is the conclusion made in Brahma Sūtra. And Kṛṣṇa himself makes it very clear in 26th verse, śuklakṛṣṇē gatī hyētē; they refer to mārga; not the time at all.

Continuing.

नैते सृती पार्थ जानन् योगी मुह्यति कश्चन ।
तस्मात्सर्वेषु कालेषु योगयुक्तो भावार्जुन ॥ ८.२७ ॥
naitē sṛtī pārtha jānan yōgī muhyati kaścana |
tasmāt sarvēṣu kālēṣu yōgayuktō bhavārjuna || 8.27 ||

पार्थ pārtha Oh ! Arjuna जानन् jānan having known एते सृती ete sṛtī these two paths न कश्चन योगी na kaścana yōgī no yōgi मुह्यति muhyati – gets deluded तस्मात् tasmāt therefore भव योगयुक्तः bhava yōgayukataḥ be committed to meditation सर्वेषु कालेषु sarvēṣu kālēṣu at all times अर्जुन Arjuna Oh Arjuna.

27. Oh Arjuna! having known these two paths, no yōgi gets deluded. Therefore be committed to meditation at all times. Oh Arjuna.

Here Kṛṣṇa says I have talked about two destinations; two paths; and two types of travellers very clearly; having known the difference between these two; नैते सृती जानन् naitē sṛtī jānan, sṛtī means what gati; gati means what mārgau; so ētau mārgau jānan; having clearly known these two paths; in what way; one path leading to better future, kṛama mukthi; other path leading to only inferior future, punar janma; having clearly understood; योगी कश्चन न मुह्यति yōgī kaścana na muhyati; an intelligent seeker will never get confused. An intelligent seeker will never vote for the wrong path; like election. Therefore the Republicans have also given the speech; the Democrates have also given the speech; now you have to choose the right one; there confusion is there; here no confusion should be there. Yōgi means an intelligent seeker will not get confused with regard to karma mārḡa and upāsana mārḡa; whether I should become a mere ritualist whether I should add upāsana also; So whether I should become a karmi or whether I should become a upāsakaḥ, such a doubt should not come to an intelligent seeker.

And Arjuna you come under which group; intelligent or unintelligent? Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna I assume that you are an intelligent seeker and therefore what you should do; become a upāsakaḥ; तस्मात्सर्वेषु कालेषु tasmāt sarvēṣu kālēṣu. And therefore Arjuna, may you choose upāsana, no doubt you have to do karma; you doubt you have to do your duties; no doubt pañcha mahā yajñās are there; let karma go on; but add to your karma, saḡuṇa Īśvara upāsana also.

Therefore sarvēṣu kālēṣu; at all times beginning from now onwards, yōga yuktaḥ bhava; here yōgaha means what; saḡuṇa Īśvara upāsana योगयुक्तः भव yogayukataḥ bhava; may you choose upāsana. Here we should be very careful; when I am asked to choose between karma and upāsana, I have to choose upāsana. But remember, in the 8th chapter of the Gītā, jñānam is not contesting the election. If jñānam comes to the picture; then jñānam is superior to both karma and upāsana; therefore you should remember, jñānam is kept aside in the 8th chapter.

Because jñānam is nirḡuṇa Īśvara jñānam; that is not brought in here; it was talked in the 7th, it will be taught in the 9th; but in the 8th chapter, which is a unique chapter, the comparison is between karma and upāsana. If I am forced to choose between two: like our two corrupt parties; you have to choose the less corrupt. Similarly here; between karma and upāsana, you have to choose, better choose upāsana; it is superior to karma; yōga yukataḥ bhava, saḡuṇa Īśvara upāsakaḥ bhava; hey Arjuna; and then with this Kṛṣṇa has concluded the discussion of two mārḡas and also two types of travellers. And now Kṛṣṇa concludes by glorifying kṛama mukthiḥ; which is accomplishment of God himself; because remember whether it is jīvan mukthi; or kṛama mukthi; a seeker reaches what; God alone; whether it is direct flight; or in between stop over, the destination is the same. Therefore in kṛama mukthi also one reaches God; in jīvan mukthi also. Now therefore Kṛṣṇa glorifies God as the destination.

विदित्वा इदम् viditvā idam having known (and practised) this योगी अत्येति yōgī atyeti the yōgi goes beyond सर्वं तत् पुण्यफलम् sarvaṃ tat puṇyaphalam all that puṇyaphala यत् प्रदिष्टम् yat pradiṣṭam which is promised, वेदेषु vedeṣu with regard to (the study of) the vēdās, यज्ञेषु yajñēṣu (the performance of) yajñās तपः सु tapaḥ su (the practice of) austerities च ए एव ca e eva and also दानेषु dānēṣu (the distribution of) charity, उपैति upaiti he attains परम् parāṃ the supreme, च आध्यम् ca ādhyam and primal स्थानम् sthānam abode

28. Having known (and practised) this the yōgi goes beyond all that puṇyaphala which is promised with regard to (the study of) the Vēdās (the performance of) Yajñās, (the practice of) austerities and also (the distribution of charity). He attains the supreme and primal abode.

Second line; योगी इदम् सर्वं विदित्वा yōgī idam sarvaṃ viditvā; here yōgi means what; means saḡuṇa Īśvara upāsakaḥ; the intelligent; he has understood what I have taught throughout this chapter. And therefore having clearly understood this teaching; this saḡuṇa Īśvara upāsakaḥ follows upāsana and by way of that; परम् स्थानम् उपैति parāṃ sthānam upaiti; so he votes for kṛama mukthi; and attains God.

Here God is described as परम् आध्यम् स्थानम् parāṃ ādhyam sthānam; the supreme and beginningless adode; or destination; So adhyam means sarva kāraṇam; parāṃ means the highest and sthānam means destination, which is none other than nitya Īśvaram upaiti; And what is the glory of this nitya Īśvara. Kṛiṣṇa says this result is greater than all the karma phalam. Upāsana phalam is greater than all the karma phalam and a few karmas are enumerated here. वेदेषु vedeṣu vedeshu; so the karma, in the form of vēdā parāyaṇam; it is a form of karma; यज्ञेषु yajñeṣu; performance of rituals, तपः सु tapaḥ su, practice of several types of vows, vrathams; दानेषु dāneṣu; charities; in all these and more, karmas, यत् पुण्यफलम् प्रदिष्टम् yat puṇyaphalam pradiṣṭam. So the Vēdā promises puṇya phalam; but तत् सर्वं अत्येति tat sarvaṃ atyeti; the upāsana phalam transcends, is superior to all these karma phalams. So the upāsana phalam is superior to all the karma phalam; because karma phala gives finite svarga; upāsana phala gives nitya Īśvaraḥ. And therefore Arjuna, do not miss the opportunity; take to saṅga Īśvara upāsana and remember the Lord all the time, at the time of death also; may you remember Lord; and then you will attain mōkṣaḥ. So thus Kṛiṣṇa has indirectly answered the 7th question of Arjuna also: prayanakāla Īśvara smaraṇam.

ॐ तत्सत्। इति श्रीमद्भगवद्गीतासूपनिषत्सु ब्रह्मविद्यायां योगशास्त्रे

So thus is concluded the 8th chapter titled, akṣara brahma yōga. Better title for this chapter might be prayanakāla smaraṇa yōga; but still perhaps, they did not want us to remember prayanakāla (may be we will get fear) since Kṛiṣṇa's teaching begins Akṣaram Brahma parāmam, that is how Kṛiṣṇa begins his teaching; And therefore this chapter is called Akṣaram Brahma yōga; and in some books, this chapter is titled, Tāraka Brahma yōgaḥ; both are OK.

Om

Today I will give you a summary of the 8th chapter of the Gītā. The 8th chapter happens to be in the middle section of the Gītā, the middle section is the portion which means the 7th chapter and 12th chapters; the middle six chapters are called the middle section or madhyama śatkam. And in this madhyama śatkam one of the sādhanās highlighted is upāsana or upāsana. So this topic begins from the 7th chapter and runs through all the six chapters up to the 12th. And it is one of the important spiritual sādhanās, exactly like the karma yōga sādhanā of prathama śatkam and jñāna yōga sādhanās of anthima śatkam, the last section; upāsana is an important spiritual sādhanā.

And Upāsana is defined as saguṇa Brahma viśaya mānasa vyāpāraḥ. Upāsana is primarily a mental activity; physical activity cannot be called upāsana. There is a misconception that pūjas can be called upāsana. Remember, pūja cannot be called upāsana because, pūja is primarily a physical activity; therefore it will come under karma yōga only. And all types of japa and pārāyaṇam; they also come under karma yōga only; upāsana is the name of that sādhanā which is done by the mind as an instrument. That is why I called it mānasa vyāpāraḥ;

And what type of mental activity. Any mental activity cannot be called upāsana, if any mental activity becomes upāsana; worrying also will become upāsana; and we are experts. I am doing constant upāsana; it will mean; and therefore it is specified saguṇa Brahma viśaya mānasa vyāpāraḥ; it is a mental activity associated with Īśvaraḥ; that is the primary criterion; it should be a mental activity and that too a mental activity associated with Īśvara; And what is Īśvara; saguṇa brahma; So Īśvara endowed with attributes. So we are not talking about Niguṇa Brahma and it is saguṇa brahma or saguṇa Īśvara; and this saguṇa Brahma viṣaya mānasa vyāpāraḥ; His upāsanam is one of the important topics of madhyama śatkam; and this upāšana is of two types; one is sakāma upāšana, in which a person practices this for material benefits. Either material benefits belonging to this world or the material benefits belonging to the other world; iha lōka para lōka phalani; like svarga lōka prāp̥thi, etc. And remember going to higher lōkās, also will come under material benefits only because, higher lōkas means superior material pleasures.

And iha lōka phalam means all this worldly results including miraculous powers; powers to do miracles; also will come under material benefits; remember; miracles have nothing to do with spirituality; There is not even an iota of smell of spirituality in miracles; it will also come under ihalōka material benefit only. This a person can accomplish by practising sakāma upāšana.

And there is another form of upāšana, which is niṣkāma upāšana, in which a person practices the same meditation, saguṇa Brahma viṣaya mānasa vyāpāraḥ; but with anchoring about material benefit. So without iha lōka para lōka phala iccha, a person can practice niṣkāma upāšana. And this niṣkāma upāšana is the primary topic of the middle section. Krishna is not keeping in mind sakāma upāšana at all in the Gītā; Krishna deals with the topic of niṣkāma upāšana primarily. That is an upāšana, which is meant for the inner growth of a person; which is meant for the spiritual progress of a person. Niṣkāma upāšana is practised by a person who values spiritual growth more than material accomplishments; And this Niṣkāma upāšana is divided into two types. In one, a person practices niṣkāma upāšana for a length of time, which will give sufficient spiritual maturity or inner growth or spiritual qualification. The qualifications which are required for jñāna yōga abhyāsaḥ; and if a person has acquired those qualifications, known as sādānā catuṣṭya sampathi, technically Then he withdraws from niṣkāma upāšana and turns his attention towards jñāna yōgaha or vēdānta vicāraḥ; which does not come under upāšana. In what way, jñāna yōga is different from upāšana. Upāšana concentrates on saguṇa Īśvara; whereas jñāna yōga concentrates upon nirguṇa Īśvara, the attributeless Brahman; and this nirguṇa Īśvara is persuaded not by meditation; but through vēdānta sṛavaṇa manana nidhidhyasana; jñāna yōga means going to an ācārya,

upadēkṣyanti tē jñānaṁ jñāninastattvadarśinaḥ || 4.34 |

as told by Krishna, jñāna yōga involves vēdānta śravaṇa; consistently for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent ācārya. And this will give the knowledge of nirguṇam Brahma or nirguṇa Īśvara and then by practising mananam, this knowledge is consolidated, made free from all the doubts in the intellect; and by nidhidhyāsanam; this nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam is assimilated; all these are done in this life itself.

So thus practice niṣkāma upāsana; acquire qualifications, withdraw from niṣkāma upāsana; apply yourselves in vēdānta vichāra or śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam and attain nirguṇa brahma jñāna niṣṭā; and by acquiring jñāna niṣṭā; a person gets liberation; here and now, which is called sadyōmukthi; or jīvan mukthi;

And having attained jīvan mukthi and enjoyed the benefit of jīvan mukthi, throughout the life, at the end of prarābdha, this jñāni dies and after the death, the jñāni does not have any travel at all; there is no sukṣa gati; there is no kṛṣṇa gati; there is no gati at all; jñāni is one with the Lord; here and now. This is one route of niṣkāma upāsana; which we call sadyōmukthi route or jīvan mukthi route.

And this is the niṣkāma upāsana topic, which Krishna wants to highlight in the Gītā; because he wants all of us to get liberation; here and now; not postponing; for posthumous benefit. Krishna dwells upon that; and therefore niṣkāma upāsana as a means of jīvan mukthi is the primary sādhanā, Krishna deals with in the 7th chapter, in the 9th chapter, in the 10th, in the 11th and in the 12th also. Whereas in the 8th chapter alone, in the odd man out chapter, the unique and peculiar chapter, Krishna deals with niṣkāma upāsana of another type.

And what is that: a person practices niṣkāma Īśvara upāsana or meditation; he does not want any material benefit other than mōkṣa; and the difference is he continues niṣkāma upāsana throughout the life. Whereas the other person practices niṣkāma upāsana and changes the direction and comes to what: jñāna yōga; whereas in the second type, a person does not come to nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam at all; he does not come to vēdānta śravaṇam manana etc.; Why, whatever be the reason; either he feels he has not qualified enough to think of nirguṇam or he does not get an ācārya for nirguṇa Īśvara vichāra or some other problem it may be; a person continues niṣkāma upāsana throughout the life; and because of that his mind is impugned with Īśvara chintā; which Īśvara; saguṇa Īśvara; either in the form Rāma, Krishna or Devi and naturally at the time of death also, his mind thinks of only God; because what you value most in life that is remembered at the time of death.

And because he is a niṣkāma upāsaka, and because he values Īśvara the most; at the time of death also; Īśvara chinthana alone takes place, which Īśvara; saguṇa Īśvara; he does not know vēdānta; he does not know nirguṇa Brahma; he does not know aham Brahmāsmi; therefore technically speaking, this upāsaka is ajñāni upāsaka only and when this ajñāni niṣkāma upāsaka dies; all the conditions are important; ajñāni, and niṣkāma upāsaka dies, remembering God; what happens to him; that is the topic of the 8th chapter. And Krishna says such an upāsaka will not get liberation here and now; because he is ajñāni; but as a result of the upāsana, this niṣkāma upāsaka will travel through a special path called sukṣa gati and he will go to special lōka called Brahma lōka and by the time he goes to Brahma lōka, he is ready to change the track; from where to where; from saguṇa Īśvara to nirguṇa Īśvara. and therefore the jñāna yōga which he avoided in manuṣya janma, the jñāna yōga which he avoided in manuṣya janma, he is ready to practice in Brahma lōka; in a very very conducive and better atmosphere; where the power will not go like this; where the teacher is also better off; Brahmāji himself; and therefore effortlessly gains nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam; as aham brahmāsmi and as a result of this knowledge, he attains liberation in Brahma lōka; and thereafter he does not have punarjanma.

And this particular route of niṣkāma upāsana is called krama mukthiḥ; Krishna wants to talk about krama mukthi in the 8th chapter; and Krishna does not want to suggest krama mukthi for us. As far as Krishna is concerned, Krishna wants us to vote for which mukthi; sadyō mukthi or jīvan mukthi, in this life itself; but out of academic interest; for the sake of information; he wants to give us the knowledge of krama mukthi; therefore the 8th chapter can be called krama mukthi chapter; whereas the 7th,9th,10th, 11th and 12th are not krama mukthi chapter, but akrama mukthi chapter, akrama mukthi, do not misunderstand, jīvan mukthi or sadyō mukthi; This is the uniqueness of the 8th chapter. With this background we have to study this chapter.

Now in the first four verses, Krishna answers some of the questions asked by Arjuna. Arjuna asks seven questions, based on the 7th chapter. What are the seven questions; what is adhyātma; what is adhibhūta; what is adi daivam; what is adi yajñam; what is Brahman, what is karma; and what is the significance of remembering God at the time of death; which I termed in Sanskrit, prayāṇa kāla

Īśvara smaraṇam. These are the seven questions Arjuna asks based on Krishna's teaching in the last chapter. These seven expressions were used by Krishna himself in the last two verses of the 7th chapter, that is 29th and 30th verses:

And Krishna deals with the first six questions very briefly, in the third and fourth verses; Krishna answers them very briefly; which he pointed out that adhyātman and Brahman are one and the same; consciousness principle; the all-pervading consciousness principle is known by the name adhyātman and Brahman; and why two names, for one and the same consciousness; two names from the angle of observation. Just like one and the same member of the family is known as father from the standpoint of the son and the very same is called brother from the standpoint of another person; the man is not different; but based on the angle of observation; the same person is called, father, brother, husband, son, brother-in-law; son-in-law; all the same and one person. Similarly, one Consciousness looked at from the micro level; individual level is called adhyātman, whereas the very same Consciousness looked from macro level; from the universal level; it is called Brahman; So words are different; but the meaning is the same.

And then Krishna pointed out that adhibhūtam is nothing but the material universe, made of five elements; so bhūtam means not bhūtam pretham pisachu; not bhūtam, bhūtha refers to pañca bhūtha, adhi bhūtam means the material universe made up of five elements; the perishable material universe is called is adhibhūtam.

Then adhi daivam; is the hiraṇyagarba tatvam or the total mind, governing the material universe. Just as the individual body is governed by the individual mind, because it is your mind that is driving this body; the mind told you bring the body to the school; then the body came; suppose the mind tells go away right now; you will get up and go; but thank God, mind does not say so; for just as the individual body is governed by the individual mind. Similarly the total adhibhūtam is governed by the total mind; which is called hiraṇyagarba tatvam; which is called adhidaivam; so adhibhūtam; adhyātman; adhidaivam; Brahma for words Krishna explains.

Then adhi yajñāḥ; Krishna points out is the name of Īśvara tatvam; who is one step above even Hiraṇyagarbha; that Īśvara tatvam; as karma phala dhāta; presiding over the laws of karma. So yajñā refers to karma and adhiyajñā means the lord presiding over the laws of karma; presiding over the laws of karma, giving appropriate karma phalam; in the form of puṇyam; in the form of pāpam.

And where is that Lord seated; Krishna says that Lord is in your own body with a diary, noting every action you do; every word you speak; immediately registered in Lord's computer, which will never be affected by virus.

So adhiyajñā is karma phala dhāta; Īśvaraḥ; and then finally Krishna defined karma as that which is responsible for the creation; it is the puṇya pāpa karma of the people which is responsible for the manifestation of creation; because puṇya pāpam can be exhausted only through sukam and duḥkam. And sukam and duḥkam you can have only when there is a body and there is a world; without body, world interaction; puṇya and pāpa cannot be exhausted; and therefore puṇya pāpa karma necessitates the creation of the body and the world. And since there are innumerable jīvās, with innumerable puṇya pāpa; the Lord has to create innumerable bodies; with innumerable set up for interaction; remember, every mosquito that is biting you is based on the law of karma; mosquito puṇyam gets exhausted; and your pāpam; both tallies; remember for mosquito it is puṇyam; for you it is pāpam. So it is a very beautiful cosmic intertwined network; and that is called karma. So thus in two verses Krishna beautifully adhyātma, adidaiva, adibhūtha, adhiyajñā, Brahma, karmani; six topics; leaving only one question; i.e. prayāṇa kāla Īśvara smaraṇam; because Krishna wants to elaborately deal with this topic.

And then from 5th verse, up to the 14th verse, Krishna deals with the seventh question; namely the significance and method of remembering God at the time of death. What is the significance that Krishna points out: He says; whatever is remembered at the time of death 30.03 indicates the predominant personality of the individual. Your personality can be determined by the last thought. Why do we say so; because as we grow older, our will power becomes weaker and weaker; and therefore our thoughts in old age are governed by the vāsanās or habits that we acquire throughout the life. Initially will is stronger; vāsana is weaker; as we grow older and older, it is reversed. Will is weaker; and vāsana is stronger. And that is why, you need not go into anything. Even in the formation of any addiction, you will find first time you take to a habit, your will is stronger; first cigarette; first liquor; first coffee; your will is stronger; in fact, it is very easy to say No; But once a person has been careless; and taken to that; one vāsana is formed; because he has experienced it; and whatever be the experience, it has registered in the form of samskāra; and the second time because of the samskāra, the need is more, will has become slightly weaker. Then third, fourth, fifth, sixth; months together, years together; the will with respect to that; the same person may have will power with regard to other thing, but with regard to the addiction; will power becomes all most nil; and that is why in the alcohol anonymous prayer they say: surrender to God because your will with regard to this demolished. It requires built up of the will; remember, how much effort is required; and therefore, initially will is stronger; habit is weaker; but as you go ahead; habit becomes stronger, will becomes weaker; and therefore our final thought is governed by our habit.

And our habits are determined our lifestyle and therefore my personality or lifestyle will determine my last thought. And therefore Krishna says the last thought is an indicator of the lifestyle of a person; and therefore the last thought determines the next janma. So

यं यं वापि स्मरन्भावं त्यजत्यन्ते कलेवरम् । तं तमेवैति कौन्तेय सदा तद्भावभावितः ॥ ८.६ ॥
yaṁ yaṁ vā'pi smaran bhāvaṁ tyajatyantē kalēvaram |
taṁ tamēvaiti kauntēya sadā tadbhāvabhāvitaḥ || 8.6 ||

And therefore what is the significance of prayāṅakāla smaraṇam; it determines or indicates the next janma; The next question is: what is the method of prayāṅakāla smaraṇam; how to influence my final thought; the answer you must know by now; Since towards our old age, our will becomes weaker and weaker; and since our vāsanās are going to become stronger and stronger; develop good vāsanās right from now:

शुभाशुभाभ्याम् मार्गाभ्याम्, वहन्ति वासन सरित् । पौरुशेषेण प्रयत्नेन योजनीय शुभा मति ॥
śubhāśubhābhyām mārgābhyām, vahanti vāsana sarit |
pauruśēṣeṇa prayatnēna yōjanīya śubhā mati ||

The mind can go through either śubha or aśubha vāšana; in your younger ages you have got the control to direct. Therefore practice good words, goods thoughts right now; And once you do that; then your subconscious mind is saturated with maṅgala vāšana or maṅgala samskāra. Therefore even if one is in comma, where the thoughts we do not know at all; these samskāra will determine the thought pattern of the comatose mind; and that mind will have only subha vāšana; and naturally the direction of the travel also will be śubha gathiḥ; which means Īśvara prāpthiḥ; and therefore what is the method; develop good habits, right from now.

तस्मात्सर्वेषु कालेषु मामनुस्मर युध्य च । मय्यर्पितमनोबुद्धिः मामेवैष्यस्यसंशयः ॥ ८.७ ॥
tasmāt sarveṣu kāleṣu māmanusmara yudhya ca |
mayyarpitamanōbuddhirmāmēvaiṣyasyasaṁśayaḥ || 8.7 ||

Read good books; even if you are watching movies, watch good movies, I do not whether there is at all; Exorcist; if you close your eyes; bhūtham; the halo man; already hollow; the hollow man will come; next janma what; hollow man. So therefore what you read; what you utter, what you see, and the people that you move with; noble and good, so that they will generate śubha vāsana; satsangatve nissangatvam; nissangatve.. .

Nārada says in his Bhakti sūtra; dussaṅga sarvatha tyājyaḥ. Choose your company carefully; you need not hate people; but you can keep like cobra; you need not hate cobra; but keep safe distance. Similarly we need hate people, but our company we can choose, therefore sarveṣu kāleṣu and initially it requires some effort, but after some time that will become habit; and once it has become a habit; even if the conscious mind is involved in loukika karmāni; the sub-conscious mind will have only noble thoughts. And then Krishna points out that for remembering God; you can use any particular symbol; or iṣṭa dēvathā; because Lord does not have any form but for the sake of thinking and meditation; choose any alambanaṁ; Rama or Krishna; and Krishna introduces Omkāra as one of the possible alambanaṁ.

And then Krishna says a Niṣkāma upāsaka uses that alambanaṁ or symbol to remember God throughout the life; and at the time of death also; because of his natural habit; the mind withdraws from the external world as Bhiṣmā did at the time of death; he sent away all his people. Enough of inter-action; whatever I have to tell, I have told; where and all the accounts are there; who all should give me money, etc. Now he calls Lord Krishna come and stand in front of me; let me think of you and die. What a control. Krishna says, niṣkāma upāsaka can effortlessly remember the Lord and as a result of that; he will attain krama mukthiḥ. This is the topic from verse No.5 to 14; so significance and method of prayana kāla Īśvara smaraṇam.

Then verse No.15 to 22, Krishna talks about two types of goals that a person can choose, one goal being God himself; I am using the word Himself; because some word I have to use; you can take it herself also. Ok. After-all does not have any gender in the ultimate sense; therefore, goal as God himself and the every other goal other than God; God and not God; world; these are the two possibilities.

And Krishna wants to point out God symbolises immortality; God symbolises security; that is one of the names of the Lord is achuthāya namaḥ; what a beautiful nāmaḥ; remember, any karma begins with āchamanam and in the āchamanam the first nāma is achuthāya namaḥ; achhuthā means the one who does not slip from the nature of immortality; na vidhyatē chuthihi yasya; reliable goal. Therefore God symbolises immortality; God symbolises security; God symbolises peace and God symbolises happiness. Does not every human being seek this goal only. So everyone seeks these four only through money; through people; through possessions; all the time I look for what; security; safety. So God is only security; only peace; once you say; a person should really choose God as the goal and the possibility is all the other goals.

And Krishna says if a person chooses any other goal; it is a risky proposal, every other thing is subjected to time and space; and therefore you may enjoy their presence and company but the most difficult thing either it will go away from me or I will go away from that. So like that person who said; I have built a house which can never be destroyed. Then that sanyasi told, house will not be destroyed, but you will be destroyed; you will die; so therefore.

मामुपेत्य तु कौन्तेय पुनर्जन्म न विद्यते ॥ ८.१६ ॥
ā brahmabhuvanāllōkāḥ punarāvartinō'rjuna |
māmupētya tu kauntēya punarjanma na vidyatē || 8.16 ||

all these 14 lōkās and the higher positions; will come under time and space and therefore there is nothing wrong in using them; nothing wrong in handling them; but something is wrong; if you depend on them. Remember my example; the cardboard chair; which is beautifully decorated; is wonderful. You keep it in the show case, you use it for your kolu; you can do everything; except one thing; what is that; do not sit over that. Similarly, we are not against the world or people or position or possessions; they are all gift from God; use them; but for your security, peace and happiness; do not depend on these ephemeral ones; hold on to Īśvaraḥ. And therefore infinite goal and finite goal, these are the two possible goals of human life; one is called sreyas; another is called preyas; one is called spiritual goal; another is called material goal. This is the topic from verse No.15 to 22.

Then from verse no.23 to 27, Krishna talks about two types of paths leading to these two types of goals; and what are the two paths; one is called kriṣṇa gati; which will lead a person to finite goal. Even different lōkas up to brahma lōka; excluding brahma lōka; up to Brahma lōka it can lead to various goals; but what is the problem; it will be enjoyable alright; but there will be a day of return;

kshine punye marthya lōkam visanthi.

So Krishna gati takes to higher lōka; other than Brahma lōka. Other than Brahma lōka, a person enjoys and returns; and suppose a person says I do not mind returning, then wish you all the best; go and come; a tourist. I know that; I would like to have a sight-seeing in svarga; not wrong; nothing wrong; but you have to return; and then the other path is sukḷa gati; which will lead this person to Brahma lōka.

As I said in my introduction; and in brahma lōka he will get brahma lōka itself is finite; but in brahma lōka he gets jñānam; which will take him to moksha; which is called krama mukthiḥ or God. So sukḷa gati will take a person to God; through krama mukthi. So these are the two paths known as kriṣṇa gati and sukḷa gati;

And then Krishna also talks about two types of travellers; because if two destinations are there; and two paths are there; there should be two travellers; and who are those travellers; the one who goes through kriṣṇa gati; that is the darker path is called karmi; a ritualist; one who performs noble karmas; which includes social service, pancha maha yajñā; so the one who does all forms of noble actions, will go through kriṣṇa gati; enjoy the higher lōkas and return; whereas the person who follows sukḷa gati; the brighter path which leads to God; the seeker is upāsaka; niṣkāma upāsaka; will travel through sukḷa gati; and attain God in the form of krama mukthiḥ.

But the most important point to be noted here, we are only talking about karmi and upāsaka; who is not there in the race; in this particular race, we have not included jñānam; Just as Kasporov is not playing in Delhi tournament, not coming in this; Similarly here, jñānam does not come to picture at all; therefore here ajñāni karmi and ajñāni upāsaka; ajñāni of what? ignorance of nirguṇam Brahma; both of them have not come to jñāna yōga; they have followed karma; they have followed upāsana; both of them have not come to jñāna; jñāni is excluded from the 8th chapter. He is hero of the 9th chapter; so thus karmi and upāsakās will go to these two destinations. This is the topic from 23rd to 27th and in the 28th verse, Krishna concludes this discussion. If we have to choose between karma and upāsana; which one is better is the question; jñānam is not in the race; if we have to choose between karma and upāsana. Krishna wants to say, upāsana is better because, it will give a person krama mukthi; or oneness with God after death; whereas a karmi will not get krama mukthi also; and of course he will not get jīvan mukthi; or karmi will have neither mukthi; whereas upāsaka will at least get krama mukthi; and therefore Arjuna an intelligent person will upāsana between these two.

In the last verse Krishna glorifies the yōgi; yōgi means niṣkāma upāsaka who will attain God which is superior all other ephemeral goals of life. Thus by glorifying niṣkāma upāsaka and krama mukthi, Krishna concludes this discourse and this chapter is called akṣara Brahma yōgaḥ; because that is the word with which Krishna's teaching begins in this chapter.

Ninth Chapter: The Yōga of Sovereign Science and Sovereign Secret

We have completed the eighth chapter which is a unique chapter dealing with the topic of krama mukthi which is an important topic discussed in the upāniṣads themselves. And therefore since Krishna wants to give a comprehensive teaching, covering all the topics of the upāniṣads, Krishna includes the krama mukthi topic also in his teaching. And in this krama mukthi topic, a person is asked to follow saṅuṇa Īśvara upāsana throughout the life and a person need not come to Vēdānta at all; because Vēdānta deals with nirṅuṇa Īśvara jñānam which some people may find either difficult or may not be able to follow and therefore without coming to Vēdānta, a person follows saṅuṇa upāsana, and even dies thinking of only mōkṣa or Īśvara as the goal, and such a person will not have punarjanma at all; which means punarjanma in this lōka; he will go to Brahma lōka and attain jñānam and mōkṣa from there.

But as I said in the previous class; Krishna is not interested in promoting krama mukthi; He wants to introduce krama mukthi only as a topic of academic interest, because krama mukthi is meant for inferior seekers. And Krishna feels Arjuna does not come under that category, and I also consider that you come under inferior seekers category; you are all superior adhikāris and therefore for such seekers wants only mukthi here and now, in this janma itself; which we call jīvan mukthiḥ; or sadyō mukthiḥ; because we would like to live a happy life here. After death whether we will be reborn or not, that is the botheration later, and it is not even verifiable; whereas here the benefit is something verifiable and therefore Krishna wants to emphasise only jīvan mukthi or sadyō mukthi;

And assuming we are also interested in jīvan mukthi alone; the course of our discipline will be slightly different. And in what way it will be different; we are not going to confine to saṅuṇa upāsana throughout the life; we confine to saṅuṇa upāsana for sometime, and we would like to spend more time on nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam; which means Vēdānta sṛavaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam; which will give jīvātma-parāmātma aikya jñānam in this life itself; and we will be able to enjoy jīvan mukthiḥ. And therefore in the following chapters, 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th, Krishna is going to prescribe upāsana as a means of coming to Vēdānta vicāra in this life itself. And what is that knowledge that should be acquired through Vēdānta vicāra; that also Krishna prescribes. In fact, the 9th chapter primarily concentrates on Vēdānta vicāra or nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam; and having presented nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam; as a means of liberation here and now, Krishna will prescribe saṅuṇa upāsana as a stepping stone to be utilised. This is going to be the approach of the 9th chapter. It is a beautiful and a comprehensive and complete chapter and this chapter is very similar to the seventh chapter of the Gītā; in fact as even you study the 9th chapter, we can compare this with the seventh. With this background we will enter the chapter proper.

इदं तु ते गुह्यतमं प्रवक्ष्याम्यनसूयवे
ज्ञानं विज्ञानसहितं यज्ज्ञात्वा मोक्ष्यसेऽशुभात् ॥ ९.१ ॥

śrībhagavānuvāca

idaṃ tu tē guhyatamaṃ pravakṣyāmyanasūyavē |
jñānaṃ vijñānasahitaṃ yajjñātvā mōkṣyasēśubhāt || 9.1 ||

श्री भगवान् उवाच śrī bhagavān uvāca The Lord said - तु tu However, ते अनसूयवे to you who are non-critical tē anasūyavē प्रवक्ष्यामि pravakṣyāmi I shall impart इदं ज्ञानम् idaṃ jñānam this Jñāna विज्ञानसहितम् vijñānasahitam along with vijñāna गुह्यतमम् guhyatamam which is the greatest secret ज्ञात्वा यत् jñātvā yat and gaining which jñāna मोक्ष्यसे mokṣyase you will be freed अशुभात् aśubhāt from saṃsāra.

1. The Lord said – however, to you who are non-critical, I shall impart this Jñāna along with vijñāna which is the greatest secret, and gaining which jñāna you will be freed from Samsāra.

Lord Krishna introduces the subject matter in the first three verses. He says the subject matter is going to be Īśvara jñānam; that is going to be the subject matter of the 9th chapter, and what type of Īśvara jñānam; Īśvara consisting of both His inferior nature as well as superior nature. Remember the seventh chapter, aparā prakṛti as well as parā prakṛti; aparā prakṛti meaning the saṅguṇa svarūpam; the nature of the Lord with attributes. Any personal God comes under aparā prakṛti as there is name and form. Even the visvarūpa form of God will come under aparā prakṛti; even the viśva rūpa consists of names and forms; So whatever consists of names and forms; and whatever is subject to change will come under inferior nature; why; it is subject to time and change.

And then what is parā prakṛti; the higher nature of the Lord which is beyond time and space, which is the absolute nature, which is called caitanya svarūpam, which is called parā prakṛti; If you remember the seventh chapter, nirguṇa nirvikāra nirvikalpa cētana rūpam parā prakṛtiḥ. The higher nature is attributeless; changeless; division-less; consciousness; is the higher nature of God.

Then what is the lower nature; saṅguṇa savikāra savikalpa acētana svarūpam; it is full of attributes; it is full of modifications; it is full of divisions and it is material in nature.

And Krishna says: “Hey Arjuna! In this chapter I am going to give you the knowledge of both aparā and parā prakṛti”. And the knowledge of the higher nature of God is vijñānam; and the knowledge of the lower nature of God is called jñānam. Therefore I am going to give you both jñānam and vijñānam. So this itself indicates that this chapter is similar to seventh chapter, because the 7th chapter was titled; what is the name of the title; (you should remember at least the title) 7th chapter is titled jñāna vijñāna yōga; which means saṅguṇa Īśvara nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam. And when you gain the knowledge of saṅguṇa Īśvara; you will be in the field of division or dvaitham. When you have got saṅguṇa Īśvara jñānam; certainly you will see the differences between Īśvara and you; therefore always saṅguṇa Īśvara jñānam will come under bēda jñānam or dvaitha jñānam. God is different; I am different; God is perfection; I am imperfection; God is great; I am miserable; this is always saṅguṇa;

whereas when a person comes to the higher nature of God; since there are no attributes at all; there will be nothing to differentiate between God and me; Therefore when I come to vijñānam; it will be abēda jñānam; or advaita jñānam; and Hey Arjuna I will give you both bēda and abēda jñānam; I will give you both dvaita and advaita jñānam; both saṅga and nirguṅga jñānam; this is what I am going to impart to you.

Therefore He says इदं विज्ञानसहितम् ज्ञानम् अहम् प्रवक्ष्यामि idam vijñānasahitam jñānam aham pravakṣyāmi; I am going to clearly teach you. Krishna is so confident of his teaching ability. He says I will teach nicely and do not worry. pravakṣyāmi. And what is the glory of this teaching. Advertisement is required, then only people will get attracted; but it is not false advertisement. But it is real glory; this is guhya tamam; it is the rarest knowledge which you cannot ordinary get anywhere. In fact very rarely people talk about Īśvara jñānam; who is interested in Īśvara.

You know; once I was conducting classes in Govindappan Naikan street; I do not know whether you have gone to that area; sometime I used to go early for the classes; and then the place of classes will not be open. So therefore I have to stay somewhere. So I used to look for some place; and anywhere you go, it is crowded; even walking you will get into accidents; between people and people. Then I found that there is a temple there; and when I go to the temple, God alone; not a kaka kunju; huge temple; nobody there; everybody busy running here and there; very interesting to watch; but you find nobody in the temple. So very rarely people are interested in talking about Īśvara svarūpam; and even if there are people interested, they love only talking about saṅga Īśvara svarūpam; very rarely are people interested in the higher nirguṅga svarūpam. And therefore Krishna says: this is the topmost secret. गुह्यतमं guhya tamam. The greatest secret.

And Krishna uses the word secret, the moment you say secret, everybody is interested. Eagerly they raise their ears. So I am going to teach you free of cost, Krishna says: So therefore nothing, I will just teach you. And not only it is the rarest and greatest knowledge, यत् ज्ञात्वा अशुभात् मोक्ष्यसे yat jñātvā aśubhāt mokṣyase. It is not mere study for the sake study, you get of lot of practical benefits out of this wisdom; people always ask for practical benefits that is useful, please tell, because we cannot spend time on something which is worthless.

Therefore Krishna gives a promise, yat jñātvā; gaining this knowledge, you will be released, mōkṣyase from aśubhāt; aśubham means amaṅgalam. amaṅgalam means samsāraḥ; You will be released from samsāra; which consists of all kinds of psychological problems. rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ; kāma krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, mada, mātsarya, etc. Got over; So all kinds of agony, pain, that you have, it will all go away; you will have a free life; which is called jīvan mukthiḥ you will get; That is the benefit of this knowledge.

And why have I chosen you; Oh; Arjuna; because Krishna is voluntarily giving; there is no Arjuna uvācha in this chapter. Arjuna has not even asked; Krishna himself says, voluntarily I will teach you; and Krishna gives you the reason, because: ते अनसूयवे ते अहं वक्ष्यामि anasūyavē tē ahaṁ vakṣyāmi. You have got the rarest of quality, which is required for a student and what is that quality, a non-critical approach; asūya means listening with a critical mind, exclusively to find fault; or to test the teacher; or to find out the teacher whether knows as much as I know; with different negative attitude, one can listen; which I call intellectual arrogance; which is a very powerful weakness. If we have some intelligence and if we have read some scriptures, there is a possibility of vidya garvam.

We find even in Upāniṣad students; Gārgya in Brihadaranyaka Upāniṣad, a student is called triptabālahiḥ; arrogant bālahiḥ is his title. So intellectual arrogance is a weakness people can easily develop; if that if I listen; I will always find fault;

And who is going to be the loser; I am going to be the loser; and therefore be intellectually humble. And even if you are not able to accept some part of the teaching, have a open mind and give the benefit of the doubt to śāstrā and ācārya; and always think that I might not have understood properly, rather than saying scriptures are defective; question your understanding; not questioning the very teaching itself; It is a very important attitude called śraddhaḥ; Open mindedness. In fourth chapter, Krishna emphasised that; śraddhāvan labate jñānam; and Arjuna you have got that attitude; Therefore you are called anasūyuhu;

Asūya is defined as पर गुणेषु दोष आविष्करणम् para guṇeṣu doṣa āviṣkaraṇam; asūya; finding fault, looking for loopholes is called asūya. In Tamil, the word asūya is used in the meaning of jealousy; That is not the exact translation; the Sanskrit word for jealousy is mātsaryam; The word asuya is finding fault; and that becomes very goal itself; that is called asūya; parā guṇēṣu doṣa āviṣkaraṇam. Dayananda Swami says: proof readers' intellect; When you are reading, what is your aim; you have to look for only for the mistake; For that only proof reader is employed. But that is not the approach of scriptural study. So anasūya is the opposite of that; In fact, śraddhaḥ. So because of this unique qualification; I have chosen to teach you.

राजविद्या राजगुह्यं पवित्रमिदमुत्तमम् ।

प्रत्यक्षावगमं धर्म्यं सुसुखं कर्तुमव्ययम् ॥ ९.२ ॥

rājavidyā rājaguhyaṃ pavitramidamuttamam |

pratyakṣāvagamaṃ dharmyaṃ susukhaṃ kartumavyayam || 9.2 ||

इदम् idam This is राजविद्या rājavidyā the greatest knowledge राजगुह्यम् rājaguhyam the greatest secret, उत्तमं पवित्रम् uttamaṃ pavitram the most sacred, प्रत्यक्षावगमम् pratyakṣāvagamaṃ directly attainable धर्म्यम् dharmyam unopposed to dharma सुसुखं कर्तुम् susukhaṃ kartum very easy to pursue, अव्ययम् avyayam and imperishable.

2. This is the greatest knowledge, the greatest secret, the most sacred, directly attainable, unopposed to dharma, very easy to pursue and imperishable.

Krishna continues with the glory of this knowledge. Jñāna mahima; Īśvara jñān mahima is the topic continued here also; राजविद्या rājavidyā; this knowledge, Īśvara jñānam is the royal knowledge; it is greatest knowledge among all the disciplines of knowledge.

In Mundaka upāniṣad it is called parā vidyā and why is it called raja vidya, you can give several reasons: One is: this is the knowledge with deals with the highest nirguṇa svarūpam, which is the only reality or satyam; whereas all other branches of knowledge, deal with only the changing creation, or even the changing aspect of the Lord, which comes under Māya or Mithya. So therefore this knowledge deals with reality; all the other disciplines of knowledge, deal with the unreal or mithya; Therefore this is glorious.

And secondly, this is the only liberating knowledge; which will give you fulfilment at all levels; because we have sense of limitation at different levels; physical sense of limitation; so not satisfied with my physical personality. And therefore constantly I have to do plastic surgery. Then there is dissatisfaction with my psychological personality. I am not loved by all people. I am not loved by this person; I am not cared for by anyone; my son does not respect; my daughter does not talk to me; these are psychological deprivation; which will cause another set of problem. Even though physically I am comfortable; financially also comfortable. Like a man came and told me. Swamiji, my children provide me everything; the moment I sneeze, they call doctor; such a wonderful children; everything I need is there; but my only complaint is: They do not spend sometime talking to me. It is a problem. So psychologically finding dissatisfied. Still there is greater dissatisfaction for the intellectual; an intellectual person wants to understand the creation in its totality. And there are many questions unanswered, even though he has studied a lot; and therefore intellectual dissatisfaction is another sense of limitation. Generally it comes to the scientists only; we do not have such problem; where do we have time to think about how the world came; when did big bang happen; when did the first human being appear. 5 million years before or 6 million; we will say, how does it matter to me, when he came; who is interested in that; does not care; dinosaur existed or not; why did the dinosaur disappear. Is it because of change in climate or meteoric hit; or what it is; big issue; we do not know such thing existed or not. So for a rational person, sense of limitation at intellectual level. Vēdānta is one wisdom which destroys the limitations at all the levels. Emotional problems also it solves; intellectual problems also it solves. That is why in the 7th chapter, He said yajñātvā nēha bhūyō'nyajñātavyamavaśiṣyatē (7.2); you do not have anything further to know for intellectual satisfaction; it gives total intellectual satisfaction also; and therefore it is greatest knowledge; rājavidyā and at the same time it is राजगुह्यम् rājaguhyam, it is the greatest secret. Not easily available;

शृण्वन्तोऽपि बहवो यं न विद्युः ।

आश्चर्यो वक्ता कुशलोऽस्य लब्धा

आश्चर्यो ज्ञाता कुशलानुशिष्टः ॥ ७ ॥

śravaṇāyāpi bahubhiryō na labhyaḥ śṛṇvantō:'pi bahavō yaṁ na vidyuḥ | āścaryō vaktā kuśalō:'sya labdhā

āścaryō jñātā kuśalānuśiṣṭaḥ ||

Kathopanishad Part I. Canto II. 7

In the second chapter, we saw, āścaryavatpaśyati kaścidēnam āścaryavadvadati tathaiva cānyaḥ | āścaryavaccainamanyāḥ śrñōti śrutvā'pyēnaṃ vēda na caiva kaścit || 2.29 ||

This teaching is not available for most of the people, and it is a great wonder; Vyāsācārya says greater wonder is in spite of learning for 25 years, there are many people who manage not to understand. Still greater wonder; I did not say that; Vyāsācārya says: srutva be enam, it continues to be a secret even after secret; so what more great secret you want.

Therefore rājaguhyam; guhyanām rāja, rājaguhyam. In Sanskrit it is a special kind of compound; called raja dantaathi compound; guhyaanam rāja; rāja guhyam; vidyānām rāja, rājavidyā;

Then what is the next glory of this wisdom; पवित्रम् pavitram. It is the greatest purifier in the creation, which removes all the impurities in the form of karmas, sanchita; āgāmi karmas, impurities in the form of karma, which means puṇya pāpa karmāni; and impurities in the form of rāgaḥ-dveṣaḥ kāma krōdhaḥ, the psychological impurities; and the worst impurity called ignorance, ajñānam; all the impurities it destroys and therefore it is pavithram. In the fourth chapter, Krishna said, na hi jñānēna sadrśaṃ pavitramiha vidyatē. And therefore it is not ordinary purifier; उत्तमं पवित्रम् uttamaṃ pavitram; it is the greatest purifier.

Because once we use this method of purification; the advantage is not only the present impurities will go away, but in future we will not acquire impurity; whereas if you go and take a gaṅga snanam you will remove all impurities; but it does not guarantee freedom from future impurities; after gaṅga snanam you start acquiring fresh ones; from the gaṅga banks itself; whereas this knowledge, not only removes past impurities, and it is a guarantee against future impurities also. Therefore uttamaṃ pavitram; and प्रत्यक्षावगमम् pratyakṣāvagamam and it is available directly here and now. It is not a promise after death; which is the most disadvantageous thing, because you cannot verify; how will I know; I can always get away; guarantee anything. This is not like that; pratyakṣāvagamam means it is directly experienceable; the benefit can be experienced here and now; mana śanti can be experienced here and now. Therefore pratyakṣāvagamam.

Then धर्म्यम् dharmyam; it is in keeping with vedic teaching. So this is important because in our tradition; we always consider Vēdā as the basic source of knowledge; and therefore always any system of teaching; which is in keeping with the vedic teaching is acceptable in our tradition; we will call it smriti; but if anything is not in keeping with vedic tradition; we will find that it cannot survive in India. Just take buddhism as an example; buddha is considered one of the greatest human being; everybody glorified; and he has done so much; In spite of all his glory; one minus point was there basic; what is that: he rejected Vēdās; bhouda darśanam is called nāstika darśanam; and in our tradition, nāsthika means not non-believer of God; nāsthika means non-believer of the Vēdās; because of this one basic mistake, buddhism however great it was, could not survive here, It just grew and spread everywhere else; but here in the very source, birthplace, it is not able to survive; Vēdā viruddhatvāt; and nowadays people do not know the importance of Vēdā; but when Krishna is teaching Arjuna; that was a very important condition, it must be vedic; And therefore Krishna is afraid; and even Krishna's teaching will be acceptable; inspite Krishna being avathārā; the teaching will be acceptable only if it is in keeping with vedic tradition. That is why in the fourth chapter, beginning Krishna tellsimaṃ vivasvatē yōgaṃ prōktavānahamavyayam |

vivasvān manavē prāha manurikṣvākavē'bravīt ||4.1 ||

ēvaṃ paramparāprāptamimaṃ rājarṣayō viduḥ |
sa kālēnēha mahatā yōgō naṣṭaḥ parantapa || 4.2 ||

sa ēvāyaṃ mayā tē'dya yōgaḥ prōktaḥ purāṇaḥ |
bhaktō'si mē sakhā cēti rahasyaṃ hyētaduttamam || 4.3 ||

Krishna does not claim originality of his teaching; He says Arjuna you accept my teaching; not because I am an avathārā. Even avathārā's status is not a criterion; Krishna says it is because, it is in keeping with the vedic teaching. Because Buddha himself is accepted by many people as one of the avathārās; Buddha śarīra jaya jagadeesa hare; you have heard that; but even though Buddha is accepted as an avathārā, if the teaching is not in keeping with the sruti; yukti and anubhava; in India it cannot survive.

And Krishna knows that; therefore he says: धर्म्यम् dharmyam; dharmah means vedic teaching; sodana lakṣaṇa artaha dharmah; the definition of dharma is vedic teaching. And dharmyam means in keeping with vedic teaching. dharmāt anapetham; dharmyam; vaidika ithyarthah. Therefore Arjuna, it is in keeping with the Vēdās.

And सुसुखं कर्तुम् susukhaṃ kartum; gaining this knowledge and the jīvanmukthi is far easier; sukam means what comfortable; susukham; very comfortable; you can get nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam and jīvan mukthi; more comfortably than krama mukthi; because for krama mukthi; what are the rules to be followed; do you remember the 8th chapter; not only you have to do upāsana throughout, with consistently, more importantly at the time of death, you have to sit in proper position (now itself it is difficult, you are not able to sit properly) at the time of death you have to sit; murdhyanat adayana pranam; you have to withdraw all the pranas and sense organs and bring it to the heart and then you have to force it through the suṣūmna nādi, and carefully release it through bramrandram, and hope that there are no traffic jam in sukla gati; and then you go to Brahma lōka and there also you have to attend these classes; you cannot help; so krama mukthi is really tough. Compared to krama mukthi which is more difficult and unpredictable and jñānam and jīvanmukthi is easier and you can get the benefit here. And therefore Krishna says; susukham; compared to krama mukthi, jīvan mukthi is far easier.

And then finally अव्ययम् avyayam. This knowledge is imperishable in terms of its result; phala driṣṭya avyayam; which means one will get the benefit of mōkṣa which is permanent benefit, unlike attaining higher lōkas; higher lōkas is also a phalam; but it is not avyayam; it is not inexhaustible; it is vyayam only. Means what; after exhausting the karma palam;

kṣīṇē puṇyē martyalōkaṃ viśanti | ēvaṃ trayīdharmamanuprapannā gatāgataṃ kāmakāmā labhantē || 9. 21 ||

we are going to see in this chapter. Like a meteor we will land in lower lōkas. And therefore, kartum susukam avyayam; such a wonderful Īśvara jñānam, Arjuna I am going to be impart, may you listen carefully.

All to turn the attention of the seeker. Like a magician; he will not do the trick immediately; he will come with a lot of dress; and remove one by one and then dance; there will be lot of music; and then from the cap, he will start taking clothes from the hat; lot of show; Krishna is also a master magician; He gives a lot of introduction for this knowledge.

अश्रद्धधानाः पुरुषा धर्मस्यास्य परन्तप ।

अप्राप्य मां निवर्तन्ते मृत्युसंसारवर्त्मनि ॥ ९.३ ॥

aśraddadhānāḥ puruṣā dharmasyāsya parāntapa |

aprāpya mām nivartantē mṛtyusaṃsāravartmani || 9.3 ||

परन्तप parāntapa Oh! Arjuna पुरुषाः puruṣāḥ (those) people, अश्रद्धधानाः aśraddadhānāḥ who have no faith, अस्य धर्मस्य asya dharmasya in this teaching निवर्तन्ते nivartante continue certainly मृत्युसंसारवर्त्मनि mṛtyusaṃsāravartmani in the course of saṃsāra fraught with death, अप्राप्य माम् aprāpya mām without attaining Me.

3. Oh Arjuna! Those people who have no faith in this teaching continue certainly in the course of saṃsāra fraught with death without attaining me.

Krishna says that in spite of all the glorification that I have done, and also all the glorification of this wisdom obtaining in the scriptures themselves; unfortunately, many people do not resort to this Īśvara jñānam. Even though it is greatest; and even though it is freely available, in most of the places, in many ashramas; many institutions it is given free; whereas any other course, Java; whether Java or Sumatra, whatever it might be; two hours a week; two months course; Rs.60000 big queue is still there. Krishna says this is the greatest wisdom and easily available; and gives highest joy and security; but still many people do not vote for this; why because, they are not able to trust this; because something is so cheaply given; you wonder; like somebody told; Swamiji if a boy is willing to get married without dowry, suppose, then everybody begins to wonder and thinks; there must be some problem I think, or else how can a boy is so cheaply available; therefore there must be some defect; and they reject him. Similarly when you promise the highest benefit and they think there must be something fishy here and therefore they do not want to trust this; therefore he says पुरुषाः अश्रद्धाः puruṣāḥ aśraddadhānāḥ; many people do not have śraddhaḥ in the efficacy of this teaching; So धर्मस्य अस्य dharmasya asya, here dharma means what; this teaching; Īśvara jñānam; very careful; here the word dharma does not mean darmārtakāma; it does not refer to punya also; in this context it is referring to Vēdāntic teaching, Brahma vidyā is called dharmah; Īśvara jñānam is called dharma; and many people do not have faith in the efficacy of this teaching. And what is going to happen to them. So Krishna sympathises with them; He says; all such people अप्राप्य माम् aprāpya mām, they lose the opportunity to attain Me, they miss Me which is the infinite ānanda; I am infinite ānanda; infinite security; I am infinite itself; they lose the opportunity to attain Me; that is mōkṣa; they miss.

इह चेदवेदिदथ सत्यमस्ति न चेदिहावेदिन्महति विनष्टिः । ...

iha cēdavēdidatha satyamasti na cēdihāvēdinmahati vinaṣṭiḥ | || Kena II.5

The loss of the Infinite is infinite loss. and THEN suppose you say next birth; afterall I am a Hindu; therefore I have got a next birth; and therefore I can do that there; you know we are experts in postponing; So we say: இப்பிறவி தப்பினால், எப்பிறவி வாப்க்குமோ? ippiravi tappināḥ, eppiravi vāykkumō?. How do you know that your next janma is going to be a manuṣya janma; and how do you that you will get all the opportunity to learn; and therefore they miss a rare opportunity.

And then what is going to be their lot; nivarthante; nivarthante means niścayēna varthanthe; they will definitely continue. In this context, nivarthante means niścayēna varthanthe. Normally nivarthane, they return; here it does not mean; here it means "continued existence" in मृत्युसंसारवर्त्मनि mṛtyusaṁsāravartmani; they remain in the hold of saṁsāra; which is nothing but punarapi jananam; punarapi maraṇam; acquiring things and losing things; and again acquiring and again losing this eternal stuggle; பயணங்கள் முடிவதில்லை; முடிவில்லா பயணம்; payaṇaṅkaḥ muṭivatillai; muṭivillā payaṇam; they continue.

So mṛtyusaṁsāravartmani; mṛtyu saṁsāra means a saṁsāra which consists of mṛtyu as the main problem. mṛtyuyukthaḥ saṁsāra; mṛtyu saṁsāra; saṁsāra has many problems; many problems means disease, decay, separation, loss, so many other things are there; but what is the worst problem in saṁsāra; mṛtyu; mortality is the greatest source of fear; that is why whenever we want to talk about fear, we say he is mortally afraid; so which is a permanent sense of insecurity throughout the life; in such an insecure life; he continues as a result of this.

4. All this Universe is pervaded by Me, whose form is unmanifest. All beings are in Me; still, I am not in them.

With the previous verse, the introduction part is over. And in the introduction, Krishna introduced the subject matter, namely Īśvara jñānam; and he talked about the glory of this knowledge. And he also talked about the most important qualification, viz., śraddhaḥ or anasūya. That alone in Tamil they write Anusūya and keep the name anasūya; Not anusūya; it is anasūya; Anasūya is Atri's wife.

And why Atri has got Anasūya; Atrihi means na vidyate trihi yasya; the one who has transcended the three. What are the three; stūla, sūkṣma; kāraṇa śarīra trayam; the one who has transcended; or you can say satva; rajas and tamō guṇa, the one who has transcended; he will never have the problem of asuya; whoever is atri; his wife will be anasūya; That is the symbolic significance Atri and Anasūya; Anyway that is aside and incidental.

Having introduced the subject matter, Krishna enters the subject matter from the fourth verse, and this is the central theme of the 9th chapter, which begins with the 4th verse and it goes upto 10th; 4th to the 10th is the main topic of the 9th chapter. In fact one of the important portions of the entire Gītā; which contains the essence all the Upāniṣads; So Krishna wants to talk about the nature of God; especially the higher nature of God. So the first definition of the higher nature of God: parā prakṛti is avyaktha murthiḥ Īśvaraḥ; God in his higher nature is attributeless or formless. The word vyaktam means indriya gōcharam; indriyaihi yajyate, ithi vyaktham; derived from the vyanj; to be revealed; vyaktam means that which is perceptible to any one of the sense organs; indriya gōcharam;

And avyaktam means anindriya gōcharam; which means not perceptible to any sense organs; if the object has got the property of the sound, then it is perceptible to the sense organs, viz., the ears; if there is sparsa guṇa; it can be known through the skin; if there is rupā guṇa, it is perceptible to the eyes; if there is the rasa guṇa; then it is perceptible to the tongue; if it has got gandha guṇa; it is perceptible to the nose; Lord in his higher nature is not perceptible to any sense organs means aśabda; asparśam; is the Lord. If you remember Kathōpaniṣad;

Kathopaniṣad Part I. Canto III. 15

Lord is free from all attributes; which means if you have experienced God in any particular form, then it is only the lower nature of the God; Krishna mūrthy; Rāma mūrthy etc. means what; a form which has got dark colour; Krishna mūrthy, a form which is dark; Krishna was dark; and Draupādi is also called Krishnā; dark; that means what: there is a rupām for the Lord.

That is why it was said in Kenōpāniṣad; if you have experienced God as an object, it is only lower form of God; it is certainly God; that darśanam is indeed great; and that bhaktha is to be congratulated; but still from Vēdāntic angle; if you have darśanam of God; then it is not the real one; because Kenōpāniṣad says; netam yadidam upāśate. Then how do you experience the higher God; higher God not an object of experience; because it is free from all the attributes; Therefore what is the first feature of Īśvara; avyakta rupāḥ.

And once you understand that the Lord is formless; where will he be located; you cannot have location; when will that Lord come; that Lord can never come; that Lord can never go also; therefore in our pūja, what we do; asmin haridra bimbe, sumukam mahaganapathim, dhyayāmi, avahayāmi; I invite the God; and at the end of the pūja, ruthlessly, yatha stanam prathiṣṭapayāmi. I cannot do permanent pūja and all; one time I can give naivedyam; and then I ask Him to go back; So all these things are possible with regard to finite personal ayarām-gayarām-God. Certainly it is perfectly OK; to start with such Īśvara; but that cannot be the ultimate one; the ultimate is discovery of a Lord who can never come and who can never go and once I discover that God; there is no question of losing that God; Bhagavān will leave me; that thought or fear is not there; there is no viraha Gītām also; viraha Gītām means what; Bhagavan has left me; one gopi cries; because Bhagavān went to other gōpis, all these things are not there. That is higher nature of God; avyaktam.

And the next glory or feature of that God; therefore only इदम् सर्वं ततम् idam sarvaṁ tatam; all pervading; tatam means vyāpṭham; sarvaṁ vyāpṭham; the first feature is nirguṇam; second feature is sarvaṁ vyāpṭham; nirguṇam is here called avyaktam; and sarvaṁ vyāpṭham is here referred to as tatam; तन् tan to pervade; तनोति tanoti; to pervade; from that only सन्तति santati word has come; santati; that is which is flowing; parāmparā; to pervade or flow; this is the second feature.

Then Krishna introduces one more feature in the second line, which we will see in the next class.

Om

In the first three verses of the 9th chapter, Lord Krishna introduced the subject matter; viz., Īśvara jñānam. This is one of the middle section of the Gītā. In the first six chapters, Krishna focused on jīva svarūpam and from the 7th to 12th chapters, Krishna is focusing on Īśvara svarūpam.

And while talking about the nature of Īśvara, Krishna wants to deal with the higher nature of the Lord, which was called in the 7th chapter, parā prakṛti, as well as the lower nature of the Lord, known as aparā prakṛti. By higher nature, what we mean is that which is beyond the conditionings of time and space. So that which is the absolute principle, which is the relative empirical world, and therefore that which is not subject to time and space and therefore consequently not subject to division, change, etc. So division-less, changeless, timeless, space-less, absolute form of God.

And by the lower nature, what we mean is that which is within time and space, which is empirical in nature, and therefore which is subject to division, change, etc. In the Upaniṣadic text books, the higher nature of God is called Brahman, the lower nature of God is called Māya. So here we get both the topic of Brahma svarūpam, which is the higher nature, and māya svarūpam, which is lower nature; and the knowledge of the higher nature is called vijñānam and the knowledge of the lower nature is called jñānam; Krishna say I will deal with jñānam and vijñānam.

And having introduced both, Krishna is initially dealing with the higher nature; which was called parā prakṛti in the 7th chapter, and which is called Brahman in the Upaniṣads. And therefore these verses from the 4th verse up to 10th verse, we get a description of Brahma svarūpam; and therefore this is the essence of all the upānisads and therefore Krishna condenses all these verses; and in the fourth verse, which we completed in the last class; Krishna said the higher nature of God is formless; avyaktha murthy, formless; literally speaking, not available for any sense organs. Indriyaihi na abivyajyate iti avyaktam; That which is not revealed by sense organs; which means it does not have any properties which is perceptible through the sense organs, like śabda, sparśa, rūpā, rasa and gandha. If the property of sound is there, it will be available for the ears; if the property of touch is there; it will be available for the skin; and if there is the property of rūpām or ākāra; eyes can see; śabda sparśa rūpa rasa; if rasa guṇa taste is there, it will be accessible to the organ of tongue and if there is any fragrance, smell to the higher Lord, you can feel the fragrance wafting, coming from the Lord. By using the word avyaktam; Krishna says the higher nature of the God, is beyond all the properties; śabda sparśa, rūpa, rasa, gandha rahitam. But for our simple understanding, we will present formless.

Then the second feature of the higher nature or Brahman that Krishna highlighted in the fourth verse is tatam; tatam means sarvagatam; tan means to pervade or spread; tatam is the past participle form of that; it is pervaded all over, sarva gatam, which means it does not have any spacial limitation which is a natural consequence of avyaktam; because in the previous description Krishna had said that the higher nature does not have a form; if there is no form; it means there is no boundary. To have a form is to have a boundary; because the form is determined by what? the boundaries only. Whether this hall is a square or a rectangle; how do you decide; whether a square or rectangle; immediately you will look at the boundaries of the hall, because the boundaries determine what form is; since Bhagavān is formless; it means Bhagavān is boundless; and therefore Bhagavān is all pervading.

Therefore if somebody asks, is the Lord in Vaikunta or kailasa; what should be our answer; what should be answer; you can certainly say Lord is in vaikunta; but if you stop with that, it will be a wrong statement; because if you say Lord is in vaikunta; you are automatically excluding the bhūlōka. Therefore you have to refine that statement. You cannot say Lord is not in Vaikunta; that is also wrong; what should you say; Lord is in Vaikunta also. Add an expression "also", which means Lord is everywhere and therefore Lord is here and now you need not travel to reach the Lord. You need not travel to merge with the Lord, if at all there is a merger, it is only the wisdom that the Lord is never away from me. So in Vēdānta, merger is the wisdom that the Lord is never away. Dropping the notion of division is merger.

Why, because Lord is tatam; tatam means vyāptam. This is the second feature we saw.

And the third feature that Krishna says here is मत्स्थानि सर्वभूतानि न चाहं तेष्ववस्थितः matsthāni sarvabhūtāni na cāhaṃ tēṣvavasthitaḥ; the whole world is resting in Me. sarvabhūtāni; all the things and beings, they are all matsthāni; they are resting in Me; I am Visvādhāraḥ; That is why शान्ताकारं भुजगशयनं पद्मनाभं सुरेशं विश्वाधारं गगनसदृशं śāntākāraṃ bhujagaśayanam padmanābham surēśam viśvādhāraṃ gaganasadṛśam; in one ślōka itself you can see: bhujaga śayanam when you say: Lord is located in a place, bhujaga śayanam. Dayananda Swami says, the first spring cot in the world; coiled serpent is what: spring cot; so you have located the Lord in a particular place; that bhujaga is called is milky ocean that is for the beginner student; LKG students; for the advanced student, the second line gives a description, Visvādhāram; you see the reverse, previously we said; snake is the ādhāra for the Lord; bhujaga śayanam; means the Lord is lying on the snake; snake is the ādhāra, the support in the first line; in the second line it says, Visvādhāram; in fact a snake does not support the Lord; the truth is that the Lord is not supporting the snake alone; the Lord is supporting the whole creation. And therefore where is the Lord; gaganasadṛśam; he must be all pervading; that is beautifully presented here; matsthāni sarvabhūtāni; I am the supporter of the universe.

At the same time; na cāhaṃ tēṣvavasthitaḥ; I am not supported by the world; I am ever the supporter; I am never the supported; so I am supportless supporter of the whole universe; therefore the third feature of the higher nature of God is jagat ādhāra or jagat adhiṣṭānam; what are the previous two things; the Lord is formless; No.1; Lord is all-pervading No.2. Lord is the support of all. This is the third feature of Brahman.

न च मत्स्थानि भूतानि पश्य मे योगमैश्वरम् ।

भूतभृन्न च भूतस्थो ममात्मा भूतभावनः ॥ ९.५ ॥

na ca matsthāni bhūtāni paśya mē yōgamaiśvaram |

bhūtabhṛnna ca bhūtasthō mama"tmā bhūtabhāvanaḥ || 9.5 ||

च ca in fact भूतानि bhūtāni all beings न मत्स्थानि na matsthāni are not in Me
पश्य paśya see मे एश्वरं योगम् me eśvaraṃ yōgam My divine Yōga मम आत्मा mama ātmā I myself भूतभावनः bhūtabhāvanaḥ am the creator of the beings, च भूतभृत् ca bhūtabhṛt and the sustainer of the beings, न भूतस्थः na
bhūtasthaḥ but (I am) not in the beings.

5. In fact, the beings are not in Me. See My divine yōga. I, Myself am the creator of the beings and the sustainer of the beings; but (I am) not in the beings.

Krishna says here, भूतानि न मत्स्थानि bhūtāni na matsthāni. In fact the world or the beings do not rest in Me. So the beings do not rest in me; they are not in Me at all; so this is one of the problematic lines here; because Krishna is straightaway contradicting what He said in the previous verse. What did He say in the previous verse? You do not have sufficient time for forgetting; just now I told you. So if there is a contradiction between two chapters, you may not feel; because when you study the first chapter, you do not know second; and when you study the second, generally first is forgotten, therefore no contradiction is felt. In fact, Gītā has several such seeming contradictory lines; but this is the most unique seeming contradiction because, they are placed very close; in the previous slōkā, not even first line, second line, even that much time is not given, in the previous slōkā second line Krishna said: All beings are in Me. In this slōkā first line He says: all beings are not in Me. How do you account for this? So this is a big problem for all the commentators who analyse the Gītā; and several people try to explain this in several ways; you cannot say Krishna is contracting; that means Krishna will become a bad teacher; a thinking person will not do contradiction. Therefore Śankarācārya beautifully resolves the contradiction. Suppose you say there is a thing existent; so X is existent there; and in the next moment he says X is not existent there; both are statements coming from the intelligent person, therefore you have to accommodate both statements; you cannot reject one and accept the other; because both are coming from the Lord himself. Śankarācārya says only one way; what is these two statements. X is existent also must be validated. X is non-existent also must be validated. How do you validate both? Śankarācārya says X is seemingly existent. So X is seemingly existent.

That means what: from one angle it is existent; because for appearance, it is very much there; and therefore you have to accept the existence but on closer enquiry, you find that it has got only seeming existence; and therefore you say it is non-existent; therefore anything; apparently existent; or anything seemingly existent; will come under this in-between category. And what do you mean by in-between category; from one angle it seems to exist; from another angle, it is really non-existent.

And do we have such cases; you have plenty; So give me one example; you can give several example; one example is our own dream experience; If somebody asks, dream is existent or non-existent, you will have to give the answer; it is existent first; why, because you have experienced the dream intimately. And at the time of the experience of the dream it was very very tangbily, frighteningly, nightmarishly real. And that is why you go to bed also after doing the prayer; what prayer; dussvapna, dusśakuna, etc. we have wonderful prayers; because when you have nightmarish dream; it is capable of frightening you. Therefore it is there or not; it is there enough to frighten you; and especially when you are actually in dream. So from dreamer's angle, it is existent; but when you wake up and start looking at the dream, from a higher standpoint; who is the higher one, the waker; from dreamer standpoint, it is frighteningly real; or happily real; (let good be there) and when you wake up to your real nature; you know that whatever you dreamt did not really exist at all; there was no object other than your own thought; so the tiger you dreamt in dream is nothing but a thought in your mind; there was no external object; and therefore dream is there or not; from dreamer's angle, it is there; from waker's angle, it is not there; from a lower order of reality, it is there; from a higher order of reality, it is not there; and this unique thing is called in Vēdānta, mithya; mithya means experientially available, but factually non-existent. Anything experientially available, apparently available; capable of invoking responses from you; but at the time, factually on waking from a higher angle, it is not there; such a thing is called seemingly existent; in Vēdānta, it is defined as सद् असद्भ्यम् अनिर्वचनीयम् sad asadbhyam anirvacanīyam. You cannot say it is there; you cannot say it is not there also; you cannot say it is not there because it frightens you; you cannot say it is, because when you wake up, it is not seen. Otherwise all the lottery you won; or the kon banega you won; in dream; that money will be available for you on waking it does not give you benefit; bank balance remain the same; but in dream it gave you enough happiness.

Therefore that which has got an existence of a lower order of reality; is called mithya. Therefore by accepting the universe and rejecting the universe, Krishna is pointing out that world does exist, but it has got a lower order of reality; from this body standpoint, the world is existent, but from Brahman's standpoint, the world is non-existent; and this is called mithya jagat; and who is the Lord or Brahman? Brahman is the support of this mithya jagat; and therefore Brahman or the higher nature of God is called mithya jagat adhiṣṭānam; Do you feel familiar; mithya jagat adhiṣṭānam; so in Lalitha Sahasranama, one of the nama is mithya jagat adhiṣṭānaḥ; mithya does not mean it is not there; mithya does not mean it is there; mithya means it is இருந்தும் கெட்டான் anirvacanīyam.

So therefore Krishna says न च मत्स्थानि भूतानि पश्य मे योगमैश्वरम् na ca matsthāni bhūtāni paśya mē yōgamaiśvaram; may you appreciate my higher yōga. And what is my higher yōga; my higher nature. In Vēdānta, the higher order of reality is called परमार्थिक सत्यम् parāmārthika satyam; the worldly order of reality is called व्यावहारिक सत्यम् vyāvahārika satyam; empirical reality is non-existent from the standpoint of the absolute reality; this is Vēdānta; empirical reality is not non-existent from the standpoint of absolute reality; empirical reality is existent from the standpoint of the ordinary worldly perception.

And therefore this is My higher nature; may you recognise Brahma satyam; jagan mithya; Vēdāntic essence Krishna gives here. Not only that; this is the third feature; I am formless; I am all pervading; I am the substratum of the mithya universe.

Then what is the fourth feature: Krishna says: ममात्मा भूतभावनः भूतभृन्न mama ātmā bhūtabhāvanaḥ bhūtabhṛn; I am the sṛiṣṭi, stiti, laya kāraṇam of this entire universe; such as the waker is the sṛiṣṭi, stiti, laya kāraṇam of the dream world; the dream world comes out of me; and the irony is I create the dream world and who is frightened; and I myself get frightened; I saw the hollow man; you know the movie: I did not see; and the hollow man is imprinted in the mind and in the dream from the hollow of the head; hollow man comes and frightens me and it becomes my Frankenstein.

And then when I wake up what happens to the dream world, where does it go; does the tiger run away to the forest; the entire dream world is resolved into the waker. In the same way, Krishna says, this universe is like a dream from the stand point of Brahman; or the higher nature of God; and from that Lord, the universe like dream; exist like dream; and resolves like dream. Therefore mama atma; atma means higher nature; parā prakṛtihi is bhūtabhāvanaḥ; bhāvanaḥ is sṛisti kāraṇam; bhāvayathi, udpadayathi iti bhāvanaḥ; bhūta means what; the entire creation. So I am the sṛisti kartha. And not only that, bhūtabhṛt; bhṛt means the stiti kartha. Just as the waker is the supporter of the dream world. You cannot say, let the dream world continue, I will go to the office and come back and continue the dream. No once you wake up, the dream world cannot be sustained. Therefore you project; you support; similarly Brahman projects, Brahman supports:

yatovā imāni bhūtāni jāyantē, yēna jātāni jīvanti, yat prayānabhiḥśam viśantī; tat vijijñāsastvā; tat brahmeti |

That Upāniṣadic idea is revealed; I am the stiti kāraṇam; bootha brut is equal to sthithi kāraṇam. Then you have to supply the third one; not only I am the shristi kāraṇam and the sthithi kāraṇam; I am also the laya kāraṇam; I swallow the whole universe, including time and space.

यस्य ब्रह्म च क्षत्रं च उभे भवत ओदनः ।

मृत्युर्यस्योपसेचनं क इत्था वेद यत्र सः ॥ २५॥

yasya brahma ca kṣatram ca ubhē bhavata oḍanaḥ |
mṛtyuryasyōpasēcanaṁ ka itthā vēda yatra saḥ || 25||

Kathōpaniṣad Part I, Canto II, Mantra 25

We saw in Kathōpaniṣad; I swallow everything; including time and space; that is why the Lord is beyond time and space. If the Lord is within time and space, Lord cannot swallow the time. Time would have swallowed the Lord. Now Lord can swallow time, because Lord is beyond time therefore I am laya kāraṇam cha; at the same time, na bhūtasthaḥ; I am the supporter of the creation; But I am not supported by the creation; na cha bhūtasthaḥ; I do not depend on the world; that means the world cannot exist without me; and I cannot (you cannot say) I can exist without the world.

That is the definition of the satyam. Satyam can exist without mithya; mithya cannot exist without satyam. Dream cannot exist without waker suppose you say; waker cannot exist without dream; all the time you will be dreaming; What will happen to me; you will be all be dreaming and in your dream world. So it will be pitiable condition for me. You exist without dream; but dream cannot exist without you. Lord can exist without the world; World cannot exist without the Lord. This is called सत्य-मित्य संभन्दः; अधिष्ठान-अध्यास संभन्दः satya-mitya sambhandaḥ; adhiṣṭāna-adhyāsa sambhandaḥ in the Upāniṣadic literature.

6. Just as the great, all-pervading wind is ever present in space, in the same manner, all beings are in Me. - thus you understand.

So in this Krishna introduces the fifth feature of the Lord or Brahman and the fifth feature introduced here is asaṅgatvam. Unsullied nature, untainted nature. So the idea is; in the previous verse Krishna has said I support the whole universe: the universe is resting in me. So naturally one will wonder, if the Lord is associated with the universe and the universe is upon the Lord; whatever impurities and defects are there in the world, it may affect the Lord. Suppose a dirty object is kept on your lap; you have got a fresh new dress. Will you like to keep it; you wouldn't. Because if your dress is going to support an impure object, the impure object will sully you. So naturally we will have a doubt, Bhagavān is holding the entire creation; which is full of all problems. So many people are there; with puṇyam pāpam and all those things; will it not affect the poor Lord. Krishna says; that is not the case; I accommodate everything, but I am not tainted by anything. This nature is called asangatvam; And what is the example, Krishna gives the example of ākaśa; it is a beautiful example; ākaśa or space is the nearest example for Brahman.

Space also is formless; the real Īśvara is also formless; space is also all-pervading; by saying 'real' what I mean is; the higher nature of Lord is also all-pervading; space accommodates everything; everything is in space. Similarly the Lord accommodates everything. Fourthly, even though space accommodates everything, space is not burned by fire, wet by water; acchēdyō'yamadāhyō'yamaklēdyō'śōṣya ēva ca; you cannot cut space, you cannot burn space, even though fire is in space. So this nature of space is called asaṅgatvam. Similarly, the Lord accommodates everything including all akramams that are going in the world; but Lord is not tainted by kramam and akramam. That is what we saw in Kathopaniṣad; अन्यत्र धर्मादन्यत्राधर्मा-दन्यत्रास्मात्कृताकृतात् । anyatra dharmādanyatrādharmā-danyatrāsmātkṛtākṛtāt । (Part I. Canto II. 14.)

So the goodness of the world also does not get associated with the Lord, the badness of the world also. Therefore the Lord is good or bad? what is the answer we should give. Normally we tend to give the answer the Lord is good; but Krishna here says, the real God is beyond good and bad; because good and bad belongs to the relative empirical world, in which pairs of opposites are there; if Lord comes within the pairs of opposites, Lord will again be within the empirical world of time and space. And therefore here Krishna says I am neither beautiful nor ugly; neither good or bad; neither puṇyavān or pāpavān; who am I; beyond dvandāthitham gagansadruśam.

And therefore, He gives the ākaśa example; vayuhu ākaśa stithaḥ; the space accommodates vayu tatvam or wind; of course the spaces accommodates everything; but Krishna takes wind; वायुः vāyuh and what type of vāyuh; in some places vayu is fragrant vayu, coming from some place where agarbathi is kept and then there is vayu coming from coovam river; wafting. So it is durganda vāyuh; suganda vāyuh; this is the nature of vāyuh; ākaśa accommodates suganda vāyuh; as well as durganda vāyuh; foul smelling, as well as fragrances; but ākaśa does not become either suganda or durganda. If ākaśa becomes suganda or durganda; whenever you come to that place, you will get; it is not; both of them belong to vāyuh; but not to ākaśa; therefore He says: vāyuh ākaśasthithaha; vāyuh is located in space; nityam always;

And not only that सर्वत्रगः वायुः sarvatragaḥ vāyuḥ moves everywhere; महान् mahān being vast or great; But in spite of vāyuḥ moving with good and bad smell; ākaśa is asangaḥ;

तथा Tathā; in the same way; सर्वाणि भूतानि मतस्थानि sarvāṇi bhūtāni matasthāni; good people also are there; bad people also are there; good smells; bad smells; everything; but I am not affected; मत्स्थानीत्युपधारय matsthānītyupadhāraya; may you ascertain this; may you be convinced of this.

7. Oh! Arjuna, at the end of each cycle, all beings resolve into My Prakṛti. Again, at the beginning of the (next) cycle, I create them.

In the fifth verse, Krishna had pointed out that the Lord or He is sṛiṣṭi stiti laya kāraṇam of this entire universe. That is given further explanation in these two verses. So seven and eight is the explanation of jagat kāraṇtvam of Brahman; how does the Lord create? So here Krishna says, before creation of this universe, the universe was already existent in me, in unmanifest form; or potential form; because nothing can be newly created. According to the law of conservation of matter and energy; nothing can be newly created; even an ounce of matter cannot be created by anyone including God. Even though God is omnipotent; even an ounce of matter cannot be created. Therefore God says, I do not create a world at all; the world was already existent in me; but only difference is what; not in this unfolded manner. The world was existent in seed form; potential form; unmanifest form, just as a huge tree, existing within a seed; or as a baby exists in the womb of the mother. So when a look up at a grown up child; and the mother says. This is my son; that fellow is one foot above the mother. And then you wonder; how can such a big person be in the stomach of the mother; even though he is so big now; previously he was a tiny fetus, who was existing in unmanifest form. So in the DNA, the information contained in the smallest DNA is so much, that 300 books of information can be extracted out of it; because the child's or the man's all the features must be there encoded. If your hair has to turn grey at the 43rd year, remember it is already coded in your DNA. That is why genetic engineering is becoming so important; because many of the diseases are already there in genetics; but we do not know. That is why for every mother and father it is the nightmare, the child should grow without any defect; we do not know whether the ears are functioning; the eyes are functioning; above all whether brain is functioning; after 5 years, after 7 years; after 10 years, so many things come up. Why we do not know; not because they are absent; they are already there in the genetics; but in what form; avyaktha rupēṇa. Similarly Krishna says all the details of this universe is already coded in me; in ayaktha rupām; that unmanifest universe is called prakṛti; or māya; world in seed form; matter in potential form. You may call it energy; we do not mind; and this unmanifest universe evolves into manifestation. We have seen this in previous chapters also; in the second chapter;

avyaktanidhanānyēva tatra kā paridēvanā (2.28);

in the 8th chapter;

avyaktād-vyaktayaḥ sarvāḥ prabhavantyaharāgamē,
rātryāgamē pralīyantē tatraivāvyaktasamjñakē (8.18);

the world comes to manifestation and again it goes back to unmanifestation; like the lub-tub of the heart; the creation also expansion contraction; unfoldment and foldment.

And if you wonder whether it is possible; you can extend it to your dream world. Now your dream of tonight, tonight you are going to get some dream; I hope that you are not already in; Ok; tonight you are going to get some dream; Remember everybody gets dream; there are some people who say I do not get dream; it is another dream!. OK. Everybody gets dream; some people recognise. Some people do not recognise. it is scientifically proved, dream is universal; Now what is the dream; all the dream that you have are nothing but the impressions that you will have gathered from your observation and experience; You can never dream what you have not experienced; you can have a peculiar permutation combination. So the man-body and buffalo-head; the combination will be mind and brain might do; but you have experienced a buffalo; you have experienced a man; and if at all you say no no no; I saw something which I have never experienced; then I say you have forgotten it. And still if you claim; no no no; I have never experienced; I am damn sure; I say that you have experienced in your previous janma; because might continue from previous janma; therefore today's dream is already in the waker, in what form; in potential form. Today's dream of yours is already in your mind in potential form; already we VCR has worked; VCR means video cassette recorder; You have recorded in your mental tape, and the VCR operation will stop, the moment you go to bed. And VCR operation will be replaced by VCP. And what will be played; whatever has been recorded. Therefore what I want to say is your dream is potentially there in you, the waker. Similarly the dream like world is in Brahman; in unmanifest form; which is called māya or prakṛti.

And Krishna says in my presence of Brahman, the whole creation rises and resolves. Look at the ślōkā; He says; Hey Kounteya; hey Arjuna, are you awake; so he is addressing to see whether he is awake or slept!! see because for Krishna there is only one student in front. Now here some are sleeping, I do not have to bother; at least I hope few are listening; but one Arjuna sleeps, hundred percent students sleep. And therefore Krishna has to of and on address Arjuna and see whether Arjuna is sleeping; so Hey Kounteya, Arjuna, सर्वभूतानि प्रकृतिं यान्ति sarvabhūtāni prakṛtiṃ yānti; all the beings come back to me alone; in what form; prakṛti form; unmanifest form; otherwise called māya form; so prakṛtiṃ yānti māmikām; māmikām; not māmi; māmika is the Sanskrit word; belonging to Me; that is the prakṛti which is dependent on Me, just as the manifest world is dependent on Me; the unmanifest prakṛti is also dependent on Me. Just as the manifest dream is dependent on the waker; similarly the unmanifest dream vāsanās; the imprint, vāsanās or saṁskāras are also dependent on the waker. So the imprint becomes dream; dream again becomes the vāsanā; I am the substratum for both. Similarly, Krishna says the world resolves into prakṛti; which is dependent on Me; māmikām.

And when does this happen; do not get frightened; not in the near future; kalpa कल्पक्षये kalpakṣayē; at the end of a kalpa; a Brahmāji's day, which is 2000 catur yugas; So therefore at the end of a kalpa, kalpa is the name of a duration of a vast time. So when we talk about creation, the dimensions or measurements will be very big; I do not know whether you read a news-item today: hair miss; so a meteor went very close to earth; that you think that it was on the earth; very close means what; only 8 lakhs kilometers near; But from those people; that measurements, it is close; and if it had hit any of the city, city would be flat; you know how our, you know, life is dangling and 100s of meteors are going all the time. So in their cross fire; like militants cross fire; children die; some people die; Similarly meteor tries cross fire; a few cities can disappear; it would be equal to so many Hiroshima like bomb. Similarly here also, kalpakṣayē is not going to be near future; then they all resolve into Me and kalpādau, at the beginning of the next Kalpa; creation never ends permanently; There is no permanent end for the creation; it is only temporary rest for the creation; again it will come; When कल्पादौ kalpādau; when Brahmaji gets up after 1000 chatur yugas; when Brahmāji gets up again the creation comes; अहं विसृजामि aham visrjāmi.

prakṛtiṃ svāmavaṣṭabhya visrjāmi punaḥ punaḥ |

अवष्टभ्य avaṣṭabhya resorting to स्वां प्रकृतिम् svām prakṛtim My prakṛti विसृजामि visrjāmi I create पुनः पुनः punaḥ punaḥ again and again, इमं कृत्स्नं भूतग्रामम् imaṃ kṛtsanaṃ bhutagrāmam this entire multitude of beings, अवशम् avaśam which is helpless वशात् प्रकृतेः vāśāt prakṛteḥ being under the control of prakṛti.

8. Resorting to My prakṛti, I create again and again this entire multitude of beings which is helpless, being under the control of Prakṛti.

So this verse is also explanation of the jagat kāraṇatvam, which was given in the fifth verse. So the topic is the same; here He says; अहं पुनः पुनः विसृजामि aham punaḥ punaḥ visrjāmi. In a cyclic process I repeatedly create this world; so that is why very important. In Vēdānta, creation is a cyclic process; it is not a linear process. If you look at the creation, in a linear fashion; what do you mean linear fashion; like a line, having a beginning and having an end; you will have endless logical problem; which we will study in Māndukya kārika. You will have endless logical problems; if you accept a linear creation; it is not scientifically explainable also; and therefore in Vēdānta we say creation is a eternal cycle; manifest and unmanifest, manifest unmanifest and cycle does not have a beginning or end; a line has a beginning and end point, a circle does not have a beginning or end; and therefore never ask the question; when did the creation begin; it is an illogical question and therefore we cannot be a give a logical answer.

Like they say the question; if somebody asked a question; it seems; if a unstoppable bullet hits an impenetrable wall; what will happen; if an unstoppable bullet hits an impenetrable wall, what will happen; you can never give an answer, the question is wrong, because if the bullet is unstoppable, the wall cannot be impenetrable; the wall will be penetrated; and if the wall is impenetrable, the bullet cannot be unstoppable; it is an illogical question; For an illogical question, there cannot be a logical answer. Therefore the question; when did the creation originate, is illogical and therefore Krishna says, it has been on and on and on and on and on; I can go until the end of the class; on and on; so aham punaḥ punaḥ visrjāmi;

But if I have to create; I have to make use of what: prakṛtim svam avashtabhaya; with the help of prakṛti; which is the potential universe; just as without the saṁskāra or vāsanās, I cannot dream. For dream to come I require what; some imprint in the mind is required. Similarly Brahman cannot create; unless the creation is there in potential form; that potential form is called prakṛti.

And therefore taking resort to prakṛti; or māya, I create what: इमं कृत्सनं भुतग्रामम् imaṁ kṛtsanaṁ bhutagrāmam; this entire multitude of things and beings; grāmam means multitude, not village here; grāma means multitude; village is called grāma means because there is multitude of houses; Otherwise in sanskrit, it is called grāma because it is multitude of anything. So here bhutagrāmam kṛtsanaṁ, in its entirety; I create again and again;

And what type of things and beings they are; अवशम् avaśam; helpless beings; so I cannot stop it; So even that is why committing suicide is not a solution; committing suicide will not put an end; in fact in the next janma, there will be still worse problem; because committing suicide itself is a pāpam; therefore one more paapa is created; next janma more suffering. Nobody can stop this process. One can only get out of this process which is called moksha. It is like the big wheel; giant wheel; it is switched on; it will go on and on; you cannot stop the giant wheel; but you can jump out of it; that is called mōkṣa. There is no switch off; no off switch; it will be going on; only you jump out. How? By attending the class.

Om

From the 4th verse, of the 9th chapter, that we are seeing now, Lord Krishna is dealing with the important topic of Īśvara svarūpam; the nature of God. And this topic is discussed up to verse No.10, and Īśvara svarūpam has already been introduced in the seventh chapter, wherein we found that the Lord has a higher nature which is called parā prakṛti or Brahman, and the Lord has a lower nature which is called aparā prakṛti or māya. And of this the Brahma svarūpam is the real nature of God; and that Brahma svarūpam is being described in all these verses. And that is why we can take this portion as the essence of all the Upaniṣads.

And we have already seen some of the features of the higher nature of God; first one that was pointed out was avyakthaḥ Īśvaraḥ; the Lord in His real nature is not available for any sense organs: He is suprasensory, which means the Lord is free from the five-fold properties of sabda, sparsa, rupā, rasa and gandha and if we experience the Lord, with any of these properties; then it may be the Lord, but it is not the higher nature of Lord. We have experienced the lower nature; in fact, any experienced Lord is of the lower nature.

So avyaktatvam is the first feature; and the second one we saw is sarvagatatvam; since the Lord does not have form, the Lord does not have boundaries or limits and therefore the Lord has to be all pervading; sarva gatatvam is the second feature we saw; in the fourth verse. Then Krishna pointed out Lord in his higher nature is the support or the substratum of the entire visible universe, the material universe, jagat adhiṣṭānatvam. It is a very important feature because the higher nature of God is said to be consciousness; the world is material in nature; therefore when I say God the higher nature is substratum of the world; what I indirectly mean is consciousness is the substratum of matter. Consciousness is the stuff of matter; consciousness is the essence of matter; which means there cannot be matter without consciousness. Normally we think there cannot be consciousness without matter. But here Krishna says it is the other way round, consciousness can exist independent of matter, matter cannot exist independent of consciousness; that means consciousness is satyam; matter is mithya; Therefore the Lord is mithya jagat adhiṣṭāna svarūpa; this is the third feature we saw.

Then the fourth feature that we saw is asaṅgatvam; even though the Lord is the substratum sustaining the whole creation; the Lord is not tainted by the various impurities of the creation; the Lord is unsullied. In Tamil we have a beautiful expression; மாசிலாமணி Masillamani; some people have the name also; What is masilamani; மாசு இல்லா மணி; masu illa mani; crystal. மாசு masu means impurity; இல்லா illa means what; இல்லாத illada; mani. Lord is like the crystal which is never tainted by any impurity; śudda spatika saṅgāśam; sudda spatika saṅgāśam is the first name of the Lord given in the Sri Rudra dhyāna slōkā; so therefore the Lord is assaṅgaha; unsullied and unsulliable; is the fourth feature; asaṅgatvam;

Then the fifth feature that we saw was jagat sṛiṣṭi stiti laya kāraṇam; Lord the higher nature of consciousness is the fundamental cause or source out of which the whole creation arises; the whole creation rests; and the whole creation resolves; jagat sṛiṣṭi stiti laya kāraṇam. In fact this is nothing but parāphrasing the well known Upaniṣad mantra;

यतोवा इमानि भूतानि जायन्ते, येन जातानि जीवन्ति, यत् प्रयानभिः विशन्ति; तत् विजिज्ञासस्त्वा; तत् ब्रह्मेति ।
yatovā imāni bhūtāni jāyantē, yēna jātāni jīvanti, yat prayānabhiṣam viśanti; tat vijijñāstsvā; tat brahmeti |

That definition Krishna presented; this is the fifth feature.

And then the Lord gave some details about the creation. How does the creation come and how does it resolves. And what does He say; the creation is not freshly produced by Me; because of the Law of conservation of matter and energy; nothing can be newly created by anyone; even by God. Therefore God says: I do not produce fresh matter; the material universe was already there in Me in my higher nature; in potential form; and that potential form alone is called the māya sakthi or the lower prakṛti of the Lord. So the higher nature includes the lower nature of matter in potential form. And matter in potential form is called here prakṛti or māya; therefore the world existed in the form of māya in Me; and this māya alone evolves into this creation; and dances about for some time; and again this prapancha gets resolved into māya form; So māya becomes prapañcha, prapañcha becomes māya; māya is unmanifest matter; prapañcham is manifest matter. This unmanifest matter becomes manifest matter; which is called sṛṣṭi and manifest matter again comes back to unmanifest matter, which is called layam.

What about God; He is neither unmanifest matter, nor manifest matter; Lord is the consciousness which supports the whole phenomenon of the material evolution; and devolution; or involution; if we want;

And if you ask when did the whole thing begin. Krishna says do not ask that question, because you cannot talk about the beginning because it is a cyclic process; the unmanifest becoming manifest and manifest becoming unmanifest. And therefore He said; which we saw in the last class; verse No.8, prakṛtiṃ svāmavaṣṭabhya visrjāmi punaḥ punaḥ. The word punaḥ punaḥ is a significant word, meaning again and again. And when you repeat the word again and again, it means what; because you cannot go on telling; Krishna says it twice. And in Sanskrit grammar, it is meepsa; means you use the expression twice; and when you use the expression twice, it refers to eternity. Therefore punaḥ punaḥ means punah punah punaḥ punaḥ. So anādihi anathaḥ.

In fact this process does not happen in time; but the time itself happens within this process; so that is why we are not able to talk about the concept of time beyond or before the big bang. We cannot talk about time; you cannot talk about space; you cannot talk about even causality. Therefore this phenomenon is not in time; but time itself if within this phenomenon; मायाकल्पित देशकालकलना वैचित्र्यचित्रिकृतम् māyākalpita dēśakālakalanā vaicitryacitrīkṛtam. Therefore Krishna said punaḥ punaḥ; this happens; Up to this we saw in the last class.

न च मां तानि कर्माणि निबध्नन्ति धनञ्जय ।

उदासीनवदासीनमसक्तं तेषु कर्मसु ॥ ९.९ ॥

na ca māṃ tāni karmāṇi nibadhnanti dhanañjaya |

udāsīnavadāsīnamasaktaṃ tēṣu karmasu || 9.9 ||

धनञ्जय dhanañjaya Oh ! Arjuna च ca however तानि कर्माणि tāni karmāṇi those actions, न निबध्नन्ति na nibadhnanti do not bind माम् mām Me असक्तम् asaktam who am uninvolved तेषु कर्मसु teṣu karmasu in those actions आसीनम् āsīnam and who remain उदासीनवत् udāsīnavat like an indifferent person.

9. Oh ! Arjuna, However, those actions do not bind Me who am uninvolved in those actions and who remain like an indifferent person.

So in this Krishna talks about the final feature of Īśvara; the 6th description of Īśvara He gives; by way of answering a possible doubt. When the Lord says I am the creator of the universe, the Lord seems to perform an action. And what is that action; the very production of the universe itself seems to be an action; And if Lord is sṛiṣṭi kartā, Lord will have karthṛthva and if Lord is a karta; the Lord will have to become what a boktā; the enjoyer of the result of action; A doer will have to become an enjoyer also. As you do, so you become; and Lord must be in a bigger trouble because, because of the creation of the universe alone, many living beings are suffering. If there was only pralayam all the time; if this world, these people, all these things were not there; we will not have any problem at all to face; but many people are facing varieties of problems all because of what; ஏன் படைத்தான் ēṇ paṭaittāṇ; why did he create.

So whenever you have a serious problem; you ask the question; why did the Lord create; could he not kept quiet saying Śiva Śiva; he could not remained quiet and he creates with a lot of problems including mosquito and He creates bodies for us; and then, he seems to enjoy our suffering; the Lord seems to be sadistic Lord; and if Lord is doing such an action; he will have to pay the price also. So this doubt may come for which Krishna gives the answer; I am akartā and aboktā; I am neither the creator; nor the destroyer and therefore you cannot attribute any action or result to me.

And therefore he says; हे धनञ्जय hē dhanañjaya; hey Arjuna; तानि कर्माणि माम् न निबध्नन्ति tāni karmāṇi mām na nibadhnanti; all those actions: sṛiṣṭi, stiti laya karmāṇi; which including people, death also; is the job of the Lord; which gives pain to so many people; it is the job of the Lord alone; So therefore sṛiṣṭi kartha; sthithikartha; laya kartha, even though actions are taking place, those karmas do not bind me at all. Now the question is what is the secret. Lord seems to do everything; at the same time, the karmas do not accrue to him; how does he manage; he does not give up the karma. But at the same time he continues the karma, but he is not bound by the karma.

What is the secret; he gives the secret here; तेषु कर्मसु असक्तम् teṣu karmasu asaktam; I am not identified with, attached to, involved in those karmas. karthṛthva abhimāna is not there. And therefore if I have to get out of the shackles of karma; I need not stop the actions; actions can continue but what is to be handled; the abhimāna, ahamkāra-mamakāra abhimāna alone. And therefore teṣu karmasu asaktam. And then how do I remain; उदासीनवत् आसीनम् udāsīnavat āsīnam; I am as though an indifferent person; I am an uninvolved person; I am detached; and from this Krishna is giving the clue for us also. We also can continue to be involved in action; as said in the fifth chapter,

paśyañśr̥ṅvanspṛṣañjighrannaśnaṅgacchansvapanśvasan||5.8||

Therefore abhimāna tyāga is the secret of akartṛtvam and abhokṛtvam; not karma renunciation; karma cannot be renounced; karma need not be renounced. Karmani abhimāna alone has to be renounced. And whoever has done that, he is free from karma phalam also.

मयाध्यक्षेण प्रकृतिः सूयते सचराचरम् । हेतुनानेन कौन्तेय जगद्विपरिवर्तते ॥ ९.१० ॥ mayā'dhyakṣēṇa prakṛtiḥ sūyatē sacarācaram |
hētunā'nēna kauntēya jagadviparivartatē || 9.10 ||

मया mayā because of Me अध्यक्षेण adhyakṣeṇa the presiding principle प्रकृतिः prakṛtiḥ prakṛti सूयते sūyate creates सचराचरम् sacarācaram the universe of things and beings, अनेन हेतुना anēna hētunā because of this reason जगत् jagat the Universe विपरिवर्तते viparivartate revolves कौन्तेय kaunteya Oh ! Arjuna.

Remaining detached, remaining without abhimāna is called sākṣi bhāvaḥ; and this sākṣi bhāvaḥ Krishna explains here; Hey Arjuna, I do not willfully do anything. In my presence, in the presence of the sakshi; māya or matter does its function. Therefore मया अध्यक्षेण mayā adhyakṣeṇa; because of the presence of Me as the presiding principle; exactly like the light that has pervaded this hall; the light illumines the hall. And the light helps in various actions that are taking place in the hall; but the light does not influence the type of action; in the presence of the light, actions take place; actions can be good action; actions can be bad action; goodness and badness of the action will not taint the light.

So if light is not involved; why can't we switch off the light; that is not possible; Light is required; but light will not be affected by the karma phalam of the actions taking place. This is called sākṣi bhāvaḥ. Therefore he says, in My presence. And when Krishna says in My presence, what is the meaning of mine, very careful, it does not refer to Krishna śarīram; Krishna śarīram is what lower nature; it is visible. So when Krishna says, in My presence, he refers to what; that all pervading consciousness, which is formless, which is untainted, that consciousness is here to as Me, in my presence, prakṛti, prakṛti means what; the basic matter called Māya; which was called aparā prakṛti in the 7th chapter.

So just as in the presence of electricity, every gadget will do its function; Electricity does not request the gadgets to do a particular function; electricity blesses the gadget; the gadgets will do what function; it is not the function as determined by the electricity; but the gadget does the function according to its nature; if it is the bulb, the function is what: illuminating. if it is mike, the functioning become amplification; if it is fan, the functioning becomes rotation; So according to the nature of the gadget, the functions will go on; electricity is only a sāmānya kāraṇam. Electricity does not will or wish a particular action;

Similarly when there is a sātvic brain or sātvic mind, it will do its function blessed by consciousness, a rājasic mind will do its function, blessed by consciousness, a tāmasic criminal mind will do the criminal action; the criminality is determined by the nature of the mind; the blame cannot go to what; the blame cannot go to the consciousness principle or God.

This is to be remembered because, people always ask; if God is in everyone; how come there are criminal thoughts in the people; God does not determine the nature of thought; God enlivens the instrument depending upon the nature of the instruments, the thoughts are generated accordingly; therefore he says, prakṛti; the basic matter evolves, सूयते sūyatē means produces, projects, evolves; into what: सचराचरम् जगत् sacarācaram jagat. So this whole universe consisting of the mobile and the immobile one, the moving and the stationary one. In short the entire creation of things and beings.

And therefore Hey Arjuna, हेतुना अनेन hētunā anēna; because of my sheer presence alone, the whole drama is going on; that is why if the light goes off; let us hope that it does not; the drama stops; even though the light does not play the role of a teacher; the light does not play the role of a student; light is not directly involved in the transaction; the presence of the light is required. Vidyāraṇyā Swami; a great Vēdāntic ācārya in Pañcadaśī; devotes an entire chapter to give this example, nātaka deepa prakaraṇa. So God is like the light; does not play any role in the transaction. But the presence of the Lord is required, like the presence of the light for the transaction to take place; and therefore anēna hētunā; in My presence; जगद्विपरिवर्तते jagadviparivartatē; the entire universe revolves; So that means everything is in motion; all the planets are in motion; the entire solar system is in motion; the entire milky way is in motion. In fact everything is in violent motion; all because of what; my presence.

Continuing.

अवजानन्ति मां मूढाः मानुषीं तनुमाश्रितम् ।

परं भावमजानन्तः मम भूतमहेश्वरम् ॥ ९.११ ॥

avajānanti māṃ mūḍhā mānuṣiṃ tanumāśritam |

parāṃ bhāvamajānantō mama bhūtamahēśvaram || 9.11 ||

अजानन्तः ajānantaḥ not knowing मम परं भावम् mama parāṃ bhāvam My higher nature भूतमहेश्वरम् bhūtamahēśvaram as the great Lord of all beings मूढाः mūḍhāḥ (those) deluded ones, अवजानन्ति avajānanti look down upon माम् mām Me आश्रितम् āśritam who have taken मानुषीं mānuṣiṃ तनुम् tanum a human form.

11. Not knowing My higher nature as the great Lord of all beings, (those) deluded ones look down upon Me who have taken a human form.

With the previous verse, Krishna concludes the description of the Īśvara svarūpam and in the conclusion, He highlights the fact, that Īśvara is akartā and abhoktā. And therefore we cannot blame the Lord for our problems; we cannot Lord is unjust; because nothing is happening according to the plan or will or wish of the God; God is an interfering presence.

Then why do we suffer? our fate; we have invited our own suffering, by being a kartā in the past; we are now bhoktā in the present. And therefore we should never blame the Lord; justice is taking place, why should I worship the Lord; many believers become non-believers when they suffer; and often the suffering the continues in spite of their prayers and they say Lord has not answered the prayer and therefore Lord is not there; and therefore tomorrow onwards, I will not do pūja.

One lady came and told; I through away all the books; I put in waste paper basket; did not give even to the paperwalla; even that much respect I did not want to give; I just put in waste paper basket; her daughter did not get married; Poor God; therefore I do not believe in God; What a terrible thing; God has to get her daughter married; He is sitting for that! So this is this all misconception; prayer can produce some puṇyam as a result of our action; but even if some puṇyam is produced by our prayer; if our pāpam is overwhelmingly higher than the prayer produced puṇyam; then what is going to overtake; pāpam will overtake; not that prayer goes waste; prayer has produced the puṇyam; but that produced puṇyam is not sufficient because prayer is 2-1/2 minutes; and that too thinking so many things and looking at different things in the world; So it is neither qualitatively nor quantitatively great; and I want in 1-1/2 minutes prayer; I want everything to come. Therefore, it is not all understanding the principle of prayer; and the role of prayer; it can neutralise. Only when the prayer produced puṇyam is more than the pāpam that I have; if prayer fails; what are we to understand; my pāpam is superior and therefore in today's tennis match, or cricket match, the pāpam won; So not knowing the principle of prayer; people blame. Krishna says I am akartā; abōktā.

Having given the description of the higher nature of God; up to verse No.10, now in the 11th verse, Krishna is changing the topic, and the topic is samsāra kāraṇam;

why do we have problems. Why do we have problems? Krishna wants to say that the problems are because we expect permanence from the impermanent; Wrong expectation No.1. We expect permanence from the impermanent. We expect security from the ever insecure. We expect pūrṇatvam; otherwise called ānanda from the finite; It is our wrong expectation which is the cause of problem. If a person wants security; if a person wants peace and happiness and security; he should go to some thing; which is permanent; which is pūrṇam; and what is that; the higher nature of God; So higher nature the formful or formless? the formless higher nature; Krishna says, nobody understands and comes to my higher nature; they are holding on to the lower finite perishable nature.

Therefore Krishna says the problem is with the people that is there confusion; and therefore He gets almost wild and He says Mūdāḥ; Mūdāḥ means what; confused people; ignorant people who are not able to differentiate nityam and anityam; nithya anithya vastu viveka rahitāḥ. That is how Śankarācārya begins his Bhaja Govindam;

भजगोविन्दं भजगोविन्दं
गोविन्दं भजमूढमते |
संप्राप्ते सन्निहिते काले
नहि नहि रक्षति डुकृञ्करणे ||१|| bhajagōvindaṁ bhajagōvindaṁ gōvindaṁ bhajamūḍhamatē |
saṁprāptē sannihitē kālē
nahi nahi rakṣati ḍukṛṅkaraṇē ||1||

So whatever you possess cannot help you for attaining permanence, because they themselves are perishable; amrutvasthu nasāsthi na vithēna. And you are going to see in Kaivalya Upaniṣad; न कर्मणा न प्रजया धनेन त्यागेनैके अमृतत्वमानशुः na karmaṇā na prajayā dhanēna tyāgēnaikē amṛtatvamānaśuḥ ||I. 2||. None of them can give peace and security; If you think they will give, you try; suffer and come back; we will wait; And therefore Krishna says मूढाः मम परं भावम् अजानन्तः mūḍhāḥ mama paraṁ bhāvam ajānantaḥ. They do not know my nirguṇa svarūpam; they do not know my formless svarūpam; so parām bhāvam means what; parā prakṛti, the higher chaitanya svarūpam; ajānantaḥ; they do not know.

Why they do not know; it is another thing people do not know; why they do not know; they do not know anything. Why should we particularly ask about parām bhāvam; we are born with ignorance alone; not only ignorance of the higher nature of God; we are born with the ignorance of English; we are born with the ignorance of Tamil; we are born with the ignorance of everything. In fact that is our capital with which we are born; what is maximum; ignorance. Ignorance we do not acquire; we find ourselves with ignorance. And as we grow; we go on removing one one ignorance, why putting forth effort to know.

So having ignorance is not sin; perpetuating ignorance is our problem. Similarly, the ignorance of the higher nature of God continues, because we never attempted to remove that ignorance. And how do we remove that ignorance; by gaining knowledge; you should know the nirguṇa svarūpam; just if you sit with closed eyes; you will get only sleep. You cannot know nirguṇa svarūpam by sitting idle; nirguṇa svarūpam you know by using the appropriate method: that alone again we saw yesterday; Vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsana; Vēdānta devotes to help us in gaining this knowledge; and to these people, Vēdānta means allergy and therefore this study is a waste of time, they do not know its value. And therefore they are ignorant of Brahman: brahma ajñāninaḥ. And since they do not know my higher nature; naturally, they are going to take my lower nature as the real God. And what is My lower nature; mānuṣiṃ tanumāśritam. My lower nature is my personal form; Krishna form; Rāma form; Venkatachalapathy form. Devi form; any form; Form means lower nature; because we have seen higher nature is avyaktham; beyond sense perception. Whatever is within sense perception is lower nature of God. And not only it is within sensory perception; it is also finite; limited. And not only it is limited, spacially, the form of God is limited even timewise; there is a date of birth, either Aṣṭami or navami and there is a date of svargārōhanam; if you come thereafter svargārōhanam; and so how can this be My higher nature; therefore He says; मानुषीं तनुमाश्रितम् mānuṣiṃ tanumāśritam; mūḍhāḥ; the ignorant people resort to or take to My human form; and taking the human form as the real form, avajānanthi; they are really degrading Me. thinking that they are glorifying Me.

Śankarācārya writes a parāpūja; a beautiful ślōkā; and he says Oh Lord in the name of śōdaśa upacāra, I am doing śōdaśa apacāra only. But I do out of ignorance; because when you are beginning the pūja, what is the first thing you do; you invite God;

āyātu varadā dēvi; (heard this somewhere?)

आयातु वरदा देवि अक्षरं ब्रह्मसंमितम् ! गायत्रिं छन्दसां मातेदं ब्रह्म जुषस्व नः ॥

āyātu varadā dēvi akṣaram brahmasammitam ! gāyatriṁ chandasāṁ mātēdaṁ brahma juṣasva naḥ ॥

āyathu; or āvāhayami; the āvāhanam means inviting the Lord from Lord's location to our idol; the very invitation indicates what; the Lord is there; He is not here; Śankarācārya says this is the first apacāram; and thereafter āsanam samarpayami; you want to give seat to the Lord, Śankarācārya asks do you want to give a 2x2 āsanam to the Lord; Lord is the āsanam on which whole creation is seated; aparācāra No.2; and thereafterwards: arḡyam samarpaymi; pādyaṁ samarpayami; washing the hands; washing the feet; washing the head (snānam, etc.). Śankarācārya says where are limbs for the Lord; the formless Lord cannot have any limbs at all; and not only limbs cannot be there; when you are giving for water for washing; what does it mean; what does it mean; when do you wash; when there is impurity; when Lord is nithya suddha svarūpaḥ; where is the question of cleaning; therefore the very attempt to cleaning, indirectly saying that; if I say: you all take bath and come near, it is like that; Do not worry, I will not say like that; it is an insult; thus, he says every upacāra is apacāra; it does not mean that you should stop all your poojas from tomorrow; because people are waiting for some excuse; Swamiji himself said that. Therefore it is not necessary now after; what we say is you start with saguṇa moorthy pūja, because Nirguṇa cannot be visualised by a beginner.

What Śankarācārya criticizes is; begin with personal God or formed God but we should not end with that; Saguṇa is the best beginning; but it cannot be the culmination; culmination should be in the nirguṇa; sakāram to nirākāram; saguṇam to nirguṇam; aparā to parā; achetanam to cētanam.

And Krishna says these people do not know that. Therefore in the name of glorifying, they are only degrading me; अवजानन्ति avajānanti; they are disrespecting me.

And as long as they do not know the higher nature; what will be the problem; they will not seek security and pūrṇatvam from the higher nature; which is the only source of security. Nirguṇa brahma is the only source of security; why, what is the logic behind it; anything other than nirguṇam Brahma is saguṇa māya; And anything that is within saguṇa māya is matter. And anything that is material is subject to fluctuation and you hold on to a fluctuating body; How long it will stand; And therefore you hold on to various people, hoping that they will be around; asti, jāyatē, vardhatē, vipariṇamatē, vinaśyati; and then we complain, he has left; he has left, etc.; does not Bhagavān has the eyes or ears,

vā ventru kūvī nāṅ olam iṭṭēne, kātil viḷavillayo.

Bhagavān says in Gītā I have said so many things; Did it not fall in your ears. I have said all these things in Gītā very clearly, you do not listen to my Gītā; and you want to listen to your crying; Is this not akramam; please understand; Do not hold to changing fluctuations situations; fluctuating objects, fluctuating people; means what dying, decaying, changing ones; What will happen if I hold on to that; you will suffer; remember, cardboard chair; the whole world is a cardboard chair; You can use it for every other purpose, except sitting. Similarly you can never lean on the world; and the samsāra is caused by the leaning on the changing. This is samsāra kāraṇam; therefore He says parāmbhavam ajānantaḥ. What is that parām bhāvam; मम भूतमहेश्वरम् mama bhūtamahēśvaram; which is the highest Lord. Lord means the substratum or the controller of all the beings. So that the Nirguṇa svarūpam; they do not know, they do not lean. So naturally what happens:

मोघाशा मोघकर्मणः मोघज्ञाना विचेतसः ।

राक्षसीमासुरीं चैव प्रकृतिं मोहिनीं श्रिता ॥ ९.१२ ॥

mōghāśā mōghakarmāṇō mōghajñānā vicētasah |

rākṣasīmāsuriṃ caiva prakṛtiṃ mōhiniṃ śritāḥ || 9.12 ||

विचेतसः vicetasah (These) indiscriminate ones मोघाशाः moghāśāḥ are full of vain hopes मोघकर्माणः moghakarmāṇah vain pursuits मोघज्ञानाः moghajñānāḥ and vain knowledge श्रिताः śritāḥ they take to राक्षसीम् rākṣasīm rajasic च एव आसुरीम् ca eva āsurim and tamasic, प्रकृतिम् prakṛtim nature मोहिनीम् mohinim which deludes them.

12. (These) indiscriminate ones are full of vain hopes, vain pursuits, vain knowledge. They take to rajasic and tamasic nature which deludes them.

So having talked about the samsāra kāraṇam, in the 11th verse, now in the following verses beginning from the 12th up to the 19th, Krishna is talking about various types of people who approach the problem differently.

Some people approach the problem sensibly and intelligently, because they have diagnosed the problem. So they are intelligent people; since they have diagnosed the problem. They have got a direction in life; and what is the diagnosis; do not lean on the perishable psychologically; it is risky; then learn to lean on the Lord; that is why I have told I think before; world dependence to God dependence to self-dependence. So I have to change the object of dependence from world to God. That is going in the right direction. But Krishna says, many people or most of the people have not diagnosed the problem; because of their wrong thinking; and unfortunately they do not learn from their experience; they depend on some object, and the object goes away; they are left high and dry and crying.

And what do they do; when one perishable object goes away; they switch over to another perishable thing again; like giving up smoking and taking to betel leaves; so one addiction is replaced by another addiction; one finite dependence is replaced by another finite dependence. Should not I learn from my bitter experience. Krishna says they do not; Most of the people are dumb ones;

And how does it happen; the details are beautifully given; the human pursuits, any form of human pursuit has got three stages; Any human action has got three stages; jñāthi; icchati; and yathathe;

First stage is knowing activity; before any activity I should have the knowledge about the result of that activity. Therefore knowing activity is the first activity; early morning I see the newspaper to decide what should I do: Today is Sunday holding; evening what should I do; Therefore you go through; you know there are different programs. This is knowledge; of several things, you decide particular goal; jñānam gives way to icchā; any desire is based on knowledge; Can you desire something which you do not know; Suppose I say do you want bandam; what bandam? Swamiji do you want; do not ask bandam; do you want or not; you would not answer; you should not what it is to desire; whatever you know you may not desire; poison we know; whatever you desire; you know; OK: whatever you know you do not desire; whatever you desire is a known object; therefore jñānam gives way to desire and desire leads to action.

So jñāna śakti to icchā śakti to kriya śakti; throughout the life, this is our process; so therefore all our pursuit begin where; at the cognitive level; at the understanding level. So if I do not have proper understanding things in the world; the possible course of life, if I do not clear understanding; jñāna śakti is abused; icchā śakti will be abused; kriya śakti will be abused and we get into problems.

And therefore Krishna says many people are misinformed or uninformed because they do not study the scriptures. That is why scriptural study becomes very fundamental necessity to get a direction in our life. That is what is going to be said; which we will see in the next class.

Om

Lord Krishna described Īśvara svarūpam, the nature of God, from verse No.4 up to the verse no.10 of the 9th chapter; and especially the higher nature of the Lord; 7th chapter he talked about the lower nature, aparā prakṛti, which is saguṇa svarūpam. And then the higher nature parā prakṛti, the nirguṇa svarūpam. In the 9th chapter beginning He focused upon the higher nature; parā prakṛti. And in the 11th verse, Krishna pointed out that the ignorance of the higher nature of the Lord alone is the cause of samsara. Parā prakṛti ajñānam eva samsārasya kāraṇam.

How can the ignorance of parā prakṛti become the cause of samsāra. Because parā prakṛti, the higher nature alone is beyond time and space; dēśa, kāla adhitha svarūpam and therefore only if we hold on to parā prakṛti, then alone immortality is possible; Other than parā prakṛti, you hold on to any other thing; any other aparā prakṛti svarūpam, then it will come within time and space. It will come within the realm of māya only and anything that falls within māya is subject to change; asti, jāyatē, vardhatē, vipariṇamatē and vinaśyati. And therefore as long as a person does not seek parā prakṛti, anything he accomplishes within aparā prakṛti, he will continue to be a samsāri.

And that is why we say even in karma kānda, a person who is religious, who performs rituals, and who goes to higher lōkās, even those lōkās fall within dēśa, kāla, abrahma bhuvanāth lōkā, punaravarthinaḥ. And therefore only when a person knows the real nature of God and holds on to the real nature; he can be free from samsāra. But this fact majority of people do not know and therefore they hold on to finite thing and loose it and suffer and the unfortunate thing is that they do not learn and they hold on to another finite thing, and again suffer. So thus parā prakṛti ajñānam or Īśvara svarūpa ajñānam ēva samsārasya kāraṇam; He said.

And then from the 12th verse onwards, up to the 19th verse, Krishna talks about different types of people; there are some people who have diagnosed this problem; that the problem of ignorance they have diagnosed. and once we know ignorance is the cause of samsāra, we know the solution is parā prakṛti; jñānam ēva; and once that is clear; jñānam is the solution; For jñānam I require the necessary qualification and therefore sādānā chatuṣaya saṁpathi will become immediate goal and for sādānā chatuṣaya saṁpathi; I have to follow karma yōga and upāsana; Thus I know what my course of life is; because clarity is there; I have to follow karma yōga; I have to follow upāsana; I have to acquire necessary qualifications; I have to follow jñāna yōga; I have to attain jñānam; and by way of that I have to remove ignorance, and I have to be mukthaḥ.

bahuśākhā hyanantāśca buddhayō'vyavasāyinām || 2.41 ||

Krishna said that there are some people who are very clear who have diagnosed the problem and they are taking to the right course, but there are many other people who are still groping in darkness. They do not know what exactly they want. They think that this is the goal for some time; and acquire it; and they find that they do not get what they wanted. And then the replaced the goal with another one; again acquired and no satisfaction; so these people are confused people, Krishna talked about the confused people; unlucky and unfortunate ones. In verse No.12. And why they are confused; because their thinking is not clear. In Kathopaniṣad, we saw that the body is compared to a chariot; sense organs are compared to the horses, mind is compared to the reins; and intellect is compared to the driver; a journey will be in the right direction; if the driver is informed properly. Similarly if my intellect has got clear understanding, things will be clear; and that is why we say, just as Arjuna had Krishna to guide him; if we have got scriptural guidance, we will get right knowledge and right direction; but most of the people, do not come to the scriptures and therefore, they have wrong knowledge, they have wrong desires; and therefore they have wrong results; and therefore they suffer in samsāra.

I was telling in the last class; our course of life takes three stages; jñānāthi; icchatī; and yathathe. You have got an understanding about the goal; that is jñānāthi. And icchatī, I desire for accomplishing the goal. And yathathe; I strive to attain that goal; so jñānam; icchā and prayatnāḥ; that is how jñāna śakti; icchā śakti and kriya śakti.

Of these three, if the first one jñānam is improper, then the desires also will be improper; and if the desires are improper, my efforts also will be improper; and when efforts are improper, then what will be result of the effort.

so yatha kamo bhavathi tat kruthur bhavathi;
yat kruthurbhavathi; tat karma kuruthe, yat karma kuruthe, tat abhisampadyathe;

Brihadaranyaka upaniṣad beautifully presents. These confused people Krishna says they have wrong knowledge, wrong desire, wrong effort and therefore wrong result.

That is given here; विचेतसः vicētasah; vicētasah means those people who do not have viveka śakti; whose satva guṇa is overpowered; they are called vicētasah; avivekinaḥ. And the problem is we are all avivekis, indiscriminate people; knowing this alone, the scriptures have come to assist us; but because of our intellectual arrogance; neither we will know by ourselves; nor we will expose ourselves to the teaching of the scriptures. Mundakopaniṣad criticises them:

अविध्यायामन्तरे वर्तमानाः स्वयं धीराः पण्डितं मन्यमानाः ।
जङ्घन्यमानाः परियन्ति मूढाः अन्धेनैव नीयमान यथान्धाः ॥ ८ ॥
avidhyāyāmantarē vartamānāḥ svayaṁ dhīrāḥ paṇḍitaṁ manyamānāḥ |
jaṅghanyamānāḥ pariyaṁti mūḍhāḥ andhēnaiva nīyamāna yathāndhāḥ || Mund.One. II. 8 ||

Neither do they know; nor will they take the help of the scriptures; why, intellectual arrogance. Therefore vimūdhāḥ.

मोघज्ञानाः moghajñānāḥ, they have all all wrong understanding and expectations; and what are the wrong expectations; everything impermanent is mistaken as permanent; they think power is permanent; position is permanent; people around will be permanent; above all, money think permanent; मा कुरु धन जन यौवन गर्व, हरति निमेषात्कालः सर्वम् | mā kuru dhana jana yauvana garvaṁ, harati nimēṣātkālaḥ sarvam. So this they do not know; therefore they have wrong expectation; of security from insecure; permanence from the impermanence.

And therefore मोघाशाः moghāsāḥ; and therefore they have got vain desires; so future knowledge, worthless knowledge they have and therefore their desires also are future desires; and if the desires are moha, futile and worthless;

And what will be their actions; मोघकर्माणः moghakarmāṇaḥ; so their actions also will be futile; that means they will not get what they expect; because it is wrong expectations.

And then what will happen; we saw in the third chapter:

kāma ēṣa krōdha ēṣa rajōguṇasamudbhavaḥ|
mahāśanō mahāpāpmā viddhyēnamihā vairiṇam||3.37||

When they have wrong desires, any amount of accomplishment will not quench the desires; they will only nourish more desires; and convert them into greed; and greed will lead to what; more and more kāmya karma.

Therefore Krishna says राक्षसीमासुरीं चैव प्रकृतिं मोहिनीं श्रिता rākṣasīmāsurīm caiva prakṛtiṁ mōhiniṁ śritāḥ; their actions will be kāma pradhāna actions; or krōdhaḥ pradhāna actions; either their actions are born out of attachment; or their actions are born out of hatred; so rākṣasīm and āsurīm; the difference is: one is rāgaḥ, pradhāna; another is dveṣaḥ pradhāna.

And when it is rāgaḥ pradhāna or kāma pradhāna actions, then they will take to illegal methods; because desires are more; and by legitimately earning, you cannot fulfil all the desires; and therefore mind will think; why can't we adjust a little bit; adjust means: match fixing. Even though they have got lot of money, the greed will turn a person to take to immoral actions; because that is called rākṣasīm prakṛtiḥ; greedy svabhāva; immoral activity; selfish activity;

And āsurīm chaiva; and when I have got so much greed and I find any competitor obstructing my goal; then comes the philosophy cut throat competition; destroy the other people. And therefore what started in rāgaḥ will end in dveṣaḥ; kāma will get converted into krōdhaḥ; from selfish activities I take to harmful activities; So rāgaḥ dveṣaḥ pradhāna karmās will dominate my life.

What about pañca mahā yajñā; nothing like that in his life; everything will go away and therefore nitya naimithika karma also will drop; why because there is no time; I would like to use that time also to earn more money. And therefore, rākṣasīmāsurīm caiva prakṛtim; prakṛtim means character or svabhāva; श्रिता śritāḥ; they take to which is mōhinīm; which will delude the people; which means they get into a vicious cycle. Because of non-discrimination; the kāmya niṣiddha karmās increase; And because of the increase of kāmya niṣiddha karmās, discrimination will get further stifled. And when the discrimination gets further stifled or overpowered, kāmya niṣiddha karmās will still increase; And when they increase, again buddhi will get further spoiled and when further spoiled, more harmful action; more harmful action; more loss of discrimination; Thus a person gets into a vicious cycle of wrong action; loss of discrimination; more wrong action; more loss of discrimination, And ultimately (मरत्तु षोकात्तु marattu pōkaratu) and they loose even their conscience.

That is how criminals are born; initially they have prick of conscious; but more these actions are repeated; that prick also goes away; and not only it goes away, intellect begins to justify the compromise of values; When we compromise with the values initially, there is a prick; Somehow you managed that, second time lying will not be pricking that much; third lie, still lesser; fourth lie, no prick at all; fifth lie, I begin to justify; sixth lane, I say it is required in kaliyuga; if one has to live, one has to do like this; and once you have reached that stage; almost a person has become incorrigible; better luck next birth, because buddhināśāt praṇāśyati.

There is a beautiful slōkā;

वन्नि दहतो वन्ने, सखा भवति मारुताः

स एव दीप नाशाय कृषे तस्य अस्ति सैहृदम् ॥

vanni dahato vannē, sakhā bhavati mārutāḥ

sa ēva dīpa nāśāya kṛṣē tasya asti saihṛdam || 20.24

When the fire is burning; you know huge conflagration of forest fire; you find the wind becomes the friend of the fire; when the fire was a small flame, then the wind is the enemy; but once the flame has become a conflagration, the very same wind becomes a friend. So what is the law; if you cannot defeat the enemy; then join. Similarly, when we take to the kāmya niṣiddha karmās initially, rākṣasic, āsūric karma initially, our buddhi can stop them; but if we let it go; and allow it to grow;

then the intellect cannot stop the compromise with values. And then the intellect will begin to join and justify the violation; and such people are called rākṣasic people and āsūric people.

Continuing.

पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna ! आश्रिताः āśritāḥ having taken to, दैवी. प्रकृतिम् daivī. prakṛtim satvic nature ज्ञात्वा jñātvā and having known (Me to be), अव्ययं भूतादिम् avyayaṃ bhūtādim the imperishable cause of all beings महात्मानः mahātmānaḥ the noble souls, तु tu on the other hand भजन्ति माम् bhajanti mām worship Me., अनन्यमनसः ananyamanasaḥ with an undistracted mind.

13. O Arjuna! having taken to Sātvic nature, and having known (Me to be) the imperishable cause of all human beings, the noble souls, on the other hand, worship Me with an undistracted Mind.

So in the previous verse Krishna talked about the misguided people, who are groping in samsāra and who are getting more and more bogged down in samsāra whereas there are some other fortunate people; Because of their poorva janma punyam, they are born in an proper atmosphere where there is scripture guidance is there; and elders have value for the scriptures and therefore there is value for Nitya Naimithika karma like prayer, sandhyavandanam, etc. Therefore what happens to them:

That is said: Hey Partha, Arjuna, महात्मानः mahātmānaḥ; means puṇyavantaḥ; satva pradhānāḥ; they are born in a cultured family, where there are religious values and therefore the regular prayers etc. are part; not in the evening and morning; not in the TV show; and the TV goes on running whether anybody watch or not; That is not दैवी प्रकृतिमाश्रिताः daivīm prakṛtimāśritāḥ; they have to be of sātvika nature; in which pañca mahā yajñās are compulsory. Is part of life; It is a dharmic life. It is scripture based life; and when a person takes to such a way of life; what happens is: because of the grace of the Lord; and because of the satva guṇa pradhāna; a person develops nitya anitya vasthu vivekaḥ. He understands sooner or later that everything other than God is perishable;

शश्वन् नश्वरमेव विश्वमकिलम् निश्चित्य वाचा गुरोहो

नित्यं ब्रह्म निरन्दरं त्रिमृशता निर्वाच शान्तात्मनाः ॥

śaśvan naśvaramēva viśvamakilam niścītya vācā guroho

nityam brahma nirandaram trimṛśatā nirvāca śāntātmanāḥ || 25.20

It does not take one full life time; if we lead a religious life; a religiously alert life; parīkṣya lōkān karmachithān takes place. Every experience in my life teaches a valid lesson. And what is that valid lesson; I should not seek security from the world; I should seek security only from God. I should seek poornatha, not from the world; only from God. I should seek peace of mind, not from the world and people; but only from God. This wisdom; otherwise called nithya anithya vasthu vivekaḥ; these people develop.

And therefore Krishna says mahātmānaḥ; so they are the great people who have got viveka; because of what; daivīm prakṛtimāśritāḥ; as opposed to rākṣasīm and āsūri. rākṣasīm and āsūri represent raja pradhāna or tama pradhāna; daivīm prakṛtim refers to satva pradhāna. Kāmya karmās are lesser; niṣidda karmās are still lesser; niṣkāma karmās are more.

That is mind purifying karmās are more in their life; daivīm prakṛtimāśritāḥ; mām jñātva; they have understood me to be the ultimate refuge; the ultimate shelter; only the safe ground; Mām jñātva;

What type of Me?; भूतादिम् bhūtādim; bhūtādi means jagat kāraṇam; I am the ultimate cause of all beings; And ultimate cause means what; the causeless cause is called ultimate cause; And that means what the Lord is beginningless; anādihi.

And not only the Lord is anādihi; अव्ययं avyayam; Lord is anathāḥ ca; without exhaustion or end; the one who is beginningless or endless, the one who is infinite. And other than the Lord; everything else is finite; Remember, what example; cardboard chair. Use the cardboard chair for everything except sitting; Other than Bhagavān, use anything, but never lean psychologically; on any one of them. What will happen if you lean; try and see. You will know at the appropriate time; Better to learn by projection itself; without actually going through traumatic experiences. Intelligent people learn from other people's suffering; the unintelligent people require their own suffering to turn towards the Lord.

Arjuna required the imaginary death of Bhiṣma and Drōṇa; not actual death; imaginary death of Bhiṣma and Drōṇa; they would not be there tomorrow; then only he thought of Lord; We require some such experience; if you are intelligent, even before experiencing trauma. We learn to lean on the Lord; therefore, ज्ञात्वा अव्ययं भूतादिम् भजन्ति jñātvā avyayaṃ bhūtādim bhajanti; bhajanti means they start seeking; their journey begins.

And how; अनन्यमनसः ananyamanasaḥ; without any distraction; vyavasāyātmikā bhuddhi. They may earn money, they may go through grihasthāśrama; they may go through vanaprastha āśrama; but as our śāstrā has beautifully named, even married life is said to be an āśrama. What do we think generally; āśrama is only in the forest; in our tradition, even married life is called āśrama because, even married life is meant for what; citta shuddhi alone. Artha is incidental; kāma is incidental; dharma and mōkṣa are the primary goals. Dharma is immediate goal and through dharma; mōkṣa is the ultimate goal; Arta and kāma are incidentally fulfilled. This they do not forget; and therefore ananyamanasaḥ; this is called avyabhicāriṇi bhakthi; And in what all ways they pursue the Lord; further description.

सततं कीर्तयन्तो मां यतन्तश्च दृढव्रताः ।

नमस्यन्तश्च मां भक्त्या नित्ययुक्ता उपासते ॥ ९.१४ ॥

satataṃ kīrtayantō māṃ yatantaśca dṛḍhavrataḥ |

namasyantaśca māṃ bhaktyā nityayuktā upāsate || 9.14 ||

सततं कीर्तयन्तः satataṃ kīrtayantaḥ constantly praising माम् mām Me च ca striving यतन्तः दृढव्रताः yatantaḥ dṛḍhavrataḥ with a firm resolve, च नमस्यन्तः ca namasyantaḥ and surrendering to Me माम् भक्त्या mām bhaktyā with devotion नित्ययुक्ताः nityayuktāḥ (these) ever- steadfast ones, उपासते upāsate worship Me.

14. Constantly praising me, striving with a firm resolve, and surrendering to Me with devotion, (these) ever-steadfast ones worship Me.

So how do they pursue the goal of Īśvara is pointed out here; दृढव्रताः dr̥ḍhavrataḥ; they are the people of firm resolve. What is the resolve; I want to attain Īśvara or mōkṣa; they are theevra mumukṣavaḥ; that is called dr̥ḍhavrataḥ; dr̥ḍham vratam ēṣām tē.

And even if we take firm resolve; often it can become something like the new year resolve; you know new year resolve; many people take new year resolve; it will work one day, two day, one week and thereafter back to square one; and therefore it is not like that; they remind their resolve. That is why we have got various vratham in our religion; unlike some other religion; not once in a while; we have got Ēkadaśi; and pradōṣam; and then Śivarathri; and therefore you have vratams after vratams to remind for what purpose we have come.

And therefore सततं कीर्तयन्तः satataṃ kīrtayantaḥ; they talk about the primary goal as often as possible; which is called satsaṅgaḥ; they are associated with those people who also are mumukṣu; because your friends will determine your personality; if a money-oriented man you move with constantly; all the time kon banega karodpathi. Even in svapna it will come; so therefore satsaṅgaḥ sarvatha kārya; they will remind you. So satataṃ kīrtayantaḥ mām; they constantly talk about this goal only; which means they select from friends; they choose their friends; satataṃ kīrtayantaḥ mām; talking about Me alone and यतन्तः yatantaḥ.

And they start preparing themselves; in Olympic gold medal. Not that easy; India we have got such a population and getting one bronze medal; we are jumping up and down; not that easy; you ask anyone; they will prepare for the next olympics now itself. And therefore yatantaḥ, the most difficult thing is acquiring sādānā chatuṣṭaya saṃpathi. In fact jñānam is easy; Krishna himself said susukam kartum avyayam; in the beginning of this chapter. So jñānam is easy if we are qualified.

Therefore what is the difficult part of vēdānta sādānā; acquiring the qualifications and for that when should you start; right now; therefore yatantaḥ; So karma yōgaḥ is the preparation; upāsana is preparation; acquiring ethical values preparation, everything you do is preparation only; Therefore yatantaḥ; putting forth appropriate effort.

And not only that; भक्त्या माम् नमस्यन्तः bhaktyā mām namasyantaḥ; they also know that mere effort is not sufficient; because we are too small in the creation; and there are so many hidden factors, unknown factors; endless obstacles are possible; adhyatmika, adhi bhoudika; adhi devika prathibandha; sreyamsi bahu vighnāni; there will be so many prathibandas for good works. And therefore mere prayathna is not enough; we also require Īśvara anugraḥ; these mumukṣūs know very well; And therefore they constantly surrender to the Lord.

If you remember, I had told you in my introduction to the seventh chapter, one thing that in the first six chapters of the Gītā; the individual effort is highlighted; then in the next six chapters, that is from the 7th chapter to the 12th chapter, the importance of Īśvara kripa is highlighted; Therefore prayathana is important; anugraḥ is important; only when both go in hand in hand, we can succeed; Therefore Gītā starts with pāṛthaya prathibodhithām; dhyāna slōkā is recited; both of them are beautifully highlighted in this verse; first line yatantaḥ; second line, नमस्यन्तः namasyantaḥ; yatantaḥ indicates the role of freewill; namasyantaḥ indicates the role of grace.

So freewill important or grace important? Both are equally important. If you discard freewill, you are fatalistic person; If you discard anugraha; you are an arrogant person; anugraham if you say no, arrogance; freewill No if you say it is fatalism; we should neither be fatalistic; nor arrogance; we should know our effort is important; Īśvara's grace is also important; Balanced approach.

And नित्ययुक्ताः nityayuktāḥ; nityayuktāḥ means whatever disciplined; ever steadfast; commitment is indicated. That is their entire personality. If you take sport personality; Not only their mind is constantly think about it; they want to have a diet; they have got a nutritionist working for them; they have psychologist working for them; they keep the files of various rivals; in tennis and all; they have to study which rival has got what weakness; You cannot just go out with the racket; I know how this person plays; Therefore time is spent for that; body is working in that direction; my diet is adjusted for that; and there are psychiatrist working for that.

Thus at all levels: annamaya; praṇamaya; manōmaya; vijñānamaya, even ānandamaya, all levels, there is only one focus; mōkṣam; mōkṣam; mōkṣam;

Therefore nityayuktāḥ upāsātē; they pursue; they seek.

bahudhā (They worship Me) in many ways पृथक्त्वेन pṛthaktvēna as different (from themselves). एकत्वेन ekatvena as identical (with themselves), विश्वतोमुखम् viśvatōmukham or as multifarious one.

15. Worshipping through jñānayajñā, some others think of ME. (They worship Me) in many ways --- as different (from themselves), as identical (with themselves), or as the multifarious one.

I have kept God as my goal. Now this understanding of God also gradually evolves. So my initial appreciation of God is of one type; then my understanding transforms and each stage, my appreciation of God varies. And we can three levels of understanding.

In the beginning stages, God is presented as the creator of the world; we say Lord creates the world; In saastric language we say Lord is the nimitha kāraṇam; intelligent cause; just as the carpenter creates the furniture; just as the weaver creates the fabric; Similarly God creates the world; therefore we get an idea of God; somebody like carpenter; any creator. A mason, creator; or a weaver; or goldsmith; who keeps on producing the world; and that Lord must be sarvajñā, sarvasaktimān; and therefore you represent the Lord with many heads. So symbolically you present; chatur mūkha; pañca mūkha; ṣanmūkha; representing what; omniscience; The four heads of Brahmāji represent the four vēdās; and you get a picture of an omniscient

Lord; with a particular form; it is a personalised God you visualise; like Viṣṇu in पारकाटलं pārkaṭal;

क्षीरोदन्वत्प्रदेशे शुचिमणिविलसत्सैकतेर्मौक्तिकानां
मालाक्लृप्तासनस्थः स्फटिकमणिनिभैर्मौक्तिकैर्मण्डिताङ्गः । śubhrairabhrairadabhrairupariviracitairmuktapīyūṣa varṣaiḥ ānandī naḥ punīyādarinalinagadā śaṅkhapāṇīrmukundaḥ || 1 ||

You have got a kṣīrōdanvatpradēśē; kṣīrōdanvat means pārkaṭal; and if you are a śiva bhaktha; you have a picture of śiva; details of God starts.

And once you have progressed a little bit; then the śāstras introduces the next higher level of understanding; if God is taken as a person; certainly that Lord is limited specially; He is there means what; He is not here; And therefore once you are ready intellectually; to appreciate the next level; śāstra says God, we do not say: creates the world; we say God becomes the world;

so kamayatha bahusyam prajaa ye yethi;
sathabhdapyatha; sathapasthatva;
idagum sarvam asrujatha;
yathidam kincha;
tad srustva;
tad eva pravishathu;
tad anupravishya;
sad yetcha bhavath. 47.30

Lord became everything. So now where is the Lord; the Lord himself is appearing as this universe. Lord himself is appearing as this universe; In fact this universe with multifarious form is the form of the Lord which we call viśva rūpa Īśvaraḥ. In Viṣṇu sahasranama you can see that in the next slōkā.

भूः पादौ यस्य नाभिविन्दसुरनिलश्चन्द्र सूर्यो च नेत्रे bhūḥ pādau yasya nābhirviyadasuranilaścandra sūryau ca nētrē.

In the beginning kṣīrōdanvatpradēśē; we said He is there. Now what are we saying: there is no there or here; in fact the Bhūmi is the feet of the Lord; the sky is the body of the Lord; heaven is the head of the Lord.

So where is God; if I ask; where is God; what should you answer; where is God not; you should not say vaikuntha; vaikuntha is the first lesson; now you can say in vaikuntha also. Everything is God's form. We are going to see in the 11th chapter of Gītā; in 7th chapter also, Krishna listed. rasō'hamapsu kauntēya prabhā'smi śaśisūryayōḥ; etc. This is the second stage.

And if we keep this appreciation for some time; then we are ready for still higher stage; because in this you can get further doubt; if you say God is everything; then koovam also is god; criminal is also God; disease also God; how can God have negative attributes; You may have doubt. If you say God has only positive attributes; what is the problem; He will be limited; if He has to be limitless, He should include negative attributes also; and if we include the negative attributes, you have an intellectual problem; how can God have negative attributes; the problem is only when you think!!. Generally we do not think; therefore it is OK; we just listen and go; if you happen to think; śāstra has to answer; or you can give the general answer;

And if you ask such question; vēdānta expects that question and answers by saying: Lord does not become the creation. Lord appears as this creation; and therefore all these are appearances of the Lord; the real Lord is free from all these appearances. Param Bhāvam.

Therefore Lord has no form at all; So if you start with eka roopa Īśvara and you advance to anēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ and then you advance to aroopa Īśvaraḥ; These are the three levels; ēka rūpam, one form to many forms to no form; Krishna says everyone has to go through all these levels of bhakthi; you may not now like arūpa Īśvara; Who wants that; you do not like arūpa Īśvara; does not matter; have anēka rūpa Īśvara. If you say: No No No; that also is not acceptable; have ēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ;

See what He says: अन्ये माम् एकत्वेन उपासते anyē mām ēkatvēna upāsatē; some people seek and worship Me ēkatvēna; as the non-dual ultimate Brahman; here ēka means aroopa Īśvaraḥ; so sadeva soumya eka agra aseet; ekam eva advitheeyam;

So arūpa Īśvaraḥ; some people seek through what method; jñāna yajñēna; by taking to jñāna yōga; vēdānta vicāraḥ; advanced seekers; So they are interested in

Through vēdānta vicāra, they seek arūpa Īśvaraḥ; and there are some people who feel they are not ready for that; therefore what do they do; viśvathō mukham upāsati; they worship aneka arūpa Īśvaraḥ; Lord with multifarious form; with all your forms are Lord's forms;

ॐ सहस्रशीर्षा पुरुषः । सहस्राक्षः सहस्रपात् । ॐ sahasrāśīrṣā puruṣaḥ | sahasrākṣaḥ sahasrāpāt |

dhyava prithvi jana thanme mana shiva sankalpamasthu; 54.00

In Mahānyasya you might have heard; viśvathō chaksoo; viśvathō mukha; the Lord with faces everywhere; it means what; every face is the face of the Lord; Some people worship in that form; but there are some others who feel that also as difficult. And therefore they want an isolated God; who is located in one place; who has got a precise form; which is distinct from all other forms; So pṛthaktvēna; in a distinct form; they say this Hare Rama; Hare Krishna people; They are so obsessed with Krishna; they do not approve of even Rama; even though Rama and Krishna are only two avatharas or manifestation of Vishnu; they will approve Krishna and I hear they have even modified the mantra; Hare Rama Hare Rama, you should not start; hare Krishna hare Krishna you should say;

They were telling; Swami Chinmayananda; he used to give Gītā jñāna yajñā, Gītā talks he propagated; and he started an āśram in Mumbai; and in the ashram the main deity was Śiva; Now this Hare Krishna people were criticising it seems; He has got all the money by talking about Krishna; Krishna's name he has earned and in the end he built Śiva temple! Krishna will punish him; So they are so much specific about that particular form; that they do not approve of other forms also; Krishna says does not matter; to begin with; but sooner or later; we should be able to get over such fanaticism; but beginning it is OK:

Therefore pṛthaktvēna; so ēka rūpa worship; viśva rūpa worship; arūpa worship; through all these, people seek Me;

More in the next class.

Om

Lord Krishna gave a beautiful description of Īśvara svarūpam, the nature of God, from verse No.4 up to verse No.10. And when he described the nature of God, he was giving the description of the higher real nature of God; which was called parā prakṛti in the seventh chapter and this higher nature of God is identical with satyam, jñānam, ānandam, nirguṇam Brahma. So throughout these chapters, we should remember, when we use the word God as the goal of life, we are using the word God in the meaning of the higher nature of God. And this is the general rule. Whenever God is presented as the goal of life, we should understand the word God as the higher nature of God; parā prakṛti; otherwise called nirguṇa Brahma. When we are talking about God in the context of worship, then the worshipped God, the invited God, the God with different number of hands and legs; there in the context of worship, we refer to the lower nature of God.

So the word God is loosely used in our scriptures, even in the Bhāgavatham we find. The context of worship, God generally refers to the formed finite lower form and when we present God as the goal of life, we should remember that it represents the higher nature, the goal has to be infinite. A finite form of God, can never be the goal of a seeker. Upaniṣad is very very clear; you can be attached to a finite form for worship, but you can never take the finite form as the destination. Kenōpaniṣad repeatedly says, तदेव ब्रह्म त्वं विद्धि नेदं यदिदमुपासते tadēva Brahma tvaṁ viddhi nēdaṁ yadidamupāsatē; the worshipped, formed, finite-God should be used as an intermediary step, the destination God is invariably the formless one alone; And the description of that destination God; the formless God was given from verse No.4 that is why in the beginning itself Krishna said mayā tatamidam sarvaṁ jagadavyaktamūrīnā; avyaktam means formless, colorless, smell-less; tasteless; touch-less, is avyaktam; therefore the destination God is avyaktam. And having described that God in these verses, 4th to 10th, in the 11th verse Krishna said the ignorance of that God, the real destination of life, the ignorance of that God is the cause of all human problem; because when that God; that God means the higher nature, the destination God is not known to Me; I will keep everything else as my destination. When the real worthwhile purposeful destination is not known, I am certainly going to have everything else as my destination; and unfortunately all the other things cannot be real destination because, they would not give permanent peace of mind; they would not give permanent security; therefore there is a thrill and kick like you buying AC. If it is a video, how many video tapes are there in your house; when you bought you were thrilled; watched even your wedding video; one week, two week, it is fine; then all the tapes will be sticking; you go and watch; after sometime, diminishing return; any other goal, after some it will be boring; and therefore the samsara and the struggle, further fresh goals; further struggle will continue, therefore not knowing the real goal, the real destination of God is the problem. So what should be the solution; knowing the real destination; and accomplishing; Īśvara jñānam; tad dvara Īśvara prāpthihi ēva mahat lakṣyam.

Having mentioned this in the 11th verse, from the 12th verse, Krishna categorised the type of people, the entire humanity into two; So the majority of people are the ignorant ones and therefore they do not know the real destination of God; pūrṇatvam; real peace; real security, real happiness they do not know.

Therefore life is, they say, when they define philosophy, they jocularly say: it is like a blind man looking for a black cat, in a dark room, in which that cat is not there. This is philosophy they say. These ignorant people, they will be groping in life, not knowing what exactly they want. If somebody interviews them and ask what do you want; they will say that is what is not known. Either confused, or constantly switching over from one thing to another; what is the ultimate goal; what is the intermediary goal; there is no direction; like a rudderless goal; it is wallowing; Krishna strongly criticised them; mōghāśā mōghakarmāṇō mōghajñānā vicētasah.

And if they in any other culture, it is understandable, because they do not have guidance, but being born to this vēdic culture, where beautiful guidance is available, and the ācārya parāmparā is still alive and kicking; in spite of all these help, there are some people who manage to struggle and grope in darkness. And Krishna pitied them; and He said that there are some few understanding people. manuṣyaṅāṃ sahasrēṣu kaścidyatati siddhayē. In the 7th chapter he said; same idea, He repeats here; I have told you before, 9th and 7th chapters are almost parallel chapters; here He said

भजन्त्यनन्यमनसः

mahātmānastu mām pārtha daivīm prakṛtimāśritāḥ |
bhajantyananyamanasaḥ

Some lucky ones; puṅyavanthaḥ; they have understand that God is the ultimate goal. Not that they do not have worldly duties or ambitions to be fulfilled; they do have lot of other pursuits; but they know they are secondary goals to be completed and then you have to work on the main one; You have to understand this and do that. Like getting down in the intermediary station, while travelling in the train, you may get down; and buy idli, wada, dosai, etc. and in each station, one has to buy and eat; then only the train journey is complete! So whether you are hungry or not, once you get down in a station; one has to eat! You do get down; and you do lot of transactions; once you know that the journey has to continue. Similarly you may choose to get children; grandchildren, educating them; all those things, but this person knows they are stepping stones or secondary ones, but the ultimate is very clear. And these people worship God and their understanding of God varies depending upon their level of maturity. And as I said in the last class; in the beginning stage God is ēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ; That is Lord is a personal God with one form which he loves; iṣṭa dēvathā rūpam; and then as he continues to study the scriptures and continues to take guidance from the ācāryās, his appreciation of God transforms and he understands that God with a form will have to be necessarily finite; Lord being infinite, he must include all forms.

And can you guess what is one form which includes all forms; if there is one form which includes all forms; it has to be either spherical form or elliptical forms should have all the forms; that is why if you take a plastic thing, which you can mould into several forms; when you join all of them, you get what; a lump; a lump means what spherical form; and that is why we have got; for a viṣṇu bhaktha; the saligrāma is there; for a Śiva bhaktha; Śiva liṅga is there; which has got almost a spherical shape, indicating that all forms are included in that.

And that is why the universe also, everything you find is spherical; bhūgōlaḥ; and therefore ēka rūpa bhakthi gives way to anēka rūpa bhakthi; one cosmic form of Lord, viśva rūpa form of Lord, in which all forms are included; which we will see elaborately in the 11th chapter.

And then if he survives; and if he remains in that; and he assimilates that viśva rūpa Īśvaraḥ; viraat Īśvara; then he appreciates the Lord; still higher form; higher form being no form. Anēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ to a rūpa Īśvaraḥ; the formless principle which is the culmination, there cannot be anything beyond that. Therefore our journey is ēkarūpa to anēkarūpa to arūpa. In ēkarūpa you are a dvaitin; where the Lord and you are clearly distinct; In anēka rūpa bhakthi, you are viśiṣṭā dvaitin, because the Lord is all forms and your form is also included in; I am not different form God; I am part of God. When you come to anēka rūpa, you have graduated to viśiṣṭā dvaitham from dvaitham. And then when you go to arūpam; there is not even a question of part and whole, it is one indivisible totality; where there is no difference between Me and God; arūpa Īśvara when you come, you have come to advaitam. शान्तम् शिवम् अद्वैतम् चतुर्थम् मन्यन्ते सः अत्मा सः विज्ञेयः advaitam caturtham manyantē saḥ atmā saḥ vijñēyaḥ. That is the end. Krishna says a devotee goes through all these stages. ēkathvena pṛthaktvēna; विश्वतोमुखत्वेन viśvatōmukhatvēna. एकत्वेन ēkatvēna refers to arūpam, viśvatho mukhaṁ refers to anēka rūpam; पृथक्त्वेन pṛthaktvēna refers to ēka rūpam. Up to this we saw.

अहं क्रतुरहं यज्ञः स्वधाहमहमौषधम् ।

अहं यज्ञः ahaṁ yajñāḥ | am the ritual prescribed by the smṛiti अहं स्वधा ahaṁ

svadhā | am the food offered to the ancestors अहम् औषधम् aham auśadham |

अहम् आज्यम् aham ājyam I am the ghee (articles of oblation), अहम् अग्निः
aham agniḥ I am the fire (into which the offering is poured), अहम् हुतम् aham hutam I am the action of offering (oblation)

16. I alone am the ritual prescribed by the sruti, I am the ritual prescribed by the smṛti, I am the food offered to the ancestors, I am the food of all living beings, I am the mantra, I am the fire, I am the ghee (oblation), I am the action of offering.

So generally, they classify the students also into three grades based on the type of Īśvara that he appreciates; If it is ēka rūpa he is the manda adhikari; lowest grade; Lkg. Anēka rūpa; he has come to madhyama; in-between; and then if it is arūpa Īśvara he appreciates, he is uttama adhikari; mandha to madhyama to uttama.

And now Krishna assumes that most of the Gītā students are in the madhyama category. Krishna does not assume a mandha category at all. So assuming that Arjuna and others are bhakthās of intermediary levels; they have to learn to appreciate God in any particular form and that is why we are willing to worship any deity. ṣanmatha sthapanam; Śankarācārya did only to remove the idea of superiority of one deity to another; whether Śiva is greater or Gaṇapathy is greater; our Śiva is greater says the horizontal ones; our viṣṇu is greater says the vertical ones. So all those Śankarācārya says never compare, never compare, this is superior or that is superior, which one you are attracted to; you can have a iṣṭa dēvathā; but never look upon the others. This is called anēkarūpa bhakthi.

And Krishna wants to explain or elaborate the viśva rūpa bhakthi in these verses, 16 to 19. Four verses is the viśvarūpa Īśvara varṇanam. Even though ēka rūpa and arūpa bhakthi also are there; but Krishna chooses to elaborate the middle one; the viśva rūpa bhakthi.

And what is viśvarūpa bhakthi? Learning to look at everything in the creation as the manifestation of the Lord; everything; But there we may get slight difficulty. Initially we take only those things which are beautiful; which are respectable; which are valuable in creation; those things we take; and we learn to seek them as God. We should not start with scorpion; scorpion is better; not cockroach; If you say cockroach is God, you will start hating God; so initially we do not take the dveṣaḥ viṣayā; we take the rāgaḥ viṣayā; anything respectable. That is why we start with mātha; pitha, guru, daivam; start looking at the parents themselves as expression of God; அன்னயும் பிதாவும் முன்னறி தைவம் aṅṅayum pitāvum munṅari taivam. Next you go to the school; therefore Guru; and thereafter anything sacred; cow, which had so much role to play in those days; cow was respected; thus everything you take. And since rituals were pre-dominant in those days; and everything connected with rituals was very sacred. Krishna takes those ritual connected things and says all of them are myself. What are they; look at them; because life started with karma kānda. Therefore people were soaked in daily rituals; therefore he takes them and says learn to look at them as God; अहं ऋतुः aham kratuḥ; everything is viśvarūpa varṇanam.

This is the seed of viśvarūpa varṇana here; gradually Krishna will increase the topic and in the 11th chapter will be climax of viśvarūpa darśanam; all these are like trailers. Munnotam; hoping that you will come for the 11th chapter. For that he is showing this; I am kratuḥ; kratuḥ means sroutha karma, which means rituals and prayers prescribed by the vēdās which are the original scriptures; primary scriptures.

And Krishna says the ritual itself I am; so normally what do we say; through the ritual God is worshipped; Here we do not say God is worshipped through the rituals; we say God himself is the ritual also; ऋतुः kratuḥ; अहं यज्ञः aham yajñāḥ; yajñāḥ means smārta karma; smārta karma means rituals and prayers prescribed by the secondary non-vēdic scriptures.

They are called secondary scriptures because they draw substance from the vēdās; vēdā has got its own validity; whereas non-vēdic scriptures have no validity of their own; their validity is based on what: vēdās; smrithis, itihāsās, purāṅās, are all borrowed sanctity from the vēdās. Even Bhagavad Gītā is sacrosanct not because of itself; according to our tradition, Gītā is sacred because it follows the vēdic teaching; That is why Krishna says Arjuna you should accept the Gītā, not because I say. You accept the Gītā because it is based on the vēdic teaching tradition; vēdā means in our tradition; even superior to God, as it were; or at least as sacred as God; because God himself we come to know through what vēdās; So vēdās are the revealers of God and therefore smārta karma means rituals based on the secondary scriptural literature. All the puraṅic functions, in fact many of our festivals are based on puraṅic incidents; right from the deepavali onwards; it is not a vēdic; it is in puraṅa;

in that only Naragāsuran, Satyabhama, etc. are all there; but still it is sacred because it is originally based on the vēdās;

Then स्वधा अहं svadhā aham; svadhā is the offerings given to the forefathers or ancestors; पितृ श्राद्ध समये दीयमाना pitṛ śrāddha samayē dīyamānā; it is called svadhā; because when the pitṛ rituals are done; ancestral rights are done, they give oblations or offerings using the word svadhā. When they give to devathas, it is svāhā; when they give to pitṛs, it is called svadhā; therefore svadhā refers to offering given to the ancestors. And Krishna says that also I am. Tarparānam, pinda etc. food for the forefathers.

Then अहम् औषधम् aham auṣadham. auṣadham means the food eaten by the human beings is called aushadam. The food eaten by us is called auṣadham because it is derivēd form oṣhadi or plant kingdom. auṣadham means what; that which is born out of oṣhadi; a plant product is called auṣadham. In those days medicines also were called auṣadham, because they were all which products; not synthetic; ayurvēdā is what; based on plants only or herbs.

ஆயிரம் வேரை கண்டவன் அரை வைதியன். āyiram verai kaṇṭavan arai vaitiyan. they say in Tami. Veru means root; Then after some time it became like this: ஆயிரம் பேரை கொண்டறவன் அரை வைதியன் āyiram perai koṇṭravan arai vaitiyan!!; If you say: ஆயிரம் வேரை கண்டவன்; ஆயிரம் பேரை கொண்டறவன். What is the meaning; OK. all root based or herbal based and therefore medicine is also called auṣadham and food is also auṣadham.

And really speaking, according to our tradition, the real medicine is food only; food properly consumed can serve as a preventive for all diseases and if it is properly consumed, it can cure diseases also. Somebody said that in those days, they ate food as medicine; nowadays people eat medicine as food; because so many tablets; pachai, manjai, karuppu. So many of them, 7-8 in the morning, and afternoon another 21 tablets; Why, because we did not eat food like medicine; now we are forced to eat medicine like food, three times a day; Therefore food is auṣadham; And that food is God and therefore when food comes do not take for granted and do not gulp down immediately. Now you can see in any function; as they serve, before the end of the line is reached, the first people finish what is served; the server has a problem: of what; a doubt whether he served this leaf or not; the leaf is empty; He says do not do that; when we sit in a group; see that all people receive it and things is served and annam is served and also pariṣēcanam is served and you pray also. If it is buffet also; Not supposed to do; annam na nindyāt; annam ca paricakṣītha. Therefore, why because

अन्नम् ब्रह्म रसो विष्णु भोक्ता देवो महेश्वरः

इति सन्चिन्त भुञ्जानहः अन्न दोषै न लिपयते ॥

annam brahma raso viṣṇu bhoktā dēvō mahēśvaraḥ

iti sancinta bhunjānahaḥ anna dōṣai na lipayatē ||

Annam is Brahma; and the nutrition which is inside the annam; carbohydrates, proteins, fat, minerals and all salts; that is Viṣṇu; because Viṣṇu is the nourisher. Therefore the rasa is Viṣṇu; and the digestive rasa which destroys the food; that is the job; destroys the food means what; converts into various nutrients; that bhoktā the consumer is Śiva within. Therefore Brahma and Viṣṇu are outside. Śiva is inside. Śiva is the consumer of food. Thus everything is divine. So start training your mind, as early as possible; that is why after what you call upanayana, Bramacāri is asked to do that; that the divinisation takes place. Therefore I am food; and mantraḥ aham; Whether you are offering food to the devathas; through sroutha smārtha karma; or whether you are offering food to the ancestors through pitru karma, or whether you are offering food to yourselves; in the form of eating; regular eating; all these are sacred rituals; which should go along with mantra. That is why it is said in Chandōgya upaniṣad that when you eat food you are offering food to the digestive fire, the Vaiśvānara tatvam or the Lord; who is inside; therefore it is called praṇāgni hōtram ritual; our eating is called in the scriptures as praṇāgni hōtram. In the regular agni hōtram the offering is done to the fire outside; in eating, offering is done to the fire; which fire, digestive fire, inside. Therefore eating is one type of agni hōtram. That is why you can say I am regular performer of praṇāgni hōtram; praṇāgni hōtram do not tell; What it is; you tell everyone that you are a nityāgnihōtri!!! Because we all eat very regularly.

Therefore अहं मन्त्रः aham mantraḥ; what I want to say is all the offering go with mantraḥ; even before eating you have to do praṇāya svāha; apanāya svāha, that mantraḥ also I am; that mantrō'ham;

अहम् एव आज्यम् aham ēva ājyam; ājyam means key or the clarified butter which is offered in rituals that also I am.

अहम् अग्निः aham agniḥ; I am the very fire into which the offering is done, because agni according to our scriptures is a devatha, who is a courier service devatha. You know what is courier service; whatever you give, it is delivered to that address; Agni devatha has got a wonderful courier service; whichever devatha you want to offer anything; you need not know the address of that devatha, What should you do; you offer into the agniḥ; agnayē svāhāḥ; prajāpathayē svāhāḥ; parāmeshtine svāhāḥ; so indrāya svāhāḥ; varuna svāhāḥ; you offer where; what is the postbox; agniḥ; and He, without any postal strike, delivers to the respective address.

अग्निं दूतम् वृणीमहे होतारम् विश्व वेदसाम् ।

अस्य यज्जस्य सुकृतम् अग्न्ये नमाम् ॥

agnim dūtam vṛṇīmahē hotāram viśva vēdasām |
asya yajnyasya sukr̥tam agnyē namām ||

agnim dūtam vṛṇīmahē, agniḥ is a dutāḥ, a messenger, through whom I can give everything to various dēvathās; and that agniḥ, the carrier that is why another name of agniḥ is hutavahaḥ; in that name it is; courier service hutavahaḥ; vahaḥ means carrier; vahati iti vahaḥ; hutam means what; anything you want to give to any other devatha; hutam vahati iti huta vahaḥ; that agni messenger God also I am;

And not only the messenger God I am, whatever is carried by him, that material also I am; and the very action of offering I am; therefore अहम् हुतम् aham hutam, hutam means the action of offering; havana karma; OK. What is the essence of this entire verse? I am everything. Can it not be said like that. Then it would not stick to your mind. So you have to dwell on that topic.

Continuing;

पिताहमस्य जगतो माता धाता पितामहः ।

वेद्यं पवित्रमोङ्कार ऋक् साम यजुरेव च ॥ ९.१७ ॥

pitā'hamasya jagatō mātā dhātā pitāmahaḥ |

vēdyam pavitramōṅkāra ṛksāma yajurēva ca || 9.17 ||

अहं पिता aham pitā I am the father माता mātā the mother पितामहः pitāmahaḥ the grandfather धाता dhātā and the dispenser अस्य जगतः asya jagataḥ of this Universe वेद्यम् vēdhyam (I am) the one to be known पवित्रम् pavitram (I am) the auspicious one ओङ्कारः oṅkāraḥ (I am) the word Om च एव ऋक् साम यजुः ca eva ṛk sāma yajuḥ as well as the Rigvēdā, Samavēdā and Yajurvēdā.

17. I am the father, the mother, the grandfather and the dispenser of this Universe. (I am) the one to be known. (I am) the auspicious one. (I am) the word OM, as well as Rigvēdā, Samavēdā, and Yajurvēdā

अहं आस्य जगतः पिता aham āsya jagataḥ pitā; all these verses continue with the same topic; What is the topic; viśvarūpa īśvaraḥ. God is everything; So aham asya jagataḥ pitā; pitā means father. So I am the father; the parent of this creation; from Me alone the whole creation has originated; and not only I am the father, because once you say, father, you will ask who is the other;

So He says माता mātā; mother also; because the Lord is arghanāreśavara; father and mother, two-in-one; in that age itself; I am both father and mother, which means I am the nimitta kāraṇam ca; upādāna kāraṇam ca; I am the intelligent cause behind the creation and I am also the material cause of the creation; abinna nimitta upādāna kāraṇam aham asmi.

Then the next question we will ask is; if God is the father of everyone; who is the father of God; उन्खा बाप् unkhā bāp; who is the father of God; (a little hindi, do not ask from me more in Hindi). Who is his father; पितामहः अपि अहं एव pitāmahaḥ api aham ēva; I am the grandfather also; which means I do not have a father who has created Me, I am the ultimate father; I am fatherless father; which means I was never born; I am the causeless cause of the creation.

That is why somebody said; Pārvathi is very lucky; because she does not have any mother-in-law and father-in-law. She does not have that problem. Some other problem might be there; I do not know.

Then धाता dhātā; I am the dispenser, distributor of everything to the jīvās; according to their karma phalam. Anything that is to be given to a jīvā, I decide.

What type of body you should get, male or female; animal or human, health or sick body; I decide the body that you should have; and what is the longevity and during the life, what all you should get; everyone of you; not only human beings; even every animal and insect what they should get, I alone determine.

From this we should know that whatever we receive is coming from the Lord's hand. And what is the hand of the Lord; what is the hand of the Lord, the law of karma; It is not the whim and fancy of the Lord. If it is Lord's whim and fancy, we will try to alter it by giving it something; by giving something; that we are experts; that will not work there; So therefore according to the law of karma, I give everyone: anēka karthru bokthru samyukthasua pradi diyatha dēsa kāla nimatta kriya phala asrayasya, at the right place, at the right time, to the right person; what experience is to be given, I know. So therefore whatever experiences you get is what you deserve; and determined by a God who is never unjust. There is no injustice in God's rule; if you feel at any time that I am getting some suffering without deserving, because Swamiji I have not killed even an ant; that is a lie; for which you should be punished! that statement itself is a bluff; assuming that you have not killed even an ant; you are talking about your karma of a few year's before; last 5 years of 10 years. You do not remember what happened last week; even if you remember you can think of the karma of only last few years'; but remember, we are receiving the karma phala for karma of several janmas. So who are we to judge God and ask. Oh! Lord why are you punishing me. I have not done any harm at all; this means this person has not understood the law of karma. The one who has assimilated the law of karma will never ask the question; why me Oh God. Everyone is living nicely. That is the greatest trouble for him. The thing is that he is suffering is OK; But the others are not suffering is bothering; if they are also suffering, my suffering is then little less! So two types of tragedy; one tragedy is bad happening to me; greater tragedy is good happening to others; So therefore there is no question of why me; whatever happens to me is what I deserve, given by a just God; there is no injustice in the creation. Whatever is the news-item you read, if the innocent people are suffering, again it is according to Lord of karma; That does not mean, let them suffer, I do not go to help; No. whatever help I can do, I do that. That is a different thing; But what happens is according to the law of karma. That is indicated here; dhātā; karma phala dhātā.

Then वेद्यम् vēdyam; I am the ultimate thing to be known. In the 13th chapter, He calls jñēyam; Vēdyam, in the 13th it is jñēyam; In Māndūkyam, it is vijñēyam. So the ultimate thing to be known, knowing which alone, your intellect quest will end. We have not only physical hunger; not only we have emotional hunger; what is emotional hunger; people should love me; do you love me; do you love me; you have to keep on asking; and they have to keep on saying: I love you; I love you; I love you; or else doubt arises; last two days he did not say; something is called emotional hunger; and there is the final one; the intellectual hunger we all have that intellectual hunger to know, why this creation; what is this creation; who am I; is there a God; if there is one, what is His nature; these questions, in fact, we had as children; as children; and we asked our parents; and they said shut up and do your home work; because they did not know the answer; so having asked a few times; we just put it in the waste paper basket; but where there is a chance to ask; We will all ask these fundamental questions: कस्त्वं कोऽहं कुत आयातः kastvaṁ kō:'haṁ kuta āyātaḥ; and all these intellectual hunger will be quenched only when you know that one thing; and therefore it is called vēdyam.

pavithram; pavithram means the greatest purifier; punathi iti pavithram; pavayathi iti pavithram; purifier; and that is why when they do rituals, they put that dharba grass also as pavithram; indicating that if you wear that you are spiritually purified. It is an invisible purifier; not that wearing that you need not take bath; it is not purifier in that sense; even though you are in Chennai and suffer the water problem daily. It is the purifier of the sukṣma śarirām; पवित्रम् pavithram; pavithram will not purify the stūla śarirām; for that you have take bath in the water; and Lord is the greatest purifier; pavithram.

ओङ्कारः oṅkāraḥ; I am the oṅkāraḥ; the essence of all the vēdās; the crux of all the vēdās; I am oṅkāraḥ; It is said elsewhere; that the vēdās are first condensed in Gayathri form; and that is why, vēdā is called Brahma; vēdā is also called Brahma; the ultimate reality is called Brahma; vēdā is also called Brahma; in fact, Brahmācāri means the one who leads a life to study Brahma; there Brahma means vēdā; in Brahmācāri, brahma means vēdā; vēdic student; and since Gayathri is condensed form of vēdā; Gayathri is also called Brahma; and that is why when a Brahmācāri is initiated; it is called brahmōpadēśa; which means Gayathri upādeśa and through that vēdopadēśa; it is vēdic teaching.

And this Gayathri is further condensed in the form of three vyahruthi mantrās; bhooḥ, bhuvaha and suvaha; that is the condensed form of Gayathri; vēdā condensed into Gayathri; and Gayathri condensed into vyahruthi; so like we are getting smaller and smaller; like the phone is getting smaller; tape recorder is getting smaller; that days, even the fan regulator was 2" by 2". everything is becoming smaller and smaller; the scriptures have also becoming like that; big vēdā; Gayathri; vyahrithi; micro chip;

And vyahrithi is further condensed; pyco chip or micro-micro chip; and from each vyahruthi; one one letter is taken aa, uoo and um; and if you combine it becomes Om. because according to sanskrit, combination rule, aa plus uoo is Om; aa plus Uoo is equal to Om; and gum remains as it is and aa plus oo plus um becomes Om.

And keeping that in mind some people write spelling of oṅkāraḥ also AUM. to connect A, U, ma. AUM; but the problem is once you write A U M, how will you pronounce, ayum; nothing wrong in writing that spelling; but pronunciation should not be ayum; but pronunciation should not be Om alone; whether you spell it as Om; or as A U M; pronunciation should be OM; aa plus U in Sanskrit is Om; and therefore Om becomes what; one syllable condensation of the huge voluminous vēdic literature; And therefore how powerful should be the oṅkāraḥ mantra; And therefore Krishna says that Om I am.

And once Om is diluted; what will happen; like you have the fruit juice; keep in your fridge; and thereafter you take a spoon and just add one liter and distribute it; and so condensed. that condensed one; and then you add water and expand; Similarly if you take vēdā and take condensed vēdā; Om and diluted Om is what; vēdās; and therefore, if condensed Om, I am, hey Arjuna, the diluted, elaborated magnified Vēdās also I am; I say that I am the author of the vēdās; I will say; and I am the very vēdā itself; That is why we respect vēdā to such an extent; Bhagavān vēdāha.

And because of that alone, in the Sikh religion also; that Guru grantha saheb; that grantha itself is worshipped; because sikh tradition is vēdic tradition only; in fact, the very word Sikh is what; is not sick, in the sick people; śiṣyaḥ; for them the ṣa will not come properly; sahasra sirukha purukaha they will chant; in the north, sha becomes kha; so śiṣyaḥ has become sikh; because they are followers of guru grantha sahib; And therefore, the scriptures themselves are seen as the Lord in our tradition; I am rig vēdāḥ; I am sama vēdāḥ; and I am yajur vēdāḥ;

I have explained the three vēdās before; rig vēdā is a vēdā in which ṛik mantras are there; and ṛik mantra is a mantra which is a metrical composition; which is in the form of poetry; poetic composition is ṛik mantra; whereas yajur vēdā is a vēdā consisting of yajur mantra; and yajur mantra is a mantra in prose form; So rik is padya rūpam; yajur is gadya rūpam; and then sāma means music; therefore sama vēdā is a vēdā in which sāma mantras are there; which means there are mantras, which is set of music; they never say sāma pārāyaṇam; they say sama gānam; yujur gānam, ṛik gānam they do not say; that is pārāyaṇam; I am the sāma vēdā; what about atharvana vēdā; athavarana vēdā also; atharvarana is not mentioned here; atharvarana primarily contains loukika or worldly activities; not much used in ritualistic activities; and therefore generally not mentioned; but I am all the four vēdās also. More in the next class.

Om

In these verses of the 9th chapter, beginning from the 12th verse up to the 19th verse, Lord Krishna is talking about samsāra nivṛtti upāyaḥ, the means of attaining freedom from samsāra; otherwise known as mōkṣa upāyaḥ; and the means that is given by the Lord here is bhakthiḥ; bhakthi as a solution to samsāra nivṛtti.

But when we say bhakthi is the means of liberation, we should be extremely careful in understanding; here the word bhakthi does not refer to any particular sādhanā; but it refers to a range of sādhanās, consisting of three levels; We will be seeing these levels of bhakthi in the 12th chapter, very elaborately; but here we should note it; as an important point; when bhakthi is presented as a means of liberation, bhakthi consists of three levels of sādhanā; and those three levels are karma lakṣaṇa bhakthi; upāsana lakṣaṇa bhakthiḥ; and jñāna lakṣaṇa bhakthiḥ;

The first stage of bhakthi is in the form of karma yōga; which will purify the mind, then one has to graduate to the upāsana lakṣaṇa bhakthi; bhakthi in the form of meditation, by which a person gets the integration of the mind, and then one has to necessarily go through the final jñāna lakṣaṇa bhakthiḥ; which is nothing but bhakthi in the form of vēdānta sṛavaṇa manana nidhidhyāsana.

In Vivēka Chūdāmaṇi, Śaṅkarācārya beautifully defines this bhakti; svasvarūpa anusandānam bhakthirithya abhidhīyatē. The third and final level of bhakthi is not in the form of pūja, not in the form of pārayaṇam; not in the form of social service; the final level of bhakthi is in the form of enquiry; with the help of scriptures and upaniṣads, I make an enquiry into the essential nature of the Lord.

And only when one goes through karma + plus + jñāna rūpa bhakthi; that bhakthi alone will lead to liberation; it is not any one of them. This is one point we have to remember all the time; bhakthi divorced from knowledge can never give liberation; Because all the upaniṣads are uniformly insistent that jñānāt ēva kaivalyam.

We will be seeing in the Kailvalya upaniṣad also; सम्पश्यन् बहम परमं याति नान्येन हेतुना sampaśyan brahma paramaṁ yāti nānyēn hētunā (I.10); न अन्य पन्थाः विध्यते अयनाया na anya panthāḥ vidhyatē ayanāyā; other than jñānam; there is no method; and therefore when we say bhakthi is a means of liberation; we should understand that that bhakthi whose final stage is in the form of jñāna yajñāḥ; if you remember the fourth chapter, Krishna pointed out

śrēyān dravyamayādyajñājjñānayajñāḥ parāntapa |
sarvaṁ karmākhiḻaṁ pārtha jñānē parisamāpyatē || 4.33 ||

All your yajñās and pūjās should culminate into enquiry; vicāraḥ; systematic study of scriptures; that is the subtlest form of bhakthi; therefore what you are going through now is a form of bhakthi; you should not think bhakthi is tālam and hōmam; that is also bhakthi but ultimately vēdānta vichāraḥ is the highest form of bhakthi; therefore is equal to the means of liberation; means karma plus upāsanam plus jñānam or vichāraḥ is equal to means of liberation.

This is one point; this we will be studying very elaborately in the 12th chapter. Krishna himself tells; on that strength only I am telling that; Krishna himself tells that in the 12th chapter; that is why the chapter itself is titled there; bhakthi yōgaḥ;

The second important point to be noted is: when we say bhakthi is the means of liberation; certainly bhakthi is directed towards the Lord; because where is the question of bhakthi; without an object of bhakthi-devotion. And this object of bhakthi also gradually evolves as the bhakthi evolves. So when I start my bhakthi; my appreciation of the Lord, the object of devotion is a very gross appreciation and my bhakthi should evolve, the culmination of which will be the ideal form of bhakthi and only when that bhakthi is evolved into that form; it will lead to liberation.

What do you mean by the evolution of bhakthi; this also I had indicated in my previous classes; in the initial level of bhakthi; the object of devotion; God is eka rūpa Īśvaraḥ; God is a person for me; sitting, located in vaikuntha; kailasa, goloka Vrindavanam; (Krishna consciousness people have a special place called goloka Vrindavanam). There will be many cows; so then it is Vrindavanam; Krishna will be there; dance will be there; their concept of God is always personal.

And according to scriptures it is grossest form of bhakthi; and this bhakthi should evolve and the personal God should expand to become what anēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ; otherwise viśva rūpa Īśvaraḥ; where the Lord is not located in one place; but the Lord is everything; if you read the translation of Rudram; you will find very interesting. Lord Shiva who is in the form of tree; who is in the form of mud, who is in the form of green leaf; the one who is in the form of dry leaf; whatever ordinary materials are there in the whole world, everything is Śivan;

नम ऊर्व्याय च सूर्म्याय च

नमः पर्ण्याय च पर्णशदयाय च

नमोऽपगुरमाणाय चाभिघ्नते च

नम आखिखदते च प्रखिखदते च

namō lōpyāya cōlapyāya ca || 9- 1 ||

nama ūrvyāya ca sūrmyāya ca

namaḥ parṇyāya ca parṇaśadyāya ca

namō: 'paguramāṇāya cābhighnatē ca

nama ākhhidatē ca prakhhidatē ca

Just read the translation, you will find that Śiva is sarvam; Śiva mayam jagat; therefore bhakthi should evolve into anēka rūpa bhakthi and that is not enough, again further I have to go and appreciate the Lord, as one beyond both ēka rūpam and anēka rūpam, but the Lord who is in arūpam;

अशब्दमस्पर्शमरूपमव्ययं

तथाऽरसं नित्यमगन्धवच्च यत् ।

अनाद्यनन्तं महतः परं ध्रुवं

निचाय्य तन्मृत्युमुखात् प्रमुच्यते ॥ Katho. Part I. Canto III. १५॥

anādyanantaṁ mahataḥ parāṁ dhruvaṁ

nicāyya tanmṛtyumukhāt pramucyatē || Katho. Part I. Canto III. 15||

So therefore, the appreciation of God changes and mode of bhakthi also changes; how does the mode of bhakthi change; karma to upāsanam to vēdānta vichāraḥ; This is the change in the mode of my expression of devotion; And not only the mode of devotion varies; the object of devotion; the Lord's nature also varies; And what is the culmination of bhakthi; culmination of bhakthi is nothing but the Lord in his formless nature is none other than myself;

शिव एव सदा जीवः; जीव एव सदा शिवः; वेदिक्य अनयोर् यस्तु, सः जीवन् मुक्तो; नचेतरः

śiva ēva sadā jīvaḥ; jīva ēva sadā śivaḥ; vēdikya anayor yastu, saḥ jīvan muktō; nacētarah jīva ēva sadā śivaḥ; śiva ēva sadā jīvaḥ. In Tamil both will be written and spelt similarly, because ja is not there; therefore what is the culmination of bhakthi; aham Brahma asmi iti jñānam; so bhakthi gives liberation means bhakthi culminating in advaita jñānam gives liberation;

What is the proof for all these things; where do you get all these ideas; if you ask, seventh chapter, we ourselves have seen this:

ārtō jijñāsuarthārthī jñānī ca bharatarṣabha || 7.16||

tēṣāṃ jñānī nityayukta ēkabhaktirviśiṣyatē|.....||7.17||

There while enumerating bhakthas, Krishna says, the greatest bhaktha is one, who has gained the knowledge, aham Brahmāsmi; So this is the second point.

The mode of bhakthi has three levels; karma plus upāsana plus vichārah. The object of bhakthi has three levels; ēkarūpa, anēka rūpa, arūpa. And such a bhakthi will give liberation.

And of this Krishna is here describing anēka rūpa bhakthihi verse No.16, anēka rūpa bhakthi or viśva rūpa Īśvaraḥ is described, of which we have seen the 16th and 17th verses. Now we will enter into the 18th verse, which continues with the topic of viśva rūpa Īśvaraḥ; anēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ.

காகை சிறகினிலை kākai ciraḱiṇile naṅtalālā; even the crow is also naṅtalālā; because crow is also dark, black; and Krishna is also black. In effect the word Krishna in Sanskrit means black only. So when I see a crow, whom should I see; Krishna; how; that is the development; so 9, 10th, 11th chapters we will find viśva rūpa darśana abhyāsaḥ; so we are now going through a training period; and what is the training, see God everywhere. Swamiji it is very difficult; who says it is easy. It is difficult only; but it is worth the effort; we will read verse 18.

गतिर्भर्ता प्रभुः साक्षी निवासः शरणं सुहृत् ।

प्रभवः प्रलयः स्थानं निधानं बीजमव्ययम् ॥ ९.१८ ॥

gatiṛbhartā prabhuḥ sāksī nivāsaḥ śaraṇam suhṛt |

prabhavaḥ pralayaḥ sthānam nidhānam bijamavyayam || 9.18 ||

गतिः gatiḥ I am the goal भर्ताः bhartāḥ the sustainer प्रभुः prabhuḥ the master
साक्षी sāksī the witness निवासः nivāsaḥ the abode शरणम् śaraṇam the refuge सुहृत् suhṛt the well-wisher प्रभवः prabhavaḥ the source प्रलयः pralayaḥ the ground of resolution स्थानम् sthānam the support, निधानम् nidhānam the repository (of all), अव्ययं बीजम् avyayam bijam and the inexhaustible seed.

18. I am the goal, the sustainer, the master, the witness, the abode, the refuge, the well-wisher, the source, the ground of resolution, the Support, the repository (of all), and the inexhaustible seed.

So Krishna gives a list of things here and points out that all these things are I myself or Īśvaraḥ only. So we have to say Gatihi Īśvaraḥ; or Krishnaḥ; bhārtha Īśvaraḥ; prabhuhu Īśvaraḥ or Krishnaḥ; sāksī Krishna; in fact, sarvam Krishna mayam jagat. If Rāma Navami comes, sarvam Rāma mayam jagat; therefore we do not have a partiality or favoritism, any nāma you give, that is the name of the Lord. So we will see the meaning of each one of them;

So gatihi; gatihi means a destination; a goal which is kept in mind by every person; we can say karma phalam; Karma phalam is always the goal of a person; how do you say karma phalam is a goal; because every person is busy doing what karma; and why does he do karma; just because he enjoys; no no; nobody does karma for enjoyment; every karma a person does, only for the sake of a particular phalam; therefore every kartha has karma phalam as his destination; And in Sanskrit, destination is called gatiḥ; therefore gatiḥ is equal to destination or karma phalam; And every karma phalam I am; that means what; success is one type of karma phalam; and what is another; failure is another type of karma phalam and Krishna boldly says; I am the karma phalam, which means what: Success also I am; failure also I am; Therefore never reject failure; rejection of failure is rejection of God; work for success; very good; work for success very good; but be prepared to welcome failure when it comes; this alone Krishna said in the 2nd chapter,

sukhaduḥkhē samē kṛtvā lābhālābhau jayājayau| || 2.38||

Therefore all good and bad, any experience you get, learn to accept it as God himself. and even if there is some difficulty experienced and some even biological pain; once there is no resistance; their psychological sorrow is not there; biological pain we cannot stop; discomfort we cannot stop; but we can stop worry and sorrow by avoiding resistance; resistance always produces heat; You know in physics; whenever there is a wire with a lot of resistance, temperature increases; it gets heated up; Therefore gatiḥ Īśvaraḥ.

Then भर्ता: bhartāḥ; bhartāḥ means, literally it means sustainer; and in this context it means karma phala dhātā; I am the one who gives the karma phalam; and why Krishna says I am the giver of karma phalam; because to determine the karma phalam the result of any action, I should take into account, all the laws of creation; every action produces a result; depending upon infinite number of factors.

You ask the meteorologists, he know; to predict rain, he takes 160 factors or so; and he says tomorrow rain comes, and tomorrow everything other than rain comes; that means what; he is not just bluffing; if we listen to their prediction, we feel that we can also make the prediction; tomorrow rain may or may not come; it might be with thunder or without thunder; it will here and there; for this I can study meteorology; it looks funny; but remember, even to say that he is taking into account so many factors and still why does it fail, because there are still hidden unknown factors; Only omniscient person or principle can perfectly determine the karma phalam; And there is only one omniscient one that is Īśvaraḥ; jīva can never be karma phala datha; Therefore Krishna says I give you the result; so earlier what was said; I am the karma phalam; And the next He says I am the giver of the karma phalam; that means what; how can you ever reject any karma phalam; Thine Will be done; they say in Christianity; whatever you decide, that will happen and I accept. I will never ask a question why me. Why it should it not fall on the neighbour's head and why it should fall on my head. people ask the question, Lord can never be unjust. He is the bhartāḥ; sustainer.

प्रभुः prabhuḥ; prabhuḥ means the one who is he master, who is capable of doing this job; because to become the karma phala dhātā, Lord must have omniscience and also omnipotence, and that shakthi is there; and therefore he is prabhuḥ; prabhavati iti prabhuḥ; it is derived from the root; प्रभुः prabhuḥ; prabhavati means to be capable; to be competent; prabhuḥ means the competent one, to do what: karma phala dhānam.

Then sākṣi; while I am doing all this mischief; of giving varieties of karma phalams to people, even through natural calamities, Bhagavān is giving only karma phalam; that is why earthquake remaining the same, all the jīvas do not get uniform experience. That varies; because of what: again karma phalam; punya pāpa bhēdaḥ; and therefore I do all these kinds of mischief and at the same time, from my original nature standpoint, caitanya driṣṭya, svarūpa driṣṭya, aham sākṣi asmi; paśyañ, śṛṇvan, spr̥śaṅ, jighran, aśnañ, gacchan, svapan, śvasan, from the standpoint of māya śakti, I do everything; from my own standpoint I am mere witness; If you remember the 7th chapter, aparā prakṛti driṣṭya, I do everything, parā prakṛti driṣṭya I am sākṣi; sākṣi chethaa kēvalo nirgunascha. Svethasvatharopanishad.

निवासः nivāsaḥ, nivāsaḥ means I am the abode of everything; I am viśva ādhāraḥ; shāntākāram bhujaga śayanam; padmanābham sureśam. viśva ādhāram gaganasadṛśam; I am the very ādhāra of the world. In the one slōkā itself you see; bhujaga śayanam; I am lying on the bhujaga, a snake; Therefore in the first line, the snake is supporting the Lord; poor Bhagavān, a personal God is lying on bhujaga snake. Dayananda swami says, the first spring cot in the world; coiled; snake coiled; therefore in the first line, what is the ādhāra, snake is the support and Lord is supported by the snake. But in the second line, the whole thing is reversed, in fact, Lord is not lying on the snake; on the other hand, the whole creation is resting on the Lord. so therefore, nivāsaḥ; nivasathi asmin sarvam iti nivāsaḥ.

Then शरणम् śaraṇam; śaraṇam means shelter; refuge. So when every other person in the world rejects Me; when every other person is not able to help me, when I become helpless, as Arjuna became in the battleground, I am the ultimate refuge for everyone; that means what āṛta thrāṇa parāyaṇa; I am the protector of the person who surrenders to Me; so the story of Druva or Prahlada or Draupadi or Gajēndra. All these stories indicate and Lord is a two fold protector; the Lord protects from incidental problems that a person faces, like Draūpadi or Gajēndra; and also Lord is protector from ultimate protector from samsāra; to give incidental protector, Lord has to only kill that person concerned, like that Gajēndra; and the crocodile destroyed; but when the samsāra crocodile, when the samsāra crocodile is tormenting me, and I surrender to the Lord;

then Bhagavān sends sudarśana cakram; darśanam means jñānam. Aham Brahmāsmi sudarśana cakram, through tatvamasi mahavākya upadēsa he sends and destroys the crocodile of samsāra; so incidental protection; ultimate protection; both I give, therefore śaraṇam; śeerayathe dukham asmin iti śaraṇam. śaraṇam by definition means that in whose presence we are free from our problems; सुहृत् suhṛt means a well wisher; suhṛt and mitram, they make a subtle difference, we have seen in the sixth chapter.

sādhuṣvapi ca pāpēṣu samabuddhirviśiṣyatē || 6.9 ||

So in the 6th verses, we saw two words, suhṛt and mitram; what is the difference. When I know someone, and because of my acquaintance and familiarity, I helped him. That kind of help to a known person and also with the idea, that if I help him today, he may help me tomorrow; therefore the person is known person and there is also an expectation; prathupakāram apēkṣya upakartha mitram; Whereas suhṛt is one who helps another person even if that person is unknown. He says that person is a deserving case and then he helps. And not only he helps even an unknown person, he helps without expecting any return; prathupakāram anapēkṣya upakartha, suhṛt;

And what is the Lord; Lord comes under suhṛt category; he does not expect any prathupakāram and we are also ready for that; we should get it free; So therefore, they say that a person promised a house to the Lord; his very very palatial Lord, if the problem is solved; he promised in the crisis; If the problem is solved, palatial house, thinking that Lord will not solve it (he thought that the Lord is like us) and by mistake or whatever may be the reason, the problem was solved. Now how to solve; new problem has come. So how to manipulate and escape; so what he did; see where the buddhi goes you see; He had a cat in the house; and he said that I want to sell (house or equivalent to that) money also can be given; and therefore, he said the house and the cat both together are available for sale; both you have to purchase together; the house cost; Re.1. the cat cost Rs.9,99,999 or something. The cat; and together it is Rs.10 lakhs. So you have to buy them together; and then what was the promise; and through house what I got; Re. 1. and Re.1 he said I will give the Lord. Now think of the intelligence. This is human mind, but still Bhagavān is going to help; and therefore suhṛt.

Then next one प्रभवः prabhavaḥ; प्रभवः प्रलयः स्थानं prabhavaḥ pralayaḥ sthānam; prabhavaḥ means sṛṣṭi kāraṇam; sthānam means stiti kāraṇam, pralayaḥ means laya kāraṇam. These three words put together means sṛṣṭi stiti laya kāraṇam; I am the substratum from whom the creation arises; in whom the creation rests; into whom the creation resolves.

Then निधानम् nidhānam; I am the storehouse, the repository of everything in the creation. Not only everything; even every knowledge also. So suppose scientists are going to discover new theorems or laws nobody has discovered; what about the knowledge; does it exist or not; because nobody has invented that; Our śāstra says that even before invention of that knowledge, that knowledge exists in the creation and where does it exist; in the Lord it exists and therefore knowledge is also a discovery. In fact, we do not produce knowledge we only remove ignorance. Every knowledge is a discovery; and where does it exist; In God. Therefore I am the storehouse of all things, all beings, all forms of knowledge.

And not only that, अव्ययं बीजम् avyayaṁ bījam; I am the inexhaustible seed of this universe. Inexhaustible seed, out of which infinite things appear. Therefore the difference between nidhānam and bījam, one can be taken to be the karma phalam, which are in potential form; sanchita rūpam; and avyayaṁ bījam can be taken as everything and being in the creation, I am the inexhaustible seed. In short; I am everything.

अमृतं चैव मृत्युश्च सदसच्चाहमर्जुन ॥ ९.१९ ॥

tapāmyahamaḥam varṣaṁ nigṛṇhāmyutsrjāmi ca |

amṛtaṃ caiva mṛtyuśca sadasaccāhamarjuna || 9.19 ||

अहं तपामि ahaṃ tapāmi I energise (the universe) अहं निगृह्णामि ahaṃ nigṛhṇāmi I draw च उत्सृजामि ca utsrjāmi and release वर्षं varṣaṃ the rainy waters च एव अमृतम् ca ēva amṛtam I alone am the cause of immortality च मृत्युः ca mṛtyuḥ as well as mortality अहं सत् ahaṃ sat I am the manifest च असत् ca asat as well as the unmanifest अर्जुन Arjuna Oh Arjuna!

19. I energise (the Universe). I draw and release the rainy waters. I alone am the cause of immortality as well as mortality. I am the manifest as well as the unmanifest, Oh Arjuna !

So now Krishna comes to something which is recognised by all the people; whose importance everyone knows and what is that, sūryaḥ; what is the role played by the Sun in our very existence we know; the very earth exists because of the Sun; the very earth is energised because of the Sun; and we survive because of the Sun; and Sun at the right distance; if it comes little nearer, burned; if it goes little back, frozen; at the right distance; and then in the form of season, in various forms, Sun is important, and that is why in our daily prayers, Sun is taken as manifestation of Īśvaraḥ; pratyakṣa daivam; in Sandhyavandam; both in the morning and afternoon;

मित्रस्य चर्षणि धृतः श्रवो देवस्य सानसिम् । सत्यं चित्रश्रवस्तमम् ॥

मित्रो जनान् यातयति प्रजानन् मित्रो दाधार पृथिवि मुतद्याम् । मित्रः कृष्टि-रनिमिषाभिचष्टे सत्याय हव्यं धृतवद्विधेम ॥ mitrasya carṣaṇi dhṛtaḥ śravō dēvasya sānasim | satyaṃ citraśravastamam ||

mitrō janān yātayati prajānan mitrō dādihāra pṛthivi mutadyām | mitraḥ kṛṣṭi-ranimiṣābhicaṣṭē satyāya
havyaṃ dhṛtavadvīdhēma ||

The whole thing is the glory of Sūryaḥ;

And afternoon:

आसत्येन रजसा वर्तमानो निवेशयन्नमृतं मर्त्यं च । हिरण्ययेन सचिता रथेनाऽदेवो याति भुवना विपश्यन् ॥

āsatyēna rajasā vartamāno nivēśayannamṛtaṃ martyaṃ ca | hiraṇyayēna sacitā rathēnā: 'dēvō yāti
bhuvanā vipāśyan ||

Beautiful mantras; I do not know how many of you remember. Sandyavandana mantram. And evening, the Sun has set, it is Varuna mantra; so what I want to say, Sun is taken as a representative of God; because more to think of the role of Sun. Ultimately if you want inexhaustible energy, you will have to go to solar energy; all the other conventional things are going to be in trouble; they are all depleting; either we have to try to get directly from the Sun; or we should try to stimulate the process of the Sun and produce similar form of energy; So the more you think of Sun, your hands will go and therefore Krishna says that Sun, remember, I am. Whatever you touch, He says I am; so अहं तपामि aham tapāmi; sūryarūpēna; in the form of Sun, I alone energise; And if you have to heat the room or heat something; how much gas is required for boiling the water, at the cost of the gas now; imagine the Sun; heat, and what is the charge, free; and what to do, criticise; Sun is too hot; we do not know the value; Go to Himalayas; go to Siberia; or go to Kailas Manasarōvar; then your respect for Sun will increase; because the moment the Sun sets, temperature will suddenly come down; minus; Therefore I heat and energise the universe.

And not only that, I do lot of other things also; why heating the earth; I heat the oceanic waters and evaporate; and if the oceanic waters have to be evaporated; how many cylinders you require; I do not know what is the rate; try to heat with the cylinder, when will it be finished; Lord Sun does evaporate the whole ocean; and tons and tons and tons of pure water; not salt-mix; pure water is thrown upwards; free of cost; and suppose they condense pour into the ocean itself; useless;

वृथा वृष्टिः समुद्रेषु, वृथा तृप्तेषु भोजनम् vṛthā vṛṣṭiḥ samudrēṣu, vṛthā tṛptēṣu bhojanam

(what is the use of feeding one who has already eaten; like that if the rain happens in the ocean, what is the use, no use).

Not only the Sun, the Lord has to evaporate the waters, he has to transport those waters to the land, and if it does not happen, we know, what happens; we are Madrasis. And all these tons and tons of waters are transported; what is the transport; Vayu Bhagavān; Sūrya Bhagavān evaporates; Vāyu Bhagavān transports; and then at the right place, and time; it condenses and you get purest water; but all water is polluted, it is our contribution; acid rain; our contribution; we pollute; And now they are talking about harvesting the rain; ultimately Bhagavān alone has to help; And Lord Krishna says, when all these things happen, seasonally, do not take them for granted; when summer is very hot; appreciate that; it required for evaporation; then the rain is pouring in the rainy season; do not take it for granted; appreciate Bhagavān; Therefore he says; अहं वर्षं निगृह्णामि aham varṣam nigṛhṇāmi; varṣam means rainy waters I absorb through the sunlight; or the heat; so nigṛhṇāmi;

Then what do I do; taking it to the land; उत्सृजामि च utsrjāmi ca; I release those waters; nigṛhṇāmi means I absorb; utsrjāmi I release; all with the help of Sun and Wind;

And because of this alone अमृतं चैव मृत्युश्च amṛtaṃ caiva mṛtyuśca. So this has two meaning; one is relative meaning, empirical; another is philosophical.

Relative meaning is: I am the cause of survival because through the rains, I am the producer of food; and because of food alone, people escape from maranam; therefore I am the cause of amṛtaṃ, I am the cause of survival, by providing what, anna dhānēna. And suppose I withdraw my blessing; I do not do nigṛhṇāmi and utsrjāmi; I do not do; there are no rains; what happens; there is drought; and every year you read, because of the drought; people, cattle, they all die; therefore Krishna says, I am the cause of mṛtyu also; by producing drought; I am responsible for prosperity and survival and I am responsible for drought and death also; How do I do that; by giving the rain; and by not giving the rain; both I am; this is from empirical angle;

From philosophical angle, I am the cause for both mortality and immortality; So here mortality means jñānam; so I am the cause of immortality; in the form of jñānam; I give jñānam; and give immortality to the seekers; and I am the cause of mortality also; when I do not bless the people or ajñāna; so mama satva guna dvāra; amṛtasya kāraṇam; mama tamo guṇa dvāra; aham ēva mṛtyu kāraṇam; I am the cause of both, mortality and immortality;

Then सत् अस्तु अहं एव sat asat aham ēva; the word sat and asat have several meanings; we will take a simpler meaning in this context; sat means manifest creation; concrete creation; visible creation; mūrtha prapañcaḥ; vyaktha prapañcaḥ; asat means the unmanifest, abstract, the amūrtha prapañcaḥ; For example, physical body is the manifest one; the subtle body and the causal body are unmanifest; both concrete and abstract creation I am.

इष्ट्वा iṣṭvā having worshipped माम् यज्ञैः mām Me यज्ञैः yajñaiḥ thro yajñās त्रैविद्याः

20. Having worshiped Me through yajñās, those people who know the three Vēdas, who drink the soma-juice (in Somayaga), and who are purified of sins pray for access to the heavens. Having reached the sacred world of Indra, they enjoy the celestial pleasures, of the Gods in the heavens.

With the previous verse, that is the 19th verse, the topic of bhakthi as a means of liberation is over. And you should very carefully note what it means; bhakthi hi mōkṣa sādhanatvena:

मोक्षकारणसामग्र्यां भक्तिरेव गरीयसी |
स्वस्वरूपानुसन्धानं भक्तिरित्यभिधीयते ||३१||
mōkṣakāraṇasāmagryāṁ bhaktirēva garīyasī |

svasvarūpānusandhānaṁ bhaktirityabhidhīyatē ||31||

Bhakthi as a means. Now from this verse, 20th verse, up to the 29th verse, Krishna wants to talk about two types of bhakthi; bhakthi has two modes or two types; and what are they; sakāma bhakthi; and niṣkāma bhakthi; And what do you mean by that; sakāma bhakthi is a bhakthi; through which a person seeks either artha or kāma; that is sakāma bhakthi; a bhakthi which is utilised for material ends. Krishna does not want to say which one you should choose; He objectively presents; these are the two forms of bhakthi; which to use, you have to decide; The choice is yours; I am here to give you what is the means and what is the end; sakāma bhakthi will give you artha; artha means all types of worldly security and kāma; all types of worldly entertainment; Bhakthi can be; materialistic ends; and if it is niṣkāma bhakthi; a person chooses the same bhakthi; and he says I am not interested in artha or kāma; because I know their limitation;

And therefore I want to use the same bhakthi; whether it is karma or upāsana, I want to utilise it for moksha or things connected with moksha; both will come under niṣkāma bhakthi; a niṣkāma seeks mōkṣa; or things allied to moksha; what do you mean things allied to mōkṣa; sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi should come, we pray: Oh Lord! May I have purity of mind; May I develop all the virtues which are required for knowledge; And if I have all the qualifications I can pray for opportunity to study the śāstras; because without śāstra vicāra; where will I go; because that is the guiding principle. Therefore Oh Lord give me an opportunity for śāstra vicāra; that is also niṣkāma bhakthi; and I have got śāstra m in my hand, but no guru; that means what you have got a coco cola but you do not have opener; without opener, you have to just sit, without being able to enjoy it; Similarly śāstra coco cola can be opened only by guru; special opener; that is called sampradhāya; sampradhāya is śāstra; coco cola or pepsi opener (I am not supporter of only coco cola;) you can pray for a Guru; If you are not satisfied with Guru; better guru you can pray for; all these things will come under niṣkāma bhakthi; Krishna wants to talk about a comparative study of sakāma niṣkāma bhakthi;

So bhakthi starts with sakāma bhakthi. In verse No.20 and 21; He starts with sakāma bhakthi, because majority comes under sakāma bhaktha. How do you differentiate; will there be a special colour in the body or anything; sakāma bhakthi is white or yellow?: how do you know who is sakāma bhaktha or how does God know? it is based on the sankalpa, the motive with which you express your bhakthi; if it is a religious activity, motive is indicated by mamopātha samastha duritha kṣaya dvāra; danam, dhānyam, ashum, bahu puthra lābham; śatha samvassaram; a very big list; even by mistake, mōkṣa would not come there; so many things will be there; can't they also add mōkṣa to that list? mōkṣam api; it is not even last time; So if it is religious activity, the sankalpa will indicate, if it is non-religious activity, your motive, when you do business, what is the purpose of business. somebody asked; only for money making; Or you can say; money making is incidental; but through this I want the citta śuddhi; citta śuddhi is my primary aim; and incidentally I require money to run the show; If it is citta śuddhi pradhāna activity, it is niṣkāma; and if it is money pradhāna activity, it is sakāma;

And here Krishna says, most of the people are interested in pleasure. But. and according to the vēdic scriptures, the highest form of pleasure is what; heaven; the golden days; now America; by hook or crook; land there; and if a lady is pregnant, make sure that the child is born there; land there and have the delivery of the child there; we consider it a curse to be in America; and I heard some Indians abroad will shy to say that I am of Indian origin; So it is heaven bound universe; which Krishna says they will have heaven; but they will come back.

Om

Having talked about bhakthi in general as a means of mōkṣa, now Krishna is talking about two types of bhakthi; sakāma bhakthi and niṣkāma bhakthi. We have analysed this topic in the seventh chapter already; I had pointed out that the 9th chapter is very very close to the 7th chapter. There I had pointed out that the bhakthi can be classified into three levels; based on the motive that a person has or the way that a person looks at the Lord; and the three levels of bhakthi are mandha bhakthi; madhyama bhakthi and uttama bhakthi.

At the level of mandha bhakthi, I look upon God only as a means for getting my worldly ends for getting worldly benefit; like health or wealth or property or freedom from disease. I used Lord purely as a means. Bhagavān was the sādhanam and the worldly things are the sādhyam. And this form of bhakthi is called mandha bhakthi; this form of bhakthi is called the lowest form of bhakthi; because I do not love God for the sake of God; I love God for the sake of some other worldly benefit; and whenever we love someone for the sake of some other thing, that love is a fake love. When somebody loves me for the sake of borrowing money from me, and as long as I lend money, he loves me, he says you are Indra, Chandra, great swami, whatever it is; and I wanted to test that person and stop giving money, and gradually the friendship also is broken; his love is also broken. Now you ask the question, did that person love me for my sake; or for the sake of money. So when I have money, somebody loves; when I have no money, the same people do not love; then it is very clear that they love money, rather than me. This is a simple anvaya-vyathirēka logic; I have people love; I have no money, people do not love; it is very clear, people love money and not me. Similarly, when I love God for the sake of worldly benefit, that love of God cannot be treated as true love, because that love is directed towards the worldly benefit and I love God incidentally, because he is supposed to fulfill my worldly desires. So the lowest form of bhakthi is in which God is the means

And after this kind of mandha bhakthi; a person becomes more and more mature and begins to understand that God is superior to all the worldly things that I can accomplish; God is superior to all the worldly things I can accomplish and therefore, my attitude towards God changes. Until now I worshipped God; taking God as a means for other ends. Now I change the party, I say instead of loving God for the sake of the world; I begin to love God as an end in itself. So God is no more means but God is that end for me; and if at all I use the world, the world is no more end. Now the world has become the means; a total reversal with regards to means-end perception, which is a radical change; and this change is called madhyama bhakthi; in which God becomes the end.

And the first bhakthi; mandha bhakthi is called otherwise sakāma bhakthi; and madhyama bhakthi is called niṣkāma bhakthi; because while I worship Lord, I do not ask for any of those worldly things; these are the two levels of bhakthi; Krishna is going to emphasise in these verses; And there is a third level of bhakthi also; which is called uttama bhakthi. In the madhyama bhakthi, I look upon God as the end; and certainly the love for God is superior to the love for the world; because the world is means, God is the end; love for the end, is certainly superior to the love for the means. But Vēdānta goes one step further; when you love God; because it is a goal for you; I will ask the question why do you want to keep God as your goal; why cant' you keep money; why cant' you victory; why cant' you keep Presidency; some other thing; why do you want to keep God as your goal; then the answer he will give is; if I attain God, I will be happy; so why does a devotee desire to attain God; that is again for the benefit of his own happiness and therefore superior to the goal in the love of oneself; because I love the goal; not for the sake of the goal itself; I love the goal, for the sake of myself only; If the goal will not give me happiness; then what will I do; change the goal. So therefore, as long as you see Lord as the goal; certainly you love God; but that love of God is also lesser than; lesser than what; lesser than the love for oneself.

It is a beautiful approach; you have to meditate on this idea; love for the end is superior to the love for the means; And love for oneself is superior to the love for the end, because I love the end for whose sake; not for the sake of the end; but for the sake of myself; And therefore in the highest level of bhakthi; God is neither the means nor the end, I have to discover God as myself.

And when God and self becomes identical; the love or devotion has reached the climax, which is called advaita bhakthi; abēda bhakthi; parā bhakthi; jñāna bhakthi. This Krishna talked about in the 7th chapter; udārāḥ sarva ēvaitē jñānī tvātmaiva mē matam.

Arjuna all types of all kinds of devotees are certainly great; but the greatest devotee is that jñānī who is none other than myself; jñānī to ātmaiva mē matam. So therefore, what are the three levels that we have to go through; first God is the means called sakāma bhakthi; then God is the end, which is called niṣkāma bhakthi; and thereafter God is myself; which is advaita bhakthi.

Now all these three levels; Krishna is talking about; first we are talking sakāma bhakthi; 20 and 21 talks about the mandha bhakthi. And what do the mandha bhaktha or sakāma bhaktha do? They worship the Lord alright and the Lord comes and asks what do you want; And they think a lot and asks for the wrong thing; That is called moha or delusion; Krishna talks about that; त्रैविद्या मां सोमपाः पूतपापाः यज्ञैः माम् इष्ट्वा traividya māṁ sōmapāḥ pūtapāpā yajñaiḥ mām iṣṭvā; they are all great bhakthas; traividya; informed in all the three vēdās; sōmapāḥ, they have performed sōma yāga; and explained in the last class; and they have offered soma rasa to the agni and they have taken sōma rasa prasāda also and therefore they are called sōmapāḥ; sōmapāḥ means those who consume sōma rasa; soma rasa pibathi iti sōmapāḥ; And because of this sōma rasa pānam; it should be taken only as part of yāga; Separately taken it is liquor; they are not supposed to take it separately; only as part of the yāga; and in the form of a prasāda; when they take, they become what; pūtapāpā; they are all free from all the pāpam; they acquire enormous amount of puṇyam. So they have been given a blank cheque; and Bhagavān says you can write anything; I am ready to give anything; you want world, I am willing to give; you want God, I am willing to give. So both are ready; you can choose anyone; as we saw in Kathopaniṣad;

तौ सम्परीत्य विविनक्ति धीरः ।

śrēyaśca prēyaśca manuṣyamētaḥ

tau samparītya vivinakti dhīraḥ || Part I. Canto II. 2 ||

both ends are there; but what do these people do; स्वर्गतिं प्रार्थयन्ते svargatiṁ prārthayantē; gatiḥ means goal; destination; and svar means svarga; so svargatiṁ means svarga gatiṁ, svarga phalam; gati means phalam; so svargati; means svarga gatiṁ prārthayantē.

And as far as Bhagavān is considered, he does not have any choice; that is why you should always remember, what you get in life is not determined by Bhagavān; we generally think whatever we are getting Bhagavān is giving; if Bhagavān is responsible for the choice of your experience; then certainly that Bhagavān will become partial Bhagavān; because for some people He gives a happy life; for some people He gives unhappy life; Bhagavān will be partial; therefore remember, Bhagavān does not chose what He should give; then Bhagavān is like what; a shopkeeper; whatever you want, you ask; your goal is to be decided by you only; your guru cannot decide; your parents cannot decide; Bhagavān cannot decide; Bhagavān says I am willing to give whatever you want; and therefore whatever you get is chosen by whom; you have asked for it; therefore never blame the stars; we are very good to blame others. As somebody said: To err is human; but to blame someone is more human. So therefore we say it is because of the wife, husband, children or neighbour; or someone else. My child gets good marks; but because of the company of the neighbour's child, he is spoilt; but the same complaint your neighbour has!

So therefore never make anyone responsible for your lot; you are responsible for whatever you are going through now; Therefore Bhagavān says these people, instead of seeking God, they seek svarga; I want to enjoy. What will Bhagavān do; Bhagavān cannot force. Svarga is not good; why are you asking that; I will give you mōkṣa; this person will reject mōkṣa; is like a baby we have got gold biscuits and real biscuits; real biscuit means eatable biscuits. Now you take a gold biscuit and eatable biscuit; gold biscuit also they swallow; I read in today's paper itself; people swallow that also. Normally it is not eaten; gold biscuit and eatable biscuit; and you ask the baby, what do you what; the baby will ask for the eatable biscuit; it will ask what can I do with the gold biscuit; poor child does not know that gold biscuit can buy millions of eatable biscuits; this is called nithya anitya vasthu vivekaḥ nāsthi.

And we laugh at the children, but we are doing the same thing; world is the eatable biscuit; God is the gold biscuit. From the Lord you can buy millions and millions of the worldly ānanda; we do not know. So if the mother is going to force the child; to take the gold biscuit; the child will cry only; therefore what will the mother do; OK; hopefully, the child will grow up later, and ask for the right biscuit; but now let me give this biscuit to the child. Similarly, Bhagavān also decides to give the svarga, eatable biscuit and the mōkṣa gold biscuit is lost; And therefore Krishna says, ते सुरेन्द्रलोकम् आसाध्य tē surendralōkaṁ āsādhya. Those unintelligent people those sakāma bhakthas, those mandha bhaktas; surendralōkaṁ āsādhya; āsādhya means reaching; attaining; the world of indra; what is the world of indra; svarga lōkaḥ; so surendralōkaṁ, svarga lōkaṁ āsādhya; What type of surendra lōkaṁ it is; puṇyam surendralōkaṁ; पुण्यं puṇyam means puṇya phala rūpam; or sacred; the sacred heaven which is full of joy; full of sense pleasures. So eternal December season; in Tamil Nadu music season; the weather is also fine; and there is all over music; Go from this sabha to that sabha; and in between they eat at Woodlands or in the sabha canteen and they feel the vadai sambar is better than the music concert; they go for that; So therefore, செவிக்கு உணவு ;வயத்துக்கு உணவு ,cevikku uṇavu, vayattukku uṇavu; imagine that you do thoroughout the life; that is svarga loka; you go from one place to another; खावो पीयो मजा करो khāvō pīyō majā karo only. Therefore अश्नन्ति aśnanti; He himself says; aśnanti; they consume; they partake; देवभोगान् devabhogān; all the heavenly pleasures; celestial pleasures, in divi; in svarga lōkhe; dēvabhōgān; pleasures enjoyed by other Gods; This person also partakes and they are all दिव्यान् divyān; divyān; means supernatural extra- ordinary; you cannot even imagine such pleasures; divyān means aloukikaan; aloukika sukham they will enjoy.

When we hear this description, it appears as though this sakāma bhaktha have made the right choice; they have chosen heaven; of course not now; after death; first qualification is you should die; that is understood; after death, they go to svarga loka. So isn't it a right choice; Krishna is going to examine that in the next verse.

भुक्त्वा bhuktvā having enjoyed तं विशालं स्वर्गलोकम् taṁ viśālaṁ svargalōkaṁ that vast heavenly world ते विशन्ति te viśanti they come back मर्त्यलोकम् martyalōkaṁ to the world of mortals पुण्ये क्षीणे puṇye kṣiṇe when their punya is exhausted एवम् evam thus कामकामाः kāmakāmāḥ the seeker of sense-pleasures अनुप्रपन्नः anuprapannaḥ who have taken to, त्रयिधर्मम् trayīdharmam the rituals of the Vēdās लभन्ते labhante attain गतागतम् gatāgatam (only the lot of) arrival and departure

21. Having enjoyed that vast heavenly world, they come back to the world of mortals when their punya is exhausted. Thus, the seekers of sense-pleasures who have taken to the ritual of the Vēdās attain (only the lot of) arrival and departure.

So Krishna says their choice seems to be wonderful choice; certainly they go to a wonderful world; and they will enjoy wonderful pleasures; and that too not for a short while; for very many long years. Therefore Krishna says, ते तं भुक्त्वा स्वर्गलोकं tē taṁ bhuktvā svargalōkaṁ; bhuktvā; so they enjoy the heavenly pleasures there; whatever you imagine in the world; those pleasures are there; And not only that; every dēva has got supernatural powers also; which means sankalpa mātrēṇa; by mere visualisations itself, they can order all the pleasures.

And how big is this svarga lōkaṁ; will it be crowded like Madras with traffic jam and all; विशालं viśālaṁ; svarga lōkaṁ; therefore it is not at all crowded; each one can have a huge mansion; Such a vast svarga lōka sukam; svarga lōkaṁ; they enjoy.

Up to this is the brighter aspect of sakāma bhakthi. And generally people see the brighter aspect only, like seeing the rose and not seeing the thorn behind it; What is this thorn; Krishna is going to describe; This svarga lōka is given only for the puṇyam that has been earned by karma; this svarga sukham is given not free of cost; you have to pay through your nose. OK; for every milligram of pleasure, you have to spend in heavenly dollars; not our rupee; heavenly dollars called puṇyam;

And how did you earn the puṇyam; through your karma; what type of karma; sōma yāgāthi karma; and this money is earned through karma; earned money will be limited only. Any amount you earn and save, it will be a limited amount only; it cannot be infinite amount of money and the tragedy is; in svarga lōka, you can only spend puṇyam; you cannot earn fresh puṇyam; or else as in America you can get scholarship and assistance ship etc. and they earn also; but in svarga lōka it is only bhōga bhūmi. It is never a karma bhūmi; which means the earned puṇyam will be gradually depleted; gradually exhausted; So the bank accounts puṇyam bank accounts becomes lesser and lesser and that means what one day; whatever puṇyam has taken you to svarga; that whole puṇyam gets exhausted; visa expires;

Then what will happen; at least in some other countries, you may try to evade and somehow overstay; continue; but in svarga; the heavenly computers and heavenly police are well maintained; the person is identified and what will happen; Krishna tells puṇye kṣiṇe sati; when all the heavenly puṇyams are exhausted, मर्त्यलोकम् martyalōkaṁ viśanti; back to Madras with mosquitoes.

So previously I stayed with celestial; now my company is mosquito; so therefore क्षीणे पुण्ये मर्त्यलोकं विशन्ति kṣiṇē puṇyē martyalōkaṁ viśanti; and Mundaka upaniṣad says, even marthya lōkaṁ is not guaranteed; it all depends upon what is the next karma that is fructifying; if the next fructifying karma is inferior type, even manuṣya lōka is not guaranteed; the upaniṣad says

nākasya pṛṣṭē tē sukṛtē:'nubhūtvēmaṁ lōkaṁ hīnataraṁ vā viśanti || One.II.10 ||

And therefore you have to come back; OK: so what; so what if you ask the problem is any object which gives you pleasure by its company, the very same object will give you pain when it goes away from you; any object which gives joy by association; the very same object gives sorrow because of dissociation; very very natural; if you are watching a movie; very interesting one; and in the middle, the current goes; you do not have generator also; now even they have that; Now if you have generator, suppose generator also goes; you get so wild; and your anger is directly proportional to the enjoyment that you derive; Therefore having enjoyed like people who stay in America for long time, they criticise India left and right; they might have lived here; then they write letters also. letters to the editors; it is put in the positive sense only; But the mind is such that having enjoyed something, it cannot settle for anything lesser than that; and therefore the withdrawal symptom it is called; is extremely painful. Therefore martyalōkaṁ viśanti; they come back to the duḥkha lōkaṁ.

And then what they have to do; he is like an addicted person; after the effect of the addiction is going; there is a tremendous withdrawal symptom; again he has to go back to the same condition. Therefore get some money and try to go to the same condition; whether it is drug; alcohol or anything; and again the effect goes; and again do that; it goes on and on; Krishna says, every samsāri is like an addict; does karma; enjoys; loses everything; again does karma; enjoys; loses everything; karma, phalam, janma, again karma, phalam, janma; karma phalam janma; गतागतं कामकामा लभन्ते gatāgataṁ kāmakāmā labhantē.

Therefore एवं evam, in this manner; त्रयीधर्ममनुप्रपन्नाः trayidharmam anuprapannaḥ; those people who follow the ritualistic portion of the vēdās; the karma kanda portion of the vēdās and with what attitude; kāma kāma ha; with an aim of pure enjoyment, sensory enjoyment, worldly pleasures, kāma kāmaḥ here means viṣaya kāma; first kāma means viṣaya; kāma kāmaḥ means viṣaya kāma; a person who is interested in sensory pleasures; such people do all the pooja, etc. but use puṇyam earned for the sake of the perishable pleasures.

And therefore what is their lot; gatāgataṁ labhantē. So the consequence is gataṁ agataṁ cha; gataṁ means what; svarga gamanam; agataṁ means bhūlōka agamanam; again svarga gamanam; again bhūlōka agamanam; in between naraka gamanam. and again bhūlōka agamanam.

One has to come to bhūlōka at regular intervals. Why, because all earnings you can do here only; in the other 13 lōkās, whether it is 6 upper lokas, or 7 lower lōkās, all the 13 lokas are only for exhaustion of your earnings; in the lower lokas you exhaust your pāpam; in higher lōkās, you exhaust your puṇyam; and again if the bank balance has to be built up, you have to come to bhūlōka. Therefore gamanāgamanam. This is called autobiography of a samsāri; I have told you, it is biography of a auto; What does auto do; gata agataṁ; to the stand; Anna Nagar; and again to T Nagar; it is going round and round; that is why it is called auto-biography. OK; that is my interpretation. Right!

Continuing.

अनन्याश्चिन्तयन्तो मां ये जनाः पर्युपासते ।

तेषां नित्याभियुक्तानां योगक्षेमं वहाम्यहम् ॥ ९.२२ ॥

ananyāścintayantō māṁ yē janāḥ paryupāsate |

tēṣāṁ nityābhiyuktānāṁ yōgākṣēmaṁ vahāmyaham || 9.22 ||

जनाः janāḥ (those people) ये अनन्याः ye ananyāḥ who see Me as non-different from them, पर्युपासते paryupāsate offer worship चिन्तयन्तः माम् cintayantaḥ māṁ (by) dwelling on Me, अहं वहामि ahaṁ vahāmi I take care of, योगक्षेमम् yogākṣemam the yoga and kshema तेषां नित्याभियुक्तानाम् teṣāṁ nityābhiyuktānām of those ever-steadfast ones.

22 (Those) people who see Me as non-different from them offer worship (by) dwelling on Me. I take care of the yoga and kshema of those eversteadfast ones.

In the previous two verses, Krishna talked about sakāma bhaktha or manda bhaktha; for whom God is only the means, world is the end; Now in this important verse, often quoted verse, Bhagavān talks about the madhyama bhaktha; the niṣkāma bhaktha; for whom God is not a means for other things; God is the means also; the end also. God is the end; that is the highlight; OK.

And when God is the end, the love for God will be certainly superior; you know why, because if you study your mind, your mind is obsessed with the end alone, your mind is never obsessed with the means. When you want to go to Delhi and when you are travelling by the train; or flight; you will certainly go to the respective station, airport or railway station; you purchase the ticket; you do everything; but throughout the journey, your mind is going to dwell on what; who has come to the station; whether the elder sister or younger sister; how to go from the station, if they do not come; how is the whether going to be there when I reach there; but your mind is soaked with the end thought only; Not only travel; anything you want to build a house; you do all the transactions with the contractor; and you talk to the contractor, you never fall in love with the contractor; because the contractor is only a means; that is what I think; Now you only dwell upon the house; when is he going to finish it; when will he give; whether he will give it or not, etc. etc. These are all done; transactions go on; but your mind is absorbed in the end. Similarly here also; in the case of madhyama bhaktha; he does all the worldly transactions; but the absorption in the ultimate goal of his life; That is called Bhagavān in purāṇic language; that is called mōkṣa in vēdāntic language; that is called theevra mumukṣatvam in vēdāntic language; that is called jijñāsu bhakthi in the 7th chapter language.

And therefore since the end occupies the mind; it is so powerful that it displaces all the other things from your mind; It displaces, imagine, you have a important function next week, you are going to conduct the wedding of your daughter after 7-years of horoscope hunting; looking for that; You might do everything; your mind is going to dwell; Or you are a new mother; and have a young baby and it is the first one; you do all transactions; but your mind absorbed in that; that is called ananya bhakthi; a bhakthi in which the absorption into the Lord displaces all the other secondary goals of life.

The other goals of life are not ignored; very careful; even though you have the thought of the Delhi; you go to the right railway station; you go the Central; you do not end up in Egmore; you never commit mistake there; you purchase the ticket; and you go to the right platform also; (you will not enter into a different train) and show the ticket, you do all those things; but they are all in a subdued level; compared to one thought that is there; Delhi that job in Delhi; businessman, business thought; musician, musical thought.

So therefore, absorption into the Lord does not mean ignorance of one's family duties. Krishna is not talking about disregarding or disrespecting one's duty; they are being done properly; but when I have to choose the goal of life; I vote for "This is my ambition in life"; and that is there in my sub-conscious all the time.

And therefore ananyaḥ; without any other goal occupying the mind; जनाः पर्युपासते janāḥ mām paryupāsate; janāḥ madhyama bhakthāḥ; nishakāma bhakthāḥ;

jijñāsu bhakthāḥ; mām paryupāsate; they worship me without any other goal; other than mōkṣa; OK.

Then what about the worry regarding the worldly what you call duties and other things; because we have to earn; we have to take care of the family, children, grand children; because this person is absorbed; what will he do for yoga and kshema; yōga means acquiring whatever is required; is yōgaḥ; aprāpyasya prāp̥thi; like the basic needs of life, food, clothing, shelter;

And the second thing is kṣēma; kṣēma means what; prāp̥thasya rakṣaṇam; protecting whatever I have acquired; acquisition and preservation; these are the two basic pursuits in human life; if you look back what you have been doing, it is either acquiring or preserving; these two only we have been doing; what has happened is Krishna's worry is we spend the whole life for this; that we have no time to think of anything higher. So all the five days or six days we are busy; especially if they are working people we are busy and there are only two days, weekend, they are weakened; (rightly named). So they are so weakened therefore you only want entertainment; we cannot think of Gītā, upaniṣad because, the demands your attention; you do not want to read such books where buddhi is required; you want to read only those books where buddhi is not required; Stardust; So therefore only dusty thing; so that you do not require buddhi; you will only lose whatever you have; again Monday comes; and busy up to Saturday; Sunday you do lot of things and again Monday comes;

दिन्यामिन्यौ सायं प्रातः

dinayāminyau sāyaṁ prātaḥ

tadapi na muñcatyāśāvāyuh ||12||

20th century is going away; every day we are going closer; closer to what; yamadharma rāja; closer of yamadharma rāja; we are not aware; Therefore Krishna tells you have to take care of yōgaḥ kṣēmaḥ to some extent; but total yōgaḥ kṣēmaḥ you can never; you can never provide; perfect security human beings can never provide; because everything in life is insecure; the President; the Prime Minister, and they have got the security. And a prime minister gets killed by the security; what will you do.

So therefore, thinking that I can provide perfect security is the greatest myth in life; And therefore whatever is to be taken care of, you take care of, but you have to fill up the gap only by one method; What is that; surrender to the Lord; to the extent possible I have done; but I do not want to brood over it; and worry over it all the time; Bhagavān will take care of; does not mean that we should be irresponsible people; whatever is humanly possible I do; and whatever I acquire, there is sense of insecurity; whether it is enough or not; inflation; after 10 years monthly Rs.10000 will be sufficient or not; doubt; so you can calculate and die; you do not even enjoy; therefore where is the limit to the security; therefore take care of a little; and leave it to the Lord; then what is the advantage; you can attend Gītā class; the advantage is your mind is available for something beyond local yōgaḥ kṣēmaḥ; even if you have perfect yōgaḥ kṣēmaḥ; you are going to die anyway; therefore why I should spent the whole life for that; therefore take care of yōgaḥ kṣēmaḥ to an extent and leave the rest to the Lord;

Now our next worry is: Is Lord reliable? because we know nobody around is reliable; because crucial moment, they will drop us; you know that; since we have experienced that the human beings are unreliable; people wonder whether God is like anyone of us; Bhagavān says No; if there is one reliable one, that is only Me. so योगक्षेमं वहाम्यहम् yōgakṣēmaṁ vahāmyaham; I am the real LIC. The other local LIC will catch fire; require another LIC. when Life Insurance itself burns what will you do; therefore I will take care of your yōgaḥ kṣēmaḥ; do not worry; but what is the condition; I will take condition; under one condition; is very very careful; तेषां नित्याभियुक्तानां tēṣāṁ nityābhiyuktānām; those who are very committed to the goal of myself; For them the goal is the Lord; and nothing else; abhiyuktāḥ means steadfast, committed; for those people; they are called jijñāsu bhakthas, theevra mumukṣu or madhyma bhaktha; I will take care of their yōgaḥ and kṣēmaḥ; very very practical slōkā, which Bhagavān provides, because every person has a sense of insecurity in the mind; Normally grihastha should be secure; insecurity should be felt by Sanyāsis; because only for sanyāsis; there is no one; only Sanyāsis has got no relationship, he has broken; if at all worry should be there; sanyasi should worry and those sanyāsis do not worry; and a grihastha who has got children and grand children; and money and this and that; that he worries indicates that security does not depend upon your external possessions; it depends upon your state of mind; without anything to possess, you can feel secure; with everything to possess; you can feel insecure; and the greatest beauty is what; we get children; for our security; and thereafterwards we grow old; we begin to worry the children's security; now tell me; they are security for us? or we are security for them? if you feel that both are mutually secured, that means both are insecure; it is like I telling you that I will give you Rs.10 loan if you give me Rs.10 low; Then we will happily live; Remember two beggars cannot depend on each other; Two insecure members can never give mutual security; therefore all the insecure members should draw security only from one ever secure entity; and that is called Bhagavān; and therefore Krishna gives a guarantee card; Krishna also gives a guarantee card; for how many months; not for three or six months; it is eternal guarantee; you trust Me you will be safe; you trust Me you will be safe;

Continuing;

येऽप्यन्यदेवताभक्ताः यजन्ते श्रद्धयान्विताः ।

कौन्तेय kaunteya oh ! son of Kunti अपि ते api te even those ये अपि अन्यदेवताभक्ताः ye api anyadevatābhaktāḥ who are devotees of other finite gods यजन्ते yajante and who worship (them), श्रद्धयान्विताह् śraddhayānvitāḥ with faith यजन्ति yajanti are worshipping माम् एव mām eva Me alone अविधिपूर्वकम् avidhipūrvakam unknowingly.

23. Oh! Arjuna, even those who are devotees of other finite Gods and who worship (them) with faith, are worshipping Me alone unknowingly.

So in the previous verse Krishna said, the niṣkāma bhaktha are those who worship Me. Now does that mean that every seeker of mōkṣa should worship Krishna; does it mean that one should not worship other dēvathās; so there is a question regarding who is inferior dēvathā; who is superior dēvathā; etc. the problem comes; which is a big problem in our religion; whether Śiva or Viṣnu; In some places, whether Śiva or śakthi; trouble in the house itself; so therefore father or mother; न्नाणा न्नाया nāṇā nīyā; so therefore people have this difficulty and therefore Krishna wants to clarify that; I have clarified this in the 7th chapter in the verse yo yo yam yam tanur bhaktha.

I just remind briefly; that any form of God is finite in nature; because form means finite; therefore Krishna form or Śiva form or Vishnu form, a personal deity has to be necessarily finite only; but in any particular form, we can invoke a finite power; or the infinite itself; what we invoke is purely in our hand; so the value of a deity depends upon what; our invocation; I gave you an example also; do you remember; the value of a cheque leaf; depends upon what you write on it; first leaf is superior or second leaf is superior; we have to say after it is written; before writing; all the leafs are of equal value; provided the money is in the bank; of course; similarly here also all the devathas are equal; finite only; but when I invoke infinite, then Krishna in whom infinite is invoked will become, the superior-most God and all the other dēvathās will become what; finite; If you invoke infinite in Śiva; Śiva will become infinite; all others will become finite; in the Bhagavad Gītā; Krishna represents infinitude; therefore Krishna tells I should be worshipped; even if I worship any other dēvathā also; it will come to me alone; because all the finite are included in the infinite; this is going to be said; we will see in the next class.

Om

In the portions of the 9th chapter, beginning from the 22nd verse up to 29th verse, Lord Krishna is classifying bhakthi into two types, based on the motive with Bhakthi is expressed or practised. The motive behind bhakthi can be two-fold, with regard to the ignorant people. We are not taking into account a jñāni whose bhakthi is absolutely motiveless. The motiveless bhakthi of a jñāni is not taken into account. Jñāni does not have a motive because he has nothing to accomplish; He does not want to attain even mōkṣa because, already accomplished mōkṣa; and he is not interested in dharma arta kāma because, dharma arta kāma being finite and mōkṣa being infinite; all the finite accomplishments are included in the infinite and therefore a jñāni does not want dharma, arta, kāma or mōkṣa;

naiva tasya kṛtēnārthō nākṛtēnēha kaścana |
na cāsya sarvabhūtēṣu kaścīdarthavyapāśrayaḥ || 3.18 ||

Krishna said in the 3rd chapter. Therefore jñāni bhakthi is motiveless; that jñāni is not considered in this context, Here we are discussing bhakthi is an ajñāni and therefore who will necessary have some motive; some axe to grind; And based on the motive, bhakthi is classified into two; one is called sakāma bhakthi; in which the person, an ajñāni worships the lord, for the sake of everything else, other than God. He worships God; he does namaskāra to do; and when God asks what do you want; he will enumerate everything other than God/ So his attitude is let God be where he is. God is in heaven; everything is fine here; There is a saying; so such a bhakthi is sakāma bhakthi; such a bhakthi is motivated by the desire for dharmarta kāma, put together in Kathōpaniṣad was called preyas; interested in materialist desires. Whereas niṣkāma bhakthi is also a motivated bhakthi; very careful; the niṣkāma bhakthi of an ajñāni, we are not taking about the bhakthi of a jñāni; Niṣkāma bhakthi of an ajñāni is also a motivated bhakthi. When why do you call niṣkāma bhakthi; when you say motivated, how can you say niṣkāma; niṣkāma bhakthi is a bhakthi in which the bhaktha is not interested in anything other than God. So why is it Niṣkāma; he is not interested in anything other than God. Therefore it is called Niṣkāma bhakthi; and even in that niṣkāma bhakthi; there is a motive and what is that; Oh Lord, I do not want anything other than you. As one devotee offers a beautiful prayer:

यद् भाव्यं तद् भवतु भगवन्पूर्वकर्मानुरूपम् ।
एतत्प्रार्थ्यं मम बहुमतं जन्मजन्मान्तरेऽपि
त्वत्पादाम्भोरुहयुगगता निश्चला भक्तिरस्तु ॥ ५ ॥
nāsthā dharmē na vasunicayē naiva kāmōpabhōgē
yad bhāvyaṁ tad bhavatu Bhagavānpūrvakarmānurūpam | ētatprārthyaṁ mama bahumataṁ janmajanmāntarē:pi
tvatpādāmbhōruhayugagatā niścalā bhaktirastu || 5 ||

Mukunda Mala of Kulasekhara Alwar

Oh Lord, I have no interest in dharma; no interest in arta; no interest in kāma; na āsthā; āsthā means: I do not care; na vasunicayē naiva kāmōpabhōgē, with regard to what it is my motive; tvatpādāmbhōruhayugagatā niścalā bhaktirastu. According to my karma, whether money can come or go; यल्लभसे निजकर्मापात्तं वित्तं तेन विनोदय चित्तम्; yallabhasē nijakarmōpāttam vittam tēna vinōdaya cittam. If I want to ask something from you, what is that I want; tvatpādāmbhōruhayugagatā niścalā bhaktirastu; but if I want to ask something from you; I am interested only in you; of course in religious language; devotional language, the devotee will say I am interested in "you". But in vēdānta, "you" does not mean a personal God; because personal God is as finite as any other thing; So there "you" means a finite form which represents satyam, jñānam, anantham Brahma. Thus when I seek nothing but God; who represents infinite Brahman; when I become a theevra mumukṣu, it is called niṣkāma bhakthi; of an jñāni. So this sakāma, niṣkāma bhakthis of ajñāni are differentiated in this portion and Krishna's indirect advice is: May you graduate from sakāma bhakthi to niṣkāma bhakthi.

And this is indicated in a symbolic language; that symbolic language you should understand to interpret these verses properly. What is that symbolic language?. In the Bhagavad Gītā, Krishna represents the infinite Lord; the infinite one or mōkṣa and all the other Gods represent finite dēvathās; representing all the finite goals of life, like money, Lakshmi dēvathā is a finite dēvathā representing only money aspect; similarly Sūrya dēvathā is a finite dēvathā representing only the power of vision; so thus all the other dēvathās represent limited goals of life; whereas Krishna represents the limitless. Even though Krishna form is finite; but it symbolises the infinite; remember in the 7th chapter, I gave you the example of cheque book. In the cheque book the first leaf is more valuable or the second leaf is more valuable? what is your answer? first you fill up thereafter I will say; all the leafs are equal; But if you write Re.1 in the first leaf, and Rs.1 lakh in the second, I will choose what; Therefore the leaf by itself is neither superior nor inferior but what you write will indicate. Similarly Krishna śarīram is one cheque leaf; Rāma śarīram is another finite form; all the rupams are finite; but what do you invoke, Invocation is filling up the cheque book. If in the Krishna śarīram you invoke satyam jñānam anantham Brahma, Krishna will represent. As I said in Bhagavad Gītā, Krishna is pūrṇam Brahma. And therefore Krishna says instead of worshipping other finite dēvathās; you can worship me, myself because all the dēvathās are included in me. What is the reason? By the simple logic that infinite includes all finite. And therefore Krishna says any dēvathā a person worships, all those worship will not go that particular dēvathā; but through that dēvathā, it comes to me alone; just like a person touches any limb of mine, i will not say he is touching the hand or leg, I will say he is touching me, because I include all the limbs. Therefore point No.1, any worship goes to Krishna. In Śivapuraṇa what we say: any worship goes to Śiva; In dēvi bhāgavatham what will you say; any worship will go to dēvi; which one is correct; everything is correct, if you understand the principle behind it. And if you choose dēvi as your ista dēvathā; for you dēvi will become the infinite dēvi. For the first point, any worship goes to Krishna only.

The second point, any result given is not by those dēvathās; any blessing given comes from Krishna alone, only thing is through that particular dēvathā; Krishna blesses all people; therefore Krishna receives all the worship through the dēvathās; Krishna blesses all the people through the dēvathās.

Then the next principle that we have to understand, in the symbolic language is this. Since all the other dēvathās represent only finite powers, by worshipping those dēvathās, a person can get only what benefit; finite benefit only; they have got only limited powers; Sūrya dēva worship; like the specialist; you go to ophthalmist and cannot complain about tooth ache; then he will say it is not my department; they are specialists; they can only deal with their department; Lakṣmi can deal with only money; knowledge it should be Saraswati; hastayōr Indra. Thus any dēvathās can bless you with only a finite result. And therefore people can go to those dēvathās; only for finite result; therefore worship of those dēvathās will come under sakāma bhakthi. What is the principle; you should understand clearly; other dēvathās can give only finite result; therefore people go to the other dēvathās only for finite results. And therefore it will come under sakāma bhakthi; and people can go to which deity for infinite result; if you want infinite result; you cannot go to any other dēvathā, because they cannot give; you have to go to whom; the Bhagavad Gītā context, they have to go to Krishna, only then you will get the infinite result.

And therefore Krishna bhakthi represents niṣkāma bhakthi; in the context of Bhagavad Gītā. Therefore, Krishna bhakthi is niṣkāma bhakthi; anya dēvathā bhakthi; anya dēvathā means any deity other than Krishna; anya dēvathā bhakthi represents sakāma bhakthi; if you read Śivānandalahari; you have seen fully; Śankarācārya says; all the other dēvathās; like ७.१५५ umi; the fluff of the rice grains; for they will fly off; whereas Śivā alone is solid one; all the other gets some benefit because of what: Śivā. Therefore in that context, Śiva bhakthi will represent niṣkāma bhakthi and all the other dēvathā bhakthi will represent sakāma bhakthi; Remember this principle and read this verse; you will understand.

Krishna says, येऽप्यन्यदेवताभक्ताः ye api anyadevatābhaktāḥ So there are people who are worshippers of other Gods; other gods other than Me. How do they worship, श्रद्धयान्विताः यजन्ते śraddhayānvitāḥ yajantē; they are worshipping with faith with the idea that dēvathā, the navagraha places; And there also you know who is the popular grahaṁ; you all know; many do not know where the other grahams are there; but one grahaṁ everybody knows; Śhani; Thirunallar; put mustard, salt, etc.etc. Therefore Krishna says when people worship those graha dēvathās; etc. they do not know the fact that worship does not go that dēvathā at all; really speaking, through them, it is coming to Me alone; because Śhani is included in Me. So तेऽपि मामेव कौन्तेय यजन्ते tē'pi māmēva kauntēya yajante; So those people are worshipping Me alone, I told you in the last class; आकाशात् पतितं तोयं यथा गच्छति सागरम् । सर्व देव नमस्कारम् केशवं प्रतिगच्छति ākāśāt patitaṁ toyam yathā gacchati sāgaram | sarva dēva namaskāram keśavam pratigacchati. Some Krishna bhakthas have written; if Shiva bhakthas had written, he would have written Sadasri Rudram prathigacchati; whether it is wrong or right; that is also right; tē'pi māmēva kauntēya yajanti. But what is their problem; अविधिपूर्वकम् avidhipūrvakam; they are ignorant of this fact; avidhi means ajñānam; in this context, it has a very special meaning; avidhi means ajñānam; they are ignorant of what fact; ignorant of the fact that all the finite dēvathās are included in Me; by worshipping Me, they have worshipped all the other dēvathās; they do not know.

अहं हि सर्वयज्ञानां भोक्ता च प्रभुरेव च ।
न तु मामभिजानन्ति तत्त्वेनातश्च्यवन्ति ते ॥ ९.२४ ॥
ahaṃ hi sarvayajñānām, bhōktā ca prabhurēva ca |
na tu māmabhijānanti tattvēnātaścyavanti tē || 9.24 ||

हि hi Indeed अहम् एव aham eva I alone am भोक्ता च bhoktā ca the enjoyer च प्रभुः ca prabhuḥ and the Lord सर्वयज्ञानाम् sarvayajñānām of all the yajñās तु tu but न अभिजानन्ति माम् na abhijānanti mām they do not know Me तत्त्वेन tatvena in reality अतः ataḥ therefore ते च्यवन्ति te cyavanti they fail.

24. Indeed, I alone am the enjoyer and the Lord of all the yajñās. But they do not know Me in reality. Therefore they fail.

So the idea is further clarified. अहं सर्वयज्ञानां भोक्ता Aham sarva yajñānām bhoktā; I am the receiver of all forms of worship offered to any other dēvathā. So I am the receiver; bhoktā means receiver. It is just like we handing over the money to the post office; even though physically we are handing over to the post office, it is going to the person concerned. Similarly all the dēvathās are like postal people only; they have to ultimately hand over the thing to me; because if they want to bless their devotee; that blessing also comes from Me; just as a cabinet minister enjoys the ministerial power blessed by whom the Prime Minister. How do you know; the moment reshuffle happens and one Minister is removed of the post, that Minister cannot have any such power; and therefore this dēvathās have to come to me; and I alone give them the power to bless their devotee; therefore bhoktā aham ēva; and not only that; प्रभुरेव च prabhurēva ca; and I have got the necessary powers to fulfil their desires; Not those finite dēvathās. So the power to the finite dēvathās are given by Me alone; with which they bless their devotee; But all these inner workings they do not know; न तु मामभिजानन्ति na tu māmabhijānanti. Those people do not understand Me clearly; तत्त्वेन tatvēna; In my true nature; that avidhipūrvakam of the previous verse is explained here na tu māmabhijānanti; I told you avidhi means ajñānam; that meaning is clarified here; they do not know Me in reality. So by saying that they do not know My real nature; Krishna indirectly conveys I have got two natures; because Krishna says they do not know My real nature; that means what? He has two natures; one is the superficial unnatural nature and the other is essential real nature. What is the superficial unreal nature? the physical form; the finite form is the superficial unreal nature; because it is temporarily taken by the Lord on a aṣṭami day. It was not before; it was not there it was not there; not that Krishna was not there; that particular śarīram; māya mānuṣa vēṣam was not there before aṣṭami and it will not be there after svargarohanam and therefore mānuṣa vēṣam is unreal; and that Krishna himself tells in the Gītā; avajñānī māṁ mūdhāha; mānuṣim tanum āśritām. Seeing my physical human form; the deluded people think that I am a particular finite person; but what is my real nature; param bhāvam ajānataḥ; my real nature is:

अशब्दमस्पर्शमरूपमव्ययं

तथाऽरसं नित्यमगन्धवच्च यत् ।

अनाद्यनन्तं महतः परं ध्रुवं

निचाय्य तन्मृत्युमुखात् प्रमुच्यते ॥ Part I. Canto ॥ १५॥

aśabdamasparśamarūpamavyayaṁ

tathā:'rasaṁ nityamagandhavacca yat |

anādyanantaṁ mahataḥ paraṁ dhruvaṁ

nicāyya tanmṛtyumukhāt pramucyate | | Part I. Canto III. 15 | |

It is formless; attributeless; sat chit ānanda svarūpam; That these people did not understand; Māṁ tatvēna; nirguṇa svarūpēna; na avajānanti. So instead of knowing my pūrṇa svarūpam; they take my apūrṇa svarūpam only.

And therefore what happens? Even if they worship Me, leaving the other dēvathās; even if they worship Me, they do not ask for the infinite; because they do not know my higher nature; therefore even after coming to Me, they ask for what; Rs.5 increment. So they say you know; there was a milkman who did lot of tapas; and Lord came; and he asked I want permanent source of milk. Therefore the Lord said; Ok Given; then he saw a huge lake of milk; clean milk; pure milk; and the Lord said; Not only you have got so much milk; you can go on taking and distributing, the milk will be same; it will not become less; it will not get depleted. Then the milkman said wonderful; you have blessed me; then the Lord went; but he called the Lord again immediately; Do not go; I forgot to ask another important request; if I have got this much milk, pure lake of milk, you should bless me with another lake of water, because, for regular supply I need water also. Therefore, even if it is the ocean, the dog will drink it licking only; even if there is so much water, the dog can only lick and drink. Similarly, going to Bhagavān we can ask for infinite; but still our daridra buddhi. Even the Lord is willing to give infinite free of cost; he is going to say it is free; but still except that we will ask for perishable ephemeral things; Bhagavān says; My hands are in both pockets; one pocket is in infinite and the other in finite; ready to give both; but people do namaskāra and ask for finite things only; only one hand of mine is active; the other hand is almost paralysed, because I have been never able to use that hand to distribute from the mōkṣa pocket; no use at all; nobody asks even by mistake; therefore Krishna is disappointed; च्यवन्ति ते cyavanti te; they fall; Having come to Me; having got an opportunity for asking the infinite; they do not ask out of sheer indiscrimination; sheer foolishness; They do not ask; therefore they fall into the samsāra.

Continuing;

यान्ति देवव्रता देवन् पितृन्यान्ति पितृव्रताः ।

भूतानि यान्ति भूतेज्याः यान्ति मद्याजिनोऽपि माम् ॥ ९.२५ ॥

yānti dēvavratā dēvān pitṛn yānti pitṛvatāḥ |

bhūtāni yānti bhūtejyā yānti madyājino'pi mām || 9.25 ||

देवव्रताः devavratāḥ worshippers of Gods यान्ति देवान् yānti devān reach the Gods पितृव्रताः pitṛvatāḥ worshippers of the ancestors यान्ति पितृन् yānti pitṛn reach the ancestors, भूतेज्याः bhūtejyāḥ worshippers of Bhootas (beings lower than the devas, but higher than the humans), यान्ति भूतानि yānti bhūtāni reach the bhūtās अपि api and मद्याजिनः My worshippers madhyājinaḥ यान्ति माम् yānti mām reach Me.

25. Worship of Gods (dēvathās) reach the Gods; worshippers of ancestors (pithrus) reach the ancestors. Worshippers of bhūtās reach the bhūtās and My worshippers reach Me.

Then a question will come; OK people do not ask for mōkṣa; but the Lord knows that Mōkṣa is the best gift. Therefore Oh Lord; even if we do not ask why can't you give us Mōkṣa; because you know better; you could have chosen to give Mōkṣa;

Krishna says that would not work; because of two reasons; One reason is in human birth, the Lord has given us free will; unlike animal birth; animals cannot choose their goals; they are instinctively programmed to pursue certain basic thing; they will pursue that, and they will die; You interview dog that is running on the street; where are you going; they will say in Tamil; dog does not have any job but no time to stand; it runs here and there as though important conference it is going to attend; nothing like that; it goes there; and comes back, it does not have any other goal of life; whereas human being has got a freewill that means he can choose his goal and he should choose his goal. God will not interfere in our choice; god's role is only giving us the information of what are the goals available and which goal can be reached by which path. And if you refuse to use your choice; it indirectly means that you do not want to utilise the privilege of human birth. And if you refuse the utilise the privilege of human birth; indirectly you are declaring: What are you declaring: Oh Lord; my mistake I have come to human birth; please put me back to animal birth; that is the declaration, if you refuse to choose; therefore I can never refuse to choose whether you mōkṣa or not; whether you should get mōkṣa or not; only one can decide; and who is the one; you alone; Bhagavān says I can assist you; but you have to choose. And therefore Mōkṣa is whose choice; not Bhagavān; it has to be your choice; this is one reason; that God does not give mōkṣa.

And the second reason is suppose you do not choose mōkṣa; and God gives Mōkṣa. If you are not interested; you will refuse to receive; because any give and take involves two people. I cannot give you anything if you are going to refuse to receive. I can say the Gītā classes I want to conduct it is available; but I can give these classes only if at least one or two people come; I cannot go on talking alone. People will put me somewhere; therefore I cannot give you, if you are not willing to receive; therefore even God is helpless remember. Even God is helpless; even if God wants to give you mōkṣa; if you are going to say that first water problem, then we can wait for mōkṣa because it is eternal. Therefore Krishna says; what you want; you have to choose; I am willing to assist you; and therefore he says; देवव्रता देवन् यान्ति dēvavratā dēvān yānti; worshippers of dēvathās will get only the result of dēvathā prāp̥thi; or anything, equivalent to that. Like worshippers of Lakṣmi; will get what; Lakṣmi wealth; That is why anybody who wants to do business, what photo gives; Lakṣmi deity; that too what Lakṣmi, Lakṣmi with a good குடம் kuṭam full of gold coins. And that too not straight; it is tilted; and not only titled; the coins are falling down; and it is kept above the table; so that straight away the money falls on your table;

Therefore money worshippers will get money; therefore dēvavratā dēvān yānti; पितृव्रताः पितृन् यान्ति pitṛvratāḥ pitṛn yānti; worshippers of ancestors pitṛu dēvathā, they will go to the pitṛu lōkah and get those benefits; This is based on the famous upaniṣadic statement; तं यथा यथा उपासते, तथैव भवति tam yatha yatha upāsatē; tadēva bhavathi; whatever you worship unknowingly you will become that. That is why in our tradition, we want to give good heroes to our children; why we are propagating purāṇās; and giving them noble heroes; because when the children are attracted by such heroes, they will be thinking of them, And therefore unknowingly their character is also imbibed, because as you think, so you become; If they are going to watch that Arnold sch... (unpronounceable name), always with a gun; you constantly watch; the children will take anything as gun; pencil; pen; and will always say: ta ta ta ta; Then Michael Jackson; is hero they will be doing that/ So therefore pitṛvratāḥ pitṛn yānti. yad bhāvam; tad bhavathi; is one statement; yata yata upāsatē tad ēva bhavathi is another statement.

Then भूतेज्याः भूतानि यान्ति bhūtejyāḥ bhūtāni yānti; bhūtejyāḥ, worshippers of bhūtha ganas; būtha prēta piscacha, yakṣa, yamarupa rākini dākini svapatha vrischika. So many dēvathās are mentioned; some of the dēvathās are worshipped by going to smaśanams; is the cremation ground; many black magic people worship such dēvathās also; what will happen to such people; They will end up becoming such; so tāmasic deities; attain tāmasic goals; rājasic by worshipping rājasic deities; one will go to rājasic goals.

And whereas Krishna says madhyājinaḥ; those who worship me, who represent brahman, satyam jñānam anatham; who represent mōkṣa; pūrnātvam; śanti; मध्याजिनः माम् यान्ति madhyājinaḥ mām yānti; they will come to Me only; Me representing what; Mōkṣa itself.

Continuing;

पत्रं पुष्पं फलं तोयं यो मे भक्त्या प्रयच्छति ।

तदहं भक्त्युपहृतम् अश्नामि प्रयतात्मनः ॥ ९.२६ ॥

patraṃ puṣpaṃ phalaṃ tōyaṃ yō mē bhaktyā prayacchati |
tadahaṃ bhaktyupahr̥tamaśnāmi prayatātmanaḥ || 9.26 ||

भक्त्या bhaktyā with devotion यः yaḥ whoever प्रयच्छति मे prayacchati me offers Me पत्रम् patram a leaf पुष्पम् puṣpam a flower फलम् phalam a fruit तोयम् toyam or water तद् भक्त्युपहृतम् tad bhaktyupahṛtam that devout offering प्रयतात्मनः prayatātmanaḥ of the pure-minded one अहम् अश्नामि aham aśnāmi I accept.

26. With devotion, whoever offers Me, a leaf, a flower, a fruit, or water, --- that devout offering of the pure-minded one I accept.

In the scriptures, sakāma bhakthi is also talked about; niṣkāma bhakthi is also talked about; sakāma rituals are also talked about; niṣkāma rituals are also talked about. For example, sandhya vandhanam is niṣkāma ritual; it is purely meant for spiritual progress; citta shuddhi; guru prāp̥thi; jñāna prāp̥thi; mōkṣa prāp̥thi. Whereas puthrakamēṣṭi yāga is meant for what; is like asking who wrote Vālmiki Rāmāyana; not Kambar; Vālmiki Rāmāyana was written by Vālmiki; so puthrakamēṣṭi is for puthra prāp̥thi.

So both types of rituals are there; and we observe one principle, depending upon the result that we want to achieve, there are rigors, rules and regulations in performing the rituals; if you want the result; the scriptures point out that you have to do this pūja in this manner. the time of pūja is prescribed; the place of pūja is prescribed; the deity is prescribed; the naivēdyam is prescribed; even the dress is prescribed; how many priests should be there; how much dakṣiṇa should be there; that is my choice, you should not say; everything is fixed; and you have to obey the rules; and if you disobey any rule, you have to immediately do prāyascittam.

For some of the violation the prāyascittam is that all the properties you have to give as dakṣiṇa; what a terrible prāyascittam; And higher the result, you expect, the more complicated the karma becomes; because, as the action is so the result is every action has got an equal result (we need not say opposite here!) equal means proportional result; You give more dakṣiṇa, more result; more mantras, more avrithis, more dakṣiṇa.

So the general principle is what, the higher the benefit that you seek; the more complicated and involved and complex the rituals are; so naturally, what will we think; when you want infinite result; extrapolating the result; when you want infinite result, what will you think, higher the result, more complicated it is/ So when you want the highest result; the pūja will be, according to our extension, we expect the pūja to be the most complicated; because the result is the highest;

Krishna says the beauty is when you want the highest result; the pūja is the least complicated. In fact, there is no complication; it is the simplest pūja; sakāma bhakthi involves maximum number of rules; whereas in Niṣkāma bhakthi all the rules are loosened; You can do any number of mistakes; not that you should do mistakes. Suppose you are chanting Viṣṇu Sahasranama; if you are chanting for a particular result, then you have to observe all the result; and if you do not observe, you may not get the result; and it is even threatened; sometimes it can be, counter-productive also. But suppose you are chanting the very same Sahasranama; for the sake of citta shuddhi; guru prāp̥thi, mōkṣa prāp̥thi, then any number of mistakes you commit, it does not matter; naivēdyam any kind of naivēdyam, shortcut naivēdyam; any flower you keep; it does not matter. But what is the condition; your motive should be not any one of the finite; but infinite. So Krishna says here; पत्रं पुष्पं फलं तोयं प्रयच्छति patraṁ puṣpaṁ phalaṁ tōyaṁ prayacchati. A niṣkāma bhaktha; who is a mumukṣu bhaktha; who wants God as the result of his pūja, he offers anything; without any pre-condition; And what can be offer; he can patraṁ; he can offer a leaf, like Tulsi, vilva or anything; puṣpam; any flower, phalaṁ, any fruit; tōyaṁ or even a spoonful of water; Anyone of them; niṣkāma bhaktha can offer.

But what is important; भक्त्या प्रयच्छति bhaktyā prayacchati; here bhakthya; niṣkāma bhaktyā prayacchati; to use the seventh chapter language, it comes under which type of bhakthi; arta, artārti, jijñāsu or jñāni? If he is ārtā or ārtārti, it will come under sakāma bhakthi; he wants a particular result and we are not talking about jñāni here; therefore that is also ruled out. So if three are ruled out; who is left out; jijñāsu bhaktha; mumukṣu bhakthaḥ; who is ajñāni alight; who is samsāri alright; but who wants liberation or God. Therefore bhakthya; niṣkāma bhaktyā prayacchati.

And Krishna says: प्रयतात्मनः prayatātmanaḥ; such a person is a person of purified mind; What is purification of mind here; he does not have desire for finite goals; that is the purity; rāgaḥ rahitaḥ; niṣkāmatvam is the purity; so prayatātmanaḥ prayatam means shuddham; ātma means here mind; manaḥ; prayatātmanaḥ means what; shuddha cittaḥ; prayatātmanaḥ means shuddha cittasya; bahuvrihi; suddham cittam yasya. So since he has got such a niṣkāma bhakthi; अहम् अश्नामि aham aśnāmi; I receive that offering, even though it is a very very inferior offering: I receive that offering, because it is offered with bhakty bhaktyupahṛtam; it is offered with a love for myself; because when you worship the Lord for the sake of worldly end; your love is where; I have analysed this in the 7th chapter; when God is the means and the anything else is the end; my real is in the end and not in the means; nobody loves the means; everybody loves the end only; you love the bus how long; until you reach the destination; thereafter, you do not pray that the bus should go properly, nothing should happen to it, etc.; what do you think; I have got down from the bus; let anything happen; So you are interested in the destination; not in the means; So when God is the means in sakāma bhakthi; your love is a fake love; but niṣkāma bhaktha is doing pūja for the sake of Lord. Therefore his love for me, the real love, and therefore I receive that love; even on the valentine's day. So therefore you should give that card to me; so bhaktyupahṛtam; aham aśnāmi; and therefore the flower, etc. becomes only a spoon and what you are offering through that is the love. Therefore spoon is not important; whether it is silver spoon; or golden spoon; you are interested in what; what is there in silver spoon; that is what you are interested in. Similarly Krishna says I do not bother whether the medium that you use for offering love; whether the medium is flower or leaf; I do not care; because through the medium, you are giving me the pure love. Therefore, I accept that.

27. Oh Arjuna, whatever you do, whatever you eat, whatever you offer (as oblation) whatever you give (in charity), whatever austerity you undertake --- dedicate that as an offering to Me.

Suppose a person says I do not have pathram, puṣṭam; phalam; thōyam; etc. I am in a desert/ Gulf country; (I do not know the condition there); no pathram; no puṣṭam; no phalam; and like Madras, no tōyam, tōyam means Water; then what shall I do. Krishna says, even if you do not have any special thing for offering to Me, does not matter, you will be consuming things. So you will have food for you; you will drink water; you will do some work; therefore whatever you are associated with, May you offer that to me; as arpaṇam; Therefore he says yat karoshmi; any karma that you do; any laukika karma that you do; even working in the office;

कायेन वाचा मनसेन्द्रियैर्वा ।

बुद्ध्यात्मना वा प्रकृतिस्वभावात् ।

करोमि यद्यत् सकलं परस्मै ।

kāyēna vācā manasēndriyairvā |

buddhyātmanā vā prakṛtiṣvabhāvāt |

karōmi yadyat sakalāṁ parasmai |

nārāyaṇayēti samarpayāmi ||

Any work, most mundane work that you do, you dedicate to the Lord, and it can function as a pūja; So therefore offer every action to Me; but Lord is at home and my work is at the office; how to offer if you ask: Lord is at home; Only that is your problem; When Lord is at office, you would not be at home!; if you are at home, you would not be at the office, that is your problem; but Bhagavān is not at home; Bhagavān is at home also; So the Lord being everywhere; you do not require anything, you invoke, close your eyes; and think that Oh Lord let this karma be īśvara preethyartam asthu; mayi sarvāni karmāni sanyasya; so this is most beautiful religious way of life; unique to vēdic tradition; in all other traditions; that particular place is important, direction is important, for us you can do pūja at any time and anywhere.

And यद् अश्नासि yad aśnāsi; whatever you eat, you offer to the Lord, whatever you cook daily offer to the Lord; and if you say that I am busy, I cannot keep in the pūja room, no time, etc. OK; when it has come to your plate, before you gulp it down; before you finish it off, close your eyes for a moment, and imagine the Lord is ahaṁ vaiśvānarō bhūtvā prāṇināṃ dēhamāśritaḥ. The Lord is inside your stomach; offer that food to the Lord inside the stomach, and it is called praṇāgnihōtram. And you can even claim that I do nithyam agnihōtram; even though the secret is what; you are eating; यदश्नासि यज्जुहोषि yadaśnāsi yajjuhōṣi; whatever nithyakarma you do; juhōṣhi offerings you do; whether it is sandyā vandanam; or any other pūja you do; and यत् ददासि yat dadāsi; whatever charity you offer; earth quake relief fund you are offering, even you can convert that into pūja, if you remember all those earth quake victims are also God; because God is there in them also; Just a change in attitude; nothing special; change in attitude; and यत्तपस्यसि कौन्तेय yat tapasyasi kauntēya; whatever tapas you do, if you are fasting to reduce your obesity; overweight. Therefore you are fasting in some way; so many thinning parlours are there; when you fast there; you imagine it is ēkadasi upavāsam; convert into upavāsam; yat tapasyasi kountēya. What is important; तत् मदर्पणम् कुरु tat madarpaṇam kuru; dedicate it to me; which is not a physical job, it is only an attitudinal change; And this is called niṣkāma bhakthi which will lead you to liberation; How will you lead to liberation; that Krishna will offer in the next slōkā; which we will see in the next class.

सदाशिव समारम्भां शङ्कराचार्यमध्यमाम्

Om

Lord Krishna is dealing with the topic of sakāma bhakthi and niṣkāma bhakthi from verse No.20 to 29. Krishna is not against sakāma bhakthi. We should very clearly remember that sakāma bhakthi is not pāpa karma. Sakāma bhakthi is not a niṣiddha karma; sakāma bhakthi does not bring down a person; sakāma bhakthi is only an obstacle to spiritual growth; Sakāma bhakthi will not bring down but it will keep a person in spiritual stagnation.

That is why we divide karmas into three types; sātāvika, rājasa, tāmasa; sātāvika one will take a person spiritually up; tāmasa one is that which will bring a person spiritually down; sātāvika takes up; tāmasa will take down; rājasa is that which will not take up also; which will not bring down also; it will keep a person in spiritual stagnation; a person will be getting the material result. Sakāma bhakthi is a form of rājasa bhakthi only. It will give material benefit to a person; it will be an obstacle to spiritual growth. Therefore Krishna does not say that you should straight away give up all the kāmya karma; because many people get a doubt; after studying this portion. Swamiji, we are doing pūja for children's admission; or we are doing pūja for curing this disease; we have taken this vow to go to Tirupati for this particular some purpose; many such vows are there; kāmya karmas are there; Krishna does not say that one should drop all of them; all of a sudden. The aim is a very very gradual transformation; the negative Niṣidha karma should be dropped straight away; pāpa karmas should be dropped straight away; but kāmya karma should be gradually reduced.

So with regard to kāmya karma, gradual reduction and they should be replaced by niṣkāma karma or sātāvika karma; which means I utilise the karma for spiritual growth. If at all I ask something from the Lord. I say jñāna vairāgya siddhyartham; or citta śuddhyartham, or śāstra vicāartham; or nidhidhyāsana prāpyartham; or jñāna niṣṭhā siddhyartham; or śāstra avismarṇāartham; avismarṇāartham means not forgetting the Gītā; prayer for that.

So therefore if we have some desires; especially a grihastha will have lot of duties to be fulfilled; and when there are lot of obstacles; certainly there will be tendency to approach the Lord and there is nothing wrong; but we have to gradually grow out of them. And such a bhakthi is niṣkāma bhakthi. And as I said in the last class; in niṣkāma bhakthi also there is desire; but it is not materialist desire. So niṣkāma means freedom from materialist desires; but there is a spiritual desire for anything that promotes mōkṣa. And even asking for help, so that I can pursue spiritual sādhanā, even prayer comes under spiritual prayer only; just because you seek help, it does not become material; for what purpose you are seeking help.

ॐ भद्रं कर्णेभिः शृणुयम देवाः भद्रं पश्येमाक्षभिर्यजत्राः ।

स्तस्ति न इन्द्रो वृद्धश्रवाः स्वस्ति नः पूषा विश्ववेदाः ।
स्वस्ति नास्ताक्षर्यो अरिष्टनेमिः स्वस्ति नो बृहस्पतिर्दधातु ॥

ॐ शान्तिः शान्तिः शान्तिः ।

ōṃ bhadraṃ karṇēbhiḥ śr̥ṇuyama dēvāḥ bhadraṃ paśyēma kṣabhiryajatrāḥ |

svasti nāstākṣyō ariṣṭanēmiḥ svasti nō bṛhaspatirdadhātu ||
ā śāntiḥ śāntiḥ śāntiḥ |

Similarly even asking wealth cannot be said to materialist because, for what purpose, am I asking for wealth, because after all, money is a means which can be used for spiritual purpose also, or material purpose also. If I am asking for wealth; so that I can do pañca mahā yajñās, I can spend the money for noble causes, by which I will get citta śuddhi; even dhāna iccha; will become spiritual desire. Therefore ultimately what is materialist desire; what is spiritual desire; we only know what is our motive; and any desire through I want to purity and jñānam; we call as niṣkāma bhakthi; mumukṣu bhakthi.

And Krishna pointed out, in sakāma bhakthi rules of worship should be very strictly followed; formalities are to be maintained; if not the sakāma pūja may not give the result; or may even become counter-productive, whereas when it is niṣkāma bhakthi and pūja, all the rules and regulations become secondary; the attitude becomes important. So when two people who love each other extremely well; and when they meet; what formality is there; there is no formality; So when there is some distance only, you have to feel the protocol, all these things; etc. so for a mumukṣu bhaktha, the bhakthi for the Lord is of a different type of dimension. And therefore rules are secondary. How do you know; Krishna says; patraṁ puṣpaṁ phalaṁ tōyaṁ prayacchati; give whatever you like; they tell the Mahabharata story; how Vidhura removed the banana and gave the banana peel to the Lord.

मार्गावर्तितपादुका पशुपतेरङ्गस्य कूर्चायते

गण्डूषांबुनिषेचनं पुररिपोर्दिव्याभिषेकायते ।

किंचिद्भक्षितमांसशेषकबलं नव्योपहारायते

भक्तिः किं न करोत्यहो वनचरो भक्तावतंसायते ॥ ६३ ॥

mārgāvartitapādukā paśupatēraṅgasya kūrçāyatē gaṇḍūṣāmbuniṣēcanaṁ puraripōrdivyābhiṣēkāyatē | kiṁcidbhakṣitamāmsaśēṣakabalaṁ navyōpahārāyatē
bhaktiḥ kiṁ na karōtyahō vanacarō bhaktāvataṁsāyatē || 63 ||

Śankarācārya tells in Śivānandalahari, how Kannappa, the greatest devotee used the chappal to mark the eye. You know the story; I would not go into the details; he used the mouth as Abhiṣēka pātram; and straightway spat the water; gaṇḍūṣāmbuniṣēcanaṁ; normally it is supposed to be asoucham. That does not mean that I will do that; do not say; kiṁcidbhakṣitamāmsaśēṣakabalaṁ navyōpahārāyatē; what he has eaten, the remnants he uses for navya upahārarthe; the greatest offering; bhakthi kiṁ na karōtyahō vanacarō; means hunter; bhaktha avatha hamsayate; he became a gem of a bhaktha; all the purāṇic stories indicate that; Krishna therefore says bhakthya prayacchati;

And not only niṣkāma bhakthi is expressed in the form of specific pūja; niṣkāma bhakthi is expressed in the form of a very different lifestyle itself; it is a not a mere patraṁ puṣpaṁ phalaṁ samarpaṇam in the morning or evening; niṣkāma bhakthi transforms the very way of life. How does it transform;

yat karōṣi yadaśnāsi yajjuhōṣi dadāsi yat |

yat tapasyasi kauntēya tat kuruṣva madarpaṇam|| 9.27 ||

Every action becomes an offering at the feet of the Lord; and when it is offered at the feet of the Lord; what is the feet of the Lord; the entire creation consisting of the Laws of creation. So my action is offered into the creation; which has the net work of the laws of creation; the laws alone are the feet of the Lord; and when I take back the actions, the karma has been converted into karma phalam. And since the creation is Bhagavān's feet; karma phalam becomes īśvara prasādaḥ. And therefore the future events are always welcome for me.

For a niṣkāma bhaktha; there cannot be a concern; there cannot be an anxiety, anxiety comes when I am particular about only a type of future; only this type of future should come to me; any other type of future I will not accept. So when there is a resistance with regard to a particular possibility in future, there is concern, anxiety; for a niṣkāma bhaktha; whatever comes is welcome. And therefore,

yat tapasyasi kauntēya tat kuruṣva madarpaṇam || 9.27 ||

And we have to add the corollary, if all these are īśvara arpaṇam; there consequences are īśvara prasādam. Thus as a karta, I do īśvara arpaṇam; as a bhoktha; I have the īśvara prasādaḥ bhavāna; And this is niṣkāma bhakthi. Now when we read this, we should be reminded of some other topic we studied before; When I talk about īśvara arpaṇa bhavāna and prasāda bhāvana. We should be reminded of a topic we studied before, long before in the 2nd and 3rd chapters; and what was the topic; karma yōgaḥ; yōgasthaḥ kuru karmāṇi saṅgaṃ tyaktvā dhanañjaya (2.48). Then in the third chapter,

mayi sarvāṇi karmāṇi sannyasyādhyātmacētasā |
nirāśīrnirmamō bhūtvā yudhyasva vigatajvaraḥ || 3.30 ||

So while defining karma yōga in the 2nd and third chapters, Krishna said karma yōga is īśvara arpaṇa bhavāna and prasādaḥ bhavāna. Here Krishna says Niṣkāma kāma bhakthi involves īśvara arpaṇa bhavāna and prasādaḥ bhavāna; join these two together; what is our conclusion; karma yōga is identical with niṣkāma bhakthi; Karma yōga and niṣkāma bhakthi are synonymous.

Then why these two different names; from the stand point of the action, it is called karma yōgaḥ; and from the standpoint of the attitude, it is called niṣkāma bhakthi; sādhanā driṣṭya karma yōgaḥ; bhavāna driṣṭya niṣkāma bhakthi yōgaḥ. And therefore, Krishna said, tat kuruṣva madarpaṇam; īśvararpaṇam.

And where is that Īśvara; if somebody asks; we should not answer the question; you should ask a counter question; where is Īśvara not; Remember; when somebody wrote; God is nowhere; A nāsthika; God is nowhere; now this devotee came; very correct; and no where he just gave a gap, put a line after n o w, he put a gap. Now what does it mean; now here; Īśvara sarva bhūthānam; bhūthānam ḥṛdēśe Arjuna thiṣṭati. Therefore for niṣkāma bhakthi; a temple is not required; shrine is not required; you can practice it everywhere; this thought is important. Up to this we saw in the last class.

शुभाशुभफलैरेवं मोक्ष्यसे कर्मबन्धनैः ।

संन्यासयोगयुक्तात्मा विमुक्तो मामुपैष्यसि ॥ ९.२८ ॥

śubhāśubhaphalairēvaṃ mōkṣyasē karmabandhanaiḥ |

sannyāsayōgayuktātmā vimuktō māmupaiṣyasi || 9.28 ||

एवम् evam in this manner मोक्ष्यसे mokṣyase you will be freed कर्मबन्धनैः karmabandhanaiḥ from all the bonds of actions, शुभाशुभफलैः śubhāśubhaphalaiḥ which cause puṇya and papa संन्यासयोगयुक्तात्मा samnyāsayōgayuktātmā with a mind devoted to sanyasa and yōga विमुक्तः vimuktaḥ (you will be) liberated (while living), उपैष्यसि माम् upaiṣyasi mām and will attain Me (after death).

28. In this manner you will be freed from all the bonds of actions which cause puṇya and papa. With a mind devoted to Sanyasa and Yōga (you will be) liberated (while living) and will attain Me (after death).

So what is the result of niṣkāma bhakthi or karma yōga is pointed out. So here what Krishna says is every karma or every pūja that you do, can give you two forms of puṇyam; any pūja that you do; any service that you do; can give you two forms of puṇyam; one is the materialist puṇyam. What do you mean materialistic puṇyam; all the material well being, one will get through that puṇyam; lot of money; lot of people around; good house, 24 hours running water; so these are materialist advantages; if a person has purely because of puṇyam only; in one house water is there; in other house, not there; our puṇyam and pāpam; similarly going to svarga is materialistic puṇyam. Thus your pūja can produce materialistic puṇyam, both here or hereafter; or the very same pūja can give spiritual puṇyam also; because of spiritual puṇyam alone you are born in a culture; where spirituality is there; so when you are born in a rich country, where you have got all the facilities; any country, richest country, with richest parents; child of Bill Gates. Certainly there must be some puṇyam; or else how can one get all the enjoyments; therefore that is also puṇyam; and also another form of puṇyam; we may have water problem; mosquitoes but to be born in a culture where spirituality is there; śāstram is alive; ācāryās are available; to be born in this culture; many people think we have done pāpam; carefully note; we have done puṇyam; what puṇyam; spiritual puṇyam. So because of spiritual puṇyam; a spiritual environment comes; because of spiritual puṇyam alone; we get spiritually oriented parents. It is a greatest puṇya because right form childhood, we get those samsāra; whereas for the other children, it is swimming against the current; எதிரீ நெச்சல் ethir neechal; because the parents are too materialistic. So that is puṇyam; and getting an opportunity to study the śāstram is spiritual puṇyam.

मनुष्यत्वं मुमुक्षुत्वं महापुरुषसंश्रयः ॥ विवेकचूडामणि. ३॥

durlabham trayamēvaitaddēvānugrahaḥētukam |

manuṣyatvaṁ mumukṣutvaṁ mahāpuruṣasaṁśrayaḥ || vivēkacūḍāmaṇi. 3||

So to be born a human being is because of puṇyam; to get a desire for mōkṣa is a spiritual puṇyam; and to get association with guru is spiritual puṇyam. Thus pūja can give you any one of these two puṇyams; but you cannot ask for both; you cannot say I want both; you have to choose one of the two; A niṣkāma bhaktha converts all the pūja into spiritual puṇyam. And therefore he renounces; he is not interested in material puṇyam; And of course, he is free from material pāpam also; And therefore niṣkāma bhaktha transcends both puṇyam and pāpam. So शुभाशुभफलैरेवं मोक्ष्यसे śubhāśubhaphalairēvaṁ mōkṣyasē; So Arjuna you will be freed from śubha phalam; puṇya phalam; Here puṇyam means material puṇyam; and from āśubha pāpaiḥ; from pāpam also you will be free.

Why he will not get pāpam; We have said that when it is niṣkāma bhakti even when the rules are violated, he will not get the pāpam. Very big advantage. If you are doing Niṣkāma bhakthya Viṣṇu sahasranama pārayāṇam, even if there are pronunciation mistakes, Bhagavān will correct it and listen to it. But sakāma bhakthya you are doing, every rule is important. And therefore for a niṣkāma bhakthya, even violations of rules will not produce prathyavāya pāpam, and he does not seek materialistic puṇyam also.

Therefore he transcends both; then we may wonder; transcending may be good; but transcending puṇyam, how can you say Good. So Krishna says, karma bandanai; both puṇyam and pāpam are bonds only; so in the beginning stages pāpam is bondage, puṇyam is good; once we have become sufficiently mature, we say puṇyam is also bondage because, puṇyam also keeps a person within punarapi jananam, punarapi maraṇam cycle; so that is why in the Upaniṣads, it is said tatha vidhvān puṇya pāpe vidhūya; if you say mōkṣe, beyond puṇya pāpa; for karma bandanaihi; bonds of karma, in the form of śubha and aśubha, he transcends.

And who is he. The niṣkāma bhaktha has won the title; because now it is the season of title; Padmabhuṣan; etc. So Krishna also gives a title to Niṣkāma bhaktha or karma yōgi; and what is that title; sanyāsa yōga yuktatma. He is both a sanyasi and a yōgi; who niṣkāma bhaktha or karma yōgi; he has got sanyāsa and also yōga.

What does it mean? Sanyāsa mean renunciation. How do you say: karma yōgi associated with renunciation; he is very much in the world; and very much doing karma; he is said to be endowed with renunciation because he is able to renounce his materialistic desires and use the pūja for inner growth. And therefore the kāma tyāga makes him a sanyāsi without kaṣāya vastram. Krishna said in the 6th chapter,

anāśritaḥ karmaphalaṃ kāryaṃ karma karōti yaḥ |
sa sannyāsī ca yōgī ca na niragnirna cākriyaḥ || 6.1 ||

yaṃ samnyāsamiti prāhuḥ yogaṃ taṃ viddhi pāṇḍava |
na hyasamnyastasaṅkalpaḥ yogī bhavati kaścana || 6.2||

If we drop the anxiety regarding the materialistic things, it is a great renunciation.

If you drop that anxiety; what will happen to my security; suddenly you will get afraid; because material things give me security; for which Krishna has answered before; I do not whether you remember; ananyāścintayantō māṃ; he is able to drop the obsession with money; he knows two things; any amount of money, insecurity will not go away; because insecurity has nothing to do with possession; it is a problem of the mind; it is something to do with the mind and not what you have;

because a person with minimum wealth can feel secure; and a person with maximum wealth can feel maximum insecure. The niṣkāma bhaktha knows this fact and therefore he has got Lord to give him the sense of security; and therefore he is not bothered about that; यल्लभसे निजकर्मोपात्तं वित्तं तेन विनोदय चित्तम् ||२|| nijakarmōpāttam vittam tēna vinōdaya cittam ||2||. Therefore he has got sanyāsa.

Then why he is called yōgi; they why do we say that he has got yōga; yōga here refers to action; So he is associated with action and at the same time, he is not associated with materialists desires and therefore, he is called sanyāsa yōga yuktātma; He is interested more in the inner growth;

And what will happen to him; vimukthāḥ; he will soon become liberated; such a niṣkāma bhaktha; such a karma yōgi will become liberated;

How; we should be very careful; so if we say karma yōgi will get liberated; then does it mean that jñāna yōga is not required; because of majority of people jñāna yōga is allergy; somehow we should avoid that. So therefore all the commentators make it a point to add; karma yōgi does not directly get liberated, but via jñāna yōga vimukthāḥ bhavathi; So he will get purity of mind; then he will get desire for vēdānta vichāra; then he will get a guru; then he will get jñānam; thus satva citta śuddhi; guru prāp̥thi; jñāna prāp̥thi dvara; by this route, he will become liberated/

And then what will happen; मामुपैष्यसि māmupaiṣyasi; having liberated he merges into Me; he becomes one with Me; This also must be carefully understood; What do you mean by merger; do not imagine that this niṣkāma bhaktha slow...ly goes and Bhagavān is standing there; and He goes embraces; Do not imagine like that; There is no physical merger because Bhagavān is never away from us; we are not away from the Lord;

Then what do you mean by merger; merger is dropping the misconception that the Lord is away from Me; இந்த தப்பான எண்ணதை விடறது தான் ஐகியம்; the dropping of the wrong notion is the aikyam with the Lord; there is no other aikyam other than dropping the notion

And how do you drop any notion or misconception; by knowledge; So the moment I get knowledge, the wrong thought that God is away from me goes away; I come to know God is close; that God is not close but closer; in fact, God is not closer; God is closest; in fact God is even closest; Aham brahmāsmi; tatva meva tvam eva tat;

We saw yesterday; this distance, notional distance, goes away; Careful, not national distance; notional distance goes away; so māmupaiśyasi; he will attain Me.

Continuing.

समोऽहं सर्वभूतेषु न मे द्वेष्योऽस्ति न प्रियः ।

ये भजन्ति तु मां भक्त्या मयि ते तेषु चाप्यहं ॥ ९.२९ ॥

samō'haṃ sarvabhūteṣu na mē dvēṣyō'sti na priyaḥ |

yē bhajanti tu māṃ bhaktyā mayi tē tēṣu cāpyaham || 9.29 ||

अहं समः ahaṃ samaḥ I am the same सर्वभूतेषु sarvabhūteṣu towards all beings अस्ति न द्वेष्यः asti na dveṣyaḥ there are no one hateful (to Me), न प्रियः na priyaḥ nor dear मे me to Me तु tu however ते te those ये भजन्ति ye bhajanti who worship Me माम् mām with भक्त्या bhaktyā devotion मयि mayi are in Me च अहम् अपि ca aham api and I am also तेषु teṣu in them

29. I am the same towards all beings. There is no one hateful to Me, nor dear to Me. However, those who worship Me, with devotion are in Me, and I am also in them.

In the previous verse, Lord Krishna said: Niṣkāma Bhakthā will merge in Me by which Krishna implies that the sakāma bhaktha will not merge in Me. It is understood; when there are two people and you say this person is intelligent; what is the meaning; சொல்லாமல் சொல்லி sollammal solli; two people; just pick one; it often happens at home; when two children are there; mother or father says: this boy is very intelligent; never do that; the other boy gets terribly rejected. Similarly Krishna has said here: niṣkāma bhaktha merges into Me, which implies sakāma bhaktha will not merge; therefore a doubt can come; what is the doubt; Bhagavān is partial; because some people he takes unto himself; merges; embraces, etc. some bhakthas He takes unto himself; whereas other bhakthās He keeps safe distance; Isn't it partial; so this doubt may come; how come only some people get liberation; some people or many people do not get liberation; many songs are also there; Oh
