Publishers' Note

The Parishad has already presented to the world of scholars a work entitled 'Verses Attributed to Murāri' by Prof. Ludwik Sternbach. Now it is bringing out another work entitled 'Unknown Verses Attributed to Kṣemendra' by the same author.

The aim of the author in the present study is to bring to light some "otherwise unknown Kṣemendra's verses which, almost by chance, were saved from oblivion". Here the author has collected as many as 415 verses, "specifically attributed to Kṣemendra, of which only 170 could be identified in known Kṣemendra's works. The remaining 245 verses give us an additional picture of Kṣemendra as a poet and as a dramatist and throw an additional light on his literary activity". Prof. Sternbach is of the opinion that "most of these verses seem to be genuine Kṣemendra's verses and only a part of them were, probably, wrongly attributed to the author". He has divided the 245 "new" Kṣemendra's verses under the following three heads—

1. verses which were certainly Kṣemendra's verses and formed a part of his non-extant works;
2. verses which were certainly Kṣemendra's verses and were included in some non-specified Kṣemendra's works; and
3. verses which were attributed to Kṣemendra in Subhāṣita-saṅgraha-s and were probably in the majority of cases Kṣemendra's verses.

The learned author has laid the entire Sanskrit world under a debt by presenting this interesting study. The Parishad is grateful to him for allowing it to bring out in this form his article published under the same caption in Vol. IX of the Ṛtam. Our thanks are also due to the Pnar Mudrak for taking all pains in the printing of this work.

UNKNOWN VERSES ATTRIBUTED TO KṢEMENDRA

KṢEMENDRA AND HIS WORKS

1. Kṣemendra's contribution to the Sanskrit literature is undeniable. He was a versatile, prolific and polymathic writer.

2. Information about his ancestry, the date of his literary activity can be gathered from his own writings and the introduction to the Avadānakalpalatā written by his son Somendra. From these data we know that Kṣemendra was the son of Prakāśendra, grandson of Sindhu (or Sindu) and the descendant of Bhogīndra and Narendra, minister of king Jayapīḍa of Kāśmīr; he was the brother of Cakrapāla. His father Prakāśendra was a rich man and a patron of Brāhmaṇa-s, so that Kṣemendra had a comfortable childhood in a well-to-do family. His teachers were Abhinavagupta, the author of the Vidyāvivṛti, with whom he studied rhetorics, Gaṅgaka and Sompāda. His other teachers, friends and pupils were: Rāmayaśas, a Brāhmaṇa at whose request he wrote the Bṛhatkathāmañjari, the Bhāratamañjari and the Rāmāyaṇamañjari; his father's friends and pupils were : Nakka and Sajjanānanda (at the request of the latter he wrote his Avadānakalpalatā); Vīryabhadra, an authority of Buddhistic texts; Sūryaśrī, the scribe of the Avadānakalpalatā; Ratnasīmha, his friend and his father Udayasīmha; Lakṣmaṇāditya, his pupil; and Devadhra, probably also his teacher.

3. Some of Kṣemendra's works are dated¹. And so, Bṛhatkathāmañjari was completed in A. D. 1039; the Avadānakalpalatā was written in A. D. 1052; the Aucityavicāracarcā was written during the reign of his patron Ananta, thus not later than in A. D. 1063 and probably in A. D. 1059; and the Daśāvātaracarita (kāvya) was composed in A. D. 1066. We see, therefore, that Kṣemendra's literary activity extended from A. D. 1035 to 1066 and that—as can also be seen from the list of his friends and teachers—he must have lived between A. D. 990 or 1000 and 1066 or 1070.

1. Kṣemendra used the Laukika era.

4. Kṣemendra was first a Śaiva, as also his father was; under the influence of his teacher Somapāda, he became a Vaiṣṇava and, probably, died as a Vaiṣṇava, for his last known work, the Daśavātaracarita (kāvyā) completed in A. D. 1066, was written in the spirit of Vaiṣṇavism. But also Buddhism influenced Kṣemendra; he was the first who included the Buddha amongst the avatāra-s of Viṣṇu and his Avadānakalpalatā contains a collection of Jātaka birth-stories; they were written with the assistance of his Buddhist teacher Vīryabhadrā and was supposed to be composed with the help of Buddha himself, who instructed him to finish the work after he has written three avadānas and left there the work unfinished.

5. We know that Kṣemendra wrote 39 poems (they are quoted here in alphabetical order):

1. Amṛtataraṅgakāvya (not extant; mentioned in the Kavikaṅṭhābharaṇa);
2. Avadānakalpalatā or Bauddhāvadānakalpalatā or Bodhisattvāvadānakalpalatā written at the request of Sajjanānanda, completed in A. D. 1052; published in the Bibliotheca Indica (2 volumes), work 124, Calcutta 1888 and 1918¹ and in the Buddhist Sanskrit Texts. Darbhāṅga, 1959; partly translated by Nobin Chandra Das, Calcutta, Hare Press, 1895;
3. Avasarasāra (not extant; mentioned in the Aucityavicāracarcā);
4. Aucityavivekaracārcā completed during the reign of king Ananta, i. e. not later than in A. D. 1063 (probably in A. D. 1059), published in KM. I., pp. 115-60, HSS. 25, Kṣ(RP) pp. 11-62; translated into English in SKS. pp. 118-172;
5. Kanaka-jānaki-nāṭaka (not extant; mentioned in the Kavikaṅṭhābharaṇa);
6. Kalāvīlāsa, critically published and translated into English by P. Lapanich (Xerox University Microfilms, Ann Arbor, Michigan, 1974², KM. Three other works :
 40. Hastijanaparakāśa;
 41. Navancityavicāra; and
 42. Jyotiskāvya were sometimes attributed to Kṣemendra, but the first was written by Kṣemendra, son of Yadu Śarman, the second is probably identical with Aucityavicāracarcā and the third is an extract from the Avadānakalpalatā. We also know of the existence of Kṣemendra, the author of the Gītāniṣyanda quoted by Śivānanda; Kṣemendra the author of the commentary on Nitisāra; Kṣemendra, son of Bhūdhara and author of the Māṭyākāviveka or Lipiviveka; Kṣemendra, the musician and author of the Rāgamālā; Kṣemendra the author of the Śīlasutaka; Kṣemendra, son of Haribhaṭṭa, the author of the commentary on the Dhātupāṭha of Sārasvata grammar; and Kṣemendra, a medical writer.

1. Cf. para. 29.

6. Of the 39 works written by Kṣemendra (some new works of Kṣemendra can still come to light) over half, i. e. 20 works are not extant. We only know, in the majority of cases, that Kṣemendra wrote these works from his own writings or from other sources; they are Nos. 1, 3, 5, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, (16), 21, 22, 23, 24, 27, 28, 30, 31, 33, 34 and 36.

7. The extant writings of Kṣemendra were divided by Dr. Sūryakāntha¹ into four groups :

7.1. 1. Poetical epitomes to which belong: (a) the Avadānakalpalatā,² a collection of Buddhistic birth-stories (Jātaka-s) illustrating six perfections of the Bodhisattva (charity, moral character, patience, diligence, contemplation and wisdom); this work was presented in A. D. 1202 by Sākya-śrī to Kun-dgah Rgyal Mtsham, the Lāma of Tibet; (b) the *Dasāvātāracarita*³, a poetical abstract of the stories of Viṣṇu's incarnations, taken mostly from the Purāṇa-s, the Rāmāyana (chapter 7) and Buddhistic works; (c) the *Bṛhatkathāmañjarī*⁴, a summary of the Bṛhatkathā probably by Guṇāḍhya; (d) the Bhāratamañjarī,⁵ a summary of Vyāsa's Mahābhārata; (e) the Rāmāyanamañjarī or the *Rāmāyaṇakathāsāra*⁶, a summary of Vālmiki's Rāmāyaṇa. To the same group belongs probably also: (f) the Kādambarīkathāsāṅkṣepa (or saṅgraha)⁷ which is a summary of Bāṇa's Kādambarī prose romance in metrical form, but could also be an extract of Kṣemendra's Bṛhatkathāmañjarī; and (g) the *Vātsyāyanasūtrasāra*⁸ which was, probably, a summary of Vātsyāyana's Kāmasūtra.

7. Didactic poems (or better to say satiric and didactic poems)⁹, to which belong: (a) the *Kalāvīlāsa*¹⁰, in which the legendary Mūladeva discusses with his young disciple Candragupta various forms of cheating, greed, the pitiable condition of those in love, the viles of women, the deceitful character of harlots, the unscrupulousness of kāyastha-s, the pride and arrogance of drunkards, bards, dancers, actors, singers, goldsmiths, etc. The poem ends with good advice to young men how to avoid falling into evil ways¹; (b) the *Caturvargasāṅgraha*², or a practical handbook of morals describing the four puruṣārtha-s : dharma, artha, kāma and mokṣa; (c) the *Cārucaryā (śataka)*³ or a century of “beautiful life”, a collection of moral teachings dealing mostly with dharma and artha in which, generally, the first line of the verse is a moral wise saying and the second the illustration of the truth proclaimed before, mostly drawn from Purāṇa-s or epics⁴; (d) the *Darṣadālana*⁵, or a didactic diatribe against pride due to high birth, wealth, knowledge, beauty, heroism, charity and asceticism; (e) the *Deśopadeśa*⁶, a satire which ridicules the cheat, the miser, the prostitute, the bawd, the viṭa, the Gauḍa student of the Kāśmīri university for his behaviour and arrogance, the old man’s marriage with a young girl, kāyastha-s, poets, fickle wives, merchants, alchemists, false ascetics, quacks, grammarians, etc.⁷; (e) the *Narmamālā*⁸, a biting satire which ridicules the villainous kāyastha and the whole official administrative machinery of the Kāśmīrian state, as well as physicians, astrologers, guru-s, etc.⁹; (f) the *Samayamāṭṭkā*¹⁰, or a didactic and satiric poem, inspired by Dāmodaragupta’s Kuṭṭanimata; it depicts the snares of harlots, as told by an old procuress who taught a young prostitute how to achieve mastery in her new profession, illustrated by didactic sayings and amusing stories¹¹; and (h) the *Sevyasevakopadeśa*¹², a short poem of 61 verses containing shrewd reflections on the relationship between a master and a servant with a didactic motive to improve their mutual relations¹³. To this group belongs also partly the *Lokaprakāśakośa*¹⁴, as far as it contains satiric verses¹⁵.

3. Poetics and Metrics to which belong : (a) the *Aucityavicāracarcā*¹, or a treatise on literary criticism in which Kṣemendra gave examples of compositions conforming to the propriety in kāvya (aucitya) and those devoided of it; (b) the *Kavikaṇṭhābharaṇa*², or a treatise on the making of a poet, training him and moulding his life and character, as well as merits and demerits of poetry; (c) the *Suṃttatilaka*³, a treatise on prosody dealing with various metres and their suitability for different kinds of compositions and merits and defects of poetry from the point of view of metrics, illustrated by numerous examples from his own works and verses of other authors. To this group belongs also: (d) the Kavikarṇikā or "Ear ornament for poets" mentioned in Kṣemendra's Aucityavicāracarcā (2), a compendium on figures of speech in poetry.

4. Miscellanea to which belong : (a) the *Nitikalpataru*⁴, a work on Rājanīti which "is like a primer for a budding prince; it introduces him to the responsibilities of kingship"⁵ and (b) the *Lokoprakāśa*⁶ or a kośa and a manual dealing with various aspects of the life and administration of Kaśmīr; it gives the names of castes and subcastes, forms of huṇḍī-s, or letters of exchange, bonds and the like, the titles of most of the Kaśmīri officials, paragaṇa-s into which Kaśmīr was divided, lists of synonyms of different varieties of fish, birds, mice, salt, gold-ornaments and coins, as well as satiric verses on prostitutes, monks, kāyastha-s, physicians, Brāhmaṇas converted to Muhammadanism, etc.⁷; (c) the *Vyāsāstaka*⁸ or a Vyāstotra, an eight verses long panegyric in praise of Vyāsa included in the epilogue to the Bhāratamañjari. To the same group belongs also : (d) the Nṛpāvali or the Rājāvali,⁹ or a list of kings about which Kalhaṇa wrote : "owing to a certain (or : incomprehensible) want of care there is not a single part in Kṣemendra's 'List of Kings' (Nṛpāvali) free from mistakes, though it is a work of a poet"¹⁰ (RT. 1.13).

7. It is not certain whether Kṣemendra really wrote this kośa and, if so, which part of it is his and which of other author(s). In part II Shāh Jehān is mentioned; this indicates that a part of the work was written late in the seventh century; the satirical verses were probably written by Kṣemendra, for they deal with the favourite subjects of the author.

10. M. A. Stein's translation.

7.2 To the Sūryakāntā's list of Kṣemendra's works, four poems, which are not extant, were added ; they are : the Kavikarṇikā (No. 8) which was here added to group 3 ; the Kādambarikathāsamkṣepa (No. 10) which was here added to group 1 ; the Nṛpāvali (No. 22) which was here added to group 4 ; and the Vātsyāyanasūtrasāra (No. 33) which was here added to group 1.

8. We do not know to what categories of poetry belong the Amṛtatarāṅgakāvya (No.1)¹, the Avasarasāra (No. 3)², the Kanakajānaki (No. 5)³, the Kṣemendraprakāśa (No. 10), the Citrabhārata-nāṭaka (No. 13)⁴, the Jimutavāhanāvadāna (No. 14) (if we do not consider it as a part of the Avadānakalpalatā), the Dānapārijāta (No. 16) (if it was composed by our poet Kṣemendra and not another Kṣemendra), the Nitilatā (No. 21)⁵, the Padyakādambari (No. 23)⁶, the Pavanapañcāśikā (No. 23)⁷, the Muktāvali(kāvya) (No. 27)⁸, the Munimatamimāmsā (No. 28)⁹, the Lalitaratnamālā (No. 30)¹⁰, the Lāvaṇyavatikāvya (No. 30)¹¹, the Vinayavallī (No. 34)¹² and the Śaśivāmsamahākāvya (No. 36)¹³. In most cases these works are quoted in the three Kṣemendra's works which are of anthological character, i. e. the Aucityavicāracarcā, the Kavikaṅṭhābharaṇa and the Suvṛttatilaka; some verses from these works are quoted there. From the quotations we may have an idea of the type of poetry, but we do not know what these works contain, for the verses quoted in the three Kṣemendra's works of anthological character do not need to be representative of the entire works and could also have been quoted as examples of some of Kṣemendra's teachings¹⁴.

9. As to the chronology of works written by Kṣemendra we know only that :

the Bṛhatkathāmañjarī was completed in A. D. 1037;
 the Samayamāṭṭkā in A. D. 1050;
 the Avadānakalpalatā in A. D. 1052;
 the Aucityavicāracarcā before A.D. 1063 (probably in A.D. 1059); and the Daśavatāracarita(kāvya) in A. D. 1066;

and that before the Bhāratamañjarī the Rāmāyaṇamañjarī must have been written, for the title Vyāsadāsa was bestowed on Kṣemendra after he has written the Bhāratamañjarī and in the Rāmāyaṇamañjarī Kṣemendra's name is quoted without his sobriquet Vyāsadāsa. We further know that the Avadānakalpalatā, the Avasarasāra, the Kavikarṇikā, the Nītilatā, the Munimatamimāmsā, the Lalitaratnamālā, the Vātsyāyanasūtrasāra and the Vinayavallī must have been written before the Aucityavicāracarcā was composed; that the Amṛtatarāṅga(kāvya), the Kanakajānaki-nāṭka, the Padyakādambārī and the Śaśivamśamahākāvya must have been written before the Kavikaṅṭhābharaṇa was composed; that the Pavanaṣaṅcāsīkā must have been written before the Suṣṛttatilaka was composed; that the Caturvargasamgraha, the Citrabhāratanāṭaka, the Muktāvalī and the Lāvaṇyavatīkāvya must have been written before the Aucityavicāracarcā and the Kavikaṅṭhābharaṇa were composed, whichever was earlier, for these poems were quoted in both these works of anthological character; and, finally, that the Suṣṛttatilaka must have been written as long as Kṣemendra was a Śaiva¹, for they are of Śaiva character². In addition, Sūryakānta tried to show³ that the Kavikaṅṭhābharaṇa was composed after Kṣemendra has finished his Aucityavicāracarcā.

10. Taking into account these considerations, it is impossible to accept unreservedly the chronological order of Kṣemendra's works, as given by M. Kāul (in his introduction to the edition of the Deśopadeśa and the Narmamālā)⁴, for, as far as M. Kaul's chronological order is concerned, the Rāmāyaṇamañjarī was composed before the Bhāratamañjarī and the Citrabhāratanāṭaka and the Caturvargasamgraha before the Aucityavicāracarcā; and the Samayamāṭṭkā must have been written much earlier, in any case before the Avadānakalpalatā and the Aucityavicāracarcā were composed. As far as V. P. Mahajan's⁵ chronological order of Kṣemendra's works is concerned⁶, the Kanakajānaki-nāṭaka must have been composed

3. Kṣemendra—Studies, POS. 91; p. 27.

4. KTS. 40 p. 25.

5. It is incomplete, for several works are omitted, e.g. the Amṛtatarāṅginī, the Citrabhāratanāṭaka, the Śaśivamśamahākāvya.

6. In his edition of the Nītikalpataru, p. v.

before the Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa and the Caturvargasamgraha before the Aucityavicāracarcā and the Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa were written. Should we accept the contention of Dr. Sūryakānta that the Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa was composed after the Aucityavicāracarcā, then the place of the Avadānakalpalatā should be changed, for it was also quoted in the Aucityavicāracarcā. Also Dr. Sūryakānta's order is not acceptable in toto, for the Citrabhārata-nāṭaka and the Caturvargasamgraha belong to the group of works which must have been composed before the Aucityavicāracarcā was written and the Padyakādambarī to the group of works composed before the Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa was written, for they are quoted in both treatises of Kṣemendra on rhetorics.

11. It seems that in the first period, Kṣemendra wrote mostly the poetical epitomes and in the last period some of his didactic and satiric poems, as the Darṣadalana, Sevyaśevakopadeśa and the Daśāvātāracarita(kāvya). Between these two extremes, it is impossible to fix the chronological order of Kṣemendra's writings.

AIM OF THE STUDY

12. As stated above,¹ out of the 39 works which Kṣemendra is supposed to have written, twenty are unknown to us²; they were lost and even their MSs. do not exist. Fortunately, some fragments of Kṣemendra's unknown writings are preserved in the three Kṣemendra's treatises of anthological character, viz. the Aucityavicāracarcā, the Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa and the Suṣṭtatilaka and in classical and younger subhāṣita-samgroha-s. These sources quote as many as 415 verses, specifically attributed to Kṣemendra, of which only 170 could be identified in known Kṣemendra's works. The remaining 245 verses give us an additional picture of Kṣemendra as a poet and as a dramatist and throw an additional light on his literary activity. The present study will be devoted to these otherwise unknown Kṣemendra's verses which, almost by chance, were saved from oblivion. Most of these verses seem to be genuine Kṣemendra's verses and only a part of them were, probably, wrongly attributed to the author.

1. See Para. 6.

2. Possibly some of these twenty works are parts of known works or other titles of the same work, or written by another Kṣemendra than our poet. And so, for instance, the Jimūtavāhanāvadāna may be a part of the Avadānakalpalatā; the Vetālapañcaviṃśati and the Vyāsāṣṭaka a part of the Bṛhatkathāmañjarī; the Nītilatā may be identical with the Nītikalpataru; and the Dānapārijāta may have been written by another Kṣemendra, viz. Kṣemendra Mahopādhyāya.

“NEW” KṢEMENDRA’S VERSES

13. The 245 “new” Kṣemendra’s verses can be divided into :

1. verses which were certainly Kṣemendra’s verses and formed a part of his non-extant works ;
2. verses which were certainly Kṣemendra’s verses and were included in some non-specified Kṣemendra’s works ; and
3. verses which were attributed to Kṣemendra in subhāṣita-saṅgraha-s. and were probably in the majority of cases Kṣemendra’s verses.

14. The verses belonging to group 1, i.e. verses which were certainly Kṣemendra’s stanzas and formed part of his non-extant works, are quoted by Kṣemendra in his own treatises of anthological character¹; in these works Kṣemendra, in order to illustrate his teachings on prosody, rhetorics and metrics, quoted examples from his own writings and clearly indicated from which of his works he culled them. There are 64 such verses, of which 57 were culled from non-extant works of Kṣemendra and 7 from his known works.

15. The examples from Kṣemendra’s non-extant works were culled from the Amṛtaraṅga(kāvya) (2 verses), the Avasarasāra (1 verse), the Kanakajānakināṭaka (5 verses), the Citrabhārata-nāṭaka (3 verses), the Nītilatā (4 verses), the Padyakādambari (8 verses), the Pavanapañcāśikā (1 verse), the Muktāvali (2 verses), the Munimātamimānsā (15 verses), the Lalitaratnamālā (1 verses), the Lāvaṇyavati(kāvya) (7 verses), the Vātsyāyanasūtrasāra (1 verse), the Vinayavalli (2 verses) and the Śaśivamśamahākāvya (5 verses).² Examples from Kṣemendra’s known works were culled from the Avadānakalpalatā (3 verses), the Caturvargasāṅgraha (3 verses), and the Deśopadeśa (1 verse)³. In the Aucityavicāracarcā and the Kavikaṅṭhābharaṇa Kṣemendra culled from the Caturvargasāṅgraha, the Citrabhārata-nāṭaka, the Muktāvali and the Lāvaṇyavati(kāvya); in the Aucityavicāracarcā only from the Avadānakalpalatā, the Avasarasāra, the Nītilatā, the Munimātamimānsā, the Lalitaratnamālā the Vātsyāyanasūtrasāra and the Vinayavalli; in the Kavikaṅṭhābharaṇa only from the Amṛtaraṅga(kāvya), the Kanakajānakināṭaka, the Deśopadeśa, the Padyakādambari and the Śaśivamśamahākāvya; and in the Suṛttatilaka only from the *Pavanapañcāśikā*⁴. There cannot be any doubt that these verses were genuine Kṣemendra’s for they were so attributed by Kṣemendra himself.

16. The verses belonging to group 2, i.e. verses which were certainly

1. The Aucityavicāracarcā, the Kavikaṅṭhābharaṇa and the Suṛttatilaka.

2. See Para. 19.

3. See Paras. 28.2.2, 28.6 and 28.8.

4. See Para. 9

written by Kṣemendra and were included in some non-specified Kṣemendra's works, are also quoted by Kṣemendra in his own treatises of anthological character¹ as "my" verses (mama). There are 38 such verses (all, with one exception², found in the Suṛttatilaka) and none of them could be identified in Kṣemendra's known writings. It is quite possible that some of these verses, i.e. those included in chapter one of the Suṛttatilaka were not culled from Kṣemendra's works, but were ad hoc composed by Kṣemendra for the Suṛttatilaka, in order to illustrate the different metres with which he dealt with in this treatise³; these stanzas, namely, contain the name of the metre in its contents and, it seems, that Kṣemendra encountered sometimes some difficulty in including the name of the metre in the verse quoted.⁴ However, not all these verses seem to be of this sort⁵; some must have been culled from some unknown works of Kṣemendra, similarly as stanzas quoted in the Suṛttatilaka and attributed to other poets, such as Kīlidāsa, Bhavabhūti, Bhāravi, Ratnākara, Rājasekhara and many others. Here also there cannot be any doubt that these verses were Kṣemendra's genuine verses, for they were also attributed to Kṣemendra by the author himself.

17.0. The verses belonging to group 3, and attributed specifically to Kṣemendra, are included in the following classical anthologies: Bhagadatta Jalhana's Sūktimuktāvali, Śārngadhara-Paddhati, Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali, Sūrya Kaliṅgarāja's Sūktiratnahāra, Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhāmidhi, Rūpa Gosvāmin's Padyāvali and the Harikavi's Subhāṣitahārāvali; younger anthologies: Lakṣmaṇabhaṭṭa Āṅkolakara's Padyaracanā, Gadādharabhaṭṭa's Rasikajivana, Govindajit's Sabhyālanakaraṇa, Veṇidatta's Padyaveṇi, anonymous Subhāṣita-savaskṛta (?) -śloka, as well as numerous modern anthologies.

17.1. Anthologies are of three types:

1. virtually composed only of sententious sayings;
2. almost only composed of quotations from literary works, particularly "beatifully turned" and also eloquently said, as well as verses dealing with the description of nature, different moods, suggestions and anyokti-s;

1. See footnote 67.

2. One verse is attributed to Kṣemendra himself (mama) in the Kavikaṅṭhābharaṇa.

3. See Paras. 21.2 and 19.7.

4. E.g. in the Suṛttatilaka ad 1.20-21 (10) or ad 25 (14), where Kṣemendra, in order to get the name of the dodhaka-or toḷaka-metres in the contents of "his" verses (quoted as examples of these metres) had to split them into two words (bhaktajanābhayado' tha kapāli or parito' ṭa kapālakaraḥ sumate. See Para. 21.2.

5. E.g. those included in chapters 2 and 3 of the Suṛttatilaka.

3. mixed, i.e. including both types of anthologies mentioned above. They can be further divided into classical anthologies, younger anthologies and modern anthologies.

17.1.1. A. Classical anthologies : Bhagadatta Jalhana's (or Jahlaṇa's) Sūktimuktāvalī belongs to type 3 and was written in A. D. 1258¹; it served as a model to Harikavi's Subhāṣītahārāvalī.² Śārṅghata's Paddhati belongs to type 3 and was written in A. D. 1363³; it contains also some "useful information" which cannot be considered as poetical, Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣītāvalī belongs to type 3 and was written in the fifteenth century.⁴ Vallabhadeva was a Kāśmīri author and quoted many Kāśmīri poets. Sūrya Kālīṅgarāja's *Sūktiratnahāra*⁵ belongs to type 1 and was written after Vallabhadeva's *Subhāṣītāvalī*⁶. Sāyaṇa's *Subhāṣītasudhānidhi*⁷ (which seems to be another version of the Sūktiratnahāra or another work almost identical with, and based on, the Sūktiranahāra) belongs, evidently, also to type 1 and was written at the same time as the *Sūktiratnahāra*⁸; the Sūktiratnahāra quotes also subhāṣita-s in Prākṛta, which are usually omitted in the *Subhāṣītasudhānidhi*⁹; both anthologies quote often verses with attributions to authors or works often not mentioned in other anthologies;¹⁰ the attributions included in these anthologies are often not reliable¹. Rūpa Gosvāmin's Padyāvali belongs to type 3, but contains mostly devotional Vaiṣṇava verses and only seldom secular verses are quoted in it; it was composed by the end of the fifteenth and beginning of the sixteenth century.² Harikavi's Subhāṣitahārāvali belongs to type 3 and was composed in the second half of the seventeenth century;³ the anthology repeats many verses from Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvali and Rūpa Gosvāmin's *Padyāvali*⁴ and because of that, though from the seventeenth century, can be counted amongst classical anthologies⁵.

17.1.2. Also to the classical anthologies are counted the two oldest Sanskrit anthologies, viz. Vidyākara's Subhāṣitaratnaśoṣa, belonging to type 2, probably from the beginning of the twelfth century⁶, of which a fragment was published by F. W. Thomas as the *Kavīndravacanasaṃuccaya*⁷ and an imitation of which is the Prasannasāhityaratnākara of Nandana from the fifteenth century⁸; and Śrīdhara-dāsa's Sad-ukti-karṇāmṛta belonging to type 2 and compiled in A.D. 1205⁹; Vidyākara was a Kāśmīri and Śrīdhara-dāsa was a Gauḍa; both preferably quoted Kāśmīri and Gauḍa poets respectively, but both do not quote Kṣemendra by name, while they cite anonymously some verses which in other anthologies¹⁰ were attributed to Kṣemendra. No explanation can be offered for it, particularly as far as Vidyākara's Subhāṣitaratnaśoṣa is concerned, for it is unlikely that Kṣemendra's writings were unknown in Kāśmīr in the beginning of the twelfth century. Did Vidyākara not appreciate Kṣemendra's writings or had he a personal dislike to his poetry, which suits his Subhāṣitaratnaśoṣa well, or did he compose, perhaps, his anthology before Kṣemendra's time?

belongs to type 2; it was written between A.D. 1625 and 1650 and contains numerous anyokti-s and some Prākṛta verses.¹ Godādharaḥṭṭa's Rasikajivana belongs to type 3 and was composed in the middle of the seventeenth century,² it contains mostly verses quoted in earlier and contemporaneous anthologies; attributions contained in the Rasikajivana are often not reliable. Govindajit's Sabhyālakāraṇa belongs to type 3 and was composed after A.D. 1656;³ it also contains mostly verses quoted in earlier and contemporaneous anthologies. Veṇidatta's Padyaveṇi belongs to type 2 and was composed in the latter half of the seventeenth century⁴; it seldom quotes other poets than those contemporaneous with Veṇidatta or from the seventeenth century; partly based on it is the anonymous *Subhāṣitasārasamuccaya*⁵. Vrajañātha's Padya-tarāṅgiṇi belongs to type 3 from the middle of the eighteenth century.⁶ The anonymous Subhāṣita-savaskṛta(?)-śloka belongs to type 2 and was composed probably in the eighteenth or nineteenth century⁷. Vallabhadeva's⁸ Vidagdhanavallabha belongs to type 3 and is from an unknown date⁹; it contains very unreliable attributions¹⁰. Also to this group belong inter alia the anonymous Subhāṣi'amuktāvali from the end of the sixteenth and the beginning of the seventeenth century (type 3)¹¹; the Vyāsa-subhāṣita-saṅgraha older than Sūryakaliṅgarāja's Sūktiratnahāra and Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi also incorporated as the Vyāsakāraya and Vyāsaśataka in the literatures of Ceylon and Siam respectively (type 1)¹²; they do not contain any attributions to individual authors. Also quoting Kṣemendra's poetry are some anthologies preserved only in MSs., viz. the Subhāṣitaratnaśoṣa of Bhaṭṭaśrikrṣṇa authors are so often carelessly set down and confusing that they can, only with varying degrees of probability, be attributable to the poets to whom they were ascribed¹. Therefore, not all the verses belonging to this group, though specifically attributed to Kṣemendra, must have been written by this author; some of them, but very few, were certainly not Kṣemendra's verses², though the bulk of them were composed by Kṣemendra.

17.3. The modern anthologies are, from the point of view of the present study of no particular importance, for they recopy the subhāṣita-s from older anthologies sometimes with and sometimes without attributions included in these anthologies. These are, in particular, the *Subhāṣitasudhā-ratnabhāṇḍāgāram*⁶ and based on it the *Subhāṣitaratnabhāṇḍāgāram*⁷, the *Subhāṣitaratnamālā*⁸, the *Subhāṣitaratnākara*⁹, the Jaina *Subhāṣitapadyaratnākara*¹⁰, the *Subhāṣitasamgraha*¹¹, the *Subhāṣitaratnasamuccaya*¹², the *Subhāṣitasaptaśatī*¹³, the *Subhāṣitasudhānandalahari*¹⁴, the *Saṃskṛtasūktiratnākara*¹⁵, which contains sometimes correct attributions, the *Niṭisamgraha*¹⁶ which contains nearly three-quarters of verses from the *Cārucaryā*¹⁷, the *Samayocitapadya(ratna)mālikā*¹⁸, a popular anthology belonging to type I and many others.

17.5. The verse belonging to group 3³ might be divided into two sub-groups :

- (a) verses which could not be identified in any of the works of Kṣemendra non extant or extant; and
- (b) verses which could be identified in Kṣemendra's known writings and verses specifically attributed to his known works.

The two sub-groups are interrelated, for sub-group (b) contains also verses which could not be identified in any of the Kṣemendra's works, although they were sometimes specifically attributed to such works of Kṣemendra. There are 320 verses which belong to group 3, of which 91 verses belong to sub-group (a) and 229 verses to sub-group (b).

17.5.1. With regard to sub-group (a) it should be noted that some of the verses attributed in anthologies to Kṣemendra

- (i) were also quoted in group 1⁴; these verses were in Kṣemendra's three works of anthological character specifically attributed to his non-extant works (e.g. Annex I. Nos. 8, 17); and
- (ii) were not attributed specifically to Kṣemendra, but to his extant works, such as the Kalāvīlāsa or Bṛhatkathāmañjarī; some of these verses could be identified in the respective extant works of Kṣemendra, but some could not; these verses attributed in anthologies to extant works, whether they could be or could not be identified in these works were, included in group 3, sub-group (b).

17.6. With regard to sub-group (b), verses even identified in extant works of Kṣemendra are in anthologies often recorded with unknown readings; these readings are sometimes better than those chosen for the critical editions of some known works of Kṣemendra⁴ and should be always taken into consideration for the critical editions of Kṣemendra's writings.

17.7. Anthologies also quote some Kṣemendra's writings anonymously¹ and even some anthologies, like the small modern anthology, the Nīṭisāṃgraha, quotes anonymously in its beginning, almost three-quarters of the Cārucaryā, while the Subhāṣitahārāvalī of Harikavi and the Sūktimuktāvalī of Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa (which served, probably, as a model for Harikavi²) quotes the same lot of verses (in the order of the stanzas) with the attribution to Kṣemendra³. Also the Śārṅgadhara-paddhati quoted a great part of the Cārucaryā in a group (in the order of the stanzas as preserved in the Cārucaryā). All this proves that the Cārucaryā, with minor variants, must have been very popular from the thirteenth century onwards.

18. The verses attributed to Kṣemendra and, as divided above into four groups⁴, are quoted in extenso in the annexes I-IV, with the exception of those verses which were identified in the Kṣemendra's known works. It was felt that these verses are easily accessible and there is no need of repeating them in the annexes; to identify them their first pāda was only quoted with reference to the respective sources; all variants found in the anthologies were noted; the same system was also often adopted for verses attributed in anthologies to Kṣemendra which occur in some well-known sources, when it was felt that the full quotation of these verses is of no importance for the proper reconstruction of the text.

VERSES ATTRIBUTED TO KṢEMENDRA IN HIS NOT EXTANT WORKS, AS RECORDED IN THE TREATISES OF ANTHOLOGICAL CHARACTER

19.0. In Annex I we find verses attributed to Kṣemendra in his not-extant works, as they are recorded in the three treatises of anthological character. These verses do not give us a definite idea of the content and character of Kṣemendra's non extant works; however, the following can be noted:

19.1. The Amṛtataraṅga (kāvyā), dealing with the churning of the milky ocean by Deva-s and Pūrvadeva-s, must have been composed before Kṣemendra wrote his Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa, for two verses from this work (Annex I; Nos. 1-2) are preserved in the Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa. They are quoted

1. E.g. Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvalī quoted anonymously, Kalāvīlāsa, 8.11.
 2. See Para. 17.1.1.
 3. Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa quoted in his Sūktimuktāvalī parts of some sarga-s of the Kalāvīlāsa together.
 4. Cf. Paras. 13 and 17.5, i.e. three groups, of which group 3 is divided into sub-groups (a) and (b) (see Annexes III and IV).

there in order to show the familiarity of Kṣemendra with the characteristics of horses. Both verses form an entity and are mythological in their contents; they do not give any idea of the contents or character of the Aṃṣṭataraṅga (kāvyā).

19.2. The Avasarasāra must have been composed before Kṣemendra wrote his Aucityavicāracarcā, for a single verse from this work (Annex I ; No. 3) is preserved in the Aucityavicāracarcā only. The verse is a flattery verse containing an often in Sanskrit literature repeated insincere eulogy of an unknown king (or god) for his bravery and success on the battlefield which "causes pain to the wives" of his foe. If this single verse from the Avasarasāra is representative of the whole poem, we may assume that it was a praśasti, perhaps of his patron king Ananta, of no great literary value.

19.3. The Kanakajānakī-nāṭaka must have been a drama composed by Kṣemendra before he wrote his Kavikaṇṭhābharāṇa, for five verses from this work (Annex I ; Nos. 4-8) are preserved in the Kavikaṇṭhābharāṇa only. The verses were considered by Kṣemendra himself as good, as having charm (No. 4) and showing familiarity of the author with trees (No. 7), wild-life (No. 8), characteristics of elephants (No. 6) and archery (No. 5) ; most of the verses of the Kanakajānaki are dull and, from the poetical point of view, of no great value ; particularly poetically poor is verse No. 7, which is, in reality, a list of twenty-four different trees ; only verses Nos. 8 and 4 are poetically important ; therefore, verse No. 8 is also quoted in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvalī, where it is also attributed to Kṣemendra (but not to the Kanakajānaki). Two verses (Nos. 4 and 5) refer to Rakṣasa-s Khara, Dūṣana and Trīśiras, so that it is likely that the poem was based on an episode from the Rāmāyaṇa and described, particularly, the abduction of Sitā by Rāvaṇa and, probably, the search for her in the forest ; most of the verses dealt with the description of the forest and forest life. In the thirteenth century, the drama must have been current, since Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa knew it and included a verse from it in his Sūktimuktāvalī.

19.4. The Citrabhārata-nāṭaka must have been a drama composed by Kṣemendra before he wrote his Aucityavicāracarcā and the Kavikaṇṭhābharāṇa, whichever was earlier, for two verses from this drama, (Annex I ; Nos. 9 and 11) are preserved in the Kavikaṇṭhābharāṇa and one verse (Annex I ; No. 10) in the Aucityavicāracarcā. Kṣemendra quoted the stanzas from the drama as examples of verses having charm (Nos. 9 and 11) and familiarity of the author with spiritual science (No. 10). Verse No. 10 refers to Yudhiṣṭhīra and it is possible that the drama was based on an episode from the Mahābhārata. Poetically good is verse No. 9 and reveals the talent of its author. Verse No. 9 which is of mythological character is, as many of the author's verses, a sententious verse.

19.5. The Nitilatā must have been composed before Kṣemendra wrote his Aucityavicāracarcā, for four verses from this work (Annex I ; Nos. 12-15) are preserved in the Aucityavicāracarcā. Kṣemendra quoted the stanzas as examples of different proprieties ; all the four verses are based on the Rāma story and it seems that the poem dealt with an episode from the Rāmāyaṇa. The examples culled by Kṣemendra and included in the Aucityavicāracarcā from the Nitilatā do not confirm the suggestion that Nitilatā is identical with the Nitikalpataru (NCC₅ 168). In any case none of the verses of the Nitilatā could be identified in the latter work.

19.6. The Padyakādambārī must have been composed before Kṣemendra wrote his Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa, for 6 verses from this work (Annex I; Nos. 16-23) are preserved in the Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa. Kṣemendra quoted the stanzas as examples of his familiarity with medical science (No. 16), with logic (No. 22) and politics (No. 23), as well as examples of charm which has to be thought out (No. 17), in word and meaning (No. 19) and purity in flavour (No. 18) and words (No. 20). All the verses, with the exception of the last one, which is a very good sententious verse (māxim) (No. 23) are detached charming lyrical and amatory verses showing that at the time Kṣemendra composed them, he was already a mature poet. The Padyakādambārī, which is considered to be a rendering of Bāṇa's Kādambārī in metrical form¹, must have been composed by Kṣemendra at a later stage of his activity than his other epitomes. The verses show great talent of its author and one of the verses (No. 17) was also quoted over the name of Kṣemendra (and not Padyakādambārī) in the Śārṅgadhara-paddhati and Rūpa Gosvāmin's Padyāvali and over the name of Rājaśekhara in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvali ; the attribution in the latter anthology to Rājaśekhara is certainly wrong, for it is a Kṣemendra's verse ; it is inconceivable that Kṣemendra would have appropriated to himself a verse written not by him but written by Rājaśekhara. In the fourteenth century (and probably in the thirteenth century also) the work must have been current, since Śārṅgadhara quoted a verse from it over the name of Kṣemendra (as well as Rūpa Gosvāmin at the end of the fifteenth or beginning of the sixteenth century) and Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa quoted a verse from it (but over the name of Rājaśekhara) in the thirteenth century.

19.7. The Pavanapañcāśikā must have been composed in 50 verses

1. V. P. Mahajan's edition of the Nitikalpataru, p. v.

before Kṣemendra wrote his Suṃṛttatilaka, for one verse from this work (Annex I ; No. 24) is preserved in the Suṃṛttatilaka. This is the only case when a verse quoted from a specific non-extant work of Kṣemendra is cited in the Suṃṛttatilaka; all the other verses quoted by Kṣemendra in the Suṃṛttatilaka, in addition to those attributed to other authors, are his own verses from his unspecified works or were composed by him ad hoc to illustrate his teachings of metrics¹. The verse is quoted as an example of a sragdharā-verse and describes a strong wind ; it does not give any idea of the contents or character of the Pavanapañcāśikā.

19.8. The Muktāvalī must have been composed before Kṣemendra wrote his Aucityavicāraracā and the Kavikaṇṭhābharāṇa, whichever was earlier, for one verse from this work (Annex I ; No. 25) is preserved in the Aucityavicāraracā and the other (Annex I ; No. 26) in the Kavikaṇṭhābharāṇa. Kṣemendra quoted these verses as examples of purity of mind (No. 25) and familiarity with the means of emancipation (No. 26). Both verses are religious, so that it is likely that the Muktāvalī was a collection of stray verses of devotional character.

19.9. The Munimatamīmsā must have been composed before Kṣemendra wrote his Aucityavicāraracā, for fifteen verses from this work (Annex I ; Nos. 27-41) are preserved in the Aucityavicāraracā. Kṣemendra quoted these verses as examples of proprieties and improprieties of naturalness (Nos. 29 and 36), of thought (Nos. 27 and 35), of repulsive sentiment (verses Nos. 40 and 39), of proprieties in the sentiment of tranquility (No. 30), in mixture of sentiments of heroism and pathos (No. 31), or quietism, eroticism, pathos and repulsion (No. 33), or sentiment of pathos (No. 34), charm through the use of suitable adjectives (No. 32), prepositions (No. 28), particles (No. 41), or tenses (No. 37) and the meaning of composition (No. 38). The verses are mostly mythological verses often based on stories included in the Mahābhārata (Nos. 27, 28, 29, 31, 34) and sententious verses. The work itself was probably a technical treatise dealing with religion and philosophy, particularly with mokṣa, or with teachings of Vyāsa.

19.10. The Lalitaratnamālā must have been composed before Kṣemendra wrote his Aucityavicāraracā, for the single verse quoted by Kṣemendra from this work (Annex I ; No. 42) is preserved in the Aucityavicāraracā. Kṣemendra quoted the verse as an example of the use of proper genders. This beautiful lyrical verse describes the grief of king Vatsa owing to the separation from

1. See Paras. 16 and 21.2.

Ratnāvālī. It is possible that the Lalitaratnamālā was an epitome of Harṣa's Ratnāvālī.

19.11. The Lāvanyaavatī-(kāvya) must have been composed before Kṣemendra wrote his Aucityavicāracarcā and the Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa, whichever was earlier, for five verses (Annex I. Nos. 43-46 and 48) are preserved in the Aucityavicāracarcā; one verse (Annex I; No. 49) in the Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa and one verse (Annex I; No. 47) in the Aucityavicāracarcā and the Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa. Kṣemendra quoted the verses as examples of charm in the figure of speech (No. 49), the poet's proper composition (Nos. 43,44 and 46), use of the accusative case (No. 47) and sentiment of humour and śṛṅgāra (Nos. 45 and 48). The Lāvanyaavatī(kāvya) must have been a satirical poem of the sort of the Kalāvīlāsa; the verses deal mostly with tricks of women or prostitutes to deceive their lovers (Nos. 43, 44, 45, 48), description of the beauty of women (No. 49) and coming to age of an adolescent girl (No. 46); only one verse is a flattery verse which could have been said by a prostitute or a woman to her client or lover. Lāvanyaavatī was probably the heroine of this kāvya and the work might have dealt with the seduction of Atrivasu by Vāsantikā. All the verses are lyrical and must have belonged to the satirical poems of Kṣemendra, as the Kalāvīlāsa and the Samayamāṭṭkā. They probably belong to the later period of Kṣemendra's poetical activity.

19.12. The Vātsyāyanasūtrasāra must have been composed before Kṣemendra wrote his Aucityavicāracarcā, for the single verse quoted by Kṣemendra from this work is preserved in the Aucityavicāracarcā (Annex I; No. 50). Kṣemendra quoted the verse as an example of the use of the proper benediction. The verse is an invocatory and benedictory verse to Kāma, the god of Love. It probably prefaced the Vātsyāyanasūtrasāra which was, probably, an epitome of Vātsyāyana's Kāmasūtra.

19.13. The Vinayavallī must have been composed before Kṣemendra wrote his Aucityavicāracarcā, for the two verses which form an entity, and were quoted by Kṣemendra, are preserved in the Aucityavicāracarcā (Annex I; Nos. 51-52). The verses are quoted by Kṣemendra as an example of a sentence composed with propriety. The verses deal with Bhīma and the poem was probably based on the Mahābhārata. The verses quoted are of mythological character and do not give any idea of the character and contents of the Vinayavallī.

19.14. The Śaśivamśamahākāvya must have been written before Kṣemendra wrote his Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa, for the five verses quoted by Kṣemendra from this work are preserved in the Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa (Annex I; Nos. 53-57). Kṣemendra must have considered this work as very good and charming, for he quoted verses from it as examples of charm in the whole verse (No. 55), of spontaneous charm (No. 56), of charm residing in the story of a famous person (No. 53), of purity of sense (No. 57) and familiarity of the author with the country (No. 54). The verses are mostly lyrical and amatory verses ; some of them are connected with the Mahābhārata story, so that it is possible that this poem was also based on an episode from the Mahābhārata.

20. Out of the fourteen non-extant works of Kṣemendra mentioned above, the Lāvānyavati-(kāvya) seems to be the most typical work for Kṣemendra's writings and perhaps the most valuable.

VERSES ATTRIBUTED GENERALLY TO KṢEMENDRA IN HIS TREATISES OF ANTHOLOGICAL CHARACTER AND NOT IDENTIFIED IN HIS EXTANT WORKS

21.1. In Annex II we find verses generally attributed to Kṣemendra in his three treatises of anthological character and not identified in his extant works. As mentioned above¹, these verses were certainly Kṣemendra's verses, because they were attributed to the author by Kṣemendra himself and there is no doubt that Kṣemendra would not appropriate to himself any verse written by another author and that he knew unquestionably which verses he wrote.

21.2.1. It was also stated above² that all, but one, verse in this group are quoted in the Suṃttatilaka and that those found in the first chapter of the Suṃttatilaka were probably composed ad hoc by Kṣemendra in order to define and illustrate the various metres and were not culled from Kṣemendra's any non-extant (or extant) works. There are 25 such verses (Annex I. Nos. 62-73, 76-78, 80-87 and 93-94). They are, usually, of inferior poetical value, because Kṣemendra wanted to incorporate in the verse the name of the metre, which usually denote some attributes of women, and it was not easy, even for a poet of Kṣemendra's stature, to build around the names of metres a good verse with a good sense³. Particularly difficult was it when the verse was short of less than 14 syllables to a quarter. Much easier was to compose good verses in longer metres ; therefore, examples of the Mandākrāntā-(Annex I : No. 80), or Harīṇi-(Annex I ; No. 72), or Śikharīṇi-verses (Annex I ; No. 84) are of considerable poetical value.

21.2.2. The verses quoted in chapter 1 of the Suṃttatilaka are usually

1. See Paras. 14 and 16.
 2. See Paras. 16 and 19.7.
 3. See footnote 4 on p. 13.

21.3. Chapters II and III of the Suṣṛṭṭatilaka deal with the merits and demerits of the different metres ; there, Kṣemendra mostly quoted verses of other poets and verses of his own ; these are verses included in Annex II Nos. 58-61, 74-75, 79, 88-92 and 95 (the latter verse is not quoted in the Suṣṛṭṭatilaka but in the Kavikaṇṭhābharāṇa in order to show that the author “thrived in a shadow of another poet”¹) ; the verses in this group are often charming, as, for instance a sententious verse composed in the Drutavilambita metre (Annex II ; No. 61) ; they are mostly lyrical verses which are of high poetical value. The verses are quoted as examples of the merits of the Dodhaka (No. 92), Śālini (No. 88), Rathoddhatā (Nos. 58-59), Svāgatā (No. 89), Toṭaka (No. 79), Drutavilambita (No. 61), Praharṣiṇi (No. 91), Pṛṭhvi (No. 60) and Sragdharā (No. 90) metres.

VERSES ATTRIBUTED TO KṢEMENDRA IN ANTHOLOGIES AND NOT IDENTIFIED IN HIS KNOWN WORKS

22.0. In Annex III, representing verses belonging to group 3 (a)² ninety-one verses attributed in anthologies³ to Kṣemendra are quoted. As stated above⁴, not all these verses are Kṣemendra’s genuine verses. Some were, probably, wrongly attributed in anthologies to Kṣemendra, but the bulk of the verses quoted in this group were verses composed by Kṣemendra and must be considered as “new” Kṣemendra’s verses, i. e. verses of the poet otherwise unknown. They, probably belonged, in their great majority, to non extant Kṣemendra’s writings. Their knowledge seems to be of primordial importance for the assessment of Kṣemendra’s poetry.

22.1. Out of these 91 verses, verse No. 102 is not a Kṣemendra’s verse. It is attributed to Kṣemendra in the Padyaracanā and the Subhāṣitasavakṣṛta(?)-śloka and to Kṣemeśvara in the Saduktikarṇāmṛta. Because of the similarity of names Kṣemendra-Kṣemeśvara the two authors were sometimes confounded. The verse occurs in the Naiṣadhāna-nāṭaka of Kṣemeśvara, as recorded in P. Peterson’s Second Report ; it is a Kṣemeśvara’s verse.

22.2. Verse No. 106 attributed in Vallabhadeva’s Subhāṣitāvali to Kṣemendra is not also a Kṣemendra’s verse ; it is a verse of Kṣemendra’s pupil Lakṣmaṇāditya, as Kṣemendra clearly stated in the Kavikaṇṭhābharāṇa.

1. Quoted in Annex II, for it is attributed by Kṣemendra to himself (mama).
 2. See Para. 17.4.
 3. About different anthologies quoted in this study see Paras, 17.1 to 17.3.
 4. Cf. Para. 17.4.

22.3. Verse No. 123 which is in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali attributed to Kṣemendra¹ and in Sūrya Kaliṅgarāja's Sūktiratnahāra to Sakalavidyākara and is quoted anonymously in the Narābharaṇa and in some alaṅkāra-works (Kuvalayānanda, Citrāmimānsā) is probably also not a Kṣemendra's verse ; it is a popular sententious saying which also occurs in some texts of the Southern Pañcatantra.¹

22.4. Verse No. 126, though attributed to Kṣemendra in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvali and, probably through this anthology², in Hari-kavi's Subhāṣitahārāvali, is also not a Kṣemendra's verse. It is a Pañcatantra verse, already known in the earliest recensions of the Pañcatantra (the Tantrākhyāyikā, Southern, Nepalese recensions and offshoots of the Tantrākhyāyikā-Pūrṇabhadra, textus simplicior) ; from the Pañcatantra it was included in the Hitopadeśa and probably, in the Vikramacarita (southern recension) ; this verse was also attributed to Bhartṛhari (512) and king Muñja in the Bhojaprabandha; we come also across the same teaching in the Kathāsariṣṭāgāra.

22.5. Verse No. 132 is attributed only to Kṣemendra³ in the Śārngārāpa-ddhati, while in Śrīdharadāsa's Saduktikarṇāmṛta, Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvali and Govindajit's Sabhyālaṅkāraṇa it is attributed to Rājaśekhara and in Sūrya Kaliṅgarāja's Sūktisahasra to Vātsyāyana (sic!), It also occurs anonymously in Vidyākara's Subhāṣitaratnaḥkośa | Kavindravacanasamuccaya, Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali, Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi, Gadādharaḥaṭṭa's Rasīkajīvana and numerous works on poetics and rhetorics (Mammaṭa's Kāvyaṇprakāśa, Govinda's Kāvyaṇpradīpa, Hemacandra's Kāvyaṇuśāsana, Appayya Dikṣita's Kuvalayānanda, Rājānaka Ruyyaka's Alaṅkārasarvasva, Śobhākaramitra's Alaṅkāratilaka, Alaṅkāratilaka, Vāgbhaṭa's Kāvyaṇuśāsana, Viśvanātha Kāvīrāja's Sāhityadarpaṇa, Jayadeva's Candrāloka, Paṇḍita Jagannātha's Rasaṅgādharā, Mahimabhaṭṭa's Vyaktiviveka, Narendraprabhasūri's Alaṅkāramahodadhi, etc.). It is not a Kṣemendra's but a Rājaśekhara's verse culled from the latter's Viddhaśālabhañjikā (1.2).

22.6. Verse No. 146, attributed to Kṣemendra in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali, seems also not to be our poet's verse, but a Bhartṛhari verse, though it does not belong to the nucleus of Bhartṛhari's epigrams ; it occurs also in the Subhāṣitasuradruma of Keḷadi Basavappa Nāyaka and in the modern Subhāṣitaratnākara.

23. Doubtful Kṣemendra's verses are : No. 97, which is not clearly attributed to Kṣemendra in Sūrya Kaliṅgarāja's Sūktisahasra and is quoted anonymously in Vidyākara's Subhāṣitaratnakoṣa and the Samayocitaratnamālikā ; the verse is, probably, a Hitipadeśa verse ; No. 100 which is only attributed to Kṣemendra in Harikavi's Subhāṣitahārāvali, while in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvali and Vidyākara's Subhāṣitaratnakoṣa it is quoted anonymously¹ and in Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi and Sūrya Kaliṅgarāja's Sūktiratnahāra it is attributed to Ruyyaka ; the verse, a well-known devotional Śaiva verse, appears also in Rājānaka Ruyyaka's Alaṅkārasarvasva and is often quoted in treatises of poetics and rhetorics ; No. 101 is in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvali attributed to Kṣemendra or Kṣemeśvara, in Śrīdharadāsa's Saduktikarṇāmṛta to Abhimanyu, for the alternate attribution to Kṣemeśvara is in view of Harikavi's Subhāṣitahārāvali attribution to Kṣemavara more likely ; No. 107 which is attributed to Kṣemendra only in the modern Saṁskṛta-Sūktiratnākara, while it is attributed in Sūrya Kaliṅgarāja's Sūktiratnahāra to Vallabha and is quoted anonymously in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali, Subhāṣitapadyaratnākara, Subhāṣitaratnamālā, Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi, Subhāṣitaratnasamuccaya and the Subhāṣitasaptaśati ; the verse is a well-known sententious verse which also appears in numerous works on poetics and rhetorics and amongst the so-called Cāṇakya's sayings and in younger recensions of the Pañcatantra and the Śukasaptati ; No. 111 which is in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvali doubtfully attributed to Kṣemendra and in Sūrya Kaliṅgarāja's Sūktiratnahāra and Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi is attributed to Mānasollāsa ; it is an antarālāpa riddle, probably attributed to Kṣemendra because of his notorious acerbic castigation of kāyastha-s ; No. 129, which is attributed to Kṣemendra in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali only while it is quoted in Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi anonymously is also a sententious verse which occurs amongst the so-called Cāṇakya's sayings (and in the Bṛhaspatisaṁhitā of the Garuḍa-purāṇa) ; No. 138, which is only in one MS. of the Śārngadhara-paddhati attributed to Kṣemendra and appears also amongst the so-called Cāṇakya's sayings (and in the Bṛhaspati-saṁhitā of the Garuḍa-purāṇa), in some younger recensions of the Pañcatantra, the Hitopadeśa, the Vikramacarita, the Śukasaptati, the Padma-purāṇa and the Kathāratnākara of

1. Attributions of Harikavi in his Subhāṣitahārāvali, when they are different from attributions in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvali are not reliable. See L. Sternbach, quoted in footnote 2 on p. 14.

Hemavijaya ; verses Nos. 139, 158 and 184, which are in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvalī attributed to Vyāsadāsa, a sobriquet of Kṣemendra, but who, probably, refers in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvalī to another author than Kṣemendra, for none of the verses attributed there to Vyāsadāsa could be identified in any of Kṣemendra's works ; No. 142, which in Harikavi's Subhāṣitahārāvalī is attributed to Kṣemendra and in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvalī to Lakṣmīdhara, for the attributions in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvalī are more reliable than those in Harikavi's *Subhāṣitahārāvalī*³ ; No. 172, which is in Gadādharaḥaṭṭa's Rasikajīvana attributed to Kṣemendra, while in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvalī, Harikavi's Subhāṣitahārāvalī, Sārṅgadharapaddhati and Lakṣmaṇaḥaṭṭa Āṅkolakara's Padyaracanā is quoted anonymously¹ ; and No. 185, which is in Harikavi's Subhāṣitahārāvalī attributed to Kṣemendra, while in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvalī to Trailocana².

24. We may assume that verses attributed to Kṣemendra in more than one independent anthology³ are genuine Kṣemendra's verses, e. g. Nos. 104, 133, 137 (the verse is in Vallabhadeva's Vidagdhanavallabhā attributed to Kṣemasimha, but the latter anthology is known for twisting and distorting the names of the authors to whom they attribute verses, and in Vidyākara's Subhāṣitaratnaśoṣa/Kavīndravacanasamuccaya/Nandana's Prasannasahityaratnākara where it is quoted anonymously), 144 and 186 (we find this verse also in the Nitidviśaṣṭikā and some younger offshoots of the Tantrākhyāyikā), while others are, probably, genuine Kṣemendra's verses, even if they are sometimes attributed also to other authors, as Nos. 96, 98, 99 (attributed in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvalī and in Sūrya Kaliṅgarāja's Sūktiratnahāra to Vallabhadeva)⁴, 103, 105, 108, 109 (which is in the Sārṅgadharapaddhati and Lakṣmaṇaḥaṭṭa Āṅkolakāra's Padyaracanā attributed to Kṣemendra and in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvalī to Dāmodaragupta ; it is in the style of the Kuṭṭanimata or the Samayamātṛkā), 110, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 124, 125, 127, 128, 130, 131, 134, 135 (despite the fact that the verse is in Harikavi's Subhāṣitahārāvalī attributed to Haribhadra and

1. See footnote 1 on p. 28.

2. Gadādharaḥaṭṭa's Rasikajīvana is not reliable as far as attributions are concerned. The two editions (cf. footnote 2 on p. 16) are not identical from this point of view.

3. Not independent anthologies are Sūrya Kaliṅgarāja's Sūktiratnahāra and Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi (para 17.1.1 footnote 8 on p. 14) as well as Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvalī and Harikavi's Subhāṣitahārāvalī (para. 17.1.1 and footnote 2 on p. 14).

4. The compiler of the Sūktiratnahāra referred here probably to the Subhāṣitāvalī and not to Vallabhadeva, a poet (cf. footnote 6 on p. 14).

in the Subhāṣitasudhāratna-bhāṇḍāgāram to Bilhaṇa, for the latter two anthologies' attributions are not reliable, particularly, in view of the fact that Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvali attributed the verse to Kṣemendra), 136, 140, 141, 143, 145, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182 and 183.

25. We see that out of the 91 verses quoted in Annex II only six verses are not Kṣemendra's verses, 13 are doubtful Kṣemendra's verses and the rest, i. e. 72 verses (5 attributed to Kṣemendra in more than one anthology and 67 attributed to Kṣemendra in one anthology only, or in two not independent anthologies¹), are probably genuine, otherwise unknown, Kṣemendra's verses. They deal with a variety of subjects—some are lyrical, some sententious, some satirical, some descriptive, etc. Some of these verses are typical for Kṣemendra's writings, e. g. verses Nos. 99, 105 (Cārucaryā), 109 (Kalāvīlāsa or Samayamātrkā or Darpadalana), etc., but some verses dealing with favourite subjects of Kṣemendra might have been attributed to the author only because of the subjects dealt with in the verses².

VERSES ATTRIBUTED TO KṢEMENDRA IN ANTHOLOGIES AND IDENTIFIED IN HIS KNOWN WORKS AND VERSES SPECIFICALLY ATTRIBUTED TO HIS KNOWN WORKS

26. In Annex IV, representing verses belonging to group 3 (b)³, 229 verses are cited; these are verses quoted in anthologies, either with a general attribution to Kṣemendra and identified in his extant works or with an attribution to his individual extant works and identified, or not identified in these works; the works are: (A). Kalāvīlāsa (verses Nos. 187-242; 56 verses); (B). Caturvargaśiṅgraha (verses Nos. 243-255; 13 verses); (C). Cārucaryā (Nos. 256-328; 73 verses); (D). Darpadalana (Nos. 329-343; 15 verses); (E). Daśavatāracarita (kāvyā) (No. 344; 1 verse); (F). Deśopadeśa (Nos. 345-353; 9 verses); (G). Bṛhatkathūmañjarī (Nos. 354-411; 58 verses); (H). Bauddhāvadānakalpalatā (Boddhā²) or Avadānakalpalatā (Nos. 412-414; 3 verses); and (I). Sevyasavakopadeśa (No. 415; 1 verse). The knowledge of these verses are doubly important, for they show in what form, i. e. with what variants they were known in the thirteenth and later centuries and which of the Kṣemendra's verses and from which of his works were particularly popular in that time.

1. Cf. footnote 3 on p. 29.

2. E.g. when they deal critically with kāyastha-s.

3. See Paras. 17.6 and 17.7.

27. As stated above¹, the various readings of the respective verses were recorded in order to enable the future editors of critical texts of the respective Kṣemendra's works to reconstruct them properly². P. Lapanich's critical edition of Kṣemendra's Kalāvīlāsa would have been greatly improved if the editor would have taken into consideration all the anthologies which quote the Kalāvīlāsa verses, some of which are sometimes quoted anonymously³.

28.1.1. Ad (A) the *Kalāvīlāsa*⁴. Out of 56 verses (Annex IV ; Nos. 187-242), quoted in anthologies and attributed to Kṣemendra or, specifically, to the Kalāvīlāsa, seven could not be identified in this work. The verses identified in the Kalāvīlāsa are :

28.1.2. Most of the verses from sarga-s 9 and 10 of the Kalāvīlāsa are included in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇas Sūktimuktāvalī and Harikavis Subhāṣitaharāvalī; from sarga-s 4, 5 and 6 in Sūrya Kāliṅgarāja's Sūktiratnahāra and Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi; and from sarga 2 in the Śāringadharapaddhati; Vallabhadēva's Subhāṣitāvalī quotes only one verse from the Kalāvīlāsa and this one it quotes anonymously.

28.1.3. The following seven verses attributed in anthologies to the Kalāvīlāsa could not be identified in that work: Nos. 200 (SRHt.; Ka.), 203 (SRHt. Ka; SSSN. Ka. or an.), 211 (SRHt. Ka.), 212 (SRHt. Ka.; SSSN. an.), 226 (SRHt. Ka.; SSSN. Ka. or an.), 231. (SRHt. Ka.; SSSN.) and 240 (SRHt. Ka.). Most of the "new" Kalāvīlāsa verses, which occur in the Sūrya Kāliṅgarāja's Sūktiratnahāra/Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi do not suit the Kalāvīlāsa and are mostly composed in metres other than āryā; these verses must be considered as doubtful Kalāvīlāsa verses.

28.2.1. Ad (B.) the Caturvargasamgraha.¹ 13 verses Annex IV; Nos. 243-255), quoted in Annex IV were identified in the Caturvargasagraha;

1. Cf. Paras. 8 No. 11 and 7.1.

ten of them are quoted in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali and are attributed to Kṣemendra, two in the Kavikaṇṭhābharāṇa, where they are attributed to mama Caturvargasamgraha and one in the Aucityavicāracarcā, where it is attributed to mama Caturvargasamgraha. The verses identified in the Caturvargasamgraha are as follows :

Caturvarga- samgraha :	No.:	Attributed in:	Caturvarga- samgraha :	No.:	Attributed in :
1.3	247	VS.	1.26	252	Kavikaṇṭhābharāṇa

1.19	253	VS.	4.23	246	Kavikaṇṭhābharāṇa
1.20	254	VS.

28.2.2. The Caturvargasamgraha verses quoted in anthologies contain only minor variants or no variants at all.

28.3.1. Ad (C.) the *Cārucaryā(śataka)*¹ (Annex IV; No. 256-328). As stated above², the Carucaryā(śataka) must have been a very popular work in India, at least from the 13th century onwards, for great parts of it were included in the Sārṅgadhara-paddhati and Harikavi's Subhāṣitahārāvali and almost all of the first 72 stanzas in the modern Nitisamgraha. This is understandable, since Cārucaryā(śataka)'s verses are moralistic verses which suit anthologies well. Also one verse in group 2 (i.e. quoted in anthologies as Kṣemendra's verses which could not be identified in any of the known works of Kṣemendra³, seems to have belonged to the Cārucaryā (Annex III; No. 105). 73 verses quoted in anthologies with or without attributions to Kṣemendra (all verses quoted in the Nitisamgraha are quoted anonymously) could be identified in the Cārucaryā(śataka), thereof 49 in the Nitisamgraha only⁴ and 24 in classical anthologies. The verses identified in the Cārucaryā(śataka) are:

28.4.1. Ad (D) The *Darṣadālana*³. 15 verses (Annex IV; Nos. 329-343) attributed in anthologies to Kṣemendra could be identified in the Darṣadālana. They are as follows :

1. The sign—denotes that no variants in the respective verse was noted; the sign x denotes that variants in the respective verse were noted.
 2. Verses 42, 45, 64, 73-79, 81, 82, 84-90, 92-98 and 100.
 3. Cf. Paras. 5 No. 15 and 7.1.

28.4.2. All the verses, but one (No. 330) from the Darpadalana are quoted in Bhagadatta Jalhṇa's Sūktimuktāvali (sometimes also in the Harikavi's Subhāṣitahārāvali), the Śāringadhara-paddhati and some in the Lakṣmaṇabhaṭṭa Āṅkolakara's Padyaracanā, but the latter anonymously.

28.4.3. The different anthologies contain some important variants and only three verses are quoted in anthologies without variants (Nos. 334, 339 and 342).

28.5. Ad (E). The *Daśāvātāracurita(kāvya)*¹. Only one verse (Annex IV; No. 344) attributed to Kṣemendra could be identified in the Daśāvātarcurita(kāvya), viz. verse No. 3; it is quoted in Bhagadatta Jalhṇa's Sūktimuktāvali only where it contains minor variants.

28.6.1. Ad (F.) The Deśopadeśa.² 9 verses (Annex IV; Nos. 345-353), attributed to Kṣemendra could be identified in the Deśopadeśa. They are the following :

Kavikaṅṭhābharāṇa

1. Cf. Paras. No. 17 and 7.1.

2. Cf. Paras. 5 No. 18 and 7.1.

28.6.2. Of the nine verses identified in the Deśopadeśa, eight are from the first upadeśa and occur in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali and one verse is from the fourth upadeśa and occurs in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvali and the Kavikaṇṭhābharāṇa; in the latter case it is attributed to mama Deśopadeśe. Only that verse and verse No. 347 contain in anthologies minor variants.

28.7.1. Ad (G). The *Bṛhatkathāmañjari*¹. This is an epitome of Guṇādhya's Bṛhatkathā and is an early long work of Kṣemendra. As many as fifty-eight verses are specifically attributed in Sūrya Kalingarāja's Sūktiratnahāra and Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi to the Bṛhatkathāmañjari (Annex IV; Nos. 354-411).

28.7.2. Only ten verses attributed to Kṣemendra, or specifically to the Bṛhatkathāmañjari, could have been identified in the poem. Unlike other Kṣemendra's works the Bṛhatkathāmañjari was probably not in the majority of cases the source of verses attributed to it in Sūrya Kalingarāja's Sūktiratnahāra and Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi. This conclusion was reached after the study of the verses which could not be identified in the Bṛhatkathāmañjari, for as many as thirteen verses (out of 48) are certainly not Kṣemendra's verses. And so, verse No. 403 is Bhāravi's Kirātārjunīya verse;² verse No. 355 is Harṣa's Nāgananda verse also quoted in the Hitopadeśa; verse No. 370 is a Pañcatantra verse which belongs to the oldest recension of the work, the Tantrākhyāyikā; verse No. 384 is a Bhartṛhari's verse; verses Nos. 369 and 391 are Mānavadharmasāstra verses which were also included in Kṣemendra's Nitikalpataru;³ verses Nos. 360, 392, 394 398, 405 and 411 are Mahābhārata verses and No. 383 is a Hitopadeśa verse. Doubtful Kṣemendra's verses are No. 357, for it belongs to the so-called Cāṇakya's sayings and is a well-known sententious verse and Nos. 399 and 408, for only in one MS. of Sūrya Kalingarāja's Sūktiratnahāra they are attributed to the Bṛhatkathāmañjari, while in other MSs. of this anthology and in the Subhāṣitasudhānidhi they are quoted anonymously⁴. The rest of the unidentified verses quoted as Bṛhatkathāmañjari's verses in Sūrya Kalingarāja's Sūktiratnahāra and Sāyaṇa's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi are usually sententious verses composed in śloka-s.

28.7.3. The verses are attributed to the Bṛhatkathāmañjari in Sūrya

1. Cf. Paras. 5 No. 5 and 7.1.

2. Probably due to a scribal error, for the next verse in the Sūktiratnahāra is attributed in the printed text to Bhāravi; in the Subhāṣitasudhānidhi the verse is quoted anonymously.

3. Amongst other Mānavasāstra verses.

4. The first of these verses is also quoted in the South Indian Vyāsasubhāṣitasamgraha which does not contain any attributions to individual poets.

Kalīngarāja's Suktiratnahāra and Sāyana's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi and most of them are doubtful Bṛhatkathāmañjari's verses. Four identified Bṛhatkathāmañjari's verses are attributed to Kṣemendra in Bhagadatta Jalhaṇa's Sūktimuktāvali, of which one is also so attributed in Harikavi's Subhāṣitahārāvali and one also in the Śārṅgadhapaddhati; the latter was also included by Kokkoka in his Ratirahasya.

28.7.4. The ten verses which could have been identified in the Bṛhatkathāmañjari are the following :

Bṛhatkathā- mañjari :	No.:	Attributed : in	Bṛhatkathā- mañjari :	No.:	Attributed : in 28.7.5. The following verses attributed to the Bṛhatkathāmañjari in Sūrya Kalīngarāja's Suktiratnahāra and Sāyana's Subhāṣitasudhānidhi, which could not be identified in the extant of the Bṛhatkathāmañjari and for which no proof exists that they are not Bṛhatkathāmañjari's verses are : Nos. 356, 358, 361, 363, 364, 365, 366 (also quoted anonymously in the Narābharaṇa), 367, 368, 372 (also quoted in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali where it is attributed to Vallabha), 373, 374, 375, 377, 379 (also quoted anonymously in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali), 380 (also quoted in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali where it is attributed to Vyāsamuni), 382, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 393, 395, 396, 397, 400, 401, 402, 404, 406 and 409.

28.7.6. The variants, particularly amongst the verses attributed to the Bṛhatkathāmañjari are numerous and often important.

28.8. Ad (H) the Bauddhāvadānakalpalatā (Boddha^o) or the *Avadānakalpalatā*⁵. Only three verses (Annex IV; Nos. 412-414) attributed by Kṣemendra himself in the Aucityavicāracarcā a smama Bauddhāvadānakalpalatā or Bauddhāvadānalatikā verses are quoted in this Kṣemendra's work of anthological character. None of the verses could be identified in the Tibetan extant text.

1. Cf. Paras. 5 No. 2 and 7.1.

28.9. Ad (I) The *Sevyasevakopadeśa*¹. Only one verse (Annex IV; No. 415) attributed to Kṣemendra in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali could be identified in this work. The text included in Vallabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvali is identical with Sevyasevakopadeśa 53.

29. None of the verses of other extant Kṣemendra's works occur in the classical anthologies. The fact that none of the Samayamāṭṛkā verses is quoted in anthologies is noteworthy and surprising, for many verses from this satirical work would have suited well the classical and younger anthologies.

30. The 415 verses attributed in the three works of the author of anthological character and in anthologies are quoted in Annexes I-IV, as explained above in paragraph 18. The abbreviations used in these annexes and the bibliography are quoted in Annex V.
